BRITISH LINER TORPEDOED

CONCESSIONS OF AUSTRIA TO BE ACKNOWLEDGED IN NEW NOTE AND OTHER POINTS TAKEN UP

ANSWER OF VIENNA IS FAVORABLE

Preparations for Reply Are Under Way By Administration Officials.

Question of Fact as to Austria's Responsibility to Be Discussed.

Answer From Vienna Is Far Reaching and Generally Satisfactory.

Washington, Jan. 1.—With the tension between the United States and Austria growing out of the destruction of the Italian liner Ancona, which had threatened a severance of diplomatic relations between the two countries, broken by Austria's favorable response to the American demands, administration officials today turned their attention to the preparation of another note to the Vienna government.

The new note will acknowledge Austria's concessions and also probably will cover the points left by Austria for further discussion. These relate principally to questions of fact which affect Austria's responsibility for what happened before the submarine commander torpedoed the Ancona.

Digest of Note From Vienna.

Vienna, via London, Jan. 1.—In its reply to the second note of the United States government, dealing with the sinking of the Italian steamer Ancona by an Austrian submarine, the Austro-Hungarian government agrees that no ships will be sunk, unless they offer resistance or flee without those aboard being brought to safety; states that the submarine commander who sank the Ancona had been punished and

THESSALONIKI TAKEN IN TOW

Picked Up By Unknown Steamer According to Report By Wireless.

Newport, R. I., Jan. 1.—A message from an unidentified steamer, picked up by the radio station here early today, stated that she had taken the disabled steamer Thessaloniki in tow and was proceeding to New York. Because of weather conditions the name of the vessel and her position could not be learned.

The message said that the Thessaloniki was short of "steaming water," which indicated serious engine trouble. The weather along the coast was thick and the radio station had great difficulty in reading the message. The coast guard cutter Seneca had reported during the night that she was still trying to locate the Thessaloniki but had been unable to get in touch with her.

The steamer Florizel has been searching for the disabled vessel since early yesterday, but it was not known here early today whether she was the ship which reported that she had reached the Thessaloniki.

"WAR ORDERS" FOR EGGS, BUTTER AND POULTRY

English Dealer Here on Trail of the Minnesota Hen.

Would Have Duluth Dealers Ship Direct to London.

Unlimited Supplies Wanted; Great Scarcity of Casein.

War orders were yesterday offered to Duluth firms—not orders for shells or shrapnel, or powder, but for butter, eggs, poultry, milkpowder and casein.

The orders are virtually unlimited as to quantity, and the goods are to be shipped direct to London and handled but once before they reach the London retailer. Chicago and New York brokers will be eliminated and Duluth will be doing business direct with London.

The orders were brought to Duluth by Johannes Kuipers of Groningen, Holland, and London, Eng. He represents the firm of Nieuhof, Surie & Co. of London, of which he is a member, and yesterday he visited virtually all of the Duluth firms handling butter.

IS MADE BRITISH BARON IN KING'S NEW YEAR HONOR LIST

BARON WILLIAM W. ASTOR.

SALVINI HAS PASSED AWAY

One of World's Greatest Tragedians Dead in Italy, Age 86.

Introduced and Established Shakespeare's Plays in Italian Drama.

London, Jan. 1.—Tommasso Salvini, the eminent Italian tragedian, has just died at Florence, Italy.

American theater-goers of the past generation remember his vivid portrayal of "Othello." In this character he was unsurpassed. He lived the part of the jealous Moor, holding audiences spellbound in the splendidly tragic climax.

Salvini toured the United States seven times. "If I were not an Italian," said the celebrated artist in recalling his American triumphs, "I should wish to be an American. There I was welcomed like a child of Washington. I remember when I was playing in Washington I went to visit the capitol. Some one said in French: 'Mr. Salvini, would you like to see the congress room?' As soon as I entered, the meeting stopped and all rose to their feet. I was so surprised and moved

BOMB DROPPED ON GREEKS BY MISTAKE

Saloniki, via Paris, Dec. 31, (delayed)—A French aeroplane squadron returning from a reconaissance today dropped a bomb by error on the Greek camp, wounding one soldier. Gen. Sarrail, the French commander, made suitable explanations.

A news agency dispatch received by way of London Friday night said that during a raid over Saloniki by a Teutonic aeroplane a bomb was dropped on the Greek camp just outside the town, killing a shepherd. It was stated that the Greek camp apparently was mistaken for Entente headquarters.

NEW YEAR WILL BRING REALIZATION OF CITY'S INDUSTRIAL DREAMS

Many Big Projects Will Be Launched During Next Twelve Months.

Steel Plant and Cement Plant Will Be in Full Operation.

New Terminal Projects, Car Shops, Locomotive Works and Elevators.

Duluth's day has really dawned.

In the many important happenings foreshadowed for 1916, local business men who have pinned their faith to this city's ultimate progress, can see a realization of their hopes.

First and foremost, further unfoldings of the plans of the United States Steel corporation as affecting Duluth are foreshadowed. The operating of all the departments at the Minnesota Steel company's works, affording employment to hundreds of additional men, will become a reality.

The plant of the Universal Portland Cement company will commence actual operations this coming spring with a large force, and in addition proposals for the establishing of plants by other subsidiary companies of the Steel corporation are outlined in authoritative quarters. Under that head is mentioned the building of steel cars and locomotive plants at this point. These enterprises would entail a capital investment extending into several millions of dollars and steady employment of a large force of skilled men would be afforded. As has been intimated in The Herald, negotiations regarding sites for these enterprises have been taken up and important announcements in their connection are expected in the near future.

On Wisconsin Point.

The carrying through of a plan of improvements at Wisconsin point that may extend into millions of dollars was forecasted six weeks ago in the transfer to the Agate Land company of the Interstate Railway company's holdings there. The consideration involved in the transfer of the property was given at $295,000 and it was intimated that an extensive program of improvements in the way of dock building and terminals would be car-

HEALTH OFFICER OF PORT OF NEW YORK DEAD AT 49

DR. J. J. O'CONNELL.

New York, Jan. 1.—Dr. Joseph J. O'Connell, health officer of the port of New York, died today at his residence at the quarantine station from cancer of the stomach. Dr. O'Connell was appointed in February, 1912, and was 49 years old.

HEAVY EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS RECORDED

Washington, Jan. 1.—A heavy earthquake was being recorded on the seismographs of Georgetown university this morning. They were first noticed at 9:10 a. m., and were continuing at 10 o'clock. Until the movement has subsided the observers were unable to give more definite data. Father Francis A. Tondorf, seismological director, said the shocks were the heaviest recorded in some time.

Old-Time Actor Dead.

New York, Jan. 1.—Joe Murphy, an old-time actor, best known for his impersonation of Kerry Gow, died here today of pneumonia. He was 83 years old.

AMERICAN CONSUL ROBERT N. M'NEELY AMONG PASSENGERS

P. & O. Liner Persia Sunk By Submarine While Approaching Alexandria On Trip From London.

Washington, Jan. 1.—Official dispatches from London today said the liner Persia was torpedoed and sunk "while approaching Alexandria" and that "nearly all perished."

The dispatch came from Consul General Skinner at London and probably was based on the British admiralty report. It follows:

"P. & O. liner Persia reported sunk, submarined while approaching Alexandria. Robert N. McNeely, American consul at Aden, going to post, left London as passenger. Nearly all on board perished."

Officials who were not away for the holidays viewed the news with anxiety, fearing the sinking of the British liner might complicate the already delicate submarine situation.

Robert Ney McNeely was making his first trip to a consular post for the United States, having been appointed October 18 last and assigned to Aden. His home is at Monroe, N. C., and he was a member of the North Carolina legislature from 1908 to 1910. He is 32 years old.

Reported From London.

London, Jan. 1.—The British liner Persia was sunk Thursday and most of the passengers and crew were lost. Robert McNeely, American consul at Aden, was a passenger on the Persia.

A Lloyds dispatch says that most of the passengers and men of the Persia were lost. Four boats got clear before the Persia sank.

Americans on Board.

In addition to Mr. McNeely, two other Americans are known to have been passengers on the Persia when she left London. Charles H. Grant was on his way to Bombay; Edward Rose, a schoolboy, was on the way from Denver to Gibraltar. Rose probably landed at Gibraltar and was not on board the boat at the time she was sunk.

The Peninsular & Oriental line estimated that 160 or 161 passengers sailed from London on the Persia. A number of these were landed at Gibralter, Marseilles or Malta. No official figures are available.

The message to Lloyds says the Persia was on her way from London to Bombay. She was sunk at 1 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

In addition to the passengers who sailed from London, a large number embarked at Marseilles. The total booked at these points was 221. Of these, eighty-seven were women and twenty-five children. Lord Montagu was on the passenger list.

The Persia was a steamer of 7,974

PANAMA-CALIFORNIA EXPOSITION OPENED

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 1.—The Panama-California international exposition, an outgrowth of the Panama-California exposition, was welcomed in with the New Year at midnight by the biggest crowd that has gathered at the grounds since the opening of the 1915 enterprise a year ago. At the stroke of midnight the warships in the harbor threw their searchlights on the beauty spot of Balboa park and amid the shouts of thousands the new exposition was formally launched.

PAY TRIBUTE TO THE DEAD

Will Lie in State in Capitol Rotunda Until Monday Morning.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Minnesota today paid tribute to its late governor, Winfield Scott Hammond, who died Thursday at Clinton, La. The train bearing his body and escort arrived here shortly before noon. According to revised plans, the body, with a military guard of honor heading the funeral cortege, will be taken to the capitol this afternoon. It will lie in state in the capitol rotunda until Monday morning.

Brief services will be held in the capitol at 9 a. m. Monday, after which the body will be taken to St. James, where the final rites will be performed at 2:30 p. m.

Sympathy from President.

Hot Springs, Va., Jan. 1.—President Wilson yesterday sent the following telegram to Charles M. Andrist, who was private secretary to the late Governor Hammond of Minnesota:

"Will you convey to Mr. Hammond's

ANOTHER FELLOW THAT OUGHT TO SWEAR OFF.

EXPATRIATED AMERICAN BECOMES A BRITISH PEER

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy Also Made Baron as New Year's Honor.

Barons — William Waldorf Astor, ord Charles Beresford, Sir Alexander enderson, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, avid A. Thomas and Capt. Cecil William Norton.

The conferring of a peerage on William Waldorf Astor, the wealthy Ameri- citizen who years ago became an patriate, was a surprise. Another rprise, which is certain to be as popar as it is harmonious, with the spirit the day, is the appointment of ooks, the labor leader, to the privy uncil.

Astor's title is considered the fulment of the ambition which brought him to England sixteen years ago. There is no one able to recall a former instance of an American becoming a British peer except in the case of Lord Fairfax of Cameron.

Irritated King Once.

Astor's candidacy to the peerage engrossed society after he became a British subject. His ambitions were beclouded by an incident, which incurred King Edward's displeasure. A British officer is said to have appeared at a reception at Astor's mansion, whose name was not on the invitation list. The officer arrived with a party of invited guests. Mr. Astor, it is said, requested the officer to depart, and King Edward was reputed to have been much irritated, since the officer held a high place in the king's esteem.

HEAVY FIGHTING ON GALLIPOLI PENINSULA

Turks Report Severe Engagements in Vicinity in Seddul-Bahr.

On Dec. 30 there was violent fighting participated in by artillery, infantry and bomb throwers on our right wing, center and part of our left wing. Two cruisers and one monitor took part in the battle. Our artillery caused heavy damage to the enemy trenches and camps near Seddul-Bahr.

"On the night of Dec. 30-31 our batteries successfully bombarded the places near Seddul-Bahr and Tekke Burnu. One of our aeroplanes successfully dropped bombs on a hostile camp near Seddul-Bahr and on a transport. Other aeroplanes dropped bombs on the ship Swiftsure."

The Swiftsure is a British battleship of 11,800 tons displacement. She was formerly the Constitution and was bought from Chile in 1903.

NEW YEAR GREETED BY CHEERS AND REVELRY IN DULUTH'S HOTELS

Good-Natured Crowds Celebrate Change in Time-Honored Style.

Racket and revelry ruled throughout the city last night, when the new year was ushered in.

"The gayest New Year's eve," was the verdict of the habitues of the cafes and frequenters of the bright lights, who sat in the crowded rooms at the hotels, clubs or lodges and made merry while 1915 made its adieu and 1916 its entrance.

In most of the cafes it was a big "family party," that grew more and more delirious as the mystic hour of twelve approached, and a few minutes before the new year came in, whistles, bells and auto sirens blended with song, cheer and screams of the cafe patrons.

Police said there were no violations of the liquor law. At all of the three large downtown hotels waiters were busy carrying in wine until long after 1 o'clock, but the management explained that orders turned in earlier in the evening were being filled.

The orders all were filled, and many —but not all—were full, and the hilarity was contagious. Dancing was added to other attractions at the Spalding and Holland hotels, so that many Duluthians tripped lightly into the new year, following the tune of a new fox trot or one-step.

Features When 1916 Arrives.

Three hundred merrymakers in the ballroom of the Spalding hotel sang "Auld Lang Syne" in a darkened room at midnight, when a massive electric sign, which read "Welcome—Happy New Year," was flashed. It was the signal for an outburst of sound that drowned the orchestra and spoiled all attempts at harmony.

Cheering, shrieking, dancing and drinking many toasts to one another, the revelers surged on to the open space which had been cleared for dancing when the orchestra switched from "Auld Lang Syne" to "Cheer, Cheer, the Gang's All Here."

"Is everybody happy?" came the query in a loud, swelling chorus that fairly shook the room.

"Sure," was the response from every corner.

They were happy at the Holland, too, and at the St. Louis. Crowds which jammed every corner of the cafes stood on the tables, or on the chairs, and cheered or sang to their hearts' content.

At 11:58 p. m. four men, with "monkey-doodle" hats awry, stood upon a central table in the St. Louis cafe and raised their bottles ceilingward. A fifth man jumped up near them, and a sixth followed.

Soon the entire room was on its feet, standing with bottle or glass raised to drink a toast to the New Year. Mechanical or natural noise producers of all kinds joined in making an unearthly racket which did not subside until the lights went out, with the old year.

Noise Is Universal.

A similar feature was introduced at the Holland, and the orchestra, beating upon large gongs, sounded the twelve beats of the hour in a darkened room, accompanied by a shrieking roar that swelled as the twelfth beat of the gongs came nearer.

When the orchestra could make itself heard, everybody stood while they sang "Auld Lang Syne," and then the dance went on in the grill room, and the drinking went on in the main cafe. Wine was the rule at the St. Louis and Holland, although plebeian beer crept in at several tables, and no one offered any objections. "Anything that came in bottles," was the rule, and if a patron wanted beer, he could get it. Crowds were orderly in the chop suey houses and Chinese cafes, no liquor being served. Special music was provided at the Canton, Mandarin and Tuxedo cafes.

Celebration in Streets.

In the streets the only indication of a celebration, until close onto midnight, was the surging crowd that grew larger instead of smaller as 12 o'clock neared.

Whistles and auto horns started in about five minutes before the hour, and then bedlam reigned, with hysterical men rushing back and forth, cheering and yelling their welcome to the new year.

Police did not have much trouble in the downtown district, for citizens evidently bore in mind Chief McKercher's note about noise making.

It was the noisiest New Year's eve on record. Whether it was the wettest, or the naughtiest, is a question.

SALVINI DEAD

that for a few minutes he could not utter a word."

Fame World-Wide.

The fame of the Italian tragedian was world-wide. On one of his last tours of Europe, he played in St. Petersburg. After the play the public waited outside the theater for him until 2 o'clock in the morning, with the thermometer at 29 deg. below zero. The crowds then escorted him through the street like a conquering hero to the palace of Prince Vladimir, where he was a guest.

Salvini was reared for the stage. Born in Milan in 1829, he was acting as a child with his father. When he was 15, his father died and the young son continued to play small parts in the company of the celebrated Gustave Modena.

Salvini deserted the stage temporarily at the age of 20 to fight for Italian independence in the revolution under Garibaldi. He served as a corporal at the siege of Rome. When the war was over he returned to his art, joining the famous Adelaide Ristori's company.

"She engaged me as a juvenile at a very good salary," said Salvini. "Then I began to advance rapidly."

At the age of 27 he was celebrated throughout Europe. He made his first visit to the United States in 1873.

On the eightieth anniversary of Salvini's birth the Italian people held a national jubilee. The government struck off and presented to him a commemorative medal. The city of Rome honored him with its key. Admirers in America, who remembered his acting in association with Booth, Boucicault and Clara Morris, sent testimonials of their affection for the venerable artist.

Salvini retired from active stage life in 1903. His son, Gustavo, then was the only representative of his branch of the family on the stage. Another son, Alessandro, an actor of promise, had died several years before.

"I no longer enjoy acting," said the distinguished idol of two continents. "I worked very hard for years, making many sacrifices. Every human being, I think I may say, loves to be applauded. When one receives salvos of applause, and young enthusiasts leap upon the stage to embrace one, as they did at Naples, who would not be gratified. But the acting itself no longer gives me pleasure. I am weary."

The death of Salvini will be observed with appropriate ceremonies by actors in all parts of Europe and America.

family, and publicly express for me, my profound sympathy and sincere regret for his death? I am sure this must be the sentiment of the whole country and of all who knew his sterling character."

Offers Military Escort.

Boston, Jan. 1.—Governor David I. Walsh, in a telegram to the secretary of Governor Winfield Scott Hammond of Minnesota, who died at Clinton, La., announced that the state of Massachusetts desired to offer a military escort for the burial in case it took place at Southboro, Mass., the late executive's boyhood home. Governor Walsh indicated, however, that he would be guided by the wishes of the family.

tons gross. She was owned by the Peninsular & Oriental Steam Navigation company of London. She sailed from Bombay Nov 14 for London and was last reported as leaving Gibralter on Dec. 2.

Robert N. McNeely was appointed as consul at Aden, Arabia, in October, last. He is a native of North Carolina.

The Persia was one of several vessels recently sunk by submarines in the eastern Mediterranean through which her course to the Suez canal would take her from Malta. On Dec. 24 the French liner Ville de la Ciotat was sent to the bottom off the island of Crete by a submarine which, according to unofficial British advices, flew the Austrian flag.

No advices have been received in New York as to the date at which the Persia sailed from London. She departed some time in advance of her advertised date of sailing, which was Jan. 15. The voyage from London to Malta ordinarily requires nine days.

The Persia was built in 1900 at Greenock. She has been in the Bombay service since that time.

On account of the danger from submarines to vessels which pass through the Suez canal and the Mediterranean this route has been abandoned by the Japan mail steamship company, which is dispatching its steamships around the Cape of of Good Hope. Insurance rates for vessels passing through the Suez have been increased by English underwriters to three or four times the normal figures.

Lord Charles Montagu, who booked passage on the Persia, is a London stock broker. He was born in 1860 and served with the Yeomanry cavalry.

New Danger Arises.

Washington, Jan. 1.—Destruction of the British liner Persia with possible loss of American lives throws relations between the United States and the Teutonic powers into a new danger.

Coming almost at the hour when a satisfactory adjustment of the delicate situation was at hand by Austria's acceptance of the cardinal points of the American demands in the Ancona case, this new element threatens to complicate affairs with Austria as thoroughly as the destruction of the Arabic, following so closely the Lusitania exchanges, brought on a renewed crisis with Germany.

For such incomplete information as was at hand today the two situations are regarded as almost parallel. It was generally presumed in official circles that as was the case in the crisis with Germany, the Austrian admiralty and the Vienna foreign office are working at cross-purposes.

It was regarded as a strong possibility that while the foreign office is ready to accede to the contentions of the United States the admiralty, bent on the success of its submarine policy, has not yet been brought into line.

May Not Have Been Instructed.

There is, however, the added possibility that the submarine which sank the Persia, being far from home, had not been instructed in the new policy of the Austrian government.

The destruction of the Persia coupled with the recent sinking of the Japanese liner Yasaka Maru and the French liner Ville de la Ciotat, lends strength in official quarters to both these possibilities.

All the agencies of the American government have been set in motion to gather facts on the newest disaster.

The general view in official quarters was that the position of the United States was sufficiently well known to Austria and the Ancona negotiations have been under way a sufficient length of time to permit instructions to reach the submarine fleet. On every hand the news was received with astonishment.

Consul General Skinner at London forwarded what information was available at the British admiralty and his dispatch with unofficial reports of the disaster was forwarded to President Wilson at Hot Springs.

Will Await Full Information.

As in similar cases, the policy of the American government will be to await full and complete information before moving. There is little room to doubt that the incident will mean new diplomatic action in which the United States will present to Austria in the same forceful manner its unalterable policy that the laws of nations and humanity must be regarded by the belligerents in their warfare at sea.

Severance of diplomatic relations with all its possibilities looms up as one of the eventualities, the same as it did in the case of the Lusitania, the Arabic and the Ancona.

Although the nationality of the submarine which sank the Persia remains unestablished definitely as was the case with the Yasaka Maru and the Ville de la Ciotat, the assumption generally is that it was an Austrian boat because Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, recently declared that no German or Turkish submarines were in the Mediterranean.

The attack on the Persia as she was approaching Alexandria renews attention to the fact that submarine campaign against allied shipping is being carried on off the entrance of the Suez canal.

GOVERNOR BURNQUIST TAKING OATH OF OFFICE

GOVERNOR J. A. A. BURNQUIST.

In compliance with the statutes of the state, Lieutenant-Governor Burnquist was sworn in as successor to the late Winfield Scott Hammond on Thursday afternoon.

Governor J. A. A. Burnquist was unable to go to the capitol on the first day of his governorship because he is confined to the house under doctor's orders. His illness is not serious, according to his own statement and that of his attending physician who says that he is suffering from a slight infection of the nose.

Governor Burnquist said that he had made no choice of a secretary or executive clerk and had not yet taken up the question. He asserted Tuesday with regard to appointments generally, that he expected to allow those whose terms expire within the next year to hold over.

As the terms of many of these officials and board members is from three to six years, the new governor feels it would be unfair to make appointments during the year he is to serve by reason of his succession to Governor Hammond, and thus tie the hands of the man who will be elected governor by the people next fall.

Policy Based on Precedent.

This policy decided on was pursued by Governor Eberhart when he succeeded to the office after the death of Governor Johnson, and largely by Governor Hammond when elected to succeed Governor Eberhart.

There will be some vacancies that must be filled, however, and the first of these is the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Stolberg of the Nineteenth judicial district. J. C. Nethaway of Stillwater, now assistant attorney general, was a candidate for this office, and it was expected that he would receive the appointment from Governor Hammond. H. H. Gillan, judge of the municipal court in Stillwater, was also a candidate, as was P. H. Stolberg of Harris, a son of the late judge.

Erickson May Be Secretary.

The positions of secretary and executive clerk to the governor are of such a confidential nature that by common consent the politicians refrain from making suggestions unless they are asked for by the governor. But guessing as to the probable identity of the secretary is common. Edward L. Erickson of the state treasurer's office was the favorite today. Mr. Erickson entered the treasurer's office as a clerk under the late Julius Block. He became deputy under Treasurer Pettijohn and was re-appointed to that position by Treasurer Walter Smith.

Senator George H. Sullivan of Stillwater, who as president of the senate succeeds to the office of lieutenant governor upon the elevation of J. A. A. Burnquist, said yesterday that he probably will not qualify.

There will be no session of the senate in the next year, unless some emergency arises, and there is no object in taking the oath as lieutenant governor, although some hold that Mr. Sullivan succeeds automatically to that office without any formality.

GREETINGS TO KING ON THE WAR FRONT

Rome, Jan. 1.—The annual New Year's ceremony of the presentation of greetings to the king by cabinet ministers, senators, deputies and state officials is occuring at the war front this year instead of in the quirinal palace at Rome. This is the greatest change noticeable in the capital and it adds to the popularity of the Italian sovereign, who, since the war began, irrespective of the great heat in the Izonzo valley in July and August or of the extreme cold at this season on the crests of the Alps, 10,000 feet high, has refused to leave his soldiers even for a day.

Rome has virtually the same gay aspect as in other years. The only noticeable difference is the larger number of men wearing military uniforms. Some of those who have been allowed to return home for a few days are men with families and these soldiers may be seen on the street promenading gaily with their wives and children. All amusements are proceeding as in past years. In the crowds here and there may be seen a few foreign military uniforms.

BID FAREWELL TO ONE-TIME MAYOR

H. A. Nelson on Eve of Leaving Coleraine Is Given Banquet.

Coleraine, Minn., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—A banquet in honor of Hans A. Nelson, a watch night service and social at Fraternity hall, and a Trout Lake Boat Club orchestra dance at the village hall marked the round of social life for the outgoing of the old year and the incoming of the new.

At Arcana hotel 100 men, friends of H. A. Nelson, sat down to one of the most elaborate spreads ever pulled off in honor of a citizen of the Canisteo mining district.

After the banquet board had been cleared Mayor H. C. Downing as toastmaster introduced several speakers and announced in turn a group of musical numbers, and with the joke telegrams made a program of unusual interest. The guest of honor, Mr. Nelson, who left today noon for Ajo, Ariz., was given a gold watch by his fellow townsmen. He had served the village on the first council and later as mayor, and was always a good booster for the town.

The watch night services combined the features of a literary program, a social, and a spread. There was a large crowd present who had a thoroughly enjoyable time.

Young people came in from the neighboring villages to the boat club dance in compliment to the members of the orchestra of that organization in whose behalf the affair was given. It afforded the students at home from college vacation a social occasion which they enjoyed.

PSYCHOLOGY OF GOOSE STEI

Manchester Guardian: How m people know the psychological pur of the goose step, which is so p veringly practiced in German mili drill? It is widely known that emotions depend largely upon phys state, and are influenced by the bo attitude and tension. Courage p with muscular effort and mental b ance is steadied as breathing deep Any civilian will tell you that his m tality is affected by being drilled in upright carriage and in standing f and straight upon the feet. The of the unflexed leg in the goose s is but incidental. The main purpos of the goose step is to bring into consciousness and under immediate control the soldier's physical support. German officers believe that the consciously firm knees resulting from the exaggerated goose step have a wholesome effect on a soldier's state of mind.

NINE OUT OF TEN PAROLED PRISONERS "MAKE GOOD"

Probation Officer's Report Shows Effectiveness of System.

Effectiveness of the parole system of handling first offenders before the courts is strikingly shown in statistics which are available from the annual report of Col. F. E. Resche, probation officer for St. Louis county. They show:

That durilng the last four years practically nine out of every ten prisoners on parole from the district court have "made good."

That out of fifty-three paroles during 1915, forty-eight offenders proved worthy of the trust reposed in them by the court.

That five defaulted or otherwise broke their parole.

That the percentage of failure is steadily decreasing.

The following table shows the number of district court parole cases handled from the office of Col. Resche during the last four years and the percentage of successful paroles and of failures:

COUNCIL WILL BEGIN YEAR WITH CLEAN SLATE

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID.

Paid homage to the memory of the late Governor Hammond by the adoption of a resolution of sympathy and condolence, copies of which will be sent to his relatives and to Secretary of State Schmahl.

Authorized Commissioner Merritt to advertise for new quarters for the water and light departments, bids to be opened on Jan. 10.

Ordered the construction of an artistic concrete bridge over Miller's creek at the entrance to Lincoln park, the improvement costing $5,000.

Transferred the management of the incinerator plant and the collection of garbage from the health department to the public works division.

Heard second reading of the ordinance authorizing the sale of the old armory to the Shriners on their offer of $50,000.

Ordered the payment of $900 for three lots acquired by the city nearly twenty-five years ago for the boulevard extension in the West end, ownership of which was learned but several months ago.

City commissioners at their last 1915 meeting yesterday afternoon took action, as far as possible, on all the old matters before that body, and will start the new year with a clean slate.

The resolution of condolence to be sent to relatives of the late Governor Hammond and to Secretary of State Schmahl was introduced by Commissioner Farrell and adopted unanimously.

Commissioner Merritt, who has complained of the inadequacy of the present offices of the water and light department, was authorized to advertise for new quarters, the bids to be opened on Jan. 10. If he is unable to find better quarters, then a five-year lease on the present offices will be executed, te council agreed yesterday afternoon. The present lease expires on May 1.

The resolution introduced by Commissioner Silberstein, transferring the management of the incinerator plant from the health department to the works division, was adopted unanimously and the operation of that work was taken over this morning by Commissioner Farrell.

Lyonel Ayres, city engineer, was authorized as the official representative of the city to attend the special hearing on the New Duluth bridge at Washington next Thursday. The meeting has been arranged by a board of army engineers and will finally settle the controversy over the St. Louis river span. Mr. Ayres will accompany Secretary Eva, who will represent the Duluth Commercial club. They will leave for Washington on Monday afternoon.

An appropriation of $5,000 for the construction of an artistic culvert over Miller's creek at Third street, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth avenue west, at the entrance to Lincoln park, and the completion of the fill underneath the old wooden bridge, was authorized. Active work on the culvert is expected to start on April 1.

All the resolutions pertaining to the West First street pavement were rescinded yesterday, so that official action can be taken in the new year. Another resolution, authorizing the pavement next summer, will be introduced Monday by Commissioner Farrell.

Twenty-five years ago the city extended its boulevard through three privately owned lots in the West end, but the ownership was not discovered until recently. It was believed that the city had title to the property. As a result, the commissioners yesterday voted to pay the owners $900 for the lots.

Second reading was given the ordinance authorizing the sale of the old armory to the Shriners on their offer of $50,000.

The council passed the ordinance appropriating $2,500 for the purchase of a site for the new municipal garage and warehouse at Twentieth avenue east.

Commissioner Farrell was authorized to purchase 6,000 paving brick and 400 square yards of sandstone blocks to be used for street repair work during 1916.

CANADA TO SUPPLY 500,000 MEN FOR WAR

Ottawa, Jan. 1.—Canada will celebrate the coming of the New Year, by increasing the number of men authorized for overseas service from 250,000 to 500,000, Premier Robert L. Borden announced.

"Yesterday," the premier's statement said, "the authorized forces of Canada numbered 250,000 and the number enlisted was rapidly approaching that limit today. The first of the new year, our authorized force will be 500,000. The announcement is made in token of Canada's unflinching resolve to crown the justice of our cause with an abiding peace.

The number of men thus far enlisted in Canada is 262,680 while 116,927 have been sent to Europe, 50,000 of whom are on the firing line. Only one soldier was lost in transportation of Canadians across the Atlantic.

UPTOWN CHURCHES HOLD SERVICES

Few Conduct Watch-Night Meetings; Others Assemble in Morning.

Not many of the up-town churches held watch-night services last night, but in the western end of the city many did. The same is true of services today, few attempting to arrange programs for both today and tomorrow, after the strain of two successive days a week ago. The lack was also due to the fact that Christmas is a Christian festival and New Year's is not, being merely a secular calendar change, different from other days only in that it marks the beginning of a new chronological period and has no religious significance.

None of the Catholic or Episcopal churches, up town, held services last evening, but today, they are observing the period simply and briefly. At Sacred Heart Catholic cathedral, mass was said in the early hours and at 10:30 high mass was sung. At Trinity Episcopal cathedral, Twentieth avenue east and Superior street, there was holy communion at 10 o'clock this morning and Bishop Morrison preached a sermon. At St. Paul's Episcopal church, 1710 East Superior street, the day was observed merely by holy communion at 10:30 this morning.

A number of the Lutheran churches held services last night and today. Among these were St. Matthew's German Evangelical Lutheran church, Fourth street and Sixth avenue east, and the First Swedish Lutheran church, Sixth avenue east and Third street. At the former, the pastor, Rev. J. George Appel, conducted Sylvester service last evening, and this morning at 10:30 held a New Year's service. At the First Swedish Lutheran, the pastor, Rev. Carl O. Swan, conducted a service last night at which the change of year was watched, and at which a carefully prepared musical program was given, and refreshments served. This morning at 10 o'clock, services were held at this church, and its business meeting will be held this afternoon.

MINING SHOWS GREAT REVIVAL

Washington, Jan. 1.—Mining in the United States is in the midst of a great revival. Preliminary estimates of the 1915 production, made public yesterday by the geological survey, show larger increases over the output last year in nearly all classes of minerals.

Copper mined during the year was valued at about $83,000,000 more than the 1914 total; iron production increased 38 per cent; spelter 25 per cent in quantity and $86,000,000 in value, and gold increased $7,000,000.

Alaska had the most prosperous mining year in its history, with an output worth about $32,000,000. That is almost $13,000,000 more than the 1914 value and about $9,000,000 above the record year of 1906, when the bonanza placers of Fairbanks and Nome were yielding their greatest returns.

Extraordinary Quantity of Copper.

An extraordinary quantity of copper, estimated at 83,850,000 pounds, largely was responsible for the new record, but gold production increased more than $1,000,000 over 1914, the value of the output being $16,900,000.

Mining developments during the year, the survey says, give assurance of continued large operations in Alaska in both copper and gold lode mining. With the building of the government Alaska railway, placer mining is expected to be stimulated.

Since the first gold was mined in Alaska in 1880, the total production of the precious metal has aggregated $261,050,000. The United States bought the territory from Russia in 1861 for $7,200,000.

"HAPPY NEW YEAR" FROM COMMISSIONERS.

City commissioners, at their last 1915 meeting yesterday afternoon, extended New Year's greetings to one another and to the city at large.

At the close of the business session, which was one of the most harmonious in several months, Commissioner Farrell wished his fellow commissioners a happy New Year. Then came exchanges of greetings to one another and "Here's hoping for the most successful year in the city's history," said Mayor Prince.

SIX MEN KILLED IN CHICAGO FIRE

Plant of American Linseed Company Damaged By Explosion.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—Six men are believed to have been killed and more than half a dozen badly injured, and there was an estimated property loss of $2,000,000 yesterday, when fire destroyed the South Chicago plant of the American Linseed company, known as the Cleveland Linseed Oil branch.

The fire was caused by an explosion attributed to spontaneous combustion of linseed dust. The explosion occurred in the percolator building, the flames quickly spreading through the other four buildings on the five-acre tract occupied by the plant.

So quickly did the flames spread, that an oil freight steamer, loaded and ready to sail from the Calumet river slip beside the plant, caught fire, and its cargo was burned. Firemen were handicapped by dense clouds of smoke from the burning oil. Practically every piece of fire apparatus in the district was called to the scene, including several fire tugs.

The men believed to have been killed, were trapped in the percolator building. While the linseed plant was burning, fire broke out in a warehouse in the Union stockyards. Firemen were handicapped in fighting the stockyards blaze, as much apparatus from that district had been sent to the South Chicago fire. The fire at the stockyards caused damage estimated at $150,000.

Fees received in 1915 were $36,633.80, and salaries of register and employes was $31,065, leaving net receipts of $5,568.80. Fees collected in 1914 were $32,683.70; salaries paid, $27,365.33; leaving net receipts of $4,318.37.

Despite the war and pestilence of the Old World and the advanced cost of living in the Western hemisphere, the mythical matchmaker has broken another record.

During 1914, marriage license records show, 1,243 couples capitulated to the artful warrior, but this year nine more than that number were wooed by the dulcet accents of the god of love.

It was a hard battle and the little quiver-bearer came near showing a loss this year. But with Hymen as an aide and a stroke of good fortune at the last moment, the wearer of the bow and arrow came out with flying colors.

Anxious at Courthouse.

There were anxious moments yesterday at the office of J. P. Johnson, clerk of the district court. Mr. Johnson, by the way, is the official dispenser of matrimonial permits and he wants to see the winged archer establish a new record for marksmanship each succeeding year.

At the eleventh hour fourteen altar candidates and their brides-to-be fell victims to Cupid's aim and he won the day. Yesterday was a banner day at the marriage license counter. It had to be in order that the 1914 record might be shattered. Cupid was not asleep at the switch.

The increase is not worth boasting about. A year ago it was forty. Marriage licenses for 1913, however, showed an increase of 111 over the 1912 figure, but that was before the war broke out, and other obstacles were thrown in the way.

Cupid Is Handicapped.

Dan Cupid has had a good many knockouts this year. The international complications abroad have boosted the price of living. For instance, Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed are obliged to pay more for their furniture. Lumber has advanced and so has hardware. And it costs more nowadays to keep the table going.

June, the month of brides, trousseaus, orange blossoms and the like, was again at the head of the procession of the months in the wedding calendar. September and October were the next closest contenders for the honor. The first six months of 1915 showed decreases, which were offset during the declining months of the year.

The last license for 1915 went to George W. Banning and Miss Amy Sybil Rose. It was issued late yesterday afternoon.

NEW YEAR WILL BRING REALIZATION OF CITY'S INDUSTRIAL DREAMS

fied through. It is said that the plans being worked out will involve the building of docks along a frontage of more than two miles and that with connections afforded through the United States Steel corporation system of transfer railroads a large area of property will be made available for factory sites. The possibilities offering in that connection are said to be attracting the attention of outside capitalists, offers covering large blocks of acreages having been received recently by present holders. There is also another big terminal project for Duluth under consideration, which is likely to materialize soon.

Other New Industries.

Other substantial additions to Duluth's quota of industries are regarded as certain to become realities. Just yesterday earnest money was paid by a local company on the purchase of a site in West Duluth for the building of a large factory at an approximate cost of $75,000.

Extensions by other Duluth Companies are also reported to be under consideration.

Rumors have been furthermore current that plans in connection with a foreshadowed amalgamation of large independent steel manufacturing interests will involve the building of works at the Head of the Lakes to include blast furnaces, rolling mills, etc. According to reports the promoters have already obtained holdings of iron ore deposits on the Northern Minnesota ranges and options are being taken upon other deposits.

Wholesale Houses.

That Duluth's list of wholesale establishments will be augmented during the next twelve months is regarded as highly probable. In that connection it is mentioned that Minneapolis interests which hold a dock property here contemplate improving it in the building of terminal warehouses and wholesale plants. They are said to be negotiating with Eastern capitalists to obtain the funds required and definite announcements in that connection are expected in the near future.

In the way of further waterfronts improvements the erection by the Great Northern railroad of a new 3,500,000-bushel grain elevator is advised to have been decided upon. Plans for it have been prepared and it is expected that the contract will be let within the next few weeks.

ACHES AND PAINS

Don't neglect a pain anywhere, but find out what causes it and conquer the cause. A pain in the kidney region may put you on your back tomorrow. Don't blame the weather for swollen feet, it may be an advanced warning of Bright's disease. A pain in the stomach may be the first symptom of appendicitis. A creak in a joint may be the forerunner of rheumatism. Chronic headaches more than likely warn you of serious stomach trouble. "WAR ORDERS" FOR EGGS, BUTTER AND POULTRY

With most of his sources of supply cut off by the war, Mr. Kuipers left London on Oct. 11, last to trail the humble hen to her roosting place. He first headed for Buenos Aires, and after cheeking up supplies there, came to New York, then Chicago and then Duluth. He left here last evening for Winnipeg.

Supplies Cut Off.

"Before the war," said Mr. Kuipers yesterday, "England imported eggs and butter from Russia, Denmark, France, Egypt, Holland, Italy and many other European countries. Now all these supplies are shut off to a very great extent. Very few eggs are coming from Russia. Denmark and Holland are dividing their shipments between Germany and England. We have had to look for new sources of supplies, and that has been my mission.

"In South America the shortage of vessel tonnage is even more of a problem than it is in North America, and this will prevent us getting very large supplies there. We will get chiefly butter from Argentina. It is to this country that we must look. I hope that my visit here will result in butter, eggs and possibly poultry, milk-powder and casein being shipped direct to London. This city has exported some of these commodities before this, but it has dealt largely through Chicago and New York brokers. Your firms would sell to Chicago brokers, and they would sell to New York exporters. I am seeking to establish direct connections, so your firms here can consign butter and eggs direct to our people in London. We can take all you can offer if the prices are right.

"Perhaps many people have not heard of milkpowder and casein, but there is a tremendous shortage in these two products. They are both products of skimmed milk. Milkpowder is used by bakers, and casein for a great number of purposes. Casein three years ago, sold for from 6 to 8 cents a pound, but now it is selling for $1 to $1.5 cents. I tried to buy some in New York at the latter price, but they were trying to buy from me. It was manufactured in great quantities in France, but that source of supply is shut off now, of course. I don't look for any sudden drop in it after the war, and I am hoping that American firms will undertake its manufacture. There is certainly an unlimited market for it.

"Your country has a wonderful opportunity in South America, and from what I saw you are taking advantage of it. That country bought enormous supplies of manufactured goods from Germany, and now it isn't buying a dollar's worth. The National City bank of New York has established a branch in Buenos Aires, and from conversations I had with American business men on the boats and in Buenos Aires there is no question but that this country is going after that rich field for business development."

Views on the War.

Mr. Kuipers was reluctant to talk about the war. Holland, his native country, is determined to maintain its neutrality. "The sympathies of Holland are divided," he said. "Some of the people lean toward Germany and some toward England, but they are of one mind on the subject of neutrality and keeping out of it.

"England has made some terrible blunders in her conduct of the war. One was the attempt to starve out Germany, and another was the Dardanelles campaign."

Mr. Kuipers talks unconcernedly of Zeppelin raids on London. His office was wrecked by a Zeppelin bomb, and when he came to work one morning he found every window in his office broken, the bomb having struck in the street but a few feet away.

"The raids have done a lot of damage, but will cut no figure in the outcome of the war," he said. "From a military standpoint they are negligible."

EXPATRIATED AMERICAN MADE A BRITISH PEER

This story was widely published at the time.

Mr. Astor has made large contributions to the war funds. His daughter-in-law, one of the famous Langhorne sisters, well known in the United States for their beauty, has been an active worker among the wounded.

Barnes to Privy Council.

George Barnes, labor member of parliament for the Black Friars division of Glasgow, also was appointed a member of the privy council. Charles Russell, a famous lawyer, gets a baronetcy. Among those receiving knighthoods are Thomas Beecham, the musical conductor, and operatic impresario; George Aberry a distinguished Edinburg occulist; Thomas Wright Parkinson, a London physician, and Milsom Rees, famous as a laryngologist.

Capt. Guy Grant, naval attache of the British embassy in Washington, received the order of companion of St. Michael and St. George.

Field Marshal French, who was recently relieved as commander-in-chief of the British forces on the continent and was raised to the peerage at that time, takes the title of Viscount French of Ypres.

CONCESSIONS OF AUSTRIA TO BE ACKNOWLEDGED

promised to indemnity to a certain degree the Americans who suffered losses.

At the very outset the note sets forth that the Austrian government "agrees thoroughly with the American cabinet that the sacred commandments of humanity must be observed also in war," and points out that the Vienna government "has given numerous proofs of humanitarian sentiments toward enemies as well as toward neutral states."

It is then stated that "the imperial and royal government can also substantially concur in the principle that private ships insofar as they do not flee or offer resistance may not be destroyed without the persons aboard being brought into safety," and continues:

Would Continue Good Relations.

"The imperial and royal government is very responsive to the assurance that the Federal government lays upon seeing that the good relations which happily exist between Austria-Hungary and the United States remains.

"It reciprocates this assurance most warmly and is now, as heretofore, concerned to render these relations more hearty so far as lies in its power."

The note then recounts the result of the investigation into the sinking of the Ancona, as conducted by the Vienna government, a lengthy summary being given, bearing out in the main the reports previously received from Austrian sources on the sinking of the vessel.

"During the flight," the note says, "the steamer had already, while at full speed, let some boats with persons in them, fall, which immediately capsized. After stopping, the steamer began launching boats.

"From a distance of about 2,000 meters, the commander saw that six boats were filled and rowed hastily away from the steamer. Another boat was capsized and floated keel up. The people held on to the dangling lines and to the capsized boat." Ample time, it is stated, was given the passengers and crew to escape, the commander finally, after forty-five minutes had elapsed, torpedoed the vessel in "such a manner that it should remain a considerable time afloat."

For an additional forty-five minutes the boat remained afloat, the note says, continuing:

All Could Have Been Saved.

"All persons yet aboard could have been saved without difficulty with the boats still on hand.

"From the fact that this, contrary to his expectations, was not done, the commander concluded that the crew, contrary to all seamen's customs, had accomplished their own rescue with the first boats and abandoned the passengers entrusted to their protection.

"The loss of human lives is in the first instance, by no means ascribable to the sinking of the ship, but, and in all probability, in a much higher measure, to the rapid lowering (hinunterwerfen) of the boats, during full speed, as well as to the fact that the crew, concerned only for itself, did not rescue the passengers of the capsized boats.

"It is also probably ascribable to shots which hit the fleeing vessel, but the death of persons who sank with the steamer is also, above all, ascribable to the disloyal conduct of the crew.

"As it appears from the above adduced state of affairs, the very esteemed note of Dec. 9 is based in many points on incorrect premises. Information reaching the United States government that solid shot was immediately fired toward the steamer, is incorrect; it is incorrect that the submarine overhauled the steamer during the chase; it is incorrect that only a brief period was given for getting the people into the boats.

"Finally it is incorrect that a number of shells were fired at the steamer after it had stopped.

Given Forty-five Minutes.

"The facts of the case demonstrate further that the commander of the submarine granted the steamer a full forty-five minutes, that is more than an adequate period, to give the persons aboard an opportunity to take to the boats. Then since the people were not all saved, he carried out the torpedoing in such a manner that the ship could remain above water the longest possible time, doing this with the purpose of making possible the abandonment of the vessel on boats still in hand.

"Since the ship remained a further forty-five minutes above water, he would have accomplished his purpose, if the crew of the Ancona had not abandoned the passengers in a manner contrary to duty.

"With full consideration, however, of this conduct of the commander, aimed at accomplishing the rescue of the crew, and passengers, the imperial and royal marine authorities reached the conclusion that he had omitted to take adequately into consideration the panic that had broken out among the passengers, which rendered difficult the taking to the boats, and the spirit of the regulations that the imperial and royal marine officers shall not fail to give to all persons in distress necessary help, even to the enemy.

"Therefore, the officer was punished in accordance with the existing rules for exceeding his instructions.

"The imperial and royal government, in the face of this state of affairs, does not hesitate to draw the corresponding conclusions, respecting the indemnification of American citizens affected by the sinking of the prize, but in this regard it makes the following statement:

Bombardment Justified.

"The investigation into the sinking of the Ancona could naturally furnish no essential point to show in how far a right to an indemnity is to be granted American citizens. The imperial and royal government cannot, indeed, even according to the view of the Washington cabinet, be held liable for damage which resulted from the undoubtedly justified bombardment of the fleeing ship.

"It should just as little have to answer for the damage which came to pass before the torpedoing of the ship, through the faulty lowering of lifeboats or the capsizing of lowered boats.

"The imperial and royal government must assume that the Washington government is in a position and disposed to give it (the Austro-Hungarian government) the required and certainly not unimportant information in this respect.

"If, however, because of possible lack of particular proof, the particular circumstances under which American citizens suffered damage should not have become known to the American government, the royal government, in consideration for the deeply regrettable incident, and by a desire to proclaim once again its friendly feelings toward the Federal government, would gladly be willing to disregard this gap in the evidence and to extend indemnities also to those damaged whose cause cannot be established.

"While the imperial and royal government may probably consider the affair of the Ancona as settled with the foregoing statements, it reserves to itself at this time the right to bring up for discussion at a later period the difficult questions of international law connected with submarine warfare."

CONSULS OF CENTRAL POWERS ARRESTED

London, Jan. 1.—The arrests of the German, Austrian, Turkish and Bulgarian consuls at Saloniki, on orders given by Gen. Sarrail, the French commander, reported early from that city, were the outgrowth of a German aeroplane attack upon the city which was considered an act of belligerency, according to a dispatch to the Evening News from Saloniki. British and French troops surrounded the consulates, arrested all the members of their staffs and seized the archives, the dispatch stated.

With the exception of Gibraltar, Constantinople has probably experienced more fighting right up to its walls than any other important town in the world.

IOWA IN THE DRY COLUMN

Over 500 Saloons Closed Under Statutory Provisions of State.

Result of Repeal of So-Called Mulct Law Taking Effect.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 1.—The state of Iowa today entered the "dry column" when the doors of more than 500 saloons in its various cities and towns were closed under statutory prohibition, because of the so-called mulct law repeal, which went into effect at midnight last night. At the same time the fifteen breweries of the state went out of business.

As the result of the mulct law repeal becoming effective the county, city and Federal governments will sustain a loss of $765,650, which heretofore had been received annually from the saloons in the form of license tax. Of this amount the cities will lose $502,400, counties $150,600 and the Federal government $12,550, according to state officials here. There were 502 saloons operating in Iowa up to last night.

May Open Saloons.

Developments which might lead to a test of the mulct law repeal in the courts of the state were not expected to materialize before Monday because of the fact that today and tomorrow are holidays. Statements reaching the attorney general's office during the week were to the effect that saloon keepers in Davenport and Keokuk had planned to reopen their places of business on Monday with a view to furnishing the desired test cases. Attorney General Cosson was to go to Davenport today for the purpose of investigating conditions there and taking whatever steps might be necessary to prosecute the state's side of the promised test cases.

The growing hostility toward the liquor business which had been manifest in the general assemblies of Iowa for a number of years reached its culmination in the Thirty-sixth general assembly last spring in the passage of a number of acts designed to wholly abolish the traffic of this state. The effect of the mulct law repeal is to revive statutory prohibition. The general assembly adopted a joint resolution proposing a prohibitory amendment to the constitution, which under the law, must be adopted by the next succeeding general assembly before being submitted to the people. In order to make statutory prohibition effective a number of so-called "law enforcement" acts were passed. Judges of the district and superior courts of the state were authorized to issue search warrants for the seizure of liquor and were given jurisdiction in the trial and judgment of liquor cases.

Effective Throughout State.

According to the new state laws when a person has been enjoined against selling liquor the injunction is effective throughout the state instead of only in the judicial district as heretofore. Those who violate an injunction of the court against the selling of liquor the second time are liable to imprisonment in the state penitentiary for not more than one year. It is made unlawful for railroads or other common carriers or any person or corporation to cary intoxicating liquors into the state or from one point to another within the state except for the lawful purpose of individual consumption. All common carriers are required to keep a detailed record of liquor handled which must be open to the inspection of law enforcement agents.

Four special agents appointed by the governor have full authority to make arrests, file information and otherwise enforce the liquor law. In addition, the Cosson law, will subject local officers to removal from office for failure or neglect to perform their duties in the enforcement of the law.

FORMER DULUTH WOMAN IN TRIAL

Bares Her Past to Convict Milwaukee Man for Blackmailing.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 1.—With her forgiving husband at her side, Mrs. Violet Adams of Racine, formerly of Duluth, Minn., heard the past she had sought to keep from him reviewed in the court of Judge Page, when Anton Anderson, a Milwaukee business man, was arraigned on the charge of extorting most of her $250 monthly income under a threat of revealing his relations with her to Mr. Adams.

Anderson, at the end of the hearing, was bound over to a higher court for trial under bond of $1,000.

Mrs. Adams testified she was born in France and when a young woman came to Duluth and later went to Racine.

"That man," she replied, pointing to Anderson, "and you came to Racine and branded me as a woman of the street. He threatened to ruin my father's name the same as he did mine. I am not going to tell my maiden name."

Prosecuting Attorney Bartlett and the woman held a conference, whereupon the woman said her name was Elizabeth Violet Roberts, but she admitted to Mr. Fawcett she never had heard a French name like that.

"My husband gave me an income of $250 a month," the woman continued. "I pawned my jewelry, my necklace, and I sold everything so I could give Anderson money and keep him from telling untruths about me."

"I met this man on Sept. 10 in a confectionery store," the witness testified. "He threatened to go to my husband and tell him I had been immoral. At that time I gave him a diamond bar pin and $10."

Autopsy Shows Nothing New.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 1.—Autopsy held on the body of Mrs. Frederick T. Price at the Lakewood cemetery chapel failed to reveal any new details as to the woman's wounds than were testified who attended the woman after she was taken to the university hospital on the night of Nov. 28, 1914, after falling or being thrown over the cliff near St. Anthony parkway.

COMMENT ON PLAYS AND PLAYERS — WHAT THE PRESS AGENTS PROMISE

On the contrary it is generally one of the busiest days of the year for him. There is always a matinee, and the vaudeville performer generally has to "do an extra show." Such will be the case with the performers on the Grand bill, and the members of the "Kick In" company will give a matinee.

Tonight will close the engagement of "Kick In." The company will then play a week in Milwaukee and disband, the two leading members, Richard Bennett and Miss Clara Joel, having signed contracts to appear with other productions early in February.

Sunday a popular priced musical comedy will be seen at the Lyceum, and but two other attractions are booked for January, the San Carlo Opera company and Sir Johnstone Forbes Robertson.

"HENPECKED HENRY" AT THE LYCEUM

Musical Comedy Will Be Here for One Day Only.

Halton Powell's musical comedy, "Henpecked Henry," is the next attraction at the Lyceum theater, being announced for tomorrow matinee and night.

It is said to consist chiefly of fun and girls. For several seasons it has played the big cities and the smaller cities with much success. What is more amusing than the henpecked man of the stage? What catches the attention of the men to a greater extent, amuses the women more or more strongly appeals to the risibilities of the young folks? There is a joy in the troubles of the bossed man of the house which other stage characters do not provoke. In "Henpecked Henry" Halton Powell has created such a character. The company will be here with the same equipment used in the East, the same cast and the original beauty chorus.

Forbes-Robertson Coming.

The theatrical season of 1915-16 will bring to the Lyceum, Jan. 13, 14 and 15, the most distinguished actor on the stage, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson.

Forbes-Robertson is now making his farewell tour of the English-speaking world. In 1912 he began his farewell tour at Nottingham, England. All the important cities in the English provinces were visited and in March, 1913, he began his farewell engagement in London at Drury Lane theater royal. This enormous theater, one of the largest in the world playing first-class attractions, was packed for eleven consecutive weeks, the receipts breaking all previous records in the history of London theaters. On his last night on the London stage, June 6, when he played "Hamlet," the prices were doubled, $5, (one guinea) being charged for the orchestra and first balcony seats. Over $6,000 was taken in.

In October, 1913, he opened his farewell American tour in New York. For seventeen weeks Forbes-Robertson played in New York, presenting modern and classical plays, all of which he had previously acted in that city, but, despite the fact that there was no novelty in his repertoire, he again broke records in the matter of receipts and attendance and for the last three weeks of his New York farewell he was forced to move to the largest New York theater—the Manhattan opera house—in order to accommodate the crowds. His last night's receipts at this theater were over $5,000. He then began his farewell tour of America and consistently broke records everywhere he appeared. The season of 1913-14 was devoted to the principal Eastern cities. Last season took him to the coast and back. This year Forbes-Robertson decided to return to America in order to play those cities he had not been able to visit.

ONE OF THE MANY CHORUS NUMBERS IN "HENPECKED HENRY" AT THE LYCEUM TOMORROW, MATINEE AND NIGHT.

BRIGHT FEATURES IN GRAND BILL

Russian Singers and Dancers Offer Unusual Act.

Just a little bit of everything that goes to make up a gala holiday entertainment is contained in the variety of talent offered by the New Grand this week-end. All of the numbers stand out prominently with the Boris Frotkin troupe and Heron and Arnsman vieing with each other for stellar honors.

The Boris Fritkin troupe consists of four men and three girls. The outstanding features of this medley of beautiful colorful scenes and odd concepts is the singing and Russian whirlwind dancing. The high grade orchestrations and the talent displayed by these Russians on native instruments is a musical treat and adds luster to a beautiful offering. Many weird songs are introduced during this mad orgy of beauty, grace and music.

"The Minstrel Maid and the Man," the offering of Heron and Arnsman, is a combination of wit, jollity and melody with a vein of comedy that is new and original. Miss Arnsman is a sprightly miss full of magnetism and with her graceful partner she has a specialty that is all that could be desired in in the way of good entertainment. Japan's juggling "marvel," Kinzo, juggles and mystifies in a manner that justifies his billing. Most of his tricks are new and he juggles everything from the lightest articles to heavy and awkward wheels, lamps and the like, all with equal skill and celerity.

Gene and Katherine King fill up twenty minutes brimful of catchy song numbers and witty chatter. The Kings are up to the minute in costumes, ideas, and dances and make a most favorable impression.

"Just As I Am" toplines the photoplays with a heart interest story that is appealing, interpreted by a star cast of players. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in their latest comedy, "How John Came Home;" one of the Marguerite stories, "The Oriental's Plot," and the always popular Hearst-Selig News picturing history-making happenings from all over the world, make up the rest of a truly enjoyable entertainment.

There will be an extra "supper" show tonight at 6:45. Other vaudeville performers will begin at 8:15 and 9:35. This will be the order on Sunday night also.

The new bill beginning on Monday promises much in the way of good entertainment. The spotlight position is accorded the Five Corks, a minstrel combination which includes happy conglomeration of songs and patter. Murphy and Klein offering a singing and instrumental melange; Neal Abel, better known as the man with the mobile face, and the Three Keeleys, presenting "The Lady Demonstrators," are other vaudeville diversions outlined.

The feature photoplay, "The Tides of Retribution," is in three reels. Two comedies balance up the program.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the second of the Stingaree stories, "A Voice in the Wilderness," in two reels, will be added to the program. These stories are becoming very popular. They are by E. W. Hornung, famous as the author of "Raffles."

At the Rex.

TRIANGLE FEATURES AT REX.

Dorothy Gish and Eight Comedy Stars to Be Presented.

The Triangle plan has been shouldered by three men—Griffith, Ince and Sennett. And yet it is simple and other manufacturers are wondering why they never thought of it before. The Griffith, Ince and Sennett plan is to make bigger, better, finer plays in such a way that the whole tone of the motion picture industry shall be better for their existence. They have already demonstrated that the theater-going public appreciates their efforts by the splendid attendance all along the chain of model Triangle Fine-Arts theaters.

Dorothy Gish, Lillian Gish's little sister, is the co-star with Frank Campeau in tomorrow's Triangle drama, "Jordan Is a Hard Road." If there is one thing in the world that makes the fair Dorothy's pensy blue eyes flash, it is to be designated as "Lillian Gish's little sister." Owen Moore, as Dorothy's sweetheart, does a fine bit of work that brings out the emotional punch.

Eight big headliners, any one of which would make a big success of any comic story they might appear in, amuse and thrill in "Fatty and the Broadway Stars" in the Keystone-Triangle feature, which opens a three-day engagement at Rex Beautiful tomorrow. Willie Collier is one of the finest high-class comedians in the metropolis and has long had his name in the electric signs on the big white way in New York. Ivy Croswaithe has won fame with her beauty and grace as well as ability in comic parts. Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle needs no recommendation to Duluth's fun-loving folks. The rest of the big eight are just as well known to the world of mirth.

WILLIAM FARNUM AT LYRIC.

Will Be Seen on Screen in "A Soldier's Oath."

Headed by William Farnum, the surpassing depictor of realism in pictures, the all-star cast in the presentation of "A Soldier's Oath" at the Lyric today, tomorrow and Tuesday, has received very flattering comment from the press and trade papers throughout the country. Before the production was ready for exhibition, Director Apfel was very superstitiously inclined, as a hoodoo had followed the entire making of the picture. Two or three serious accidents happened, and then last but not least by any means, Director Apfel was dragged into court to explain why he had a huge 42-centimeter gun in his possession and why he felt it necessary to train more than a thousand German and French soldiers in the art of war. The whole trouble started with a typical New Jersey constable making a complaint. But regardless of the bad beginning, "A Soldier's Oath" is a real Fox feature, full of the thrills of war, hate and revenge, tinged with the heart interest born of love.

Lou Tellegen, the popular fiance of Geraldine Farrar, will be at the Lyric in the latest Lasky-Paramount play, "The Unknown." Wednesday and Thursday. And Valeska Suratt is the twinkling star in "The Immigrant" Friday and Saturday. Whether Miss Suratt wears the Russian peasant costume or the "Big white way's" latest creation, there is grace and poise.

MRS. FISKE COMING TO NEW SUNBEAM

Mrs. Fiske is once again to be seen in her famous role of "Becky Sharp" in the recently completed Edison masterpiece, "Vanity Fair," released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service and booked as the stellar attraction at the Sunbeam theater tomorrow and Monday.

Mrs. Fiske played the role throughout the country precisely 1,000 times. Her one thousand and first portrayal has been registered by the motion picture camera, thus preserving one of the most interesting stage figures that the theater of America has known.

Mrs. Fiske's "Becky," because of its individuality and ingenuity of characterization, ranks with Edwin Forrest's "Lear," Joseph Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle" and Richard Mansfield's

MRS. FISKE.

"Cyrano de Bergerac." Those splendid figures of the stage now live only in the memory of the older generation of playgoers. It is some satisfaction to know that Mrs. Fiske's "Becky Sharp" is to be saved by the magic of the film.

As soon as the fact that Mrs. Fiske was to appear in a pictured version of "Vanity Fair" became known, the actress began to receive letters from her personal friends among college professors, literary men and women, artists and critics evidencing the greatest interest in the enterprise and commending it in the highest terms. Some, however, of Mrs. Fiske's correspondents concluded their letters with the query: "But what would Thackeray think of it all?"

On Tuesday there will be a special one-day program and another installment of "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel" will be featured. "A Voice in the Dark," a two-reel Kalem drama will be shown also.

Robert Harron and Dorothy Gish and Henry B. Walthall will be featured Wednesday and Thursday in "My Hero." This thrilling photoplay was made under the direction of D. W. Griffith, and is considered among his best. "The Dragon's Claw" is a three-reel photoplay dealing with a vital problem in a vital way.

For Friday and Saturday will be shown "The Painted World," taken from the fascinating story of Jacques Futrelle, who lost his life in the Titantic disaster. Anita Stewart, Julia Swaye Gordon, Harry Northrup and other noted players are in the cast. "The Painted World" deals with live subjects and caused a sensation when it appeared.

Last Performance of "Kick In."

Tonight will be the last performance in Duluth of Willard Mack's famous play "Kick In", in which Richard Bennett and an excellent cast have been appearing at the Lyceum all week. The business done by this company has been excellent and with the business done by "On Trial," "The Birth of a Nation," etc., this season should convince the New York managers that Duluth is at last a week stand.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

It is the plan of the Shuberts to send "The Blue Bird" on a tour of Australia for two years, beginning next spring.

Marie Tempest is arranging for a tour in vaudeville and will have an appropriate sketch in which to appear. The details of the venture are now being arranged.

Edward Abeles has been playing George Broadhurst's playlet, "Self Defense," in the first-class vaudeville houses. Having finished this tour, he has now started on the Loew circuit in the same sketch.

Emmett Corrigan, who has been the principal male support to Julia Arthur in "The Eternal Magdalene," has left the cast and is to return to moving pictures.

"The Cinderella Man," one of Oliver Morosco's productions, was given its premiere at the Belasco theater, Washington, Thursday night. The play was written by Edward Childs Carpenter. Shelley Hull and Phoebe Foster played the leading parts.

Irene Franklin and Burton Green will join the "Within the Loop" production of the Shuberts when it opens in Chicago, New Year's week. Although the company has been on tour for several weeks, these two stars did not join at the start. They are under contract, however, to appear in the piece New Year's week.

It is rumored that as soon as Weber and Fields finish their work in the motion picture field they will return to New York for a short period in vaudeville.

Albert Roscoe, the actor from the West, has signed up to open as leading man with William Faversham in "The Hawk" at Washington this week. Roscoe was formerly with the Poli Stock company, and is a personal friend of President Wilson, having won the distinction of a victory in golf over the nation's chief executive last summer.

According to the annual report of Col. W. H. Osborn, United States commissioner of internal revenue, $1,063,825 has been paid by proprietors of legitimate and motion picture theaters and concert halls in special taxes under the so-called war revenue act of Oct. 22, 1914. This sum is about one-seventh of the special taxes collected under the act.

Though the war revenue law was scheduled to expire at the end of the month, there is no prospect of theater managers being relieved. It is the plan of the Democratic leaders in congress, in response to President Wilson's appeal for more revenue, to adopt a joint resolution this week extending the war revenue taxes for another year.

Mary Nash has been engaged by Klaw and Erlanger and George C. Tyler to create the leading role in "The Ohio Lady," the new play by Booth Tarkington and Julian Street.

Derwent Hall Caine, the English actor and son of the famous novelist, will likely return to England to play the principal part in his father's new playlet, "The Call of the King," which is to be given in the London Coliseum. He would prefer to remain in this country, and would do so if he could secure the proper kind of a sketch with which to appear in vaudeville.

Al Jolson, who recently went to Miami, Fla., for the holidays was suddenly called back to New York last week to confer with Harold Attridge and Edgar Smith, who are writing his new play, "Robinson Crusoe, Jr."

The Shuberts have acquired the rights to a new operetta by Edmund Eysler, composer of "The Blue Paradise." The new piece, which has just been produced in Vienna, is known as "When Two Love."

At the beginning of last year France had 1,400 certified airmen and Great Britain and Germany 700 each.

The first three nights of the week dances were given at the Kitchi Gammi club by Miss Martha Wall, Douglas Walker and Warren Draper as joint hosts and Miss Constance Mitchell. Thursday night the Christmas assembly was held at the Spalding and last night there was dancing at the Kitchi Gammi, Northland and Elks' clubs and the Masonic temple. Peggy Peabody's Observations

The Penny Spending Habit.

Those of us who love our Dickens will remember Mrs. Pardiggle, whose efforts for the redemption of Borrioboola Gha, in Africa, while her own family went unredeemed, unfed and unwashed, have become a classic.

We laugh, as Dickens meant we should, at this clever satire, this caricature of charity, and feel pity for the poor little Pardiggles and their involuntary contributions. We wish we could see them squandering a few pence on the latest attraction in candies and chewing gum and tonic—or a baseball.

And yet, awful as the life under Mamma Pardiggle must have been, I wonder if the pendulum hasn't swung a little too far in this as in many other phases of our dealings with children, and whether a little wiser direction of the outgo of the children's pennies might not be advisable. A steady copper stream flows into the coffers of the candy, tonic and ice cream venders; and the variety stores and "movies." While most of these expenditures are innocent enough, there are so many more worth while things that a little self-control and a little saving will command that it would seem to be wise to divert the easily confused little minds into more conservative investments.

There is a little girl of my acquaintance who, thus directed and advised saved her pennies and bought a dollar watch. Her joy in this watch is intensified by the memories of the little tasks that earned it. She is now saving to buy a camera, and in the meantime is not averse to taking a flyer in peanut taffy once in a while. She was made to realize that there was no end to the candy appetite and that it led to no good as far as health is concerned.

Her small brother has been a different convert. A wild little spendthrift he, whose pennies just burned in his pockets till exchanged for candy and other edibles. But one day he suddenly developed into a shrewd little merchant, saving every bit of cash to invest in hens. He gathered rags and old iron and, selling them to the junk dealers, invested in still more hens.

This is sort of enlistment in "Infants' Bonds of Joy," as per the fifth small Pardiggle, mentioned by Dickens. When you think of it—joy is a good thing achieved by personal effort; joy in the accretion of money honestly.

Their aim is not to advance a number of interesting philosophical speculations, but to offer solutions to everyday problems of life. They are scientific in statement, philosophic in attitude and religious in spirit.

Frederick Palmer Will Open A. C. A. Lecture Course

Frederick Palmer, who, as the war correspondent for Collier's Weekly, is well known all over the country, will give the opening lecture of the course offered this year by the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, Friday, Jan. 14, in place of Ex-President Taft, who lecture was postponed from Dec. 16 to April 24.

Mr. Palmer arrived in New York on Nov. 11, having spent more than a year at the front as the only official representative of the American press with the British army in France.

The following clipping was taken from the New York Times of Nov. 12.

"After having been with the British and French armies for more than a year in the western war zone Frederick Palmer returned here yesterday on the American liner St. Louis, and will remain in this country until February. He is confident that the allies will win out, but thinks the war will be long drawn out.

"In an interview the war correspondent said Edith Cavell, the English nurse executed by the Germans in Brussels, was regarded by the soldiers in the trenches as a second Joan of Arc 'Remember Cavell!' was their battle cry as they rushed on the enemy's trenches.

"'The execution of Edith Cavell,' Mr. Palmer said, 'did more for recruiting in England than all the raids. I was with the French forces when the report of her death was received. The effect on the troops was electrical. The nurse's death had a Joan of Arc touch that struck home to the hearts of the French soldiers, and they thirsted to avenge her. When I returned to the British army at the front I found that the impression made on the rank and file by Miss Cavell's death was even deeper than it was among the French.'

"'There are no dark secrets at the front, I can say truthfully, because I was for seven months with the army continuously, and could move about anywhere I liked. There was nothing to prevent my getting shot at as often as I pleased, or being blown up in the trenches. I was the only American correspondent and the only one from a neutral country that had those privileges. The badge around my arm with the letters "U. S. A." was a safeguard everywhere, I found.'"

GROUP of ARTISTS with the SAN CARLO GRAND OPERA COMPANY

Society and musical circles are awaiting the rise of the curtain on the first of the four grand opera productions at the Lyceum, next Thursday night.

Donizetti's famous opera, "Lucia Di Lammermoor," a favorite the world over, with it's thrilling arias, duets, it's charming ensembles and choruses and, lastly, the great Sextet, will inaugurate the three-day grand opera festival. The indications are for large and fashionable audiences at each of the four performances, for there has been much said and written regarding the San Carlo company, it's members, both individually and collectively, and the fine voices that will be heard. Many of the boxes have been sold for all performances, indicating that the event will take on a distinct society atmosphere. In the large cities where grand opera is an annual feature the yearly society pageant does not begin until the opening of the grand opera season, and the operas are always the occasion of a great social outpouring.

Some of the world's foremost artists will be heard here the coming week. Much has been said and written about the leading singers of the San Carlo fores, some twenty in number, and the names of many of them are familiar to all who keep in average touch with American grand opera affairs. A number of them are new to American audiences, a condition which also obtains in the New York and Chicago companies, the foreign war situation having wrought many changes in the personnel of these two organizations, as well as the San Carlo. Local patrons are to hear two of the most celebrated tenors of the present-day opera world, Senor Manuel Salazar, the new Spanish artist, whose appearances in America have constituted a series of triumphs; and, Signor Giuseppe Agostini, the world-renowned dramatic tenor, and creator in America of the beautiful role of Rodolfo, in "La Boheme." Each of these artists will have two appearances during the Duluth engagement.

German Soprano.

Mme. Mary Gaestner, one of the most noted of German sopranos, will be heard here for the first time, singing her great role of Aida, on Friday night, and another character, that of Santuzza, in Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" on Saturday afternoon. One of the most sensational coloratura sopranos of the opera world will sing on Thursday night, her famous role of Lucia—said to be her greatest and a character wherein she is well-nigh incomparable. Lovers of sensational coloratura will find joy in the singing of this little Florentine artist who is said to be able to take the birdnotes in the top register with the utmost ease.

The operas will start promptly at 8:15 in the evening, and at 2:15 in the afternoon. There is much beautiful orchestral music in all the productions announced, occurring at the beginning of the operas, and as this feature is an important one in the understanding of the scores and the stories it is quite advisable that patrons be in their seats as near the time suggested as possible.

The regular box office seat sale for all four performances will open next Monday morning at 9 o'clock. There has been a heavy mail order advance sale indicating a widespread interest in an event that should prove notable in the city's artistic history.

PROSPERITY REFLECTED

Big Gain in December Postal Savings and Money Orders Less.

The increasing prosperity of Duluth during the last year is shown by an increase in postal receipts of $10,027.41 over those of the year before. During December, 1915, the postal receipts were $4,690 ahead of those for the same period a year ago. Decreases are noted in the postal savings and money order departments, according to Postmaster William E. McEwen.

Although the war has played havoc with the postal savings and money order business throughout the country, the Duluth postoffice has made rapid gains in these departments during the last six months, says Mr. McEwen.

"During the year ending Dec. 31, 1915, postal receipts totaled $427,331.32 as compared with receipts of $427,303.-91 in 1914. During December, 1915, total receipts were $45,861.36, while during the same month in 1914 they were $41,171.40. After starting the year with inconsequential increases of $140 and $182 during January and February of 1914, the Duluth postoffice showed remarkable gains during November and December over the same period in 1914.

"Postal savings deposits during the last year aggregated $169,787, while in 1914 they were $200,549. Withdrawals in 1915 amounted to $171,263 as compared with a total withdrawal of $158,-996 in 1914. Interest paid depositors in 1915 aggregated $2,703.84, while in 1914 but $1,620.64 was paid in interest. The balance on deposit to credit of patrons at the close of 1915 is $224,770, while in 1914 it was $226,246. A total of 1,393 accounts remained open at the close of business for the year ending yesterday.

"Money order domestic issues for the year 1915 amounted to $708,567.84, while in 1914 these issues were $736,-230.36. The paid issues (domestic) amounted to $946,720.73 in 1915, while this year the aggregate was $964,546.41. Total remittances from other postmasters in 1915 amounted to $2,182,800.42, while in 1914 these were $2,503,030.07. The Duluth postoffice paid more orders than it issued, according to Postmaster McEwen, who said, however, that the money order business had taken a big jump during the last four months.

Arranging Twilight Concerts

Personnel of Orchestra Almost Complete---Director Bradbury Going to Chicago for Players---Many New Features Will Be Introduced This Winter.

Arrangements for the second season of twilight concerts by the Duluth orchestra are progressing under the most favorable conditions and in point of general excellence the series promises to greatly surpass all previous efforts as the venture this year has been launched on sound business principles.

Frank A. Cokefair, chairman of the association, is taking an active interest in all matters pertaining to the preliminary arrangements. The association headquarters are at Mr. Cokefair's office in the Providence building, and he is therefore in constant touch with the numerous details, incident to launching the venture on what is promised to be a successful season.

The personnel of the orchestra has been practically completed for some time with the exception of a half dozen positions and Director Bradbury has given assurance that these will be filled within the next week for which purpose he will leave for Chicago tomorrow to close contracts with several players in addition to those whom he has already secured from the former St. Paul Symphony orchestra.

The ideals which the Duluth Orchestral association aspire to in this year's organization are quality, solidity and balance of tone; precision, unanimity, flexibility and light and shade. For the forty pieces to be employed, the orchestration has been selected with a view of providing a balance of tone, and the players have been selected to fill out the required instrumentation. The strings, naturally will predominate in numbers and to which Mr. Bradbury is devoting especial attention as it is realized that this section is the foundation of the orchestra and on which is dependent the expressive and melodic effects while the wood winds and brasses fill out the harmony. The latter have also been given careful attention and with the outside musicians who have also been contracted with, some of whom are wood wind players, it will be possible to use these instruments, comprising flutes, oboes, clarinets and bassoons in pairs, bringing the orchestra very near a symphonic standard, as much of the tone color-operatic scores depends upon skilful combinations of the tone-tints of the wood-winds either with one another or with other instruments of the orchestra.

Functions of Instruments.

A study of the make-up of a large orchestra is very interesting, and it is the intention during the concert series to dwell upon the functons of the various sections with the idea of enlightening those not familiar with many of the instruments as to their part in producing the various effects intended by the composers.

Owing to the fact that the stage at the new armory is being built to seat the orchestra at different elevations, it will be much easier to distinguish the various instruments as all will be within view which will contribute largely to the enjoyment of the concerts.

The soloist for the first concert, which will be given Jan. 23, will be Miss Arabel Merrifield of Minneapolis, who recently appeared in a recital there with Richard Czerwonky, the concert-master of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra and received many flattering comments. Miss Merrifield is said to possess a mezzo-soprano voice of great dramatic power as well as delicate sweetness and this with a charming personality endows her with the requisites of a most gifted artist.

NEW CHIEF DEPUTY COUNTY TREASURER

G. H. McCarthy of First National Bank Is Appointed.

County Treasurer George H. Vivian yesterday afternoon announced the appointment of Gilbert H. McCarthy, for many years paying teller at the First National bank, as chief deputy county treasurer and cashier, to succeed O. J. Ethier, resigned.

Mr. Ethier, who was appointed about two months ago to succeed Joseph T. Nelson, removed, will go to Aurora, Minn., to open and manage the St. James mine, operated by the Corrigan-McKinney Mining company. The change will become effective Monday.

O. J. ETHIER,

Mr. Ethier was employed by the Corrigan-McKinney Mining company for more than twenty years, and for twelve years was assistant superintendent of the Stevenson mine in Stuntz township. When that mine was closed down about a year ago, it left Mr. Ethier temporarily available for other work. He accepted the position as chief deputy county treasurer, with the understanding that if a more attractive position was offered him in the mining field, he might be free to take it.

Within the last month the Corrigan-McKinney company announced that it would open the old St. James mine at Aurora, and men and equipment are now being assembled for that purpose. Mr. Ethier was offered a position as superintendent at a much better salary than St. Louis county could offer him.

In looking around for a successor, County Treasurer Vivian was fortunate in procuring the services of Mr. McCarthy, who is considered one of the most experienced bank tellers in the city.

HOW TO MAKE SOURDOUGH BREAD

Outing: Mix flour and water stiff. Put this in a warm place to sour. Let it rise; then sprinkle with salt and flour. Place in the Dutch oven on the top of the ground. Again it rises. Now dig a hole in which you build a fire as before. Now cover the oven with coals for ten minutes. Then cover with dirt and allow to cook for one hour. However, it may remain in the ground five or six hours and be just as good.

New Year Is Given Hearty Welcome

Dances, Cabarets and Watch Parties Feature Celebration in City's Clubs—Kitchi Gammi Club Stages Cabaret—Elks and Masons Give Big Parties —Former Governor Eberhart Addresses Norreona Club at Dinner.

The New Year received a hearty welcome at the various clubs, where dancing and cabaret features were the amusements. Watch parties were held at the Kitchi Gammi club, the Elks' club, the Masonic temple and the Country club, and small affairs were given at a number of homes.

At Kitchi Gammi Club.

At the Kitchi Gammi club orchestras station in the art room and the lounging room played from 9:30 to 11 o'clock, when dinner was served. Places in the big room had been reserved for weeks and many persons were accommodated in the smaller rooms. During the dinner professional cabaret stunts were given on a small stage and the singers went about among the tables. Solo and quartet songs were given by Mrs. Jane Everlington Scully, Miss Myrtle Hobbs, Miss Loretta O'Gorman and Richard Kipling.

For those who did not wish to stop dancing long enough for the dinner, a buffet supper was served downstairs.

At 12 o'clock the lights in the dining room went out and curtains at the end of the room parted, showing an old man and a 3-year-old girl—1915 and 1916.

Checked gingham sunbonnets, clown caps, false roses, sleighbells, whistles and balloons added to the gaiety of the evening.

The ballroom was lighted with red globes shaded with oak leaves and with wisteria covered side lights. Arches of wisteria spanned the room.

Among those who made table reservations were: Frank C. Tenney, twelve; M. S. Mead, four; George G. Barnum, Jr., six; George H. Crosby, twelve; Wayland W. Walker, eighteen; Whitney Wall, twelve; Fred Wolvin, eight; Dr. J. D. Park, four; Henry F. Sallyards, ten; G. Ashley Tomlinson, eight; Henry Turrish, eight; Raymond W. Higgins, four; Townsend W. Costello, four; Miron Bunnell, four.

At Elks' Club.

The Elks and their guests, 500 of them, danced from 9 to 11 o'clock when a five-course supper was served. The dance hall was decorated with pine trees, holly and mistletoe.

Several entertainers from the Grand theater, who were to have given vaudeville stunts from 11 to 12 o'clock, broke their engagement at a late hour because of a heavy holiday program today. Instead of vaudeville, the Elks introduced a "horn festival" and welcomed the new year with noise of their own making. Dancing was resumed after midnight. La Brosse's orchestra played.

DANCING COMES LIKE A FLASH.

In the Woman's Home Companion is an article by a 60-year-old dancer which proves that old as well as young can learn to dance and to dance well. In it the writer speaks of the moment when the beginner first forgets his feet and sails over the floor like an aeroplane. It is a moment, he says, that comes most unexpectedly, and after you have been struggling along for weeks you suddenly turn the corner and begin really to dance.

"One spring afternoon at the school while we were doing the new canter waltz into which the hesitation has finally resolved itself, and the big phonograph was sending forth the inspiring 'Chin-Chin,' I turned the corner. I felt myself moved forward by a new and mysterious impulse. I had ceased to count the time. I had forgotten that I had feet or that the smoothly waxed floor under me was a floor. I was dancing with a slender, graceful young instructor, whom I was leading—actually leading—swinging her about on the turn as if she had been a feather duster and cantering up and down with a light, easy step, as though I were on air. I caught Martha's admiring glance from the seat which she had just taken, and I was not surprised at the end of my turn to hear her say in a rapt little tone:

"'You got it today, didn't you?'

"'Yes,' I replied proudly; 'I got it.'

"And when we reached home after that lesson and wound up the phonograph we did dance. The hard work we had been making of it was no longer work—it was play, and play of the most delightful order."

ZERO WEATHER IS PROMISED

Severe Drop in Temperature Is Predicted for Day.

Snow and Strong Northwest Winds Will Accompany Chill.

Zero weather with snow is due in Duluth and on the north shore tonight and tomorrow, and the thermometer will go to zero or about 10 degs. below inland and on the iron ranges, according to Weather Forecaster H. W. Richardson.

Tomorrow will be partly cloudy and colder.

Today there will be fresh northeast winds, shifting to strong northwest winds by tonight.

Mr. Richardson warns shippers to protect shipments of perishable goods for the next twenty-four to thirty-six hours against temperatures, North and West, of zero to 15 deg. below and East and South, against temperatures of zero to 10 deg. above.

At 7 o'clock this morning the temperature in Duluth was 15 deg. above zero; last night it was 10 deg. above.

General Conditions.

In commenting on weather conditions, Mr. Richardson said today:

"A storm centering over Kansas and Nebraska, has caused a light to heavy fall of rain or snow over the lake region, Eastern states, the Ohio, Mississippi and Upper Missouri valleys and the Southwest during the last twenty-four hours.

"The temperature has risen somewhat in all districts east of the Rocky mountains, except in the Northwest. The temperature has fallen decidedly over North Dakota, Minnesota and Montana. The lowest temperature reported this morning was 18 degs. below zero at Winnipeg, where it has fallen 26 degs. since yesterday morning.

"There is a cold wave immediately west of us, the extreme portion of which is in Northern and Western Minnesota, North Dakota, Manitoba, Montana and Wyoming."

FROHMAN AND MODERN PLAYS.

John D. Williams in the Century Magazine: Charles Frohman's way of accounting for the structure of all modern plays was this:

"A German talks sitting down, a Frenchman talks standing up, an American talks walking about; so the average German play is probably made up of all talk and no physical action; the average French play, some action, but much talk; the average American play, no talk except that which immediately leads to action."

The difference between English and American audiences he once illustrated this way:

"If in a play that you've imported from London a character says 'Battersea Bridge,' an American playgoer, although the name may sound queer to him, will instantly say: 'All right; Battersea Bridge. What about it?' But if you import an American play into London and the character says 'Tammany corruption,' a British playgoer will say to himself, 'What kind of corruption is this?' and keep on saying it until he misses all that act and perhaps the next one."

The railroads of India are experimenting with all steel cars, as teak, the wood generally used, has advanced rapidly in price.

Program Will Consist of Works of Duluth Composers

Carrying out the plan made by the musical director, Isabel Pearson Fuller, Mrs. Bruce Ter Bush is arranging an attractive program of numbers by Duluth composers which will be given at the Jan. 11 recital of the Matinee Musicale. The occasion will be made a gala one as great interest is being aroused in honor of local talent.

Three women's quartets by Mrs. Stella P. Stocker will be given, one of which was composed especially for this program. The theme is a melody sung by an Indian mother to her papoose before a wigwam fire, which Mrs. Stocker heard while camping with the Fort Boise Indians last summer.

Miss Alice Olson will come from Chicago, where she is studying, to play a suite of her own composition. Miss Mary Bradshaw will interpret songs by Leo Schmied, with the composer at the piano, and Miss Perle Reynolds will sing "A Seal Mother's Lullaby" and "To the Dogwood," by Faith Helen Rogers. Works by A. F. M. Custance and others will complete the program.

In the Churches

GREAT PROGRESS MADE IN RURAL S. S. DEVELOPMENT IN NORTHWEST

Wonderful progress has been made throughout the rural districts during the past year by the missionaries of the American Sunday school union, laboring in the newer sections of Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana, under the supervision of Rev. John O. Ferris, district superintendent of Minneapolis.

Emphasis in the past has been laid upon establishing new organizations in neglected, far-away settlements, where the Sunday school message is seldom ever heard. Many of these schools, for want of equipment and leadership, working under big obstacles, are doing splendid service for the future citizenship of the state. As well as more schools, the American Sunday School union is making better schools by holding among these isolated neighborhoods evangelistic meetings—rural religious rallies—where better methods and school work are discussed. Great numbers of such communities have been reached during the past year. The schools are usually represented, not by delegates, but by wagonloads of fathers, mothers and children. A special responsibility is laid upon this union society for the upkeep of its schools, as no other organized body is in a position to offer them practical help. A number of promising churches have developed from these pioneer efforts during 1915.

Increased Force Desired.

For the present year the effort is being made to enlarge the force of men by ten, placing three more in Minnesota, three in North Dakota and four in Montana; making more than forty in all for the Northern district.

A. L. Burnett of Minneapolis will continue as general missionary for Minnesota; Rev. George B. Caley of Valley City, N. D., will work in the state of North Dakota, and Rev. Robert W. Newman of Missoula, Mont., will travel throughout the state of Montana. These general men have local oversight of the finances and assist in the rallies and group gatherings for better Sunday school work.

McGonagle a Director.

The annual meeting called to elect local vice presidents will be held in Philadelphia during February. The present directors will probably be elected to succeed themselves. Those now serving are: W. A. McGonagle of Duluth; T. B. Lindsay, H. N. Leighton, G. A. Gruman, W. J. Burnett and M. W. Savage of Minneapolis; R. C. Jefferson and W. L. Hackney of St. Paul, James F. Damon of Winnebago, W. W. Loveless of Worthington, Alfred Terry of Slayton, R. B. Griffith of Grand Forks, N. D.; F. W. Heidel of Valley City, N. D.; M. N. Hatcher of Fargo, N. D.; I. H. Inch of Missoula, Mont.; George M. Miles of Miles City, Mont., and H. M. McIntyre of Glasgow, Mont.

S. H. Dyer, who recently died in St. Paul, left the society a bequest which will be used to forward the work in Minnesota. Mr. Dyer was a valuable member of the board for fifty years. His counsel will be greatly missed in the vice presidents' meetings. His successor will be elected at the February meeting.

EXILE CABLED TO "BUY CLOVES"

Youth's Companion: Several years ago a young man walked into the office of the largest ivory and spice importing house in the United States. He was looking for a clerkship. In due course he was admitted to the presence of the senior partner. Now the senior partner had a curious way of testing a young man whose general appearance was promising. His plan was to offer something entirely unexpected—a chance to make good in a position that the applicant never anticipated. His decision was determined by the manner in which the applicant responded—whether or not he showed alertness to grasp the opportunity. In this instance the senior partner offered the young man the position of supercargo on a ship loaded with cotton goods scheduled to sail for Madagascar within forty-eight hours. The young man hardly knew where Madagascar was, and had almost no idea of the duties of a supercargo.

But these considerations he swept aside, for he saw his opportunity. He accepted the position. So the young man went to Madagascar and sold the cotton goods to such advantage that he was appointed by cable the firm's agent in Zanzibar. It was a place of great responsibility. On his judgment depended the organization of caravans into Central Africa to search for ivory, the maintenance of friendly relations with Arab chiefs, including the famous Tippoo Tib, and the purchase of the annual Zanzibar clove supply for America. Zanzibar was then virtually the only clove-producing spot on the globe.

The young man found the business of the firm disorganized because capable men could not be induced to stay in the deadly climate of Zanzibar. By careful living he preserved his health, and, thanks to his hard work, he was eventually gratified to see the name of his firm again rank high in that part of the world. But as years went by the natural longing to be called home grew within him. His success however, was the very thing that seemed to defeat that object. His firm, expressing their complete confidence in him, said not a word about his return on leave or permanently. And he, appreciating that confidence at its full worth, never hinted at either.

At last came his opportunity and his reward. For three days Zanzibar was swept by a terrible hurricane. Much of the city was destroyed, wreckage was piled up on the harbor beach, and nearly every tree on the island was torn up by the roots. The last fact was the all-important one when the American agent crawled out from his shelter. The clove groves had been obliterated, and for three years there would not be another full clove crop in the world market. Clearly his duty was to get the news to his firm. But the cable between Zanzibar and Aden had been severed by the storm. If he waited for the mail steamer, the news would become public, and of little advantage to the firm. Amid a still howling gale he crept down to the harbor front. There he saw that a single tramp steamer had kept afloat. The idea flashed into his mind to charter her to carry his message to Aden, where telegraph connection could be made with New York. By his handkerchief tied to a stick he attracted the steamer's notice. Then by the marine signal code he contracted with the captain to run for Aden with a message to his firm of just two words: "Buy cloves." It was one of the costliest messages ever dispatched, for it was the only cargo of a steamer chartered to make full speed over a course of 2,000 miles.

Some days later the firm in New York received the message. To them its extreme brevity was sufficient in the light of the confidence they had come to place in their Zanzibar agent. They did not pause to question, but bought cloves in New York, London and Paris—all the cloves on the market. They had hardly completed the operation when news came of the terrible hurricane and the destruction of the Zanzibar clove groves. At once the price of cloves went up and up. Then the New York firm put as brief a message or the cable to their Zanzibar agent: "Come home." You can imagine with what joy he received it. He was no longer a young man when he entered the office to grasp the senior partner's hand and to accept the position of general manager of their whole Oriental trade. Today he is a member of the firm.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

BAND CONCERTS FROM ELECTRIC LIGHT BULB

Music that ranges from the piercing wail of a taut violin string to the grumbling bass of a monster horn has been added to the remarkable achievements of an electrical instrument so small and so insignificant in appearance that it could be passed by scores of times without arousing so much as a lingering glance.

In the Popular Science Monthly appears a description of the latest uses to which that wonderful little instrument, the audion, has been lately put. The audion, it will be remembered, is the invention that made possible the recent talks by wireless telephone from Washington to Honolulu.

The audion is a small instrument which closely resembles an ordinary electric lamp bulb in appearance. Inside the bulb are two small electrodes which are connected to the other apparatus in such a manner that a perfect balance, electrically speaking, is maintained between them. The disturbing of this balance may be made to perform many remarkable feats, not the least of which is that of converting the silently flowing electric current into strains of the most captivating music.

With the audion it is quite possible to imitate the mellowest tones of a Stradivarius violin, but more interesting, it is possible to create music of a tone and timber that no one in this world has ever heard before. No less strange than the quality of the music is the means by which it is obtained. The variations produced in an electrical circuit by inserting a lead pencil line drawn on paper will cover not only the complete octave, but will include the most infinite shadings in tone.

Dr. Lee De Forest, the discoverer of this type of electrical music, claims that with an arrangement of four or five bulbs and suitable adjusting apparatus and keys similar to those of a piano keyboard, he can easily obtain notes ranging in pitch through as many octaves as are desired and a tone quality identical with that of all musical instruments now in use as well as qualities never before produced.

ORIGIN OF JUDGE LYNCH.

Toledo Blade: Among the many legends of the origin of lynching is this one: The son of a judge committed a crime, the prescribed punishment for which was death. The jury, out of liking and respect for the judge, made their verdict bear lightly on the head of the criminal. A few hours after the man was hanged from the window of his own home, and his father was executioner.

GRANDMOTHER SAYS:

Horehound or thoroughwort tea for the fever—goose oil and turpentine to rub on for colds and soreness of lungs or throat were the remedies used fifty years ago.

Now newer remedies have taken the place of the old—a tablet of asperin or a capsule of quinine for the fever without the old bitter tea—and Goose-olene to rub on the chest or throat, instead of the old goose oil and turpentine, gives quick relief, for the congestions, soreness or pain.

For the little ones Baby Goos-olene is the best to use when they have a chest cold—just rub on Baby Goos-olene, cover with a soft warm cloth and see how quickly they get relief. You can get either Baby Goose-olene or Goos-olene at any drug store in 25c tubes.—Advertisement.

LITTLE DOING ON FIRST NEW YEAR'S

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Only 250 people were in Virginia on the city's first New Year's day, Jan. 1, 1892, according to City Clerk Albert E. Bickford, who was one of the celebrants of the day here.

Dog racing featured the day's sports. Skating on Virginia and Silver lake was also enjoyed.

Little Going On.

No cabaret performances were held. No ski slides were in use. The "movies" were unknown, while there was no stock company playing here. A five-story structure would have looked like a Broadway skyscraper to Virginia residents. An interurban street car line was unknown, while no one dreamed of having four railroads in Virginia.

Although no charitable organizations had been formed, few cases of poverty existed here in 1892. It is estimated that there are fifty residents of the city who were here for Virginia's first New Year's day celebration.

Charles Brock is also hauling logs and cedar into town on the same road.

CUTS OFF STUMPS EVEN WITH GROUND

Former Aurora Educator Invents Machine That Will Be Boon.

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—O. B. Poore of Aberdeen, S. D., who for three years was instructor in manual training in the Aurora schools, has invented a machine for cutting off stumps even with the ground.

He has studied the conditions confronting the Northern Minnesota farmer and believes that his new machine will meet the conditions, as with it the stumps can be cleared even with the ground and grasses grown while the roots are rotting. As grasses grow a mower can be run over the ground and stumps and the hay used for feeding or sold. Under present conditions the hay must be cut by hand and in many cases grows up while the stumps are rotting.

QUIET HOLIDAY AT WASHINGTON

Usual Observance of New Years at Capital Is Omitted.

Washington, Jan. 1.—New Year's day in the national capital was unusually quiet with President Wilson away and congress in holiday recess.

There was no reception at the White House in the absence of the president and his bride and the annual "diplomatic breakfast" by the secretary of state to the diplomatic corps was omitted. Secretary Lansing also was out of the city.

There were, however, the usual receptions at the homes of most of the members of the cabinet. In diplomatic circles also the day was observed with the usual exchange of greetings.

New Year's greetings from all over the world reached the White House today and were being forwarded to the president at Hot Springs.

MRS. FLOOD DEAD.

Widow of Former City Official Dies at St. Mary's Hospital.

She is survived by a son, William, 1027 West First street, with whom she had made her home since her husband's death, and a sister, Mrs. John Walsh.

WELLER BOUND OVER.

Worker of Scheme to Beat Loan Companies Waives Examination.

Fred W. Weller, 31, railroad brakeman, who, police say, is the author of a clever scheme for duping loan concerns on promissory notes, was arraigned in municipal court for a preliminary hearing on a forgery charge late yesterday. He waived examination and was bound over to await grand jury action. Bail was fixed at $250.

Weller, a Winnipeg man, is accused of forging the name of Phil Busha, 211 West Fifth street, to a note for $20. Busha is a railroad conductor with whom Weller was acquainted, but who also was known by the manager of the loan company.

R. J. Carnes, the manager, told Weller to come back later, and called Detectives Toewe and Bradley, who arrested the man.

BOY BENEFITED AT RED WING SCHOOL

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—How a 16-year-old truant, an inmate at the boys' school at Red Wing, remembered the man that was partly responsible for his going there and how he appreciated it in the fact that it has made a model young man out of him is told by C. E. Everett, probation officer who today is using all the means he has to obtain a position for the boy.

The boy who was sent from the ranges on a quite serious charge, worked so hard at the school that he was given his freedom at the end of ten months, his conduct being such that everything pointed to him becoming a useful citizen.

The volume of business recorded for the year 1915 exceeds by about 20 per cent the total of 1914. The clearings are below the last year total, bankers said, because of the consolidation of two of the largest banks, which cut down the exchanges materially.

Konczak contested the case with a cross-complaint charging desertion. They were married in 1907. Konczak settled the alimony proposition with his wife for $300. The court also granted Mary A. Fritze a decree from Robert G. Fritze on charges of desertion and infidelity. This case was not contested.

Mines and lumber mills at Virginia are busy, he asserted, and added that the Christmas trade in Virginia was never better.

In addition the council will pass the ordinance removing the present limit on pool tables, so that permits may be granted for the opening of poolrooms in Gary. The limit allowed by the Hicken pool ordinance has been reached and the council is now unable to grant new permits, although residents at Gary and New Duluth want one or two poolrooms established.

The applications of Lubratovich & Danculovich and Caron & Brchich for transfers of saloon licenses to Gary will come up for a vote and it is generally believed that they will be turned down.

An ordinance appropriating $20,000 for the removal of all the old bridges during 1916 would be introduced by Commissioner Farrell, head of the works division.

WANTED---OLD TIME HOMES

Children of the Present Are Neglected, Irving Batcheller Says; Women Know Too Much of Auction and the Modern Dances, But Not Enough About Their Own Homes.

Wanted—The old-fashioned American home.

That's the advertisement Uncle Sam is putting out, according to one of the old gentleman's best friends—Irving Bacheller. We all know Mr. Bacheller as the author of "Keeping Up With Lizzie," "Eben Holden" and other homespun tales and satires. They are not merely "made in America," they are made in New England; and each one is seasoned with wintergreen, sweet fern and juniper. Also, each in its own way is an honest plea for what the author honestly believes will be the salvation of modern America—a revival of the principles and practices that made the past of America great.

Even if one is thoroughly convinced of the logic and justice of several of the new "isms," one may get rather tired of hearing and talking about them. At such a moment a turn-back-the-clock chat with Mr. Bacheller appeals to the mental palate; even as a plain home dinner delights after a surfeit of French restaurants. So I was glad to find him at the Hotel Collingwood, and to receive the message which he believes New York needs even more than the rest of the United States.

"As I've traveled about the country I have noted one condition everywhere, and I suppose it's even truer of New York than of most other places," he said.

They Don't Know Their Children.

"American men and women of today seem to know a lot about whist parties, dinner parties, tea parties, lunch parties, tango parties. They don't seem to know much about their homes. They don't seem to be acquainted with their children. And yet, of all of our citizens who have left the world in their debt, I can't find one that wasn't a home-made man or made woman.

"There was Washington," ruminated Mr. Bacheller, after a brief pause during which he abstracted the door key from the table in front of him, thus supplying his restless fingers with a new preoccupation.

"He didn't have much schooling, but he has left it on record that his mother and father taught him all the things that were worth while. There was Lincoln, who educated himself by the light of the pine knots from the family hearth. There was the first Cornelius Vanderbilt, who gave the railroad system to the United States; there was the editor, Horace Greeley; there were Walt Whitman and Samuel L. Clemens; there is our greatest inventor, Thomas A. Edison. It is surely of significance that all of these were home-made men.

Love and Kindness.

"Think of the old-time American home. Its rough wooden walls were first put together by the future husband and father, with the friendly assistance of the neighbors. Kindness had gone into its beams and rafters. Into the rag carpets and home-made curtains were stitched love and conscientious industry. In our city apartments — homes, so-called — we have marble and costly carved wood and Oriental rugs, but they're all made by hired men and they look cheap beside the love-wrought, toil-bought homes of the past.

"Think of the guests in those old-time homes," Mr. Bacheller continued, with quiet enthusiasm. "As one member of the family read and the rest listened, Tennyson and Longfellow, Dickens and Thackeray were brought within the circle of the evening lamp. The children went to bed thinking of them, rather than of the latest moving picture melodrama.

"And you feel that the modern home especially fails in its influence over children?" I asked.

Obedience.

"In the old-time American home the child learned what is one of the most valuable lessons in the world—obedience. The modern American child doesn't know the meaning of the word. The boy and girl of a generation or two ago learned to work. Today they are taught that work is unfashionable.

"But didn't the old-time home carry the lesson of obedience too far?" I suggested. Didn't it often involve a crushing of the child's individuality?"

"There was sometimes too much discipline," admitted Mr. Bacheller. "Yet I do not believe the danger to individuality was so great as it is today, through our practice of educating by thousands instead of by ones. Every father and mother used to see that their own children learned something. Today most parents content themselves with putting their children into the hopper of school and perhaps college, from which they emerge quite painfully alike. I believe in the schools and colleges, but to do their best work they should supplement parental influence, not take the place of it.

Against "Incubator Plan."

"I don't believe in bringing children up on the incubator plan. No machine is a satisfactory substitute for a mother and a home."

"I agree with you that children should be taught to work," I said. "Yet what can they do in a city apartment? There are no chores for the boy, and the kitchen is not usually big enough to contain both the girl and her mother at the same time."

"It is gross neglect of the welfare of their children which makes people live in a cramped New York apartment when for less money they can obtain a whole house to themselves in Brooklyn or Yonkers or New Jersey," he replied with calm emphasis. "In such surroundings the children can be reared in simplicity. The son of the house can work in the garden and the daughter can learn home management. That is the obvious remedy for a situation which I wouldn't criticize if I could see no way out.

"A family huddles in a small city apartment, and because it is most uncomfortable for any prolonged stay, each person seeks the theater, the restaurant or other places of diversion. Caught in the race for pleasure, all are unwilling to leave town and the sleeping place they call home. It's an example of the vicious circle.

"Yet there are only three real luxuries — well-earned weariness, sound sleep and a good digestion. A life devoted to the pleasures of the hour is a life of drudgery. The society woman works harder than the washerwoman, for the latter can go home at 6 o'clock and go to sleep, while the society woman must keep on working till 2 or 3 in the morning.

A Great Pity.

"It seems to me a great pity that so many college men should spend their summers in industrious idleness, playing tennis and doing other things that amount to nothing. Just as in Europe they have compulsory army service for the young men, so I wish we might transport our college students during the summer vacation to the Western harvest fields. They would learn how to work with their hands, and they would gain a splendid understanding of the real heart of the country.

"We've got to get away from European ideals—we see now to what they lead," interpolated Mr. Bacheller, a grim edge on his low tones—"and get back to our own ideals of democracy. And so I believe that all good Americans should first inform themselves as to the old-time American home, and then do all that lies in their power to recreate it."

HERALD'S WEEKLY ROADS BUREAU AND BULLETIN

Under this heading The Duluth Herald is conducting a weekly column of information for automobile owners and drivers. If you are planning on taking a trip, write to the automobile department. All the information at our disposal is yours for the asking. Motorists outside of Minnesota are especially invited to make use of this department.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 1.—The offices of the national headquarters of the Lincoln Highway association are seething with the activities of preparation for the 1916 campaign of constructive work, plans for which are now rounding into definite form.

H. C. Ostermann, field secretary of the association, who spent the entire summer traveling back and forth across the continent on the Lincoln highway, returned to Detroit about the middle of November and brought with him a vast fund of detailed information pertaining to road conditions, needed improvements, and, above all, a report of the spirit prevailing in the various communities traversed by the Lincoln highway.

Special Meeting Results.

So great and intensified is this interest that President Henry B. Joy felt justified in calling a special meeting of the board of directors of the Lincoln Highway association to assure the proper co-operation of the association to every community planning constructive improvements next year.

It was brought out at the meeting that so many requests have been made to the association for cement donations for the construction of seedling miles on the Lincoln highway in 1916 that the supply available at the present time would no more than meet them. It is expected that 75,000 additional barrels must be secured to take care of petitions yet to be made. Some time in the immediate future the association will mail to all communities wanting them printed applications to be filed for the cement donated by the Lincoln Highway association for the construction of seedling miles. It is confidently expected that one of these standard miles will be built in every county from the Eastern Indiana line to the Western Nebraska line. The completion of plans of such magnitude will make history in American road building.

The efficient services of Mr. Ostermann as consul-at-large of the association were recognized by the directors by the change of his title to that of field secretary. In that capacity he will work in conjunction with Secretary Bement, at the national headquarters in Detroit, in furthering the enlarged activities of the association.

Prisoners are to build concrete bridges in West Virginia, according to the latest report received by the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor from A. D. Williams, chairman of the state road bureau of West Virginia.

Twenty-five convicts are at work on the bridges, one of which will be an overhead railroad crossing and the second an undergrade crossing. Both spans will be of re-enforced concrete. Work is to be commenced at once.

Experts have reported to the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor that, while it is practical to employ convicts on low-grade work, it is an open question whether they could make good on high-grade work, but the West Virginia officials are convinced of success. The experiment of employing prisoners in bridge-building follows upon successful work on the county roads during the past three years and is a definite step forward.

In highway construction in Maryland the state highway department has made proper distinction between much-traveled and little-used roads, the former being given the preference in construction and maintenance. The state highways are kept in very good condition. It is questionable if any other state can show lower figures on maintenance for all types of roads.

Approximately 150 miles of concrete road have been built in eighteen counties, the first being built in 1912. The department states that the local outlay for maintenance on the entire mileage since the construction of the roads began has been approximately $16,000, or an average of $100 per mile per year. This amount paid for maintenance included not only the care of the road surface proper, but of shoulders, ditches and embankments as well.

Jefferson City, Mo.—The Missouri law giving to special road districts all funds collected by the 25-cent levy fixed by county courts on property in the road districts has been declared constitutional by the Missouri supreme court. The case came from Moberly, Mo., where the special road district brought mandamus proceedings to compel the county court to turn over the money to the road district. A similar case was appealed from Columbia, where the county court refused to appropriate the tax to the special road district.

Lewiston, Idaho—The Lewiston highway district has voted bonds to the amount of $150,000 to provide for the construction of a hard-surface highway from the Clearwater river to the top of the Uniontown hill, the vote being 1,242 to 155. The road from a point near Uniontown to the Snake river in Clarkston constitutes the Idaho link with the Washington state highway system.

Mobile, Ala.—Progress is being made in the defining of the route of the Jackson highway. At the recent meeting, "good roads boosters" from Mobile county gave some convincing arguments for being on the road. They also gave illustrations showing convict labor at work and a bridge on the Hall's Mill road, as concrete exhibits of Mobile's reasons.

The selection of the route of the southern division of the Jackson highway has been postponed until 1916 by the board of directors of the Jackson Highway association. Two factions argued the question of the proper way between Nashville and New Orleans.

Ottawa county, Mich., supervisors have decided to appropriate $63,250 for good roads for the coming year, and $10,000 additional for road repair work. The voters of Mason county, Mich., next spring will vote on a bond issue of $100,000 for good roads in their county.

PICKED UP ON "HIGH"

Being a Compilation of Happenings the Last Week Among Local Automobile Dealers and Motorists.

Despite opposition on the part of some of the local automobile dealers, there will be an auto show staged at the new armory during the week of Feb. 7, according to William F. Daly, who has been chosen to take charge of arrangements.

"Duluth's second annual show will be staged," Mr. Daly said yesterday. "Some of the dealers are opposed to the proposition, but a majority of the agents favor it and have joined in the work. The public wants a show and we plan to give the best possible exhibit for the city.

"If Duluth should abandon the show this year, it means that this city has dropped from the metropolitan class and out of the auto map of the country."

Mr. Daly declared that a feature of the show this year will be an armored car exhibited at the San Francisco fair and which will be shown at the Chicago and Minneapolis shows. He plans to visit the show at Chicago during the week of Jan. 22 in order to study the decorations and arrange for shipping some of the exhibits to Duluth.

Next Saturday Cleveland will open its annual automobile show.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 1.—The Toledo Automobile Dealers' association has been organized by about a score of dealers who are desirous of co-operating in bettering service to their patrons. The new organization will also work in harmony with the Toledo Automobile club and the chamber of commerce toward the betterment of traffic conditions.

The secretary of state of New York state reports that on Dec. 4 there were registered 231,713 owners of automobiles, 100,509 of which were in New York city. The registration and license fees total almost $2,000,000.

SERVICE TO HERALD READERS.

Anyone interested in the purchase of a 1916 automobile can get information about the various machines and the local dealers by writing to the automobile department of The Herald. If you are interested in any machine The Herald will tell you where to buy. The Herald is the recognized medium between buyer and dealer in the Northwest.

DULUTHIAN WINNER IN FRANKLIN CONTEST

Joseph Peacha, Jr., local Franklin agent, was one of the ten winners in the national "show-the-car" contest conducted last fall by the Franklin factory.

This week Mr. Peacha received a formal announcement of his victory and a check for $50 as his share of the prize money. More than 200 dealers throughout the United States participated in this contest, which began on Oct. 15 and continued for one month. The principal feature was the carrying of passengers in the new Franklin car, the dealer receiving a certain number of points for each person carried over a specified route. Mr. Peacha came in tenth place.

JOSEPH PEACHA, JR.

"I am certainly well pleased at our showing," said Mr. Peacha yesterday. "It isn't the $50 in prize money as much as the honor of coming in with the winners out of 200 dealers in all sections of this country."

THREE MILLION CARS.

On the present schedule of car production there will be approximately 3,000,000 cars in America July 1, 1916, this figure covering passenger cars only. On a conservative estimate these passenger cars will consume $25,000,000 gallons of gasoline per year, this being based on an average mileage of 5,000 per car, and assuming that 1,500,000 cars will average approximately twenty miles per gallon, and that the remainder of the cars will average fifteen miles per gallon.

SWEEPSTAKES NO MORE.

Contest of 300 Miles Replaces 500-Mile Race.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 1.—The 500-mile Indianapolis interrational sweepstakes, which had its inception in 1911 and has been run annually on Memorial day ever since, is no more.

In place of the 500-mile contest a 300-mile race will be held on May 30, 1916, the local promoters holding the almost common opinion that the public has lost interest in long-distance events and that more action and speed now is demanded by the spectators.

Not only was the distance of the annual Memorial day race cut, but the amount of prize money also was reduced. For the last four years the purse has amounted to $50,000, but in 1916 the drivers' rewards will be $20,000 less, or $30,000, divided into ten parts. Under this arrangement the winner will receive only $15,000, instead of $25,000 as formerly.

The entrance fee has been placed at $100 and this will be refunded to the entrant providing his car starts.

JITNEYS IN PROPHECY.

Speaking of jitney buses, there are those who say that the prophet Nahum foretold the coming of the most modern conveyance. The quotation from his prophecy reads as follows:

"The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings."—Nahum ii, 4.

Nahum is said to have lived about 500 or 600 B. C., or approximately twenty-five centuries before the jitney made its appearance on American thoroughfares.

AGRICULTURAL MOTOR SCHOOL.

Mechanical Traction to Replace Horses in France.

France has inaugurated its first agricultural motor school at Herblay, about twenty miles to the north of Paris. Since the outbreak of war there has been a radical change in French agricultural methods, the shortage of horses, the lack of men and the destruction in certain regions of all agricultural implements having decided farmers everywhere to change from horse to mechanical traction.

This movement has been accentuated by the government scheme under which substantial subsidies are offered toward the purchase of agricultural tractors and motors and the assurance that by 1917 denaturized alcohol will be a cheap national motor fuel.

The school just established seeks to instruct farmers and farm workers in the handling and maintenance of various types of agricultural tractors. The demonstration machines are all of American construction.

WORLD'S NEW ENDURANCE CHAMPION

Stock Maxwell touring car which traveled 12,405 miles in twenty-five days on Southern California roads. The run is still in progress. Californians predict that it may continue until 20,000 miles have been covered without stopping the motor.

(f. o. b. Factory)

MODEL 83--- ROADSTER...$675
(f. o. b. Factory)

This Car Formerly Sold For $750 and $725.

ABSOLUTELY NO CHANGE IN THE CAR

The car you are all undoubtedly well acquainted with; full 35-horse power, electric starter and lighter, one-man silk mohair top, speedometer, electric horn, 4-inch tires, demountable rims, and in fact the full regular equipment you would find on any car selling at $3,000 to $5,000.

This change in price to the purchaser is made now all on account of the fact that the Willys-Overland Company, manufacturers at Toledo, Ohio, have increased their production to such an extent that they can give to the buying public the benefit of a lower price. Remember, this Model 83 Overland car, five-passenger, selling at $750, f. o. b. factory, was the best buy on the American market, considering value and stand-up quality.

With our facilities now for rendering unequaled service to our patrons and the full one year's service guarantee that goes with every car we sell, in addition to our responsibility and with the big stock of parts we carry on hand for your convenience and with the new prices, we feel sure that this announcement in price reduction will be received by you as our New Year's Greeting. AUTOMOBILE NEWS

NEWSPAPERS AS EDUCATORS

News Dissemination One of Oldest Instincts, He Says.

"Newspapers are, in my opinion, the greatest educational institution of modern civilization," declared Lee Anderson, sales and advertising manager of the Hupp Motor Car corporation, who spoke as the representative of the Detroit newspapers at the Detroit Adcraft club's dinner on "Publishers' Night." Magazine, newspaper, trade and farm publications were represented.

Mr. Anderson, who is a former newspaperman, spoke on "The Case of a Newspaper," saying in part:

News Instinct Strong.

"The instinct in the human race to promulgate news is the third oldest instinct in the world. The oldest, I think, is self-preservation, the second oldest, I think, is the sexual instinct, and I am not so sure but that the news instinct is as old as either, because, I can readily conceive that the first man let any and all things near him know that he was alive and that he had preserved himself, and I am quite sure that after he had won for himself the first woman, he probably boasted even to the animals of his pleasure—thus proving, in both instances, his news instinct.

"If that is true, the telephatic news instinct didn't last long, for long about 4000 or 5000 B. C. we find the ancient Egyptians cutting the news of the day in the faces of rocks, in the faces of pyramids, on the inside of tombs. You might say that the Egyptian hieroglyphics were simply history. I can't agree with you. I think they were news—else why were they put in public places? Why were the Egyptian temples where the people congregated, covered with stories of personal accomplishments, conquests—yes, and scandal.

"Had the present European war occurred a thousand years ago, we, living in the Western hemisphere, would just be learning the first facts about the mobilizing orders of the European powers. Instead of which, we know tonight what happened last night in the most remote trenches of those hundreds of miles of battle fronts. Perhaps you think electricity, the telegraph, the telephone and wireless, perhaps, I say, you think these agencies are responsible for that. I don't think so. I think the newspapers are primarily responsible because it was the demand for news, the desire for news and the desire to give news which built the newspapers and which made necessary the perfection of all the various means of transportation of news which we now have.

Inveterate Readers in U. S.

"We who live in the United States are the most inveterate readers in the world. Readers of what? Newspapers! Pretty nearly all of us read a few books, a few magazines. Some of us read a given number of books every year; some of us read a certain few chosen magazines every week or every month—but all of us read newspapers. Morning, noon and night; every week day and Sunday; in the city and in the country; on the train, in cafes, in hotels and in our homes—wherever we so—even to bed, we read newspapers.

"You have probably heard thousands of people say you can't believe what you read in the newspapers, but you do believe practically everything that you read in the newspapers, for you know that with the newspaper competition that exists and with the efficiency of news sources, the newspapers are the greatest disseminaters of truth in the world. That is education. It is educational to know the truth, even if it hurts you, and therefore I maintain that newspapers are the greatest educational institution in modern civilization.

"I wonder if you have ever stopped to realize that over $250,000,000 are spent in the newspapers of the United States each year. I wonder if you realize that the national advertisers alone spend in newspaper advertising each year approximately $50,000,000. This tremendous amount of money is not spent without some results.

Newspapers a Necessity.

"We find the newspaper a necessity in our homes and in our business life. We praise it for the great expense to which it has gone and for the great diligence which it has shown in the securing and presenting of current news of the day. We admire its fearless attitude in the persecution of all things—or nearly all things—which are not good in our civic, business and social life. We read its advertising and we believe that advertising is real stuff. We read its fiction, which we read in the magazine three years ago, and we turn away more or less in disgust. We read its comic sections, its sport pages and its local columns and we shudder at its misuse of English; we read its 'Hints on Beauty' and its 'Advice to the Lovelorn,' and we grieve that there are among us fools who must be catered to with this sort of stuff; we read its crusades for pure food and better health and we are grateful that there is an all-powerful messenger going into the homes of those who do not know the value of these things, teaching them to live in the right way. We read the disguised medical advertising and the unreliable financial ads, and it pains us to think of all the poor gullible people who may read these things and believe. But, seeing these things, we realize that if we would sell our goods we must take the newspapers for what they do—not always for what they are. Our verdict, therefore, is that, while we find the newspaper guilty of a great many indiscretions, we find it equally guilty of taking to the people who need merchandise the merchandise which they need when they need it."

SCHOOL FOR EMPLOYES.

Chalmers Company Starts Work With Many Workmen Present.

To assist ambitious employes eager to increase their efficiency and earning power, the Chalmers Motor company has recently instituted the Chalmers school of instruction, under the direction of C. G. Arthur, well-known mechanical engineer and technical writer.

At the first session of the school more than 300 of the 5,000 employes of the Chalmers company reported for enrollment and the number has steadily increased with each meeting. All sessions are held in the new auditorium at the Chalmers factory, which seats 500 people and was formally opened at the last sales convention.

"We aim to transform the more or less floating class of automobile workmen into a stable body with some definite plan in view looking toward advancement and higher salaries," says S. H. Humphrey, vice president in charge of manufacturing, who is responsible for the school idea. "A big demand exists in the automobile industry for trained men of every description, but on many occasions in the past we have been compelled to go outside of the automobile business to secure these men. Automobile workers are inclined to drift from one factory to another as the whim strikes them, and the rolling stone adage holds good in this business as in others.

"By educating the various employes along mechanical, engineering and other lines, we hope to obtain a permanent organization with well-defined plans of advancement for every man in our employ."

Classes in the new Chalmers school meet directly after working hours on Tuesdays and Fridays. Two sessions are held on these days, at 3:15 and 5:30 p. m., to accommodate the employes whose work is completed at those hours.

In order that the men attending the classes shall not feel the burden too heavily of paying for their meals, the Chalmers company stands half the expense of supper in the factory dining room for every man enrolled in the classes.

PREPARE FOR AUTO SHOW

Many Novel Models Designed for Display Jan. 29 to Feb. 5.

Each automobile manufacturer in the city of Detroit, throughout Michigan and in the states of Indiana and Ohio also, is being visited by Walter Wilmot, manager of the ninth annual automobile show of the Minneapolis Automobile Trade association to be held at the National Guard armory, Jan. 29 to Feb. 5.

In his trips to the factories Mr. Wilmot has found a surprising and interesting situation. The automobile manufacturers this year and unlike any previous year are working with night and day shifts to supply the immediate demands for automobiles. This high pressure has resulted in the slighting of the work of preparation on many special cars originally designed for the national automobile show at New York. The time is now too late to get these cars ready for New York and the makers are putting in every effort to prepare them for the Chicago show, from which event they will be sent post haste to Minneapolis. Many anxious inquiries have been made regarding the plans for a special train from Chicago to Minneapolis, as everyone of the makers has expressed an intention of sending the national show cars from Chicago to the show at the National Guard armory. The makers have been told that every convenience will be placed at their command at Chicago, and the show cars will be rushed from the Coliseum to the special train which will break all records to reach Minneapolis in time to install the cars Sunday morning. Many of the makers have stipulated in taking space for the Chicago show that they must be allowed to take certain cars out of that exhibit after the close on Friday night so that they may express them to Minneapolis to be on hand for the opening of the exhibit.

Interest is being taken in the exhibit of miniature automobiles and inquiries are coming in from all over the country while the manual training schools are still actively at work preparing cars for this most interesting feature. No other show of the world has ever given prominence to the efforts of the youngsters. Inquiries have even been received from boys on the farms throughout the country. Pushmobiles, peddlemobiles and small automobiles and electrics of not over six feet in length will be displayed in competition for the three purses of cash which have been offered, $100 for each class divided into four prizes of $50, $15 and $10 each. There will be a large variety of the little cars on hand Jan. 29, the date set for the installation of this exhibit. It seems quite probable that the initiative of the Minneapolis Automobile Trade association will be followed by other automobile shows in the country, as this will be one of the most interesting exhibits at the Minneapolis show.

WHEN TO LIGHT YOUR AUTO LAMPS

Do you know when to light your auto lamps in the evening?

The Minnesota laws state that lamps must be turned on one hour after sunset and kept lighted until one hour after sunrise, if the machine is on a public highway.

For the benefit of Duluth motorists, The Herald publishes the following table, showing the time of sunset during January:

AUTO INDUSTRY SHOWS BIG INCREASE

Volume and Value Advance 3,278 Per Cent in Decade.

The automobile industry shows an increase in volume and value of product of 3,278 per cent in the last decade. Its nearest competitor in point of growth, electrical manufacturing, has gained only 107 per cent, says the New York Tribune. For 1916 alone trade authorities predict a further increase in volume of production of from 20 to 35 per cent, computed on the 1915 volume, and estimate the aggregate output of American factories at 1,000,000 new cars, with a sales value of approximately $700,000,000.

The totals appear even more impressive when considered in proportion to the population of the country, and mean that in the coming year there will be produced and sold one motor car to every 100 people in the United States. It is estimated that at the present time there are more than 2,000,000 pleasure cars in use in America, or one to every fifty persons, or, to carry it further and considering four persons to a family, approximately one motor car to every twelve families. By the end of its fiscal year of 1916, and assuming the estimated production to have been disposed of, this ratio will have been reduced to one automobile to every eight families.

The distribution of this tremendous manufacturing volume has been general and in no way confined to the more populous sections of the country. New York state, of course, leads the republic in the number of cars owned in any one state, with something more than 200,000 machines owned within its borders, but in relation to the density of population of the other states New York is far from being unique. Take Kansas, for example. If the corn barons continue to buy automobiles at the present rate, it follows, mathematically, that by July 1, 1918, there will be owned in that state a motor car for every solitary family. Today even, according to Kansas statistics, there is one automobile to every thirty-four persons in the state, or, to pursue the original ratio, one to every eight families.

RECORD FOR CADILLAC.

A Seattle owner of a Cadillac eight has driven his car 22,000 miles in the last eleven months. This is an average of 2,000 miles a month, or better than sixty-six miles per day. The ordinary motor car owner in a city will drive an average of probably 5,000 miles per year.

MERGER RUMOR PUNCTURED.

Overland and Electric Company Not to Join Forces.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 1.—The rumor which staggered automobile circles

NOTES FROM THE FACTORIES

The recent wage increase put into effect at the Franklin automobile factory in Syracuse, N. Y., will total $70,000 in a year's time. The old wage scale was raised 2 cents per hour, in addition to which the workmen get the benefit of the higher premium earned on this new basis.

During the past three years the actual wages paid out to the employes of the Franklin company have increased 28 per cent per man, while over the same period the hours of labor have been gradually reduced 10 per cent so that, while the men are now working fifty hours a week, they are receiving more money than when they worked fifty-five hours a week.

The large plant is to be given over now to the manufacture of the Wilson truck. The company has been working on this truck for the last two years and have undoubtedly carried on the most extensive experiments ever carried on by a truck company in preparation for an entrance into the field.

STRANGE QUIET MARKS THE "MORNING AFTER" IN THE DOWNTOWN DISTRICT

"We'll Get Most of Them Back" Is Comment of Thirst Assuager—Some Sprightly Clear-Eyed Citizens to Be Seen.

A bellboy with a pitcher of ice water clinked his way along a hotel corridor this morning.

Three doors opened and three heads appeared.

The bellboy handed the pitcher in at the first door, and left for another.

Around the hotels and in the downtown district generally, today, besides being the natal day of 1916, was also one of the "mornings after," and also one given over to sharp reflection on the fact that things are not always as they seem—especially when the seeming comes the morning after New Year's eve.

For the most part the hotels were deserted. So were the bars. Several well-known bartenders were questioned as to the apparent quiet in the gin mills.

"Most of 'em are sleepin'," vouchsafed one prominent mixer.

"Do you think that many will ride the aqua pura vehicle during the present year?" a dispenser of drinks was asked.

"Will you please repeat that?" he came back with.

"The question is, will many remain on the water wagon?"

"For a week," said the bartender, "we look for a slight falling off in sales. We always look for this. It's a habit to resolute New Year's eve, and lots of men resolute against taking one now and then to please the home folks and to alibi themselves for what they some times do the afternoon and evening before New Year's day. But we will get most of them back. Now and then a man goes on the water wagon and remains there. For the most part they falter, like the gink who saw the pictures on the wall, that guy in the Bible—get me—and come back to us, looking sheepish, but asking for the same old stuff.

"It's quiet around here this morning. It will remain quiet for a while, but times will pick up. They will be back."

From the large expanse of talk regarding the celebration of New Year's eve, one would gather the impression that nearly everyone in the city took a gay whirl at saying good-by to the old year and greeting the new year. Such was not the case, evidently. Early today many sprightly and fresh-looking citizens made their appearance. When interrogated and eagerly questioned on their deceiving looks, the gentlemen hastened to announce that they remained at home with the children and didn't take a thing, in fact, didn't celebrate in any way.

Others there were, however, who bore a bedraggled appearance, like that borne by the prodigal son after his harsh experience with an unfriendly world.

"'Twas a hard night," said one, and he looked it.

Up to the time of going to press, however, few of the celebrants had made their appearance. With care and attention, it is believed that most of them will live through the day.

OFFENDS WHILE BEING ARRAIGNED

Chauffeur Fined for Leaving Engine Running; Motor Hums Outside.

Starting an auto engine in cold weather is sometimes a difficult task, so Wensel Saukup, chauffeur for a prominent Duluth grain man, has been in the habit of letting his motor run. He was arrested yesterday by Officer Nystrom, and brought to headquarters on a charge of leaving an automobile unattended.

This morning, while Saukup was waiting to appear before Judge F. H. Cutting to answer to the charge, his car stood in front of police headquarters, unoccupied, and the offending motor hummed continuously until he returned.

Judge Cutting fined him $3 and costs.

TASTE FOR FISH BESETTING SIN

John Kelly First Man Sent to Work Farm in New Year.

"Resolved," said John Kelly, "that I will not eat fish in 1916."

That stands for an honest to goodness New Year's resolution, which came to light in police court this morning.

John Kely is a lumberjack, and a good Irishman, although his taste for salt fish has landed him in the "cooler" on one or two occasions.

Once before, John, after a few too many bowls, stole some fish, and last night he raided a dock on Lake avenue south, coming away with a keg of salt herring. Driver Fred Dinkel caught Kelly late in the evening. This morning Judge Cutting sentenced him to thirty days at the work farm.

John has the honor of being the first man to go to the work farm from police court in 1916, but it's a doubtful honor, he says.

Judge Cutting paroled about a dozen men this morning, the only ones to stay in jail being Kelly, Paul Saari, a sixth-offense imbiber, and John Taaku, who was not presentable when court time came.

FATHER SENDS SON TO WORK FARM

A. Walkush, Sr., Presses Forgery Charge Against Youth.

"Make him sweat for it" was a father's advice to Chief R. D. McKercher yesterday regarding Alois Walkush, alleged forger, and the boy began a 60-dey work farm sentence today because his parent refused to relent.

Alois has been in the habit of signing checks "A. Walkush" and cashing them, the father says. This would be all right except that the father's initial also is A and the bank account in question is his, not his son's.

Frank G. Rice, a chum of the young man, was arrested with him by Patrolman Oscar Olson and also will serve sixty days. The charge was passing worthless checks.

Chief McKercher wired Walkush, Sr., at Stevens Point, Wis., and the irate pater told him to go as far as he liked and then to send the boy home, as he wanted to see him.

ROAD PLANS ARE OUTLINED

Commissioner Farrell Discusses Proposals With Street Commissioners.

Three Highways Into City and Improvements to Piedmont Included.

Three roadways leading into Duluth, and the improvement of Piedmont avenue, so that a street car extension can be built to the cemetery at Hermantown, are among the improvements planned for the next two years by Commissioner Farrell, head of the works division.

This program was outlined this morning by the works head at a special conference with his street commissioners.

Commissioner Farrell's program includes the opening of the new Farrell road past the Villa Scholastica, so that it will serve as the main artery for all the highways leading out of Duluth in the northeast section of the city. This road will be improved with a very low grade, so that traffic in and out of the city will not have to use the steep hills.

Road to Nopeming.

In addition, the commissioner plans to extend the Getchell road up to the city limits and to improve a suitable roadway to the sanatorium at Nopeming. All the three highways will extend right up to the city line, and in this way start a movement for the improvement of the highways outside of the city limits. Commissioner Farrell expects to obtain the co-operation of the county commissioners.

This program, as outlined to the street commissioners, is planned in addition to the general paving program involving an expenditure of approximately $1,000,000 during this new year.

At the present time the Piedmont avenue street car line stops at Tenth street, and it is Commissioner Farrell's aim to establish a low grade up to the cemetery, so that the street car company will build its extension within the next two years.

TWELVE HOMES OPENED TO BOYS

Duluthians Respond Promptly to Appeal Of Mrs. Atwood.

When it comes to responding to appeals for help in any way, no city is prompter than Duluth. Yesterday Mrs. Agnes L. Atwood made an appeal through The Herald in behalf of a boy of 13 who needed a home. Shortly after The Herald was issued yesterday afternoon calls began to come in to Mrs. Atwood, and before night twelve Duluthians had offered the boy a home.

Mrs. Atwood was more than pleased with the response and also with the persons who came to the rescue of the boy. She is now considering the applicants, and trying to decide just which home it would be best to place the boy in. Among the list of homes opened to the boy is that of one of Duluth's leading citizens.

It is expected that Mrs. Atwood and the boy's mother will decide the matter next Monday.

SUPERIOR

Has Father Arrested.

Peter Stamisias, 19, yesterday caused the arrest of his father, Dennis Stamisias, proprietor of a lunch room at 1819 Broadway, charging that his father had beaten him on a number of occasions without provocation and had also taken $400 of his hard-earned money away from him. The elder Stamisias will be arraigned in police court Monday.

Y. M. C. A. Building Fund Campaign

Plans are rapidly being completed for the six-day campaign to be held by the Superior Y. M. C. A. to raise $75,000 for an association building. The compaign will take place during the week beginning Jan. 12. One hundred local men in charge of P. G. Stratton will make the canvass. W. G. Wright, the new sceretary, and E. L. Ludvig, an expert in such campaigns, will assist.

Superior Celebrates New Year.

Gayety marked the close of the old year and the birth of the new in Superior last night. Cafes and restaurants, hotels, churches and homes entertained parties which watched during the fading hours of the old year.

POLICE LIKE "SHAKEUP"

"Moving Day" at Headquarters Brings Many Congratulations.

The police shakeup outlined by Chief R. D. McKercher in a special bulletin yesterday afternoon, although it occasioned great surprise among members of the force, is popular among patrolmen.

Today was moving day at headquarters and the officers promoted by the chief as a New Year's present were the recipients of many congratulations.

Chief of Detectives Gustav Lahti took charge of the detective force, succeeding Lieut. F. A. Schulte, this morning, and Lieut. Schulte took up his work at the West Duluth station, where he has succeeded Lieut. Charles Wilcox. Lieut. Wilcox will report for duty at 10:30 o'clock tonight at headquarters.

Detective John Roberg, with his new running mate, Detective E. H. Barber, began work as a plain clothes man at 1 o'clock. Detective Barber served as lieutenant in charge of the nightwatch last night, ending his duties at 8 o'clock this morning.

Sergeant A. V. Youngberg will report at headquarters tonight at 6 o'clock, and will be detailed to the downtown section. He was succeeded as court officer, after a little more than a year in that position, by Former Detective Donald Irvine.

Official comment on the changes made yesterday still is lacking. Chief McKercher has not been reached since his bulletin was issued, except for a few minutes, and he refuses to make any statement as to the reasons for his actions.

Lieut. Schulte's transferral to West Duluth has proved a big surprise.

QUEER NUMBERS.

Uncanny Mystery of Figures Is Endless Field for Inquiry.

Philadelphia Evening Ledger: If Shakespeare had asked "What's in a number?" as well as "What's in a name?" and pursued that inquiry, he would have found an endless field for investigation. There is something uncanny and mysterious in the character of figures, the strange things you can do with them and the way certain attributes recur in their use.

The numbers 3, 7 and 9 furnish the most interesting study. Numbers 3 and 7 have their good points, but in potency and versatility they have to take a back seat when 9 has the stage. No. 7 was the favorite in the Bible. To it we are indebted for seven days in the week, the seven golden candlesticks, the seven lean years that devoured the seven fat ones and the seven lean cattle that made a meal of the seven fat kine.

The rule of three is a nighmare in every child's education. As his education progresses he becomes acquainted with the Three Graces, "Three Men in a Boat," "The Three Musketeers." It's on the ball field, though, that No. 3 shines. Here find the three basemen, the three outfielders, three strikes, three outs. And pursuing this line of reckoning shouldn't a man get his base on three balls instead of four? Then, there are such trivial things as three meals a day, the third degree, the three estates and three cheers.

But you can't begin to manipulate 3 and 7 as you can 9. Take the multiplication table, for example. Everywhere the product of 9 results in a 9. It doesn't make any difference what you multiply with or how many times you repeat or change the figures. Just try it. Multiply 9 by 2 and you get 18. Add 1 and 8 and there you have 9. Again, 9 plus 7 equals 8. There is no variation until you multiply 9 by 11. This gives you 99 and apparently an inconsistency. But add the two digits 9 and 9 and you get 18, and again 1 plus 8 equals 9. This process may be carried out to an indeterminable length, and the results are always the same. Pick out any number at random. For example, 4,563. Multiply it by 9 and you get 41,067. Add the digits and you have 18. Add these digits again and 9 reappears.

Now try another. Take any row of figures at random, reverse their order and subtract the lesser from the greater. Always the total will be either 9 or a multiple of 9. For example, take 3,469, which reversed reads 9,643. Subtract 3,459 from 9,643 and you have 6,084. Add the digits and the result is 18, a multiple of 9. The same result follows, no matter whether the numbers are raised by squares or by cubes.

Here is another way by which the number 9 exerts its strange powers. Write down at random any number, add its digits and then subtract the sum of these digits from the original number. The sum of the digits thus obtained will always be either 9 or a multiple of 9. Thus take 7,325. Adding the digits gives 17. Subtracting 17 from 7,325 leaves 7,308. Add the digits and you get 18, and adding 1 and 8 gives 9.

HOW TO CASE HARDEN IRON.

Popular Science Monthly: Make up a paste of powdered prussiate of potash and water. Coat the iron with this paste, and set it aside to dry. Let the forge fire be clear and bright. When the paste is dry upon the iron thrust the iron into the fire until it is cherry red. Keep it at this heat for a few minutes and then take it out. Plunge it into cold water and it will be found converted into steel at the surface.

AND HERE'S ANOTHER NEW YEAR!

Yesterday it was Nineteen Fifteen.

Today the blood-red page is closed, and the mystic hand of Fate inexorably turns the leaf and lays bare the clean, white page of Nineteen Sixteen.

What that new page shall carry when the time again comes to turn the leaf we cannot know today, and would not if we could. Yet this we know: that much of what it shall carry will be there by our wills—that Fate does not do all the writing—that our own hands, clumsy or deft, well meaning or ill, will make their record there.

How fast they fly, these years! It is hardly possible that a year has sped since Nineteen Fourteen gave way in the march to Nineteen Fifteen—yet Nineteen Fourteen is already dwindling in the mists of time. It seems hardly possible that a year and a half has passed since war's horrid scream sent a shock of terror 'round the world. Yet so it is. The years roll fast—faster and yet faster as our own years are multiplied. It's sad, a little; and yet stimulating, too, because it makes us think—or ought to—that if we are to do anything to make it worth the world's while to have had us with it, we had better be up and doing.

In a way, it's just an arbitrary, man-made division of the calendar, made for convenience in counting and keeping records. Today is much like yesterday, except that it is a holiday without much significance unless we give it significance. We do not feel a day older in this Nineteen Sixteen than we did yesterday, when it was Nineteen Fifteen. Yet, somehow, this passing of the years—this swift, inexorable passing of the years—is symbolized by the calendar change, and so it is a time for resolutions and endings and beginnings.

What will this new year bring? Don't you wish you knew? Or do you? The peep behind the veil that is denied us would be a hazardous business that might affright or might delight. Better as it is, with much of the making of the future in our own hands; with the power within us, by ardent resolution and grim determination, to shape our future out of the materials of the present.

* * * * * *

More war Nineteen Sixteen will bring the world, we know. It may bring peace, but probably will not. It may bring real peace, peace that safeguards humanity for the future. It may bring a false peace, mere breathing spell for greater struggles yet to come. It may bring no peace at all. With this, we can but hope for the best, and resolve that so far as our thought-power goes, there shall be nothing but peace for this land, and no departure from the path of peace. Nineteen Sixteen will bring much misery and woe; may it bring much happiness, too, to the world.

* * * * * *

For the United States, the signs are bright. Peace, Plenty, Prosperity—these stars shine along the path. Good crops, good business, good wages, good dividends, good times—materially there is much, and more to come; which is for good or ill, accordingly as we make use of it. There is not an imaginable factor in the making of good times that does not promise well for us.

The war has touched us—far more, perhaps, than we realize. We are at peace, but in a flurry of preparing for war—and preparing makes war, if it be not jealously guarded. There is grave need that every patriotic mind devote itself to this safeguarding against the militaristic spirit that makes for war, for we are in far greater danger from ourselves than from anybody or anything beyond our borders. Yet today, all is peace, and rightly handled, a prosperity far greater than anything we have before experienced. All is well with us, if we walk wisely.

In Minnesota, a full share of the nation's prosperity, a new spirit of state pride and co-operation, a new determination, a new will to greater fervor in realizing the state's possibilities, with north and south and east and west all banded under one banner—"Just Minnesota." It is well with Minnesota.

* * * * * *

Duluth, with its vast new steel plant rounding into full operation, employing hundreds of new workers; with its industrial plants, old and new, working at full blast; with its stores busy and prosperous; with its surrounding territory developing more rapidly every day; with its civic spirit stronger and more determined than ever before in history; with the promise of its past fruiting in fulfillment and new promises for the future daily unfolding—it is well with Duluth, too! Duluth faces the future today without doubt or fear, a future blazing with promise, lighting a present fat with prosperity and rugged with strength.

* * * * * *

And with each of us as individuals it is well, too, we trust. The new year brings hope, brings chances for eager hearts and alert minds and willing muscles to translate opportunity into fortune. It brings high opportunities to good citizenship, to wise patriotism, to enlightened self-interest. It brings, too, temptations and perils; but these the brave heart shall conquer. Nineteen Sixteen lays the tools of destiny in our hands, and bids us be of good heart and good cheer. May it be well with us all in this new year.

To the world, peace. To the United States, peace and honor and prosperity and justice and freedom. To Minnesota, new expansion and new wealth. To Duluth, new glory and new growth. To YOU—A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

In idle moments one wonders just what New Year resolutions Billy Sunday can have made.

STRATHMORE.

There is not an able bodied man between twenty-one and forty years in Strathmore, Alberta. Why? Because Strathmore has earned the designation "100 per cent patriotic." That is, every man in town of military age has joined the army, and most of them have gone to Europe to kill and perhaps to be killed or maimed for life.

One wonders what Strathmore will be like in the coming months when the tide of industry should be at its height. Not an able-bodied man in the whole place to take up the necessary work. None but cripples and defectives in mind or body or both; none but men who are unfit for the life of the soldier, who are not good enough for cannon fodder; who, in short, could not pass the test.

Some of these men who qualified and went away will be coming back from time to time. Some will come on crutches; others with an arm or a leg—or perhaps both—missing; others with horrible scars that will mark them as long as they live and will impair their usefulness as artisans; and still others with diseases fastened upon their systems and continually dragging at their vitality.

And Strathmore is not alone—will not be alone—in these experiences. Other towns, small and large, will undergo the same conditions. Other towns will be left without a single able-bodied man to carry on the regular work or to take up the special efforts demanded by new conditions. Other towns, in other countries, in short, have proved themselves also to be "100 per cent patriotic."

When will men take note of the Strathmores of the world and realize that such things are not worth while? When will men learn that no nation can thrive by stripping its cities and towns and farms of their able-bodied men and leaving only the less competent to carry on the affairs of daily life? When will men learn that war is not only cruel and bitter, but wasteful? When, in short, will men learn that war does not pay?

Maybe one reason we hear less about the "water wagon" at this time of year than we used to, is that it is a more common vehicle than in olden days.

FICTION AND POPULAR TASTE.

When Professor William Lyon Phelps says in the Bookman that "the world seldom neglects true literary deities," he comes a million miles nearer the truth than those snobs of the literary world who adhere to the utterly stupid rule that literary value is in inverse ratio to popularity.

There are such snobs, and plenty of them: yet there are Dickens and Thackeray and Balzac and fifty other great masters of fiction to give them the lie.

It is true that popularity is no proof of literary excellence. There are the very popular Hall Caine, Marie Corelli and Harold Bell Wright to prove that. But while it is true that often inferior novels are popular, it is anything but true that because a novel is popular it is bad. If that were true "David Copperfield" would be a masterpiece of literary atrocity.

The trouble is that there is a certain type of conversationalist on art of various kinds that holds what it calls an aristocratic view of art, but which really is snobbery of the first water. Those who would make a cult of art, surround it with esoterics, and draw a hard and fast line between the "upper classes" and "lower classes" of taste, haven't the faintest conception of the greatness of art. Art is worthless unless it has the capacity to uplift the whole of humanity. Culture is sham that does not lend its energy to elevating taste. The self-chosen elect of art who draw apart and thank heaven that they are not as other men are, are snobs, pure and simple.

Borrowing, for the sake of illustration, the conception of the literary snob, we may conceive of society as a pyramid of three levels. The base level, of course, is the widest: it is composed of those of least discrimination. The middle level is composed of those of medium discrimination, and the top and smallest level of those of most discrimination.

Now an author who appeals to the lowest level may get a wide circulation there with a very poor book. Hall Caine, Corelli and Harold Bell Wright circulate hugely there, sending many copies, too, into the other levels. Henry James, again, may circulate chiefly in the upper level, very little in the middle level and none at all in the lower. But Dickens circulates in all three levels, in as great a proportion in one as in another; and that is the true test of literary art.

The view that true greatness in literary art is intricate and beyond the comprehension of the vulgar is plain tommyrot, which Henry Sydnor Harrison, himself a growing author of really excellent novels of broad appeal, has thoroughly demolished in the following from his recent article in the Atlantic defending the popular taste, which had been attacked by literary snobs:

> It is quite generally assumed that the great and the true are intrinsically too difficult for common understandings. I believe the assumption to be nonsense. If a man thinks he has a story to tell, and deliberately sets to work to tell it in such a manner that only extraordinary and brilliant persons can hope to follow him, that man is a dreary fool.
> But great novelists, whatever else they are, are never dreary fools; and their unapproachableness, when they are unapproachable, is never willful, I suppose, and never the proof of their greatness. To employ a manner and a narrative method which ordinary readers find quite impenetrable and even the most cultivated persons at times find irritating to the last degree—this is no mark of the god, but the limp in a great man's gait.
> To baffle, bewilder, frustrate and "lock up" the reader—this is a novelist's crime, no matter who commits it. And the fixed truth seems to be that the biggest episodes, characters, conflicts, morals and meanings are not at all beyond the mental grasp of ordinary persons; and the greatest novelists have commonly, and without effort, lodged their intentions in the minds of great masses of plain people.

Now that is the truth of the matter, expressed with great common sense. Literary art which is beyond the comprehension of the plain man may be clever juggling of words and ideas, but it is not art, any more than mere digital agility on the piano is great music.

Just as a word of caution to the girls—look a couple of times before you leap.

LIBERTY AND FORMS OF GOVERNMENT.

> We have ceased to think of a republic as synonymous with liberty, or of a monarchy as synonymous with despotism.—Brooklyn Eagle.

We shouldn't quit that thought too abruptly.

Mexico is a republic without liberty, and England is a monarchy with liberty; but surely that isn't warrant enough for the Eagle's conclusion.

A monarchy without despotism, on the other hand, either is a monarchy in name only, or a monarchy working abnormally.

Democracy is still the goal toward which hope beckons aspiring humanity.

Monarchy is still the cradle to which humanity's back is turned.

PRO-HUMANITY.

What should we wish for as the outcome of the world war?

Most of us, up till lately, haven't let our thoughts go far enough in forming our wishes. We have been pro-German and wished for German success because we believed Germany to be beleaguered by guileful enemies and best fitted to dominate in world affairs. We have been pro-British or pro-French because we believed that the cause of democracy against autocracy lies with the allies, and that a German victory would push back civilization a century.

But there has been too much of this being pro-German or pro-ally; the time has come whenever every neutral should change the current of his thought and become pro-humanity. What the neutral should wish for is such an outcome of the world war as will be best for humanity—not for humanity in Europe alone, but for humanity the world around; not for the humanity of today alone, but for the humanity of all time.

And the best hope for the world and humanity is that nobody shall win in this war.

If Germany should be declared victor today, and should retain the wide area of alien soil she now controls, every despoiled nation would tomorrow begin to prepare for a new struggle to regain what it had lost, while Germany must maintain her militarism to police her vassal territory.

If the allies should struggle through to victory and destroy Germany, they would have to remain militaristic to hold what they had gained, and they would have to prepare against the day when Germany, newly prepared, would set out to regain what she had lost.

If militarism proves a paying investment to any nation now involved in the war, then militarism has gained a new foothold, and humanity's struggle for peace has been made doubly difficult.

It won't do to have any nation's militarism return it a profit. That will be merely an incentive to more militarism on the one hand, and a provocation to renewed "preparedness" on the part of the losers on the other hand.

But if every nation loses—if there is in no case a profit to balance the prodigious losses of life and treasure that every nation has suffered—then the monstrous futility of war will have been demonstrated so convincingly that the world will be ripe for peace and disarmament.

If one side, by superior militaristic equipment, should prevail in this war, the peace so achieved would be a mockery—a mere breathing time, an armed peace that would be only a period of preparation for worse wars to come.

But if neither side wins, and if both sides lose, picture what would happen when the militaristic class in any European country proposed a new war to a people exhausted, decimated, staggering under an appalling war debt and an unprecedented burden of taxation. If it were possible for any country to go to war—and the belligerent nations are already straining their credit to such an extent that it is utterly inconceivable that when the war is over there will be any credit left in Europe to finance more war—it would hardly be possible to drag any people into war, except a war of revenge and recovery against a victorious nation.

The hope of the future, the hope of humanity, lies in a drawn battle in which every belligerent nation is a loser and no nation a victor; and by which war will be demonstrated for the monstrous folly and futility that it is.

Hello. Yes, this is one-nine-one-six.

NEXT CHRISTMAS.

Well, a week has passed, and it's over. The gifts have been given; the notes of thanks and appreciation have gone forth; the children have settled down into something like normal restlessness; the effects of overeating have largely worn off, and you are able to take a good breath once more without wondering if you haven't forgotten something you should have remembered.

Chances are that unless you are a peculiary provident person you have come pretty close to cursing Christmas within the last few weeks. And maybe you have said in your haste that this was the last time you would do any Christmas giving.

Now hold on a minute! Isn't that just exactly what you said last year? And then the Christmas season came around again and you found yourself under peculiar obligations to recognize the season by a gift to this and that and the other one; and then there were the children—

How much did you spend? If you are a family of but moderate means, perhaps ten dollars would cover it all, including the useful things for the kids. It would have been more satisfactory if you could have had five or ten dollars more, wouldn't it? And if you could have spread the saving of that additional amount over several weeks it would have been comparatively easy, you know. But in the fall there is coal to buy, and the second half of the taxes is due, and some heavier clothing and winter shoes and this and that and the other thing.

But supposing you began to save now for next Christmas. Wouldn't it simplify matters materially? Put aside a dollar a week, for example, and not touch it until the week before Christmas, and you'll have fifty dollars to spend for the holidays. And it will be just like fifty dollars found in the street, too. Or if that seems too much, put by fifty cents every week and you will have twenty-five dollars to spend then. Or if it is too little try two dollars.

But whether the amount be large or small, put something aside for next Christmas. It will prove a good investment, and also good training for yourself. It is one form of preparedness that will pay big returns in satisfaction and sound enjoyment.

Can you truly say that you are any more deficient in character than you were a year ago?

"PREPAREDNESS."

Preparedness—what is it?

We must, say the agitators, take a lesson from France, which was unprepared with its trained army of four millions, and England, which was unprepared with its world's greatest navy.

The president's program for defense is modest indeed compared with the scale of "unpreparedness" on which the war found England and France.

Yet that program is ample, goes as far as the American people wish to go, and will not be amplified with their consent.

History is full of such lessons of "unpreparedness" as the militarists are holding up to us.

There was Hannibal, who suffered several defeats which he could have averted if he had been better prepared.

Attila, king of the Huns, need never have suffered that disastrous rout at the hands of the allies on the Catalaunian fields if he had been better prepared.

And Napoleon—if he had only thought to have a few more men, Waterloo would have led to glory instead of to St. Helena.

Even Germany, the highest type of preparedness, manifestly was not adequately prepared. If she had been, what she seeks to do would have been done long ago, and would not still be undone after seventeen months of war has caused her enormous losses. Germany's cost and loss would have been vastly less if she had been well enough prepared to achieve her purpose in three months.

Preparedness—what is it?

One of the first things noticeable about the new year was that it made no appreciable change in the general appearance of things.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Chicago Journal: Pat Cassidy purchased a new automobile, and while still inexperienced in the handling of it he drove down one of the crowded thoroughfares of the city. Coming to a crossing where the traffic was held up, he lost control of the car and ran squarely into a handsome limousine. The crowd which gathered found the situation amusing, and to add to Pat's discomfiture, the crossing policeman, a big Irishman, commenced to berate him.

"Since when did you learn to droive a car?" demanded the officer. "What's your name?"

"Cassidy," answered Pat.

"So?" said the policeman, interestedly. "And where are you from?"

"County Clare," said Pat.

"Say," said the cop, "how the divil did that fellow back into you?"

A Disappointed Thief.

Detroit Free Press: Ford stories don't break into this column very often, but this bit of wit which flashed at a luncheon at the Board of Commerce the other day is worth shattering all the rules and regulations.

An irate business man joined his friends, exclaiming: "Nothing is safe nowadays. I left my car for an hour out by the postoffice, and when I came out some low-down thief had stolen the hood cover. That's all he took—just the $2 padded vest that buttons over the hood and radiator to keep them warm."

"Gee!" said an unsympathetic listener, "I'll bet that guy was mad when he got home and found he didn't have the car in the cover."

Direct or Indirect Taxation?

Editorial in the New York Times.

The state officials are as industriously minimizing the necessity for a direct war tax as they were engaged a few months ago in magnifying the necessity for the tax this year. If the creditors of the state will accept hypothetical taxes, the taxpayers may not have to pay in real money to satisfy their demands. Imaginary surpluses and imaginary deficits are things to juggle with by men who would not manage their personal affairs in that manner, and who could not if they would. The debate seems to proceed upon the assumption that it is desirable to avoid a direct tax, at almost any cost and by almost any means, if ciphering will do it. That is not so in some other states, where conditions resemble those in New York through the abundance afforded by indirect taxes. Here the tendency is to multiply such indirect taxes, rather than to collect a larger direct tax.

In Minnesota, where they have not discovered what a blessing taxes are, they are protesting against indirect taxes, and are pressing for a direct tax. The reason is that indirect taxes give the spenders easy money, from sources which do not know that they pay, and so do not perceive how they are burdened, or who rejoice that others are burdened. Therefore, there is not the same pressure to reduce taxation that there would be if the taxes were felt by those who pay them. The indirect taxes thus become additional taxes, not substitutes for the direct tax, that being the plea upon which they are authorized. Where there are both kinds of taxes they grow together. The best way to limit the growth of both is to make the payment of the taxes clearer to the taxpayers, rather than to hide them, and pretend that they are paid by banks, or public utilities, or corporations, or wealth in various forms, which some apostles of light say ought to pay taxes almost irrespective of the necessities of the state, as a punitive measure for the reduction of profits. The Duluth Herald remarks that "the more indirect taxes the state received the more it spent and the more it levied against its assessable property." Accordingly the way to lessen assessments for the direct tax is not to vote other taxes but to increase the assessment until the politicians become economical through the increased indignation of the taxpayers. There is then an interest in state affairs which does not exist when the incidence of the taxes is obscure.

These considerations are as controlling in New York as anywhere, and more so perhaps. The fact that there is inequality of assessment is due to the existence of the direct tax, and the result is that there is created pressure both for reduction of the tax and for equality of assessment. If the inequality of assessment was corrected there would be an uproar in the rural counties that would promote the movement for economy, and might avert the addition of a local income tax to a Federal tax, and similar duplication of inheritance taxes already foreshadowed at Washington. The income tax is enormously popular with tax layers because of the ease of collection. It would seem that justice and equity, equality in taxation, are higher ideals than ease of collection. The true equalization of the direct tax would do much to promote economy and put the state in easy finances. The effect of equalizing the direct tax upward would be to reduce the city's share through the increase in yield. If the new taxes are to be levied equally they would be no more popular than the direct tax. In fact, the equalizing of the direct tax would be more popular than an income tax which should include the farmers. If the proposal is to levy an income tax which shall not include property and taxpayers on a basis of equality then there will be added unfairness. Nothing can make that popular in the cities. The feeling of outrage in this city would be something to reckon with. There is no way to create a surplus by enlarging tax payments. The only result is to stimulate ingenuity in finding ways to use the money. Economy will become a better issue in proportion that the payment of taxes is made visible and sure, with difficulty in shifting the burden.

The Breakdown of the Party System

Sydney Brooks in the North American Review: One defect, in particular, has been mercilessly exposed—the inadequacies of the party system as an instrument of war. It completely broke down and its place was taken in the present coalition cabinet. But the new ministry, even after four months of trial, has still to justify itself and to gain the full confidence of the country. The national temper still runs far ahead of the official policies. But though causes for dissatisfaction abound, nobody dreams of reverting to the party system of government. More strength, more resolution, more leadership—these are what the country is clamoring for. "Politics" have become not merely meaningless but noxious to the average man. He sickens at the very thought of them, and so long as the war lasts, he is not in the least likely to overcome his repulsion. Even, however, when it is over there will be a prolonged and infinitely difficult work of salvage and reconstruction to be grapped with. Few people imagine that the old type of party politician will be either competent or permitted to undertake it. If there are still men at Westminster who dream, when the war is out of the way, of reviving their little feuds, their preposterously trivial maneuvers, I am persuaded that they utterly misread the times.

A decade or two from now we may again have parties in Britain. Meanwhile, in my judgment, we are heading straight, if not for a dictatorship, at least for some sort of committee of public safety with all but absolute powers. It is not merely that the nation is disenchanted with and revolts from the politicans and their party game. It is also that it feels itself unable to afford the waste involved in it. In the arduous and straitened years that lie before us the very best brains that the country possesses will be none too good for the rebuilding of the national life out of the wreckage of the war. And whatever the virtues of the party system, it always and necessarily fails to utilize more than half of the available talents and experience. I conceive, then, that in some form or other the coalition type of government, compressed into a very few hands and strongly re-enforced by advice and assistance of the business men of the country, even if they do not happen to possess seats in parliament, must of necessity survive the war and continue for many years to wrestle with its huge aftermath of problems

The New Year Comes!

There are bells to ring,
There are songs to sing,
  There is good cheer everywhere;
There are kin to meet,
There are friends to greet,
  And the world is bright and fair.
There are vows well meant,
There is good intent,
  There are pledges brave and gay,
There are eyes alight,
There are faces bright—
  For it's New Year's day today.

There are griefs put by,
There's a cloudless sky,
  That smiles o'er a waiting world.
There are rosy dreams
On a hundred themes,
  And a flag of joy unfurled.
There's a courage new,
There's a purpose true,
  There are shadows passed away,
There's a faith in prayers,
And a soul that dares—
  For it's New Year's day today.

The New Leaf.

Among the images under which life has been pictured, few are more apt than that of a book. The resemblance is strikingly close, as one thinks of it. A book is a collection of written or printed sheets bound together in orderly succession, each page telling a part of a complete story.

Life, too, is a succession of days and years stretching between that preface called the cradle and that finis called the grave. In the book of life each day fashions a word, each week a sentence, each month a paragraph, and each year a page.

The book of life must stand as a true record because one writes it himself. Here his personal story is told in indelible characters. No hand other than his own makes or mars the pages. It was the view of the great Christian seer that each human soul was to be assigned to his ultimate place on the basis of the facts recorded in the book. In his vision of the judgment, the apostle foresaw the time when "the books were opened * * * and the dead were judged out of the things which were written in the books, according to their works."

A human personality is a sensitive register on which, as on a living scroll, every act and every thought is written. Muscular exercise leaves its inevitable reaction on the physique; thought has its definite effect in the mental fiber; speech refines or dulls the power of expression. The fact of self-registration is a highly impressive one. God has set up within the soul all the machinery for visiting rewards and penalties upon the earthly pilgrim. At the last assize the plain facts are all in hand so that he who runs may read. The dead may fairly be judged out of the things that are written in their books.

If the book thus far has been scrawled over, defaced and blotted, there is at least this consolation: clean, fresh pages remain. It is possible to write on them clearer and better sentences than on those turned down. New Year's day presents a great opportunity. We are throwing away the old calendar and beginning a new one. We are turning back the written page and opening a fresh one. It is a fine time for starting again.

A well-known contemporary novelist speaks of his waning enthusiasm for many things that lose their freshness with the passing years, but adds: "Not so the sight of that blank sheet of paper. The untrodden world of romance, the virgin field into which one is about to plunge, never loses its unspeakable and indescribable fascination."

How much greater the fascination in that page of time that opens before one on the first day of a new year! The page is unsoiled and unspoiled; it holds never a blot nor a blur. We can write on it, clean and fresh, what we will.

That is the glory of the new year that should fill our hearts with joy and stir our wills to high endeavor. As regards the pages turned back, what is written is written; nor can all our tears blot out a word of it. But, thank God, what is yet to be written is in your keeping and in mine. Let us make it a strong chapter in a noble story.

"I will speak with Thee."—Ezek. ii, I.

Meet me alone, O Lord. Let me feel the awful dignity of my own soul. I am not so much afraid of Thy judgment day as of the general assize which men have figured there. I fear lest my sight of the crowd may dim the sight of my own importance. I have heard men say that my danger lies in my pride. No; it lies in my humility. I have not realized the possibilities of my own soul. I have viewed myself as a fragment of the race. I have thought myself a rag driven by the wind—impelled by a force behind me. I have sheltered myself under my own nothingness. I have blamed the past ages for my sin, I have called myself the victim of heredity; I have crouched behind the multitude. Bring me out from the covert of my fig leaves, O my God.—From "Prayer for Each Day."

STANDPAT CONFIDENCE

By SAVOYARD

Washington, Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Some time ago President Wilson appointed Mr. George H. Rublee of New Hampshire to be a minority member of the Federal trade commission and when the United States came to consider the nomination at the present session the Hon. Jacob H. Gallinger interposed, not his personal objection, but a political objection, to the confirmation of Mr. Rublee on the ground that he supported the Bull Moose ticket in 1912. Mr. Gallinger is a senator from New Hampshire and a leader of his party in the senate and his conclusion from a party standpoint is ex cathedra.

It is preached from the housetops that the Progressive party is extinct, that its members have returned to their allegiance to the G. O. P.; that they are solid in their support of regular Republican men and measures. If that be true, and we hear it morning, noon and night, what concern has your Bull Mooser in politics in the future? Here is the leader of the Republican party in the American senate who decrees that office is not for your Bull Moose, and thus we are left to conclude that the only political utility that can be expected of your Progressive is to vote the Republican ticket and take his place below the salt at the party feast.

Thus Mr. Gifford Pinchot must promote the political fortunes of Boss Penrose; Mr. Theodore Roosevelt must wait on Boss Barnes; Mr. James R. Garfield must follow the banner of Governor Willis; Mr. Albert J. Beveridge must fetch and carry for Standpatter Fairbanks; Mr. Victor Murdock must dance to the piping of Senator Curtis, and so on and so on. But no former Bull Moose is to have office.

They say the prodigals have returned, but they are to be spanked and put to bed, not feasted and berobed and bedecked. They are to be made to know their place. All the good things are for the elder brothers who never sinned in a political way. The strange thing about it is that the majority—for there are more Bull Moosers than Standpatters—the strange things is that the majority is expected to submit to this sort of peonage provided for them by the Hon. Gallinger, the boss of the Republican side of the United States senate. If that is to be the rule one need not be surprised if another rebellion will gather for the G. O. P. to deal with in 1916.

The Standpatters profess to be absolutely confident of success at the polls next year and they base their boasts on the alleged fact—a cock and bull story, by the way—that the Bull Moosers have all come back. There is less talk of Mr. Justice Hughes, the first choice of your Standpatter when he is in despair and his last choice when elated. If victory seemed as certain as it did in 1900 or 1904 Justice Hughes could not get 100 votes in the national convention to save his life. If this confidence the Standpatters profess is genuine and if it shall endure throughout the sitting of the convention there is nothing more certain than a reactionary platform and a Standpat ticket.

That delightful and charming man, Basil Duke, tells a story that adequately and precisely illustrates this "confidence" your Standpatter pretends to be saturated with. I shall try to tell it, but you just ought to hear Gen. Duke.

In the spring of 1861 some 1,200 or 1,500 young Kentucklans, as good raw material for soldiers as mankind ever produced, were much concerned lest the war would be over ere they got a chance to fight for the South, so they went to Tennessee and established Camp Boone, where they were drilled by Confederate officers for the conflict. Not one in ten had even seen a cannon and for arms they had double-barreled fowling pieces, old-fashioned squirrel rifles, derringer pistols, pepper-box pistols, bowie knives and so forth.

Hopkinsville, Ky., was not far off, and full of Southern sympathizers, and they commissioned one of their number to visit Camp Boone, find out all he could, and report on his return. He was gone several days and when he came back he was oppressed with an enormous load of mystery and little could be got out of him, but it was evident from his doubtful phrase that it was "I could, an if I would, or if I list to speak."

Finally he agreed to unburden himself and took his friends out the big road and into a forest where they gathered themselves about him and he delivered himself like this:

"Boys, if old Abe Lincoln could see what I saw and hear what I heard, and if he knew what I know—I be damned if he wouldn't fall down on his knees before Jeff Davis and beg for peace!"

This town is full of Standpatters who are assured that if Woodrow Wilson could see the thing as it appears to them he would decline to be the Democratic nominee in 1916.

The Democrats are hoping that the Republicans may continue confident and at the convention discover the courage of their reliance. It is assumed that the head of the ticket will be a Standpatier, Root or Burton, Weeks or Fairbanks. No one hears a Standpatter mention Cummins, or Borah, or Hadley, for first place, though any one of the three would suit for second place. But the shadow of Roosevelt is ever present, and in the melee it is more than possible that he will grab the nomination.

As for the platform! That will be a fearfully and wonderfully constructed affair—one that all the lawyers in Philadelphia will be unable to interpret to the ordinary understanding.

A BALLAD OF THE HOUSE

—By— Knud Wefald, of Hawley, Minn.

Sage and Wit; the Puck of the House of 1915

They speak of the legislature,
All those who are good and wise;
Some would discard it completely,
And others cut down its size.

Let Westlake speak for the Senate,
If they can his humor arouse.
The Senate most likely needs grilling;
But, Lord, what is wrong with the House?

They say that if there were fewer,
They all would be bigger men—
Bob Carmichal stands six feet four now,
How big would they all be then?

They say, if the House were smaller
How much more wouldn't it know?
What Teigen did not know of statecraft
Vanished with last year's snow.

They say, if the House were smaller
Its voice would carry afar—
Did they ever hear Magnus Johnson
When he once got his mouth ajar?

They say, if the House were smaller
How well it would then behave—
Could any one beat Wold and Stoetzel
In looking sedate and grave?

Then men would consider the pennies
Before the dollars were spent—
Could Lars Teigen and Dealand be beaten,
No matter how far you went?

Then, say they, in oratory
We would get our money's worth—
Will we ever again hear orations
Like those of Sam Scott and North?

Or those of the genuine Teigen,
All wool and full two yards wide?
He marked them in three-hour stretches
And cut them from Lydiard's hide.

They say, when the house is smaller
There'll be less bluff and bluster.
But Lydiard, Girling and Warner
Alone make a filibuster.

Lydiard, Girling and Warner,
They were the guardsmen three
Who saved Hibbing from disaster
And did it without a fee.

Lydiard, Girling and Warner—
Two wet, and one was dry—
Put them in a small legislature
And then they will get some pie.

Lydiard, Girling and Warner—
The state is sure in a fix;
In the big and unwieldly body
Water and oil won't mix.

Lydiard, Girling and Warner—
When Warner set up the cry
For a smaller but better body
I laughed till I thought I'd die.

Little, big Charley Warner—
He'll tear the house asunder,
And when every member's a giant,
He'll be the noise and thunder.

But, in that house of giants,
I've a somewhat sneaking notion
They'll all be too blamed big to make
An ordinary motion.

Like Welch, who moved "that the journal
Be always approved as read,"
And Seebach's "dispense with the call"
So business could go ahead.

And when they handle but big things,
Will there not be congestion,
If Frank Minette should not be there
To move "the previous question"?

And who will watch the grammar,
The commas, and likewise colons,
If Christianson cannot be there
Among the mighty solons?

Who'll take the place of Adams,
Who'll prick and who will prod?
Who'll be there to hunt the woodchucks
Like Levi Davis from Todd?

When all the essence of greatness
The big men have imbibed,
Will they all be like honest Tom Tollefson,
Who could not be bought or bribed?

When right they are doing business
And things take a different turn,
Won't they sit there in session forever
Without Steen to move to adjourn?

Each man has his little triumphs,
Each man has his little sorrow,
The "little" men of today,
Like the "big" ones will have tomorrow.

Those who write of the legislature
In gall they dip their pen;
But, oh! what a lot of humor
In a hundred and thirty men

BELGIAN FUND SENT AWAY

King and Queen Send Thanks to Contributors to Fund.

Duluth's contribution of $153.66 to the Dollar Christmas fund for destitute Belgians was today mailed to Henry Clews, treasurer, at New York city.

For the last month The Herald has been receiving contributions daily from Duluthians for the Belgian fund. The local committee had hoped to raise $100 in Duluth, but this amount was exceeded long before Christmas day and when the fund was closed on Thursday, the total had reached $152.66. Yesterday another dollar was received and a check for $153.66 was mailed by The Herald to the officials in New York city.

According to reports from New York, a total of $60,000 has been raised for the Belgian Christmas Dollar fund this year.

On Thursday Mr. Clews received a cable from Mons. Ingenbeck, state secreary for King Albert of Belgium, thanking the Americans for the Christmas shoes sent the Belgian children. The cable follows:

"To Henry Clews, treasurer of the Dollar Christmas fund.

"The king and queen have been deeply touched by the generous work you have undertaken and the success accomplished. Their majesties offer their congratulations and ask you and your fellow-workers to accept their heartfelt thanks for the brotherly aid they are rendering to our unfortunate fellow-countrymen. Such marks of sympathy are truly consoling. Will you be good enough as treasurer of the Dollar Christmas fund to express the acknowledgements of our sovereigns to all those who have been associated with you in your work of mercy for Belgian children? Very truly yours,

"J. INGENBECK."

OLD AGE

By DR. SAMUEL G. DIXON, Commissioner of Health for Pennsylvania.

The gray-beard sighs, shaking his hoary head,
Compares times that are now, with times past heretofore,
Praises the fortunes of his father long since dead;

Those who wish to remain young would do well to con these lines and guard against such an attitude of mind. The fountain of perennial youth is in the spirit. If you would arm yourself against the stealthily advancing years cultivate the habit of looking continually forward. For the man who keeps his eyes fixed ahead and struggles onward to some worthy goal, the years speed by unnoticed. For him who turns and walks backward looking ever in the past, the future holds no promise and the stimulus of the shoulder to shoulder touch with the on-pressing younger generation is lost.

The future is built upon the ruins of the past. Advancing years should bring ability to concentrate and an experience which will compensate in no small degree for lack of physical power.

"At 30, man suspects himself a fool, knows it at 40, and reforms his plan; at 50 he chides his infamous delay, pushes his prudent purpose to resolve"—and if he be wise makes use of such experiences as he may have piled up along the road of life and pushes his purpose home.

Moderation of habit and attention to the rules of hygiene will help materially to make the years sit lightly, but this alone is of little value if we are without ambition and live from day to day.

When the idols of youth are broken we must set up new and better ones.

Ambition we must have and work as well if we would laugh at Father Time.

PITTSBURGH OF THE WEST GREETS PITTSBURGH OF THE EAST ON THE THRESHOLD OF A PROSPEROUS YEAR

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—In its annual symposium of views on the outlook for the coming year which the Pittsburgh Dispatch published this morning, including almost unanimously optimistic forecasts from notable men in all parts of the country, appears the following from A. C. Weiss, publisher of The Duluth Herald:

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

Ordinarily it would be discouraging, not to say dismaying, to encounter, at the outset of an attempt to read the signs of a new year, the black clouds of a world war and the gathering clouds of a presidential campaign. But a year and a half of war has taught us that its eclipse of European enterprise has made it spell unexampled opportunity for us, while the presidential campaign is robbed of its terrors by a total lack of disturbing issues carrying threats to business security. "Let us build" is the word today where "Let us destroy" was the hue and cry yesterday.

Moreover, the Aladdin structure of prosperity, peace and plenty that has grown up in our land in a night is so strongly foundationed in bountiful crops sold at high prices, in unparalleled opportunities for new world trade expansion and in the adamant of a marvelously effective banking and currency law that no gales of foreign war or gusts of political mimic war have power to shake it.

Today we are within the threshold of the abounding prosperity that a year ago was but a promise, some gleam of which I strove to reflect in my word to you then: "Never before in the crowded history of the United States has Opportunity flung its door wider, disclosing richer vistas, than it does today. There are golden opportunities abroad and at home; opportunities for livelier industries, for reasonable and contented labor and capital; opportunities for greater wealth, for greater justice in the distribution of wealth, for more contentment and a livelier sense of human brotherhood." If we keep our poise and continue to grasp the enormous opportunities that surround us, the United States must inevitably fall heir to such heritage of well-being as it never dared dream of.

In this well-being Duluth, the Pittsburgh of the West, with its iron fields and its new model steel plant now in operation, and Pittsburgh, the Duluth of the East—than which we could accord no higher praise—with its mighty factories and its coal fields, will have the lion's share.

In 1916, unless all signs fail, this nation will be a mightier factor in the world's trade, a mightier factor for world peace, and a mightier factor for justice the world around and for a fair distribution of its abundance at home.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Gastric Ulcer

GASTRIC refers to the stomach, not to gas. Ulcer of the stomach occurs much more commonly than most people think, a great many cases being undiagnosed, or they are called "chronic dyspepsia," "indigestion," "acidity," or something else equally indefinite.

Ulcer in the stomach and ulcer in the duodenum—that part of the bowel just beyond the lower end of the stomach—are often indistinguishable. Their symptoms, effects and treatment are very much the same.

One important fact of ulcer is some long-standing trouble in the appendix or in the gall sac. Dr. Deaver, the surgeon and author, states that he has observed an almost constant association between chronic appendicitis and gall-sac disease with gastric ulcer. And the Mayo clinic reports about 20 per cent of gastric and duodenal ulcer cases associated with disease of appendix or gall sac.

Pyorrhoea is probably a factor in some cases.

Rosenow, the bacteriologist, has proved the casual relationship of streptococci with gastric ulcer—and streptococci find a favorable situation for propogation in the pus pockets about bad teeth, in diseased appendix or gall sac and elsewhere in seats of chronic or unrecognized inflammation or infection (germ activity).

Some symptoms of gastric or duodenal ulcer we might mention here are: (1) Periodic attacks of stomach trouble with intervening periods of comparative comfort. (2) Gnawing, burning or boring pain in the pit of the stomach and extending toward the back or perhaps downward, coming on anywhere from half an hour to two or three hours after taking food. (3) The pain is often relieved by taking some such food as milk, a cracker or a sandwich, being a hunger pain. (4) Excessive acidity (not from fermentation, but from over-secretion of the natural hydrochloric acid of the stomach in the course of digestion). (5) The appearance of blood-stained material in stomach contents.

The diagnosis of gastric or duodenal ulcer must be made by (a) symptoms, (b) test meal and analysis of expressed stomach contents, and (c) X-ray photography of the bismuth-meal undergoing digestion.

The treatment depends. Moderate cases are curable by thorough medical and dietetic treatment, which means always at least four weeks in bed. Possibly a few cases respond to ambulatory treatment, but very few. In severe cases operation is indispensable. One reason why operation is advised is that something like one in every ten cases of gastric ulcer eventually become cancers if not operated on.

Advice About Hemorrhoids.

Will you kindly advise me about my trouble—frequent attacks of piles? I have tried so many remedies without success.

Answer—Gladly, by mail.

SPRIGHTLY COMMENT AND ALSO GLEEFUL GOSSIP OF SPORTING NATURE

Young Joe Stecker Is Hailed As the Atheltic Wonder of the Age and the Greatest Wrestler of All Time—The Big Duluth Bonspiel Is Approaching for Its Annual Visit — Willie Ritchie Is Still Most Popular.

BY BRUCE.

JOE STECKER coming. The mere announcement that the athletic sensation of the present age would show in Duluth was quite enough to excite the interest of a large number of followers of sport. Men of the athletic stamp and prowess of this boy are born only about once in every twenty-five years. Gotch, Gama, Hackenschmidt and Stanislaus Zbyszko flashed across the screen of events, leaving wonderment in the wake of their prodigious deeds. Who was there to take the place of these great mat stars? Interest waned in the wrestling game for the simple reason that it was believed that no truly grea mat performer was left. Then suddenly, unheralded, his coming unaccompanied by the blare of trumpets, young Joe Stecker arose from the alfalfa of the Nebraska wilds, and lo and behold the world is marveling at the sensational achievement of this mere strip of a lad.

America has had its Evan Lewis, a farmer possessed of so terrible a strangle hold that it was found necessary to bar that torturing grip; its little Fred Beell, with the speed of a lightweight and the strength of a giant, and a headlock that broke the hearts of seasoned athletes; its Frank Gotch, the fastest and quickest thinking big man the wrestling game ever produced; and now comes sauntering onto the athletic stage Joe Stecker, a green and unsophisticated farmer boy, with wisps of hay still clinging to his hair, who has invented a more deadly hold than the strangle hold of Evan Lewis, the headlock of Beell or the dreaded toe hold of Gotch, and who has at the tender athletic age of twenty-two years decisively beaten in a sensational manner every opponent in sight.

How good Stecker is no one can say. He has beaten the best in sight as if they were mere infants. How good this marvelous youngster will become is a speculation to conjure with.

A slim kid, looking like a green farmer boy who vaguely wonders at the strange things in the big world beyond the confines of the farm. Stecker has astounded that portion of the world that takes a keen interest in athletic doings by exhibiting strength, speed and skill in so superlative a degree as to outclass every opponent he has been stacked against.

Duluth is the first city in this section of the country to be invaded by Stecker. Nebraska's demand to keep "Our Joe" down around Omaha and Lincoln has kept the miracle man of the mat busily engaged in tossing them right and left inside the Coyote state line. But now the boy who is called greater than Gotch by hundreds of loyal followers, is going to demonstrate his wondrous wares to the outside world, and it remains for Duluth to thus early get a glimpse of a farmer kid who has become world famous in less than the short span of a year.

Boosting Up the Spiel.

PLEASE step this way. Crowd up in front, there. Kindly give us your attention. We are about to introduce to you the 1916 bonspiel of the Northwestern Curling association. Passing into the big tent you will behold Bob Dunbar, the world's greatest curler. In another cage you will find Sandy McNabb, the curler with the most bewitching Scotch accent in the world. It comes natural, ladies and gentlemen, and sounds just as pronounced early in the morning as late in the evening. We also have with us today Tom Cameron, one of the most venerable curlers in the world. Tom will do a monologue in the olio. Step right this way, don't crowd, hold your tickets in your right hand, please.

We asked Fred Hargreaves to write this stuff for us, as we had a New Year's engagement, but he refused, possibly on the same pretext. The large and always enjoyable bonspiel is not far away. The Northwestern spiel is the greatest event of its kind in the United States, and efforts are being made to make it greater than ever this season.

Duluth is advertised north past the Canadian boundary line and due south to Dixie land by this great curling event. It brings to the Zenith City some fine and genial sportsmen and makes the city better for its all too brief duration of a week. The Northwestern bonspiel is the highest type of a sporting event: it brings to Duluth the kind of men it is a real pleasure to meet, and incidentally the type of men that make the town better because of their coming. The spiel shakes us all up, stirs the cockles of youth, good fellowship and geniality, and gives us a kind of fresh hold on things. If they took this big and kindly event away from Duluth, the good people would realize how much it meant to them, and just because it is an annual event there is no reason to take it as a matter of fact institution, because within the next few days Duluth is to play host to the biggest winter sport event of America, and it should duly appreciate the importance of that fact.

The Case of Willie Ritchie.

WHY is Willie Ritchie in demand? He's no longer a champion; he's lost the popular decision verdict every time he has started of late, and yet the former holder of the lightweight title remains about the best drawing card in the game.

Want to know the answer? It's simple—Willie Ritchie, or Gary Steffen, to be precise, fights from the opening to closing gong. There you have it.

In his title-holding days Ritchie demanded and received guarantees of $10,000, but in extenuation of Ritchie it must be said that once they got him in the ring, he tried his darndest to earn the big sum his services cost the promoters.

Ritchie is game, always and emphatically that. We have never considered Ritchie one of the great fighters, but he fights, and fights all the time, and for that reason the public flocks to see him perform. The boy Freddy Welsh deprived of his title is, as a matter of cold and unemotional fact, drawing far more shy and coy sheckels into the box office than the champion himself.

NEW PICTURE OF FRED FULTON

FRED FULTON.

Whether Fred Fulton ever fights Jess Willard or not, the fact remains that he has received a whale of a lot of advertising incidental to the on and offing of the New Orleans contest. Even if Collins fails to land a match with the bog cowboy, his lanky heavyweight is quite well enough known to be in demand and Collins should be able to get a lot of money—unless Fred bumps into a licking.

MORAN AGREES TO WILLARD FIGHT TERMS

New Orleans, La., Jan. 1.—Tom Burns, local fight promoter, yesterday received a telegram from Frank Moran in New York, accepting terms Burns offered him for a 20-round heavyweight championship fight with Jess Willard in New Orleans March 4 or 6.

After the promoters and Willard's manager on Wednesday declared the Willard-Fulton fight arranged for this city March 4 was off, Burns wired Moran offering him $7,500 flat for a match with the champion, provided Moran defeats Jim Coffey in their bout in New York Jan. 7.

Prep Boy Wins Tennis Title.

New York, Jan. 1.—Ellicott Binzen, the Fordham prep boy, won the national junior tennis singles championship title yesterday. In a hotly-contested final on the courts of the Seventh regiment armory Binzen defeated James Weber of Chicago, representing Andover academy, 6-3, 7-5, 3-6, 6-2.

Pat Moran Signs Up Again.

Fitchburg, Mass., Jan. 1.—Manager Pat Moran of the Philadelphia National baseball club signed and forwarded his contract yesterday to manage that team for 1916-17-18.

BUT FEW BASEBALL FANS KNOW WHY TEAMS SLUMP

The Real Underlying Reason Is Seldom Appreciated—Oftimes the Failure of Ball Players to Show Winning Form Is Attributed to Dissipation or Hoodoo.

(By Ted Sullivan.)

Washington, Jan. 1.—The general public is entirely unappreciative of that great uncertainty of the game known in baseball parlance as "spurts and slumps." The philosophical causes underlying the sudden letup or spurt of teams are not known but to a few brainy students of the game.

We can take four clubs of the National league who are equal in all departments of the game in playing strength, taking their former year's work as a standard. Let them start the next season's work at the tap of the gong, and before a month one or the other will have slumped in its playing. We will further allow that neither team has met with accident or sickness, yet one or two of these clubs are generally losing.

Then the superficial and ungenerous public will commence their criticisms, which are generally ironical, caustic and insulting. Of the many remarks some are amusing to a practical man.

One critic will say the players are drinking. Another, as he lights his cigar with one of those "know-it-all" looks, says: "So and so is playing for his release; this I got on the dead quiet from a particular friend of the player, who took supper with me last night."

Still another in this group of malicious fans will wink his eye. "Boys, you can say what you please, but I will tell you what is the matter with that club." Now this last fellow is one of those knowing smart boys, who may not have a bowing acquaintance with any member of the team, but persists in telling everyone that will listen to him that he has been out at nights with members of the club, and that Jim Gayfeather told him in strict confidence that there was a clique in the club to "trow the manager."

This type of crank is the bane of the baseball profession; they are hanging around ball players and inventing or carrying stories to a lot of credulous fans. At night they are found around cigar stores and saloons, giving vent to their vaporings of what they don't know about this player or that. They assert that they have a speaking acquaintance with the men.

All Clubs Slump.

All ball clubs slump early or late. Two or three great batters of the club may fall off in their batting for a week or two—or may be hitting in hard luck. The weak batters of the club, in the absence of the stimulant of the great hitters, fall completely off in the batting; hence the slump of the entire team in their batting. The pitchers of this same team might also get out of form through no fault of theirs. In this condition the team is falling back in the race.

The writer might be asked what is the cause of this sudden deterioration in a team's playing. My answer is this, and it was gained by practical observation. Other people may have a better explanation, but this is mine and it is from a profound study of the philosophy of the working of the machinery of the sport.

In all athletic sports—a man and horse can do something at one time he cannot repeat. The jumper, out of three leaps, makes one that excels the other two.

The horse will not make the same speed every time he goes around the track, but baseball, which combines all the brain and brawn of a man to play it, is still more uncertain, as it takes in all the athletic work of nine players.

After delving into the inner works of the machinery of a team to find the whys and wherefores of a slump, a man of an analytical brain will come to the conclusion that it is in the ebb and flow of human vitality. A team that is playing at a high burst of speed and acute tension, necessarily must have a breathing spell, the same as a runner, who has twenty miles to go, will at some part of the journey slack up in his speed and walk to gain wind. This explanation is given in a figurative sense, but to simplify the foregoing, the lull in a club's victories is that physical impossibility of a player repeating today what he did yesterday or to be more laconic, while one club is at the ebb tide the other is at flow, or you may say the runner was taking a breathing spell, while his opponent was running at high speed.

There are other causes for a club's "let-downs" or slumps for which an uncharitable public will not make allowance; that is, the crippling of some of the good players or even one great one. You may put other players in this great player's place that may play as well mechanically, but you never can replace the player's personality.

I will add that a slump is helped along in its duration by the superstitions, blunitness and diminutive heads of a percentage of ball players who are known as "quitters."

The most magnetic leader in the world cannot keep them at their guns, and the first few runs an opposing club gets by a little luck those crowing dunghill roosters are ready to fly back over the fence. Ignorance is the mother of superstition, yet with no greater percentage than any other profession. The amusing part of it all is they are looking for a Jonah, especially when the team has a losing streak.

First, it may be some reporter who is traveling with the club. Next, it may be some director that they meet once in a while, or it may be that they have thirteen men of thirteen bats, or it may be that one of the team never played with a winning club. This talk all comes up while this "slump" is on. Another form of a Jonah is a crosseyed man or woman or a lot of empty barrels they see on a wagon on their way to the grounds. Again it might be a funeral or a black pig.

While writing on the proverbial superstition of thirteen let me tell my friends throughout the United States of a case where it applied to Smith as well as Jones and brought on quite a comical situation.

A couple of weeks before the fight in Jacksonville between Corbett and Mitchell in 1894 there was a Pullman of friends of Corbett going to Jacksonville, Fla. They were nearly all Corbett's friends, but one, I think. Someone in the car mentioned the fact that there were thirteen men in the car, which was a bad omen. Joe Corbett was along.

Quick-witted Jack Dempsey, who was going down to be in Corbett's corner, spoke up: "Why are you people grumbling about 13? Here is Pony Moore, Mitchell's father-in-law, in the crowd with us." Sure enough Pony Moore was one of the party, and it applied to his son-in-law as much as it did to Corbett. Mitchell lost, but it created merriment and showed the fallacy of the hoodoo of 13.

The Real Jonah.

I will ask the indulgence of the baseball fraternity in speaking frankly and tell them where the real Jonah is. Every ball player that ever came in contact with me knows what kind of a heart I have toward the profession, and I have helped many of them without advertising it by a northern light display.

The real Jonah is in the Egyptian darkness of some of the player's brains, and if these and worse spirits would stop looking for Jonahs, which well befit witches in the olden times, but go out of the ball grounds with undaunted and resolute spirits determined to reverse the tide of fortune, the slump would not stay with them as long as it does. Moral courage in baseball is the greatest quality a ball player can possess, and we know the players that have the combative spirit to never give up until the ninth inning are fine fellows in private life.

I do not want the public to understand that the American professional ball player is not intellectual. As a whole they are superior to hundreds of professionals I know of, and there are men in the major leagues today who, by their intellectual and social attainments, would not be contrasted inferior to the occupants of the best drawing rooms of American society. It is the superstitious I am mostly hitting at.

MILWAUKEE MATCH OFF

Willard Refuses to Fight Ten Rounds for $17,500.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—The ten-round contest between Jess Willard, the heavyweight champion, and Fred Fulton of Rochester, Minn., which Thomas S. Andrews of Milwaukee planned to stage on Feb. 22, has been declared off.

Andrews, it was announced today, had offered a 25,000 purse for the match, and the hitch that prevented the bout was the division of the money, Fulton demanding that he receive the same amount of money he was to get for boxing Willard in New Orleans, this being $7,500. The champion refused to box for the remaining $17,500.

SKI GROUNDS ARE IN SHAPE

Members May Use Slides—Change in Club Directorate Forecasted.

It was announced yesterday that everything was in readiness at the Duluth Ski club grounds and that members could now use the ski slide and toboggan slides. As the big arc lights have not been installed for the season as yet members are advised not to go to the grounds during the evening. The lighting facilities will be installed some time during the coming week.

There was an informal meeting of the directors of the club yesterday, but nothing definite in the way of a date for the 1916 annual ski tourney was decided upon. Matters of routine business importance were considered.

A meeting of the club directors has been set for the coming week, when it is expected that a date for the tourney will be agreed upon.

There will be some changes made in the personnel of the club directors. Following the partial reorganization of the club, a membership campaign will be waged in the effort to inject new life and energy into the club.

It was stated yesterday that an effort is going to be made to work up some real enthusiasm in ski matters—either that or abandon all intentions of holding a tournament. Some of the ski club men feel that it is high time some real "pep" was injected into the affairs of the club, which has become more or less moribund.

SPORTING EVENTS OF THE WEEK AS SEEN BY THE HERALD CARTOONIST

"OLD" EDDIE LENNY IS GIVEN A GREAT BOOST

Tom Andrews Writes a Story About a Featherweight Who Fought Old-Time Stars.

Tom Andrews, writing a story for the Chicago Daily News, pays a tribute to Eddie Lenny, the old time featherweight fighter, who is living in Duluth. Lenny has fought Terry McGovern, Young Corbett, George Dixon and scores of other prominent fighters of a day gone by. The veteran can still go some, as he has shown. Lenny always took care of himself, and also provided well for the proverbial rainy day. Eddie has a weekly slip coming in from money he has invested. He's not around begging for benefits; rather he sits back and enjoys life, takes regular exercise and looks the very picture of health.

Here is what Tom Andrews says: "A funny incident happened at the boxing show given by the Duluth Boxing club some time ago. They had arranged three ten-round contests and decided to put on an opener of four rounds, as it was decided to introduce a local youth who he thought was the real goods. The youth in question was called Young Brady and he had a pretty fair reputation among the boys in that vicinity. His opponent was announced as Edward Lenny.

"When the two boxers stepped to the center of the ring to begin operations the older of the two, Lenny, began to feel his man out in a very deliberate manner. He also began to jab in a very careful manner with his left hand as though he were playing with a couple of kittens. The referee, Harry Stout, watched them for a few moments and then stopped the bout and said: 'Say, is this to be a sparring exhibition or a real boxing bout?' He was informed by the promoter that it was a boxing contest.

"'Well, just get busy,' said Referee Stout, 'and no more of the exhibition stuff.' It was hardly necessary to advise Mr. Lenny in this respect, for he immediately began to shoot over left hand jabs and right crosses so fast that Young Brady began to see stars and at the end of the round he was wabbling about like a chicken with its head off. They were two-minute rounds and at the beginning of the third round Brady was so wabbly that the referee stopped the contest and sent him to his corner.

Old Timer Makes Good.

"'Say, who is that fellow?' inquired Referee Stout as Lenny was leaving the ring. One of the newspaper men present happened to know him and remarked: 'That is Eddie Lenny, the old time featherweight who used to fight in Philadelphia and the East against the best boys in the country.' 'Well, he hasn't forgotten any of his cleverness yet,' remarked Stout, 'nor how to keep in condition.'

"The fact is Eddie Lenny is now a prosperous business man at Duluth, but he could not keep out of the game entirely, so he decided to take on this bout merely as a matter of exercise. He is quite well-to-do and does gymnasium work daily, being in excellent condition all the while. If it were really necessary it is almost a certainty that Lenny, who must be around the 40-year mark, could hold his own against a whole lot of featherweights who are touring the country as stars".

Youth, typifying 1916, entered the New Year's celebration of the Vasa lodge at Camels' hall last evening and drove 1915 from the room.

Charles Berggren, dressed as an old man, symbolic of the last year, participated in the exercises of the order through the evening and just as the midnight bells rang, bringing in the new year, little Esther Holmstrom, dressed as 1916, entered the hall and drove the "old man" out.

TRADE REVIEW

New York, Jan. 1.—Bradstreet's says: While wholesale traders have experienced a comparatively quiet week due to the taking of inventories, the seasonal pause is less marked than in other years and in some instances orders continue to come out in a way that hampers stock taking. On the other hand industry, too busy to take account of holidays, proceeds to higher ground, holiday trade at many points was of record proportions, orders already booked for spring delivery are heavy, stocks in the hands of final distributors are exceptionally low, and hopes of an early ending of the European war having well nigh vanished, the consensus of opinion is that goods will have to be bought here on an increased scale and at higher prices, not only by our own people but by foreign consumers as well. To the foregoing budget of favorable tidings must be added the fact that mail order houses report record trade, that jobbers have received relatively large filling in orders at a period of the year that usually affords a respite from previous activities. Weekly bank clearings $4,120,001,000.

INHERITANCE TAX LEADS THREE FORMER YEARS

Dissatisfaction Felt Over Excessive Share That Goes to State.

TAXES ON ST. LOUIS COUNTY INHERITANCES.

Year.	Amount.
1915	$104,971.99
1914	49,480.05
1913	31,520.97
1912	23,335.35

Inheritance taxes paid by St. Louis county estates during 1915 were heavier than the total amount contributed for the three preceding years, according to figures which became available yesterday afternoon at the close of business in the office of County Treasurer George H. Vivian.

The probate court, during the last year, handled thirty-seven estates against which inheritance taxes were levied. One alone netted the state more than $50,000, three paid amounts in excess of $15,000 and nine estates contributed more than $1,000.

The largest inheritance tax paid during the year from St. Louis county was that in the estate of the late Capt. Joseph Sellwood, whose heirs were taxed the aggregate sum of $55,132.11. The heirs of D. M. Philbin paid $16,312.69 and those of Edmund D. Graff, $15,085.27.

Division Considered Unfair.

Under the law the tax is divided between the state and the county, 90 per cent going to the state and 10 per cent to the county. Throughout the state there is much dissatisfaction with the proportions in which the tax is divided and it is expected that before long there will be a definite movement started to have the statute amended so as to make the division on the basis of 50 per cent to the county and 50 per cent to the state.

"The bulk of the work of assessing and collecting the tax falls on the probate courts and other county officers," declared A. R. Morton, clerk of the probate court, yesterday. "They are all supported out of the general tax funds. On the other hand, the state is put to comparatively little expense in collecting its share and receives the large end of the tax. While the inheritance tax is not strictly a probate tax, still it is felt that the counties which are obliged to support the probate courts should at least receive sufficient of the tax to meet the running expenses of the courts. It is only in the larger counties of the state in which the probate courts are self-supporting on the present basis.

Small Counties Lose Out.

"A further inequality is that the 10 per cent now goes entirely to the county which has jurisdiction of the estate in probate and though only a fractional part of the total assets is in that county and the larger part of it may be in adjoining counties, the latter receives nothing at all under the present law. This operates against the smaller counties, for it is usually the case that where property is in several counties the probate proceedings are conducted in the county of the largest population.

"This is particularly true in the northern part of the state where so much of the land is held by non-residents. If they have property in St. Louis county and also in Lake, Cook and Itasca counties, the proceedings are invariably brought in St. Louis county and thus the smaller counties receive no share of the tax on the transfer of land within their boundaries. The distribution of the benefits of the inheritance tax, therefore, rests in many cases largely in the discretion of the executor in determining the county in which he will probate his estate."

POLISH FUND STARTS WELL

Father Iciek Urges Aid For His Stricken Countrymen.

"I take this opportunity to express to you on my part and on behalf of the Poles of Duluth my sincere thanks for the kind words you have spoken of our suffering Poles in Europe. I only hope that this generous appeal of the president will enable the Red Cross society to save a large number of those who are starving in that unfortunate land. Yours very sincerely,

"S. A. ICIEK,
"Pastor of St. Mary's Polish church."

Poland day was ushered in this morning in Duluth with a $50 contribution to the fund being raised in this country in behalf of the war-stricken Poles.

In a proclamation issued recently, President Wilson set Jan. 1 aside as Poland day, urging the American people to contribute to the aid of the Poles. The Red Cross society will handle all the money received and direct its distribution, the president announced.

The first contribution received by The Herald this morning is in the form of a $50 check from F. W. Paine. It will head the list of contributions to be received by The Herald or the special Polish committee, which is directing the campaign for funds in Duluth, A. Grabarkiewicz, assistant superintendent at the postoffice, is chairman of the committee.

On Dec. 10th last the United States senate passed a resolution calling the attention of the American people to the condition of the Poles and urging the public to give as liberally as they did for the Belgians and Serbians.

The Herald will receive any contribution for the Poland fund and will mail the money to the American Red Cross at Washington.

JAMESTOWN MAN CALLED

Dr. Julius Lincoln May Come to Trinity Lutheran Church.

Is Prominent in Public Life of Southwestern New York.

Dr. Julius Lincoln of Jamestown, N. Y., to whom a unanimous call was extended by the congregation of the Trinity English Lutheran church, Twenty-seventh avenue west and Third street, may accept the call, according to statements accredited to Dr. Lincoln by Jamestown papers. He is considering the call and will probably announce his decision within the next two weeks.

Dr. Lincoln is one of the leading men in public life in Southwestern New York. He has been pastor of the First Lutheran church of that city, which is said to be the largest Lutheran congregation in America, since June 18, 1896. In addition to his duties as pastor of this church he has taken a prominent part in the public life of the community. He is at present vice president of the Jamestown district of the New York conference and has served as president as well as treasurer of the conference. He was a member of the Jamestown board of education for nine years, six of which he served as president of the board. He has also served as a member of the board of hospital commissioners and on the board of park commissioners of that city. He served for two years as member of the New York assembly from the First district of Chautauqua county.

Dr. Lincoln was born in Lindsborg, Kan., and is a graduate of the Bethany college of that city, and later of the Augustana college of Rock Island, Ill. He has taken a post graduate course at Yale. He has twice been honored by having the degree of doctor of divinity conferred upon him, one by the Thiel college of Greenville, Pa., and by the Wittenberg college of Springfield, Ohio.

High Praise By Home Paper.

In an editorial in the Jamestown Morning Post Dr. Lincoln is given high praise. Duluth is also referred to as one of the large centers of the Northwest and the "famous city of the unsalted seas." The editorial follows:

Dr. Lincoln Called to Duluth.

"While the many friends of Rev. Dr. Julius Lincoln will rejoice in the new honor that has come to him in being unanimously called to the pastorate of the Trinity English Lutheran church of Duluth, Minn., they will all hope that he may see his way clear to remain with the First Lutheran church of Jamestown, which he has served with such signal success for nearly twenty years. They are not unmindful of the importance of the field to which he is called, but they feel that the local church, which in its membership is the largest Swedish church in this country, ought to offer equally great opportunities for useful service. Duluth is a large and growing city located on the Great Lakes and is one of the leading Swedish cities of the country, advantageously situated in a state with the largest Scandinavian population in the country.

"During Dr. Lincoln's long pastorate the beautiful new church edifice has been completed and more recently a handsome home for the pastor has been built. Beside looking after the work of the largest parish in the city, Dr. Lincoln has found time for a great variety of civic and philanthropic work. He has been for nearly fifteen years the energetic president of the board of directors of the Gustavus Adolphus orphanage. He has served on the board of education, the hospital commission and the park commission and for two years represented this district in the assembly of the state.

"Dr. Lincoln possesses executive ability of a high order and he is an orator of exceptional talent, so that no public occasion in this city is considered complete without his presence. Jamestown would be loath to lose Dr. Lincoln, but if he should decide to go to Duluth, that famous "city of the unsalted seas" would find in him a factor of great value in both its religious and civic life."

Rev. H. O. Hanson, who organized the Trinity church, also organized the Grace Lutheran church of Jamestown, N. J. This church was later merged with that now under the charge of Dr. Lincoln. Rev. Mr. Hanson will leave this city on Feb. 1 to take up his duties as pastor of the English Lutheran church of Des Moines, Iowa, and also to have charge of the conference hospital of that city.

SONG IN MEMORY OF JACOB RIIS

(Exclusive Service The Survey Press Bureau.)

Two years ago 10,000 people stood in the snow on Madison square in the heart of New York city, and sang in the New Year under the leadership of Jacob A. Riis. Last year they sang in memory of Mr. Riis, and this year they did it again, but with a new element.

In addition to the choristers, the promoters of civic song fests and other sober folk who, for all their enthusiasm are likely to get chilblains, this year the promoters of the singing brought in the youngsters who are the chief noise makers in the Broadway charivari a short block away. Around the platform were boys from the neighborhood of the Jacob A. Riis social settlement wearing badges—"Jacob Riis' Boys." Troops of Boy Scouts were in evidence and roped-off spaces were provided for college groups.

College Songs First.

At 11 o'clock the singing began with college songs, including the song of every college that had men present. At 11:30 o'clock there were hymns, ending with "Lord God of Time," written by Jean Dwight Franklin and dedicated to Mr. Riis, with taps at 12 o'clock and then "America" as the big red eye of the Metropolitan tower clock winked in the new year.

Mrs. Franklin, who was in charge, organized a committee of men in many diverse walks of life who were friends of Mr. Riis, with Theodore Roosevelt as chairman.

When Mr. Riis started the plan in 1912 there was no community celebration of any kind in New York city except the great throngs of tin-horn-blowing, confetti-throwing people on Broadway. Sometimes the fun got pretty rough before midnight. In his announcement Mr. Riis said:

"New York's manner of welcoming the New Year has come to be a kind of 'rough-housing' that found its expression last year in the slogan we heard in the streets: 'To hell with the old year, hooray for the new one.' We believe that our people are tired of this and will be glad to join in a better and saner one more worthy of their city.

"To this end a New Year's eve committee has come together to arrange for music and singing of the old songs in two or three of the public squares along Broadway in the midnight hour. The people will be expected to join in the singing."

One Big Celebration.

The people did come together with a right good will, but after the first year it was found much better to have one big celebration in Madison square than to hold the various small ones in different neighborhoods.

From the church of the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, which faces Madison square, 500 members of the choral societies marched out and led in the singing. The people joined heartily in the familiar old tunes: "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Oh, God, Our Help in Ages Past," "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah," "Nearer My God to Thee," "The U. S. A. Forever," "America" and "The Star Spangled Banner."

After Mr. Riis died it was felt that the plan would fall through but last year 25,000 people were packed in the square to take part, and the only reason there were not more was that there was not an inch of room left for anyone else to stand in.

Mrs. Franklin's "Lord God of Time," is as follows:

Lord God of time, look down and bless
Thy people as with eagerness
The new year we await;
Bid noise and shout and discord cease,
That, for the moment, reverent peace
Our souls may dominate.

Our island city fair doth lie—
Her towers rise white against the sky;
Make us her guardians true,
That we may uproot all that mars
And blurs her vision of the stars
And hides her heaven blue.

The year approaching is our own—
Within its bounds, lie foes unknown;
Lord, who didst conquer sin,
Give us new courage for the fight,
To crush the wrong, uphold the right,
And in the end—to win.

(Verses copyright, 1913, by Jean Dwight Franklin.)

SPECIAL PROGRAMS FOR THE NEW YEAR

Churches and Other Organizations Meet to Celebrate Arrival.

The new year was ushered in by societies of the West end with special services in many of the churches and entertainments by lodges. On the streets the demonstration was very quiet, no arrests being made in that section of the city because of boisterousness.

In virtually every church in the West end special devotional services were held during the last hour of the old year and during the first few minutes of the new year. These services were preceded by programs given in the clubrooms of the churches at which the young people enjoyed games and musical numbers.

At Sloan's hall members of North Star lodge, No. 11, I. O. G. T., entertained at a program, following which dancing was enjoyed. The affair was a benefit for a family in this end of the city. The proceeds will be turned over to the family today.

In some of the churches special New Year's sermons were preached this morning. The services were generally well attended. Special musical programs have been planned for tomorrow in many of the churches in honor of the new year.

WHAT ADVERTISING READING MEANS

Advertising is news. It is information. One cannot be said to be posted of what is going on in the material world unless he reads the advertisements in the paper he keeps. He does not get his money's worth out of his paper if he neglects to read the ads it carries in each issue. These ads are messages from manufacturers to retailers and from the merchants to the consumers. Advertising reading will enlighten you on goods and their prices. Business messages as they are represented by ads are intended for the public and ought to be read by it. They need not do what they are requested to do by these messages, yet they can learn a great deal by them, so as to act intelligently when the time comes to do things. As a general educator on business advertising reading is a great force. It makes it possible for the average man to keep ahead. There are also numerous instances where advertising readers have picked up in advertisements suggestions that meant a great deal for them, in fact have pointed out to them the way to new undertakings, endeavors and profits.—(The Mail Order Journal.)

CITY CAN CONTROL VENDING ON STREET

Fargo, N. D., Ordinance Held Constitutional By Judge Pollock.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—According to a decision just rendered by Judge Charles A. Pollock of the district court the ordinance of this city governing the sale of articles of merchandise on the streets of Fargo is not unconstitutional, although the ordinance was so declared by Police Magistrate Augustus Roberts in a case of the city vs. Charles Mirras, who established a popcorn wagon at a corner in the heart of the city and refused to move.

A warrant was sworn out for Mirras by City Attorney W. H. Shure and he was arrested and brought before the police magistrate with the result that he was released, the court declaring the ordinance to be in violation of the Constitution. However, the city attorney attempted to get out another warrant against Mirras on the same charge but this was refused by Magistrate Roberts on the ground that he had once been tried for the offense and that the ordinance was not constitutional. The city attorney then applied for a writ of mandamus, which brought the matter into the district court.

It was held by Judge Pollock that the city ordinance was constitutional and that the city did have the right to control the uses of the city and that it could prevent Mirras from operating his popcorn stand altogether or at such places as the city should designate.

USED IRON BAR AS HIS FATAL WEAPON

Insane South Dakotan Kills Three, Then Shoots Self.

Ray, N. D., Jan. 1.—Using an iron bar as a weapon, Bruce Parkinson, alias Guy Hall, said to be an escaped prisoner from the Washington state reformatory, killed Mrs. A. M. Hart, aged 42, and her two sons, 9 and 13 years old, at the Hart farm home near here, and killed himself after disclosing his crime to two of Mrs. Hart's daughters.

Parkinson, who was about 21 years old, hid the bodies of the boys in a haystack, where they were found yesterday. Thursday night he drove to Ray, where the two Hart girls had been visiting an aunt, Mrs. A. McFarlane, and returned with the girls to the farm.

Takes His Own Life.

Taking the girls to the room where their mother's body lay, he kept them prisoners there until early yesterday, when he returned with them to the McFarlane home here. As he entered the house, he drew a revolver and shot himself in the head, dying instantly.

Two notes were found on Mrs. Hart's body, one reading:

"Please forgive me, for I am insane," and signed "Bruce Parkinson, alias Guy Hall, escaped prisoner of Washington state reformatory."

Parkinson had been employed temporarily at the Hart home while Mr. Hart has been in Iowa.

CHIEF WADENA PASSES.

Doughty Old Indian, Who Did Not Fight Sioux, Is Called.

White Earth, Minn., Jan. 1.—Chief Wadena died a few days ago at his home on the White Earth reservation, about fifteen miles northeast of the agency.

It is generally supposed that it is from this noted chief that the village of Wadena obtained its name. There are some who question it, who declare that the town received its name from the father of the chief who has just passed away.

Wadena was a member of the Gull Lake band of Mississippi Chippewas, who lived on a reservation at Gull Lake, twelve miles from Brainerd, and was about 80 years of age.

Chief Wadena was not a warrior by disposition and never joined war parties against their hereditary enemy, the Sioux Indians, who were at war with the Chippewas for a couple of centuries until 1873.

Because the government did not give him an allotment of 160 acres, as its representatives, who negotiated the act of Jan. 14, 1889, which opened up all the Chippewa reservations to settlement, had promised, he refused to accept any less and said that if the government intended to break its agreement, he would do likewise. Eventually, he received an allotment of 160 acres, and he then accepted the trust patents for both of the eighty-acre tracts.

These companies paid a bonus to their employes, then but 8,000 in number, last May, covering the previous eight months when working time and wages had been cut because of curtailed output due to the outbreak of the European war.

The premium will be paid all employes in mines, mills, smelters, shops and surface work. These companies have been paying the highest wages in the history of the district the past nine months.

LAW'S AUTHOR PUT "WOODCHUCK" IN IT

North Dakota Supreme Court Castigates Author of Bill Passed On.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court's opinion in the case involving the state's money and credits act, which recently was declared unconstitutional, is causing comment about the state, because of the rather sensational charge made by the court that the framers of the law, or somebody interested in its progress in the legislature, deliberately framed the bill with the object of having it declared unconstitutional.

Minnesota's history in similar legislation is cited by the court, the opinion, by Justice Burke, being in part as follows:

"The history of this legislation is enlightening, and as it has a vital bearing upon the results of this action, we will take a moment to review it. Chapter 285 of the Minnesota session of laws of 1911 provided for the taxation of moneys and credits. The tax commission of Minnesota attempted to collect a nominal fee from the Winona Motor company. Resistance being made, the matter reached the supreme court of Minnesota, who handed down a decision Feb. 30, 1912, upholding said law against the constitutional attack made thereupon.

Familiar With Gopher Law.

"Some person who was undoubtedly familiar with the Minnesota legislation and litigation drafted H. B. No. 331 and presented it to the North Dakota 1915 legislature. A comparison of this bill with the Minnesota law shows that one was modeled thereafter, and the author, no doubt, hoped that if it became law three years after the Minnesota court declared it constitutional, it would stand the tests in North Dakota courts. As originally drafted, it contained fourteen sections."

The court then proceeds to a review of the bill as originally drafted, and also shows a late amendment by which it was attempted to settle several suits then pending. This attempt, the court said, invalidates the entire bill, for the reason that suits involving taxes must be settled under the laws existing at the time the taxes in question might have been levied.

"There is no doubt that the author of the amendment was familiar with the decision, and deliberately rendered the bill unconstitutional," says the court, quoting a decision in a former North Dakota case involving the same principle.

BUILDINGS TO COST MORE THAN $500,000 IN SIGHT

Architects Already at Work On Many Substantial Structures.

New Residence For Oscar Mitchell—First Street Business Block.

The carrying through of an extended program in the building of modern houses in the high-class residential districts is foreshadowed in announcements made this week.

A house that will be fully in keeping with others in the district will be built for Oscar Mitchell at Twenty-fifth avenue east and Fifth street. The plans are being prepared by Frederick W. Perkins, and it is expected that they will go out for figures in time to admit of work being started in the early spring.

F. G. German, architect, has plans in hand for a handsome residence for Mark Baldwin to be built on the site recently purchased by him on Second street, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth avenues east. Figures will probably be taken about the beginning of next month.

Another interesting development in building circles this week came in the intimation that a two-story brick business block is to be erected for Hugh McClearn at the northwest corner of First avenue east and First street. A store will be located on the ground floor, and there will be living quarters upstairs. On the site was formerly an old landmark that was recently torn down. The plans were prepared by J. H. de Waard, architect.

Splendid progress has been recorded during the year in the way of betterments in the business portion of First street, and other proposals for that thoroughfare are foreshadowed in the near future. Included under that category will come the sale of the old armory to the Shriners and the subsequent remodeling of its front and interior.

It is taken as assured that building operations in the city will assume the greatest activity in years during the coming spring and summer months. An architect today estimated that the work already in sight for the new season would reach an aggregate valuation of more than $500,000. Among the proposals mentioned are the Pilgrim Congregational church in the East end, the boys' Y. M. C. A. building, cold storage plant for the Booth Fisheries on Lake avenue south, and the second to be built in Morgan Park. The last named structure is estimated to cost $125,000. The plans for it are now being prepared by Kelly & Williams, architects, and it is expected they will be completed by Jan. 25 so that the contract may be awarded by the school board at its February meeting.

Waterfront Improvements.

An extension of the Head of the Lakes elevator and coal dock facilities is foreshadowed in 1916. It is regarded as assured that the contract for the erection of a 3,500,000-bushel elevator plant will be awarded by the Great Northern Railroad company within the next few weeks. The plans for it were prepared more than a year ago, but on account of the uncertain business conditions at that time, the work was deferred. It is also considered probable that the Northwestern Fuel company will erect a coal handling plant with a large storage upon the site purchased by it several months ago.

Home Building Features.

Statistics in connection with construction operations during the past year furnished by S. M. Kielley, building inspector, are interesting. During the twelve months 1,815 permits were issued for improvements estimated to cost $2,714,379. This compared with 1,591 permits for $2,805,223 during 1914. Comment was made by Mr. Kielley upon the fact that while the aggregate of the work fell slightly below the figures of the preceding year, the number of permits taken out was 209 greater. The preponderance of residence work was the feature. New dwellings accounted for 788 of the permits and repairs and additions to houses for 826 more. It is predicted that home construction will figure even more extensively during the present year.

The outstanding feature in this week's list of permits was the taking out of one by the Swanstrom Investment company for a brick store and tenement to be built at First street and Twenty-first avenue west at a cost of $15,000. The contract has been awarded to Alexander Nelson. Holstead & Sullivan are the architects.

Richard Hanson has been awarded the contract for a duplex frame flat building for A. Hoekstra at Thirty-fifth avenue west and Third street at $4,200. Shurick & Hansen are the architects.

The Building Owners and Managers association of Duluth has just completed arrangements to have Joseph W. Hays of Chicago speak here Friday, Jan. 7.

Mr. Hays is a widely known combustion engineer and an authority on heating and power plants. He will speak before the members of the local association, their employes and others interested in heating and boiler problems, on the subject of combustion in connection with heating and power plants.

PLANNING FOR THE NEW YEAR

Realty Operators Already Mapping Out Their Selling Campaigns.

Duluth Conditions Far Different From Those of Year Ago.

Local realty operators devoted the last week to the arranging of selling campaigns for 1916, and interesting announcements in that connection are expected shortly.

The closing up of some important transactions is expected during the present month, and predictions now are that new high figures will be established in real estate operations in this city during the next twelve months. Never has the outlook appeared as bright as at present, in the opinion of prominent dealers. Where as a year ago everything was shrouded in doubt and uncertainty, with manufacturing establishments either closed down or working on part time and curtailment the rule in all commercial and financial quarters, optimism is now the keynote among the leaders in every line of endeavor. Duluth factories and commercial establishments are experiencing the most active period for the season in their histories.

Steel Plant Big Factor.

With the furnaces and two other departments in operation at the Minnesota Steel company's plant, affording employment to several hundred men a new factor has been introduced into the community. Furthermore in view of the fact that other departments at the plant are scheduled to go into operation in the early spring, employing large additional forces, the potential possibilities offering through the coming into being of this industry cannot be fully estimated, in the opinion of experts. A general stiffening up in realty values as a result has come about, and according to reports of operators outside investment interest has been already materially stimulated.

House Inquiry Features.

Apart from three important transactions in West end Superior street properties, the purchase of the Empress theater property on East Superior street, and some transfers of First and Second street centrally located frontages, the feature in real estate circles during the past year was the inquiry for homes and building lots in various parts of the city. Any desirable proposal in residential properties made by members of the Duluth real estate exchange was readily handled. A development to be especially mentioned in that connection was the demand for lots in outlying additions sold on easy terms of payment.

The N. J. Upham company sold for Harriet Harris to Arthur Miller a lot in Crescent View park. A number of other deals in residence properties were also reported to be under negotiation by that office.

A. W. Kuehnow, president of the Gary Land company, reported the sale of nine lots in Gary during the week, all being to outside investors. The carrying through of an extended building program in Gary is forecasted for the early spring. The need of increased housing accommodations in the steel plant districts is becoming more fully recognized, and to meet it a number of capitalists are reported to have signified their intention of building medium priced houses.

Charles P. Craig & Co. advised continued active inquiry for building lots in Lakeside and also for market gardening tracts in close proximity to the city.

Stryker, Manley & Buck were in receipt of some offers in connection with high-class residential properties, with every probability of sales being put through within the next couple of weeks.

The Hoopes-Kohagen company received earnest money on sales of two lots in the Park Drive division, and an offer came for a building lot in West Duluth.

FIRST DULUTH SCHOOL TO BE OPERATED UNDER GARY PLAN WILL BE READY FOR THE NEXT SCHOOL YEAR

THE MORGAN PARK SCHOOL. —Sketch by Kelly & Williams.

Ground will be broken early in February for the Morgan Park public school, Duluth's first venture in the Gary (Ind.) plan of work, study and play.

The structure will cost about $110,000; will accommodate between 750 and 800 pupils, and probably will be ready for occupancy by Sept. 1, 1916.

Clyde Kelly of the firm of Kelly & Williams, architects, said today that plans would be ready for contractors by Jan. 20, and that bids probably would be in shape to present to the board of education at its February meeting.

This building is the first unit of Morgan Park's school system. It will be built on a six-acre site on Fourth street, facing the Minnesota Steel company employes' club. The second unit, which will be erected when the growth of the model city requires it, will cost in the neighborhood of $80,000 and will practically double the capacity of the school. The site was donated to the board of education by the steel company.

Three-Story Brick Structure.

The unit to be built will be 204 feet long and 70 feet wide, three stories in height and of gray brick trimmed with Bedford stone. The second unit, as planned, will be built in the rear so as to make the aggregate depth of the building 160 feet.

Under the Gary plan the building will be used by two sets of pupils, so that every room will be in use constantly. Classes will last from about 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 in the afternoon. Evening work will be allowed, and the assembly hall, built to accommodate about 900 persons, is designed as a place for parents and older persons in the model city to gather.

There are ten class rooms, with a capacity of from thirty-five to forty pupils, four recitation rooms with room for from twenty to thirty, and laboratory and science rooms, each of which will hold twenty or more.

First Floor Arrangement.

On the first floor of the building there will be machine shops, lathe rooms, woodworking rooms, a store, salesroom, the school lunchroom, the dining room with domestic science kitchen, a sewing room and a laundry. The store salesroom is peculiar to the Gary system, and is a model store where pupils are taught methods of retail merchants.

In addition to these rooms, the first floor will house a large gymnasium, measuring 50 by 60 feet; locker rooms for both boys and girls, and toilet rooms. There are three entrances to the building.

One of the features of the second floor arrangement will be the large assembly hall, which will be more commodious than that of any other school building in Duluth. This room will be 72 feet long and 50 feet wide, and will have room for more than 900 persons. The stage will be 22 feet deep and 37 feet wide and will accommodate between 150 and 200 children. Original stage plans were revised upon suggestion of Supt. R. E. Denfeld, so that more children might be placed there at graduation times and during similar exercises.

Five classrooms and three recitation rooms also are located on the second floor, as will be the principal's office, the school library, the school storehouse for books, and the toilets.

Rest Room for Teachers.

Between the second and third floors space has been utilized near the stairlandings for teachers' rest room, and an emergency room to be used on special occasions.

Five classrooms, a recitation room and two laboratories will be located on the third floor. In addition to this there will be rooms for mechanical and free-hand drawing classes, and toilets.

One section of the third floor will be used for a large balcony extending over the main floor of the assembly hall.

According to estimates made by the architects, about 400 students will be cared for in the classrooms, while an equal number are using the laboratories, science, manual training and domestic science rooms.

Since Dec. 10, when directors of the board of education held their last monthly meeting, architects have been busy with the plans, and today they announced that the preliminary sketches would be presented for approval next Friday.

Will Rush the Work.

W. B. Getchell, chairman of the board's committee on maintenance of buildings and grounds, has said that the plans now have been approved by his committee and are ready for presentation to the general board.

Work will be pushed so that contractors will be able to place orders for structural iron as soon as possible. President F. A. Brewer of the board declared at the last meeting, and the directors are anxious that the structure be ready when school opens next fall.

Since the opening of Model City and the start of work at the steel plant, school has been taught in rooms of a Model City residence. When school closed last June about twenty-five pupils were enrolled. Since then that number has been increased until, at the last report, five rooms with three teachers were handling more than 100 children.

A BEAUTIFUL AMERICAN COLONIAL HOME

The design shown above provides for a large, roomy home, a home that will appeal to people of refined tastes. The large imposing columns up the front of the building appear to a good advantage. The arrangement of the floor plan provides for a family of eight with servants' quarters. The building is constructed of brick and frame and will go upon a 75-foot lot. The building could be erected in Duluth for about $10,000, including plumbing and heating.

FALLS DOWN STAIRS; DEAD

Body of Mrs. M. Myllyla Is Found By Children Who Hear Crash.

Mrs. M. Myllyla, also known as Mrs. Miller, because of the similarity of the names, aged 85 years, 144 North Sixty-fifth avenue west, fell downstairs at her home shortly before 10 o'clock last night and was dead when found a few moments later by children of the family living on the first floor.

Dr. Reginald Graham was called immediately by neighbors. He pronounced the woman dead. The only mark on her body was a small scratch on her forehead, where she evidently had struck her head against the stairs. An autopsy will be held this afternoon to determine whether she had died before the fall or whether the fall killed her. The autopsy will be held at Bell Bros.' undertaking rooms, where the body was taken last night.

Seeking Adopted Son.

Mrs. Myllyla, or Mrs. Miller, as she was commonly called by her neighbors, was the widow of Manna Myllyla, who died about seven years ago. She had been living alone on the second floor of the home where she died. She has some distant relatives who are said to be living at Midway, and an adopted son, William Myllyla, who is said to reside at Woodland.

Undertaker Bell is trying to locate this son today. Arrangements for the funeral will not be made until after he has been heard from.

Only small children of the family residing on the first floor were at home when the accident occurred. At first when they heard the noise of the aged woman falling down stairs they became frightened, and then not hearing any further noise, went to inevstigate. Peering cautiously into the hall, the children found Mrs. Myllyla lying at the foot of the stairway. They immediately sought help from neighbors.

County Option Progress.

"The Progress of County Option" will be the subject at the meeting of the West Duluth Women's Christian Temperance union to be held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. T. Culbertson, 1625 Jefferson street. Mrs. T. F. Olsen will be leader. The hostess will be assisted by Mrs. J. D. Meldahl and Mrs. J. A. P. Neal.

GREETS NEW YEAR WITH SHOTGUN

With the exception of one resident of the Raleigh street district who became enthusiastic when the whistles began to blow at midnight and started a celebration of his own by firing several shots from a shotgun, the arrival of the new year was not marked by special features. The principal celebrations were quiet services in churches and lodge halls.

Gugo Colligaris was the victim of the over-celebration. The police were on his track after he fired off the first shot. Before he had fired three the police had him in tow and confiscated his gun. He is registered as the first arrest for the year 1916 and charged with discharging firearms within the city limits.

Gosta lodge No. 243, Vasa order, entertained at a joint Christmas and New Year's program at the Victor hall. Music and games followed by dancing featured the affair.

SCHULTE TAKES WEST DULUTH POST

Lieut. Wilcox Assumes Night Watch at Headquarters.

Lieut. Frank Schulte, former chief of detectives, assumed charge of the West Duluth police station this morning and Lieut. Charles E. Wilcox, who has been the chief officer at the station since the death of Lieut. Arthur Briggs nearly eight years ago, was transferred to the uptown station to take charge of the night watch at headquarters.

The change as announced in The Herald last night was as great a surprise to the officers affected as it was to the general public.

Officers of the West Duluth police station averaged more than one arrest for each day during December. In all there were thirty-three arrests of which sixteen were plain drunks. There were eight cases of disorderly conduct, two for petty larceny, one drunk and disorderly, one adultery, one for selling tobacco to minors, one offense for operating an auto without lights, one vagrancy, one for smoking on a street car and one for discharging firearms within the city limits.

A Dainty Toilet Article.

Every lady who desires to keep up her attractive appearance while at the theater, attending receptions, when shopping, while traveling, and on all occasions, should carry in her purse a booklet of Gouraud's Oriental Beauty Leaves. It is invaluable when the face becomes moist and flushed, and is far superior to a powder puff, as it does not spill and soil the clothes.

It removes dirt, soot and grease from the face, imparting a cool, delicate bloom to the complexion. Sent anywhere on receipt of 5 cents in stamps or coin.

COLE PAYS BIG PRICE

Puts Up $4,000 Per Acre For Copper Land in Michigan.

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The highest price ever paid for copper mineralized territory was agreed upon a few days ago when Thomas F. Cole of Duluth concluded arrangements for the purchase of the mineral rights underlying the village of Ahmeek, in Keweenaw county, adjoining the county of Houghton. The price was $4,000 an acre or $160,000 for the mineral rights under the tract.

In the year 1903, when the Ahmeek mine became an assured success and a large employer of land, the Ahmeek was a big producer and the Allouez and other properties showed evidences of great futures the Ahmeek Land & Improvement company was organized. It purchased the surface rights to this same tract of land. The purchase was made from three interests, the Devereaux estate, the Chandler interests and the Nortney interests. These various interests, owning the territory jointly, retained the mineral rights. In the meantime the Ahmeek Land & Improvement company went ahead with the sale of lots. Eventualy the village was organized and today it is one of the substantial property interests of the Michigan Copper country.

Cole Buys Extensively.

Recently Mr. Cole made extensive purchases of landed interests in this district, taking over the entire holdings of R. R. Goodell. The assumption is general that he likewise took over a large interest in what is known as the Douglas Copper company, which owns a section that Ahmeek shafts must cross in the course of their future operations at greater depth. The purchase of these underlying mineral rights at Ahmeek village is looked upon as the completion of a plan to obtain as much of the Kearsarge lode mineral values in this rich section as possible and to mine them from surface.

To mine these lands would entail much the same method of operation that the Tamarack followed in the early days in the Calumet conglomerate. Following the demonstration of its enormous wealth, Tamarack lands were purchased by the Clarke-Bigelow interests and shafts were sunk to great depth, through barren land until the conglomerate lode was reached.

Shaft Through Barren Ground.

To reach the mineral values of the Kearsarge lode in the Douglass tract or under the village of Ahmeek a shaft going through barren ground for a distance of 2,500 feet would have to be sunk. The point of attack most easily offering opportunity for this shaft is practically the location of the station of the Houghton County Traction company. This happens to be on Allouez land, however. Another corner where a shaft might go down 2,600 feet to the lode is on Ahmeek Mining company land. Another point is on the land of property owners in the village of Ahmeek. Ownership in the surface rights of Ahmeek village land is, however, pretty well scattered among various property owners at this time. At the same time it is believed that the matter of reaching the lode is an engineering problem which easily is capable of solution.

The point of greatest interest is the price paid for mineral values on the Kearsarge lode, $4,000 an acre for copper rock which is to be mined only after cutting through 2,500 feet of barren ground.

LOOKS FOR BEST YEAR IN SHIPPING

Trade Paper Comments of Changes in Ore Trade.

The unusual development of the ore and shipping business of last season has attracted the attention of all lines of business, and it is the subject of almost universal comment among trade papers. In this connection the Iron Trade Review says editorially:

"The year 1915 will be remembered as a remarkable one in the history of lake transportation. The early part of the year was distinctly disappointing, but the movement of ore was very active during most of the year and the excitement toward the close was most unusual.

"The most interesting feature of the year was the rapid chartering of vessel capacity late in November, which had an important influence on the buying of numerous vessels this month. The action of the largest shipper in suddenly tying up a very large vessel tonnage to move ore next year quickly brought to other shippers the realization of the importance of having vessels of their own, and they appeared in the market to buy any vessels that were obtainable. The changing of the ownership of numerous vessels has brought about much closer holding of vessel property, and shippers of ore today dominate the lake situation through vessel ownership as they never before did. Everything makes way for ore.

"Indications point strongly to next year making a new record in ore movement. It will also add as much as can be built to the vessel tonnage of the present fleet, although the cost of building a vessel is now about 70 per cent more than it was a year ago, and this cost is likely to be still further increased.

"With vessel builders, the reversal from almost complete idleness to intense activity was even more sudden than the improvement in the movement of ore and grain. As nearly all the ore moved was under contract at season rate, the profits of the ore movement were only moderate, but the high rates on grain at the close of the year added large amounts to the exchequer of many vessels."

Carlton, Minn., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss Ruth Ehnstrom of this place is winning renown throughout the Northwest as a champion girl potato-grower. After winning the sweepstakes in the boys' and girls' contest in Carlton county last year and capturing second place in the contest at Duluth for the northeastern part of the state, she entered some of her choicest products in the Bemidji exhibit in September and won second in competition with the entire state. This exhibit won a prize of $15 in cash which was presented to her by the Northern Development association, last week.

Miss Ehnstrom is an enthusiastic student of potato culture and understands all phases of ground preparation, selection of seed, cultivation and care. She also takes personal care of her 'patch.'

MAY REARRANGE R. F. D. FOR AUTOS

Plans of Postmaster General Would Extend Length of Routes.

According to the plans of Postmaster General Burleson the rural free delivery routes will be put on a modern basis by substituting autos for horses, and this may mean the reorganization of the routes running out of Duluth. Under the system proposed by the postmaster general a rural carrier using a car would receive $100 net salary a month and additional money for the expenses of a machine.

Carriers using cars Mr. McEwen says would be expected to cover twice the territory of a carrier with horses. In this way the service could be extended. Autos could be operated out of Duluth for nine months of the year he says.

In some states examinations have already been ordered for rural route carriers who use autos. The examinations must be taken by incumbents as well as new applicants and cover contracts paying approximately $1,800 a year, the carrier to furnish his own car.

RUMORS PERSIST THAT INDEPENDENTS WILL UNITE

Proposed Consolidation of Butte Copper Companies Believed Logical.

Denials Not Taken as Authentic; Big Properties Involved.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rumors that apparently have some basis for a foundation have been persistent in the past few days in Butte of plans for a consolidation of some of the largest independent mining interests of this district. The companies and properties that have been mentioned most prominently in this connection are the North Butte Mining company, the East Butte Mining company, the Davis-Daly company, the Butte-Alex Scott company, the Butte-Duluth Mining company, the Bullwhacker Mining company, the Butte & London company, the Butte Main Range company, the Rainbow Development company and the other smaller companies having interests in the Eastern Butte district.

All consolidation rumors have been strenuously denied by the parties controlling these different properties. The report was sent out that the Butte-Duluth property was to be taken over by the East Butte company. This brought an immediate and emphatic denial from the officers of that company that any such consolidation was contemplated. Right on the heels of the denial came the well authenticated report that attorneys for the receiver of the Butte-Duluth were drawing up a petition to the court that had received the approval of 50 per cent of the Butte-Duluth interests. In this petition it was stated that a proposition had been made by Oscar Rohn, general manager of the East Butte company, to take over, under an operating lease, the Butte-Duluth mining properties and electrolytic plant. The new flotation plant and remodeled smelter of the East Butte company were to be used in connection with the electrolytic plant of the Butte-Duluth for operating purposes and the plan involved an option running to Mr. Rohn—and those back of him—of a controlling interest in Butte-Duluth.

Mr. Rohn is already one of the directors of the Butte-Alex Scott mine and the ores from that are going to the Pittsmont smelter of the East Butte company. The Bullwhacker mining property has during the past week been leased to a Butte syndicate headed by Patrick Wall and I. A. Heilbronner. Under the terms of the lease Messrs. Wall and Heilbronner—with those back of them—are to furnish the money needed to develop the Bullwhacker property and carry on operations there for eighteen months. The Bullwhacker company is to get a royalty of 25 per cent and it gives the syndicate an option on a majority of the stock at 50 cents a share. This option was given by the Clark and Donohue interests.

In connection with this deal comes the statement that the ore is to be sent from the Bullwhacker mine to the East Butte company's smelter.

The resignation of John D. Pope as general manager of the North Butte company was followed by the announcement that N. B. Brady would be made superintendent of the company properties. Mr. Cole did not announce the appointment of anyone to the position of general manager.

Rumor has been current in Butte that Oscar Rohn, the general manager of the Easte Butte company, the managing resident director of the Butte-Alex Scott, the representative of the syndicate that is to lease under option the Butte-Duluth property and closely associated also with the syndicate that has taken over the Bullwhacker, is to be the general manager of the North Butte company and its associated companies, the Rainbow Development and the Butte & London.

Would Be Powerful.

Such a combination as this would make a very powerful one. From the standpoint of operating and from financial economies it would prove profitable to all concerned and would be a very logical one. The East Butte company has the only smelter and reduction works in Butte and the only one in the district outside of the Washoe plant of the Anaconda company. It has just completed the enlargement of the smelter, the rebuilding of its blast furnaces and the construction of an oil flotation plant. It is centrally located with regard to practically all the properties owned by the companies mentioned above. The Bullwhacker plant and mines adjoin it on the east. Directly to the southeast is the Butte-Duluth electrolytic plant which Mr. Rohn will take over and enlarge to a capacity of 750 tons per day.

The Davis-Daly properties are west of the East Butte mines while directly to the north lie the Butte & London, the Rainbow and the North Butte.

The proposed combination would call for the immediate enlargement of the East Butte smelter and plant. Duluth and Butte interests are prominent in the control of all these companies and the men who can swing such a deal are said to be very closely allied at present.

Extent of Deal Unknown.

Whether anything more than a working agreement is entered into or whether the deal will go farther and involve the formation of a holding company that will secure the controlling interest in each of the companies and bring about eventually an actual consolidation, is not known.

The great demand for copper, together with the rise in the price of it, is aiding materially in bringing about the possibility of such a combination for it is furnishing the companies with capital and making working agreements between them almost a necessity.

Frank V. Whitman, one of the original owners of the mining claims that compose the properties of the Butte & Bacorn company and the owner of 50,000 shares of the stock of that company, which he took in part payment for his claims, has brought suit in the district court to set aside the foreclosure proceedings by which J. J. Kennedy and others secured a judgment for $50,000 against the company, consisting of 500 notes of $100 each.

In his complaint in intervention Whitman claims that Kennedy, who holds a part of the notes and the others who joined with him in the foreclosure action were all directors of the company and that as such they all instructed their attorney to confess judgment for the company.

Wants Case Reopened.

This, he claims, was intended to deprive the stockholders of their rights. He asks that the whole matter be reopened. He declares the directors had no right to confess judgment for the company they were supposed to direct. It was the same as bringing suits against themselves for property belonging to themselves and others. Attorneys for the directors claimed the foreclosure proceedings were regular.

The company owns over 200 acres of ground in the North Butte district near the North Butte and Butte & Superior properties. Plans for reorganization which were under way will have to be postponed until the outcome of this suit is known.

The report made to the Federal court by the Butte & Superior company on the results of its oil flotation plant for the month of November shows higher values and a greater tonnage than the month previous. In November, 10,836 tons of concentrates were recovered from 47,672 tons of ore treated at a cost of $2.91 to recover concentrates valued at $30.58 per ton. The analysis of the tailings of the oil flotation plant for November shows 1.1234 per cent zinc, .08 per cent lead, .037 per cent copper, .73 per cent iron, 1.44 per cent manganese, 91.1 per cent insolubles, 9 ounces of silver and .00208 ounce gold. In October, 43,092 tons of ore were treated at a cost of $2.75 a ton to recover 10,473 tons of concentrates which were valued at $29.59 per ton.

Rapid progress is being made by the Anaconda Copper Mining company in the development of its new zinc mining department. James J. Carrigan, who, for the past two years, has been at the head of the safety first department of the company, has just been appointed as an assistant superintendent of mines with the duties of general superintendent of the zinc mines of the company.

He will have direct supervision of the Alice, Nettie, Emma, Lexington and Poulin mines and will also have charge of the mining of zinc ores in some of the copper properties. Mr. Carrigan is a comparatively young man, but has made a special study of the zinc mining business.

Work has already begun on the new concentrating plant that is to be constructed at Anaconda for the purpose of handling the zinc ores from Butte and furnishing the concentrates for the new refinery at Great Falls. The enlarged refining plant at Anaconda is still in operation and is giving splendid results.

Developments at the Davis-Daly property continue of the most encouraging nature. The drifting on the ore body in the 2,500-foot level continues and there is no evidence of a lowering in the percentage of copper in the assays taken from it. All preparations have been made to enlarge the shaft to three compartments in the shoulder between the 1,700 and 1,900-foot levels and this improvement will be finished by April 1 or sooner.

The ore that is being shipped now is averaging well above 7½ per cent in copper. The December returns will probably show a profit of at least $15,000, or the best showing that has been made in any month. As soon as the needed improvements are made in the shaft changes and added hoisting capacity, the tonnage of the Colorado mine will be doubled and perhaps trebled.

The report that another assesment will be required to furnish the funds required for further development is given no credence in Butte as the profits from the ore now being shipped should be ample to furnish all money needed for the improvements contemplated.

MINES HAVE GREAT YEAR

Figures for Copper, Iron and Zinc Show Largest Increase.

Washington, Jan. 1.—The midyear review of mining conditions reported to the secretary of the interior on July 1 by the director of the United States geological survey is well supported by the preliminary reports for the year submitted today. The geological survey is making public its usual estimate of mineral production for 1915 in the form of a separate statement for each of the more important mineral products.

A review of these statements confirms Secretary Lane's comment of last July to the effect that the mining revival is in full swing. In the Western states alone the metal production shows an increase in value of more than $130,000,000 over the corresponding figures for 1914; and the year's increase in output for the principal metals measured in value is more than $250,000,000. Moreover, it is not unreasonable to expect that when the full returns for all mineral products are compiled they will show that 1915 was the country's most productive year in the mining industry. The total may even reach $2,500,000,000.

Copper Beats All Records.

The copper mines passed all records for previous years, the 1915 output having a value of $236,000,000, or $83,000,000 more than the value of the production for 1914. The statistics and estimates received place the output of blister and Lake copper at 1,365,000,000 pounds or more than 120,000,000 pounds in excess of the largest previous production and 18 per cent above last year's figures. Only twice in the history of copper mining has there been a larger increase in quantity of metal produced.

Large Increase in Iron.

The total shipments of iron ore from the mines in the United States in 1915 are estimated to have exceeded 55,000,000 gross tons, an increase over 1914 of more than 38 per cent. Based on the same price as received in 1914 this represents an increase in total value of about $27,645,000. The increase in pig iron is estimated at 6,500,000 tons, with a total increase in value of pig iron production of more than $120,000,000.

Zinc Records Also Broken.

The output of zinc (spelter) made from domestic ores was larger than ever before, being about 425,000 tons, worth $120,000,000, as compared with 343,418 tons in 1914, an increase of about 82,000 tons or nearly 25 per cent in quantity and of $85,000,000 in value. Production was increased during the latter half of the year, as the production during the first half was at the rate of 415,000 tons annually and at the rate of 436,000 tons during the last half.

The output of refined pig iron from domestic ores was about 515,000 tons worth about $48,500,000 as compared with 512,794 tons in 1914, an increase of only 2,500 tons in quantity but of $8,500,000, or 20 per cent, in value. The production of antimonial lead was 20,250 tons, as compared with 16,668 tons in 1914, an increase of 3,582 tons, or 23 per cent, in quantity and an increase in value of nearly $2,000,000.

Gold and Silver Increases.

The annual preliminary estimates on the production of gold and silver in the United States, made jointly by the United States geological survey and the bureau of the mint, are not yet complete, but early figures based on reports from the mines indicate an increase in mine production over that of 1914 of over $7,000,000 in gold, principally from Colorado, California, Alaska, Montana and Idaho, and an increase in mine production of silver of fully 4,000,000 ounces, chiefly from Montana, Utah and Arizona. This increase in gold production may bring 1915 up to the record year of 1909, when the gold output of this country was nearly $100,000,000.

Quicksilver also has had its best year in 1915. The quantity increased 25 per cent over 1914, but the value of the output more than doubled owing to the much higher prices. The estimated production was 20,681 flasks of 75 pounds each, valued at the average price of the year—the highest in the last forty years—at $1,768,225. In value this domestic production was the highest since 1881 and in quantity the largest since 1912.

Small Changes in Coal.

The production of bituminous coal and anthracite in 1915 is estimated to have increased between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 short tons, or less than 1 per cent. The quantity of bituminous coal mined increased about 6,500,000 tons and that of anthracite decreased over 2,000,000 short tons. Owing mainly to steady demands for export coal and for coke for steel making, the output in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama increased over last year, but little change is recorded in other Eastern states. The region west of Ohio, including the Mississippi valley, shows a general decrease, Colorado being the only Western state to show betterment.

Connected with the coke industry was the completion during the last summer of a number of large plants for the recovery of benzol from by-product coke-oven gas. This gives the United States its first output of this material, so important as a raw material in the manufacture of high explosives and chemical dyes, and the amount of this product will be reported later.

Preliminary estimates of the total output of petroleum in the United States in 1915 indicate a slight increase over the corresponding output in 1914. It is believed that the total petroleum yield of the United States in 1915 amounted to 291,400,000 barrels, of which quantity it is also estimated that 267,400,000 barrels was marketed and 24,000,000 barrels placed in producers' field tankage during the year.

The sulphuric acid industry in 1915 presented interesting development. In spite of the abnormal demand and higher prices in the latter half of the year, much of the sulphuric acid had been contracted for or was consumed in the factories where made. The estimated production indicates an increase of 6½ per cent in the three common grades, but more than 100 per cent in the strongest grades.

The estimate of Portland cement output in 1915 indicates shipments from the mills of 86,524,500 barrels, an increase of 1-10 of 1 per cent over 1914. There was a slight decrease in production and this, with the appreciable decrease in stock, indicates a more conservative trend in the industry, which in the preceding few years showed a tendency to overproduction. Prices generally averaged a few cents lower per barrel in 1915 than in 1914, although toward the end of the year prices were substantially increased, and the outlook for 1916 is brighter than for several seasons.

Best Year in Western States.

Perhaps the most notable item in the year's record is the stimulation of metal mining in the Western states. Almost without exception the increases in production were large and in several states 1915 was the best year on record. In Arizona, which leads in copper, the output of that metal exceeded the previous record production of 1913. California continues to lead in gold and had the largest yield in thirty-two years, and with one exception in half a century. In Montana and Arizona record outputs of silver are reported and in Alaska the increased production of gold and especially copper made 1915 a much more prosperous year than even 1906 when Fairbanks and Nome were yielding their greatest returns of gold from bonanza placers.

MINING WORK IN MICHIGAN

Considerable Development Being Done in Copper Country.

Records in Copper Ore Production Are Being Broken.

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tamarack, which with perhaps one exception, is the deepest mine in the world, is going to resume sinking at No. 3, North Tamarack shaft, that with its auxiliary shaft goes to a greater depth than any of the others, 5,431 feet, according to the engineer's figures. The shaft itself has a depth of 5,193 feet, which is exceeded by No. 5, which is nearly 5,300 feet. When No. 3 arrived at the eighteenth level the crosscuts had become so long and so expensive to use on account of the long haul, that an auxiliary shaft was sunk from the end of the crosscut on the lode at an angle of 37 degrees and equipped with a compressed air hoist.

The possible exception in regard to the Tamarack being the deepest mine in the world is the Morro Velho gold mine located in Brazil, which is down from the surface 5,828 feet and from the adit level, which seems to be the level on which the ore is taken out, 5,502 feet. With the data at hand it is impossible to state if the shaft extends up to the surface.

All the drifts south of No. 3 on the auxiliary shaft down from the eighteenth level, the bottom level of No. 3, and from which the auxiliary starts, have met with good ground as far as they have been carried, the twentieth level having attained the length of 2,200 feet and having only 800 feet more to go to arrive at No. 5. This shoot which has been found averaging good all the way from the surface through the Calumet & Hecla, located above on the lode, show signs of broadening out on the twenty-second and twenty-third levels north where for about sixty feet the good ground is appearing. It is really, if it persists in depth as there is every reason to believe from its present great length on the dip of the lode a good-sized tract in itself, particularly as the property has yet quite a length below to be mined. The sinking will be from the twenty-third to the twenty-fourth level.

Copper in South Lake.

South Lake has a stretch of twenty-five feet of very heavy copper in the Baltic lode on the third level crosscus. This great disclosure was entered fifteen feet in from the footwall and maintained its high grades which included much mass copper for the distance of forty feet, when poorer ground was passed into which is still continuing six feet beyond. While the Butler lode has always been bunchy, the bunches are so rich that with the modern methods, as has been proved at the Mass mine by Supt. Walker, it can be made to pay well, and the mining men who have followed its development are congratulating the management on this fine showing, feeling reasonably certain that the lode's mineralization has as good if not better values than at the Mass. The crosscut will be carried to the hanging wall. This makes seven lodes all bearing commercial grades that have been found at this property, and even if some of them should not, as a whole, pay for mining, there will be enough remaining to send ores very large tonnage. This crosscut and those from the shaft to the north lodes on the fourth, fifth and sixth levels is all the work that is being done at this mine, awaiting the arrival of the steel for the new shaft-rockhouse, which should take place next week.

Winona will have the best tonnage of rock and the largest production of refined copper in its history this month. The two miles are hauling rock on the seventh level a distance of about 2,000 feet from the King Philip shaft No. 1 to Winona shaft No. 4 very successfully. Consequently December will be, also, the most profitable month.

More Tests to Be Made.

If the high price keeps up for the year or longer the management will thoroughly test out their mine horizontally and vertically and if there are found good shoots as there are believed to be at the King Philip and perhaps with depth in the Winona, the equipment can be accordingly augmented and distributed. It is highly probable that the Slater ferric chloride process will succeed and if it should not perhaps some other leaching process or flotation may be found to be adapted to the rock of the Winona lode. The new agitator by which it is hoped the Slater process can be run continuously will not be ready before the middle of January.

At the Ahmeek, where the mules have been hauling rock for about one and a half years, the eight mules thrive finely, and do their work at a low cost. They are used on six levels, and probably more will be added when lower levels are opened.

Ahmeek is sinking the shaft at both No. 1 and No. 2, being below the twenty-second level at the former and below the twenty-third at the latter. A new level has been passed through at each shaft within the last two months. When No. 2 arrives at the twenty-fifth level a drift will be begun to connect with No. 3, the southern of the two shafts having a common rockhouse at North Tamarack, length of 4,000 feet, to give better ventilation and to give the men, in case of an accident, a chance to escape. Ahmeek is still keeping the mill working its six stamps part of Sunday and when the two new stamps just ordered are finished, it will be crowding the mill in just the same way.

Slow Progress Being Made.

Houghton Copper, which has been due to a roll of the lode on its dip under the lode for about a month, is added by a very slight flattening of the shaft's course, coming back into it again, so that about two feet of it is being broken down with a good disclosure of the metal. It is coming back gradually and the shaft will be undoubted wholly in it very shortly. Slow progress is being made, as only one drill is being operated and that only on the day shift. On the sixth level south there is another rolling of the lode, this time horizontally on the plane of the lode up into the hanging-wall, but it is already giving signs of returning. On the northern drift some fair ground has been found and some stoping will be done. By the first of the week about 100 feet will have been sunk by the winze, or about one-half way to the twelfth level, where it will be stopped and a crosscut run to the lode.

Isle Royale has run its forms across the three parelleli shafts, put down through the sand on heavy timbering, at the angle of the shaft, about 56 deg. and in a very few days will begin the work of making a concrete collar at the ledge. A raise to the top of the ledge has just been started at the sixth level and that from the seventh level to the sixth is progressing very smoothly, these being the only levels from No. 6, the southernmost shaft, that have yet been advanced to the course of the shaft. At the No. 1 shaft two of the four drills working there have been put to work opening up new ground. Several long drifts are being thrust out from No. 2 under the old Huron mine workings, some of which have a length of over 2,000 feet. After a while No. 4 will be sinking again so that connections can be made with these levels from No. 2. Of course the primary reason for extending these levels is the good quality of the rock. There are now in operation at this mine seventy-four drills. Isle Royale is hoisting all the rock, about 2,400 tons daily, that can be handled at its mill and at the Centennial—Allouez, which is treating also rock from the Allouez, Superior, and Hancock, but can furnish considerable more if desired.

Bonus to Employes.

Mohawk and Wolverine on the twenty-fourth paid their employes a bonus of 5 per cent, as has been done monthly since July. The payrolls include over 1,200 men and it is understood that the bonus will be continued as long as the price of the metal remains high.

New Arcadian's rich run of ground on the 900-foot level north is persisting still and has a length of about thirty feet. There have been several runs of this high grade met with on the different levels, but none so high as this last.

New Baltic is not yet through the over-burden with its standpipe for the diamond drill, about twenty-five feet having been passed through so far. The diamond drill is already to start running as soon as the ledge is laid bare.

Osceola Consolidated will not, this month, have quite as large a tonnage as in November, since time was lost, the mines of the district closing down at 4 p. m. Friday, Dec. 24 and not resuming again until 7 a. m. Monday. However it will be about 120,000 tons, a high mark. The construction costs have been all charged off with the exception of the "day", the changing house, at No. 4 North Kearsarge, and it is rather difficult to forsee any of any considerable amount for the coming year. The mine is well prepared for any accident to any of its shafts, as there are two in reserve, No. 3 at North Kearsarge and the No. 3 at old Osceola.

Work at Hancock.

Hancock is just passing through the 200-foot-wide strip, recently purchased from it by the Quincy, into its own territory on the seventieth level and soon will do the same on the sixty-eighth, sixty-ninth, and seventy-first levels. Drifting is also being done on the sixty-third level, where on account of caving in on the old opening in the Quincy ground—each successive higher level being longer in this area. The hanging-wall branch of the Pewabic or Quincy lode is being opened and then when the boundary is encountered, an oblique turn will be made back into the main lode. High grade ground has been on the whole in the 200-foot strip met with and this in all probably indicates that the same good quality in the same abundance will be disclosed on the Hancock. A few more men are gradually being put to work, as additional levels are being reopened.

Quincy is stoping the old ground between the No. 7 shaft and the old boundary on the sixth-eighth, sixty-ninth, and seventy-first levels, where the drifts have been put in good condition by the Hancock. This is mostly ground along the old boundary that had been left as a wall between the two mines, but which is no longer necessary since the purchase of the 200-foot strip by the company. The mine is still maintaining its daily tonnage of about 4,100 tons from three shafts the most of the work coming from great depths, a splendid performance. This output is at the rate of about 23,000,000 pounds of refined yearly.

FIX DROWNING POINT

On Wisconsin Side of River So Family of Victim Profit.

Marinette, Wis., Jan. 1.—Edward Yenore was drowned on the Wisconsin side of the Menominee river. This fact was established by the Wisconsin Industrial commission after arguments of varied forms since May 25, 1915. As a result of the decision, Mrs. Louisa Yenore will get $1,920.30 damages instead of $1,523 as would have been the award if Michigan had been the scene of his death. Yenore was working on the drive at the time of his death. He was employed by the Menominee River Boom company. The place where he drowned in the river has been in dispute. The Wisconsin award is heavier than the Michigan.

CROOKSTON BAND RE-ELECTS LEADER

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 1.—Prof. G. Oliver Riggs will continue for another year as director of the Crookston band.

At a meeting of the band members he was unanimously chosen to succeed himself in this capacity and was given a high compliment from the members of this well known organization for the distinguished services he has rendered during the past year.

The band now number twenty-six pieces.

Fort Francis Fire.

International Falls, Minn., Jan. 1.—Fire at midnight Wednesday night at Fort Francis gutted the 5 and 10 cent store and damaged the Stethem building adjoining, which was in process of construction. The local fire department was called on for aid and rendered efficient service for our neighbors. The cause of the fire is not known.

Hurt by Windmill.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Henry Repsdorf, engaged in repairing a windmill, was seriously injured when a sudden gust of wind started the mill, throwing him up against the support in such manner as to crush him. Repsdorf was not released till the wind died down.

Enlists in Big War.

Hamilton, N. D., Jan. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—His son, Garnett Hart, whom he gave over to the care of his sister twenty-one years ago at the death of the mother who died three days after the lad was born, has enlisted for the European war in the Canadian army according to word received by T. R. Chambers of this city.

judging from present market conditions. All copper mines are running at full capacity and making more money than ever for stockholders that grasped the opportunity to invest.

BUTTE & ZENITH CITY MINING CO. offers now the most attractive opportunity for such investment. ITS GENERAL CONDITION PROMISE ONE OF THE LARGE COPPER MINES OF BUTTE. You have been told about the general organization of the company, about the progress of the development work, about the equipment, about the freedom from debts, about future plans and also something about the property, but a good thing stands repetition, and we want therefore to impress upon you the fact that 320 acres of ground the company owns is BUTTE MINING GROUND, part and parcel of the very ground where the largest copper and zinc mines of the world are located. They have earned hundreds of millions of dollars and are earning more today than ever before. Mining men of national reputation say that Zenith hill surface showing is in many respects STRONGER AND MORE PROMINENT THAN ON ANACONDA HILL.

FARM INCOME IS COMPUTED

Average Labor Earnings Above Expenses and Returns Demonstrated.

Interesting Data Compiled By University Farm Experts in Minnesota.

Mr. Farmer, what is your average labor income over and above your overhead expenses?

In Southwestern Minnesota recently, a farm management demonstration showed that the average labor income of sixty-three farms taken in order was $423. That is, the farmer had $423 left for his own work above all business expenses and 5 per cent interest on an average investment of $24,500. In addition to the foregoing, the farmer had his house rent and such products as the farm furnished toward the family living.

"The results of the demonstration," declares W. L. Calvert of the University farm, St. Paul, "coincide with extensive investigations in several states which have shown that one should endeavor to exceed the average of one's locality in as many of the following ways as possible, if a profitable farm business is desired:

1, size of business; 2, crop yields per acre; 3, livestock receipts per $1 of feed; 4, amount of work accomplished per man.

The Average Farm.

"In this locality the average farm had 192 acres of crops; the yields per acre of the leading crops were corn, 39 bushels; wheat, 11 bushels; oats, 35 bushels; the average receipts for $1 spent for feed were $1.16; and the average amount of work done per man was the raising of 100 acres of crops and the care of a corresponding amount of livestock. The foregoing averages should not be taken as applying to any locality except the one included in this demonstration.

"There were five farmers who fell below the average in each of the four factors. Not one of the five made as much as a $500 labor income. Of eighteen farmers who exceeded the above average in but one of the four factors, only one made a $500 labor income. Again eleven farmers exceeded the average in three of the four factors. Out of the eleven there were ten who made more than a $500 labor income. Just five farmers exceeded the average of their neighbors in all factors and every one made more than a $500 labor income.

"This demonstration shows that under the conditions prevalent in this locality, in the year 1914, a farmer who can do a little better than the average of his neighbors in at least three of the above four factors is almost certain to make more than 5 per cent interest on the investment and a labor income of over $500."

CATALO

Meat Problem May Be Solved By Hybrid of Cattle and Buffalo—New Animal Is Immune From Ills "Beef Critters" Are Heirs to, Thrives on Arid Plains and Has 150 Pounds More of "Eats."

Benton Borthwick in the Forecast: The catalo (the name is from "cattle" and "buffalo") and the mule would be first cousins if it were not that one belongs to the genus bos, while the other claims kin with the genus equus. The bond between them is that both spring from mesalliances, the catalo being the offspring of the buffalo and the gentle domestic cow.

The catalo is so hardy that it can live on pastures which would be poor picking for a sheep, and his meat is equal to the best beef, to which has been superadded the tender luscious hump that made the wild buffalo so eagerly sought by the equally wild huntsmen of the plains.

A Hardy Animal.

The new species has really been established, and there are now a sufficient number of cataloes to make it safe to prophesy that the new animal will play a leading part in the future food supply of the nation.

The range is the natural habitat of the buffalo and the catalo appears to inherit from its wild progenitors this love of the open. Turn the catalo loose in summer and winter; it fattens much more rapidly than domestic cattle would under the same circumstances, and its mortality rate is much lower. The driving blizzard of North Dakota does not send a herd of catalo drifting before the storm—for the blood of the buffalo makes the hybrid turn and face the swirling snow.

Again, because of the long adaptation of the buffalo to plains conditions, water is not so essential to the catalo as it is to the cow. Nor is salt—which is so necessary to the cattle that the problem of salting them on the range has always been a serious one for cattlemen to consider—at all indispensable to the catalo, which will show little or no desire for the salt that is being lapped up eagerly by the cows feeding closed beside it.

Immune From Diseases.

Another advantage of the hybrid is his immunity from diseases which have so scourged the cattle herds. In Texas, the worst tick country in the whole United States, the catalo has grown and thriven, immune from Texas fever and Texas blackleg, in the midst of cattle herds which were dying from these dreadful diseases.

In fact, nothing so far has seemed to affect the health and disposition of the Texas catalo. It has grown and taken on weight in the dry, hot plains of summer, and the moisture-laden air and rain-soaked turf of the wet season have merely brought more food to its mouth as it placidly crops the grasses growing long and rank under the downpour.

Unlike the mule, this hybrid is able to perpetuate its own species. So far as is known, no males have ever been born from the first cross, so that the second generation is either three-quarters or one-quarter buffalo, as the case may be. From these are produced the true catalo, which has both species on both sides. It has a heavier coat than the domestic animal, carries a larger hump and bigger hind quarters than the buffalo, and—which is all-important—cuts approximately 150 pounds more of edible meat than the ordinary "beef critter."

70 Per Cent to Table.

Instead of being a huge lump of fat, the hump of the catalo forms the upper cut of a rib roast of beef. It is tender, clear meat of excellent flavor, scarcely distinguishable from that of the ordinary beef animal. Cataloes which have been slaughtered for meat have produced upper cuts nine inches deep. The great value of the catalo as a meat animal is that 70 per cent of his weight can be sent to the table. Also, the meat is never tough, even when the animals are out on the range.

As it stands today the problem of the catalo is not one of the mechanics of breeding. That all has been done, and now it is simply a matter of selection. Therefore, the best of the hybrids are all being used for the purpose of propagating better animals, and the others are being used for meat.

Make Vast Areas Productive.

Time alone is necessary to establish a race which will make productive vast areas that are good for little else. On these almost arid plains grazing is too thin and water too scarce to allow the better grade of beef-animals to exist, but the catalo, if left to itself, will thrive and gain weight. The range-animal of the past has been responsible for tough, fibrous meat—too often diseased. The range animal of buffalo strain is hardly enough to resist disease and will produce clear-fibered meat that never gets tough.

Before many years it is likely that the problem of our meat supply will be solved by the blending of the American bison-blood with that of the beef-animal that for a century has formed the main food-dependence of the people of this continent.

DYNAMITE HELPS TREES GROW FAST

E. K. Parkinson in the Boston Transcript: The average man in the street is gravely of the opinion that dynamite can only be associated with destruction, and yet in the whole range of agriculture there is hardly a product more conducive to the improvement and upbuilding of soil and farming operations than this same dynamite. Thousands of pounds of dynamite are carried about daily in motor cars and wagons over rough country roads by some of our bolder neighbors who are venturing into this newest of untried realms of the agricultural world.

During the past few years agriculturists, horticulturists and arboriculturists have gradually awakened to the great value of dynamite in ditch digging, tree planting, and generally in the preparation of certain kinds of soil, so that today thousands of tons of agricultural dynamite are used all over the country. At this season of the year when the suburbanite is, or should be, busy setting out some fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs, etc., he may consider with much profit the advantages of the use of dynamite in the preparation of his land. The first question, quite naturally is, does it save labor? Most assuredly so, and to prove it go today to a hardware store and buy a stick of 20 per cent Red Cross agricultural dynamite, a box of detonators, blasting caps, a pair of crimping plyers and about three feet of fuse.

Use Crowbar.

Provided with a crowbar, the next step is first to mark out a hole, four feet in diameter, where the tree or shrub is to go and plan to dig it three feet deep. Then take the crowbar and drive down a hole about eighteen inches in the center of the plot; take out a detonator, place it over the top of one end of the fuse and push it gently down on the fuse, then with the cap crimper crimp the cap onto the fuse. On looking at this crimper it will be found that one end is made round for punching a deep slanting hole in the side of the cartridge near one end. Insert the cap and fuse in this hole and tie the fuse to the cartridge near the end (it will resemble, when done, a rocket, the fuse being the stick) and it is now ready for use and may be put into the hole and pushed down with a wooden stick, care being taken not to push the blasting cap. The object in ramming down the cartridge is to make it expand and fill the hole. After pressing home the charge, put in two or three inches of dirt or damp sand and press it down; then fill the borehole up with tamping until it is even with the surface. Never use metal tools of any kind for tamping, or the blasting may be set off prematurely. Cut the fuse long enough to give ample time to get out of the way, for it will be found a fuse will burn on an average two feet a minute. If one retires twenty-five or thirty-five feet away it will be enough for safety; then touch a match to the fuse—a snap!—and a boom!—and there is the hole for the up to date twentieth century suburbanite, all complete in less than ten minutes.

Thrown Out or Loosened.

All the soil to the depth of three feet and a width of four feet may not be thrown out, but most of it will be, and the rest will be a loose mass, and easy to dig out with a long handled shovel. There are more important things, however, to be considered in the use of dynamite than time and labor in setting out trees and shrubs, etc., and among them is the saving in the first year's heavy losses so common to spede-set trees. The reason for this is not far to seek if one takes the trouble to study the principles of plant growth. Water is the carrier of the tree's plant food and also influences the temperature of the tree. Moisture has the effect of maintaining the stiffness of the more succulent parts of plants; as an illustration, note the withering of corn during a drought. In dynamiting soil the subsoil is broken up, the water table, the level at which the soil water usually stands, is lowered and the tree or shrub thus enabled to send its roots far down into the ground for food, instead of sending out unnatural side-wise growths, which result in each tree being compelled to trespass on its neighbor's supply. Thus, of course, dynamited trees grow much faster, and in the case of fruit trees, come into bearing from one to two years earlier than those set out in hand-dug holes, while the fruit is much better in quality and color.

ELECTRIC FAN GOOD TO START FURNACE

Who has not gone to his furnace on a cold night to find the fire cheerless and depressed? The perplexing problem is to rouse it to life without putting out the few sparks. Have you ever thought of starting it by means of an electric fan? In an article entitled "Winter Uses of an Electric Fan" appearing in the January Popular Science Monthly, the author tells how the stubborn fire may be brought to life. He says:

"The fan is also very useful in aiding the heating system in the home, especially where a hot air system is employed. Every one who has ever tended one of these furnaces knows that it is frequently impossible to make the hot air rise through certain pipes when the wind is blowing in the wrong direction. A fan placed directly in front of the register will draw the hot air through the pipes and heat the room very quickly. The writer knows of a number of cases where the cold air intake pipe is so arranged that a fan may be placed inside, thus increasing the circulation of the furnace. Who has not gone to his furnace to find it cheerless and depressed, with hardly a spark visible? In such cases the most drastic arrangement of drafts will fail to save the fire, but if there is any life left in the fire pot whatever, a fan placed in front of the lower door will soon have the coal blazing merrily."

COLLEGE MAN AND WORKMAN.

Henry L. Gantt, in the Engineering Magazine: Without an intimate knowledge of the workman, a college graduate is too apt to assume that the workman, because he has not the same kind of knowledge the college man has, is necessarily ignorant and a fit subject for contempt. A little association with him, however, soon dispels this idea, for the college man finds out that the workman's knowledge, although quite different from his own, is very extensive, and embraces subjects of which he is entirely ignorant. The workman has indeed a great deal of knowledge, much of which is far more practical and better suited to his needs than that the college man can give him. Moreover, the workman readily recognizes that the college man knows but little about those subjects with which he is most familiar, and the contempt which the college man is apt to get for the workman before he knows him is only a small fraction of the contempt which the workman frequently gets for the college man.

GRAVE SITUATION IN FOREIGN AFFAIRS CALLS PRESIDENT BACK TO WHITE HOUSE

ANOTHER BRITISH PASSENGER SHIP SUNK

LOSS OF LIFE ESTIMATED AT ABOUT A SCORE

Steamship Glengyle, New Vessel Built in 1914, the Victim.

Homeward Bound From Shanghai and Torpedoed in Mediterranean.

So Far as Reported There Were No Americans on Board.

London, Jan. 3.—The British steamship Glengyle has been sunk. There are about 160 survivors. The Glengyle had on board about 120 persons, passengers and crew. All, with the exception of three Europeans and seven Chinese were landed. So far as is known no Americans were on board.

The Glengyle, which was homeward bound from Shanghai, was sunk in the Mediterranean on Sunday. This was her second voyage.

The Glengyle sailed from Shanghai for London on Nov. 25. She was last reported at Singapore on Dec. 6. Her route would take her through the Suez canal and the Mediterranean and it may be assumed she was sunk in the Mediterranean, as were the Persia, Ville de la Ciotat, Yesuka Maru and several other steamships.

The Glengyle was one of the largest steamships which have been sunk since the activity of submarines in the Mediterranean became pronounced. Her gross tonnage was 9,395. She was owned by the Glen line of Glasgow, and was the largest steamship of that line.

The Glengyle had been in service only a comparatively short time, having been built at Newcastle in 1914. She was 500 feet long, 62 feet beam and 34 feet deep. Her master was Capt. Webster.

FORD PEACE PARTY MAY GO THROUGH GERMANY LOCKED IN THEIR CARS

Permission Granted Delegates Through German Consulate.

Conditions Under Which Americans Will Travel to Be Very Strict.

Copenhagen, Jan. 3, via London.—The German government has granted the Ford peace expedition permission to travel to The Hague through Germany by special train. The party will leave Copenhagen next Friday.

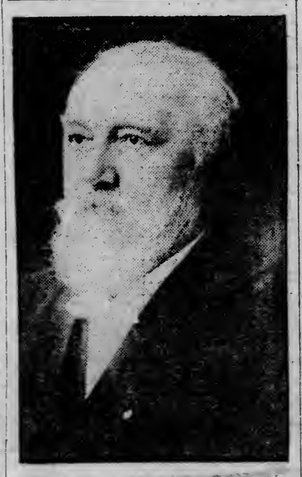

The final arrangements for the trip were made through the German consulate at Copenhagen, who, after consultation with Berlin, announced that this government was willing for the mission to proceed through German territory. This privilege was granted despite the refusal of American state department to extend the passports of the members of the party to cover a belligerent country.

Must Not Touch German Soil.

The conditions under which the Americans will travel are strict. Their train will be sealed, every one being locked within. No one will be permitted to touch German soil during the journey. The members of the mission will not be permitted to carry written, printed or typewritten papers. The concealment of any paper, even of an innocent character, will result in complications for the entire party. Other things that the party must abandon before reaching German territory are cameras, postcards, opera glasses and gold coin. Most of the baggage of the expedition will be shipped

RETIRES AFTER FOUR YEARS SERVICE AS REFORM MAYOR

RUDOLPH BLANKENBURG, Retiring Mayor of Philadelphia.

COLD SNAP PREVENTS FLOOD ON THE OHIO

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 3.—While the Ohio river had reached 20.5 feet in the channel here this morning and was rising slowly the local office of the weather bureau said the cold snap had intervened to prevent a flood. Some people were driven from their homes in lower Allegheny and a number of mills were flooded. The gasoline packet Grantsville, running between Pittsburgh and Monongahela river points, broke away from her moorings early today and burned in midstream with a loss of $7,500. There were no casualties.

RUSSIAN ARMY GAINING GROUND IN BATTLE WITH AUSTRIANS IN SOUTH

Advance of Muscovites Extends Some Distance Beyond the Stripa.

Result of Operations Will Have Important Effect on Balkans.

Central Powers Are Said to Be Planning Attack on Saloniki.

London, Jan. 3.—The latest dispatches from the southern extremity of the Russian front indicate that heavy fighting is continuing with the Russian army of Gen. Ivanoff gaining ground. One correspondent reports that these operations began with an offensive movement on the part of the Austrians, designed to straighten their line, and that after repulsing this attack, the Russians assumed the initiative. It is evident the Russian advance has extended a considerable distance beyond the Stripa river.

In other dispatches it is asserted that two great offensive actions clashed, the Russians having advanced as a threat against the Teutons in their Balkan operations, while the Austrians and Germans felt the necessity of improving their positions against the attack expected from Gen. Ivanoff early in the spring. Whatever may be the facts, there is no doubt the result of these operations will have an important effect on the Balkan campaign, especially in their influence on the future plans of Roumania.

Planning Attack.

It is reported with increasing frequency that the Central powers are planning an attack on Saloniki, but they are said to be experiencing difficulties with Bulgaria which, according to these reports, does not wish to participate in such a campaign unless it promises something more than expulsion of the allies from Saloniki.

In Athens anxious thought is being given to the seizure of the consuls representing Germany and her allies at

APPROACHING CRISIS DEMANDS ATTENTION OF CHIEF EXECUTIVE

Destruction of Two British Liners Puts Serious Aspect on Relations With Teutonic Powers.

Situation Parallels Crisis Caused By Sinking of Arabic Following That of the Lusitania

Washington, Jan. 3.—President Wilson will return to the capital tomorrow to take charge of the new crisis in foreign relations caused by the submarine campaign in the Mediterranean with loss of American lives.

After conferences over the telephone between the president and Secretary Tumulty and Secretary Lansing, it was announced at the White House and also at Hot Springs, Va., that the president would start back to Washington tonight, arriving tomorrow.

It was stated authoritatively that the destruction of the British liner Persia with loss of American life and the destruction of the British ship Glengyle had put such a grave aspect on the relations of the United States with the Teutonic powers that the president considered it necessary to return to the White House at once for conferences with Secretary Lansing and the other members of the cabinet to shape the course of the government.

ATTACK MADE BY GERMANS

Artillery and Bomb Fighting Proceeding Steadily at Dardanelles.

Berlin, Jan. 3, by wireless to Sayville.—German troops made an attack on a wide front north of the road between La Bassee and Bethune yesterday after conducting mining operations on a large scale. The war office announced today that the occupants of one trench were buried by an explosion or shot down and that in some other positions the allied troops fled.

Turks Active.

Constantinople, Jan. 2, via Amsterdam and London, Jan. 3.—The following statement was issued at the war ministry here today:

"Dardanelles front: Near Seddul-Bahr artillery and bomb fighting is proceeding actively. A cruiser and a monitor which participated in the engagement were obliged to retreat. An enemy monitor unsuccessfully shelled our batteries for an hour.

"A Turkish hydroaeroplane dropped bombs on the enemy's camp near Seddul-Bahr. Our batteries on the Dardanelles unsuccessfully shelled the enemy's work at Seddul-Bahr, destroying a number of storehouses.

"Persian front: In an attack on the Russians north of Hamadan, two Russian guns were captured. In another engagement 180 Russians were wounded.

"This engagement occurred near Savlo, the attack on the Russians being made by native volunteers. The Russians lost two machine guns and one automobile."

Parallels Arabic Situation.

The situation as it exists today was described in official quarters as paralleling the crisis which was caused by the sinking of the Arabic close on Germany's assurance in response to the representations of the United States on the destruction of the Lusitania.

While American officials are keeping their minds open until they have all the facts in the Persia case officially and know whether Americans were endangered in the sinking of the Glengyle the gravity of the situation is not minimized and the declaration of Baron Zweidinck, the Austrian charge, that he was confident the final explanation would be satisfactory has not lessened the tension.

Persia Carried Gun.

One new fact developed today in the Persia case. The American consul at Alexandria reported that the ship carried one 4.7 inch gun but did not state where the gun was mounted. This may become a factor in the case. The Hague convention, however, provides that a merchant ship may carry a gun mounted on the stern for purposes of defense, without being considered an armed ship.

The official view here is that the question of whether a gun was mounted on the Persia will depend entirely on where it was placed. If mounted forward, officials realize the Austrian

FOUR YEARS OF REFORM ENDS IN PHILADELPHIA

Mayor Blankenburg Retires From Office and Is Succeeded By T. B. Smith.

Philadelphia, Jan. 3.—Four years of reform administration in Philadelphia came to an end today with the retirement as mayor of Rudolph Blankenburg and the inauguration of Thomas B. Smith, thus giving the regular Republicans control again of all municipal officers. Mr. Blankenburg, the only mayor the reformers have succeeded in putting into office in many years, will take a long vacation in California.

The new head of the department of public safety in charge of the firemen and police is William H. Wilson, a lawyer. George E. Datesman, an engineer, heads the department of public works and Dr. Wilmer Krusen has been named director of the department of health and charities.

BODY OF LATE GOVERNOR W. S. HAMMOND IS TAKEN TO ST. JAMES FOR BURIAL

Six Hundred Prominent Minnesotans Accompany Remains on Train.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body of the late Governor Winfield Scott Hammond of Minnesota, who died suddenly at Clinton, La., last Thursday, was taken from the statehouse here to St. James, Minn., the late governor's home, for burial today. The trip from St. Paul up Minnesota valley to St. James was made by special train, which carried a delegation of about 600 prominent Minnesotans, members of the legislature, civic and political organizations and old friends of the governor.

The Rev. C. A. Swearingen, pastor of the House of Hope Presbyterian church of St. Paul, delivered a funeral oration at Governor Hammond's bier in the rotunda of the statehouse before the departure for St. James. The funeral procession, with military escort, then proceeded to the union depot. Despite zero weather, hundreds of men, including several former governors and other prominent St. Paul and Minneapolis citizens, marched some twenty squares from the statehouse to the waiting special train.

Minnesota in Mourning.

Minnesota is in mourning today over the death of Governor Winfield Scott Hammond, whose funeral will be held at St. James, Minn., this afternoon. Flags are at half mast, public schools here are closed, courts in the Twin Cities adjourned for the day and in several towns brief services were held as a mark of respect to

AMERICAN IN CHARGE OF TEUTON INTERESTS

Saloniki, Jan. 1, via Paris, Jan. 3.—At the request of Gen. Sarrail, commander of the French forces here; John E. Kehl, American consul at Saloniki, has taken charge of the Turkish and German interests. The consulates will be delivered to him tomorrow.

The German, Austro-Hungarian, Turkish and Bulgarian consuls at Saloniki were arrested last Thursday by order of Gen. Sarrail as a reply to a bombardment by Teutonic aeroplanes. A dispatch Saturday said that the American consul had taken over the Austro-Hungarian interests.

People Excited.

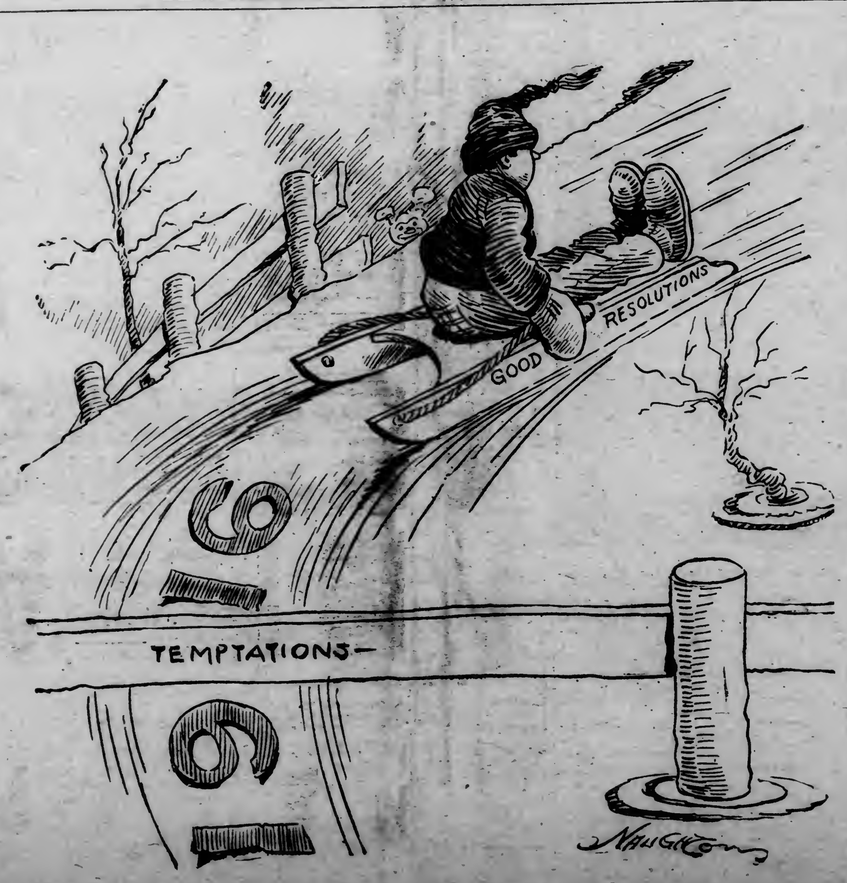

Amsterdam, Jan. 3, via London.—A message from Sofia, Bulgaria, states that public opinion has been excited by the arrest of the German, Austro-Hungarian, Turkish and Bulgarian consuls at Saloniki by Gen. Sarrail, the French commander. The Bulgarian cabinet is said to have decided as a reprisal to arrest all officials remaining in the legation of Great Britain, France and Serbia and hold them until the Bulgarian consul and his staff have been released.

A dispatch from Berlin on Sunday said that the Bulgarian government had arrested the French vice consul at Sofia as a measure of retaliation.

Condition of Dodge Unchanged.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Jan. 3.—The condition of Gen. Grenville M. Dodge was apparently unchanged early today. He has taken no nourishment in eight days and has been unconscious most of the time.

BEWARE OF "LOW BRIDGE" OBSTACLES.

SUMMARY OF THE WAR NEWS

The British steamer Glengyle of 9,395 tons, has been sunk, presumably by a submarine in the Mediterranean. Loss of life is indicated, a London dispatch stating that there were about 100 survivors.

There is still uncertainty regarding the number of lives lost in the sinking of the liner Persia. It seems probable however, according to the latest dispatches, that the 158 persons landed at Alexandria, including fifty-nine passengers, comprise the total of saved, and that Robert N. McNeely, American consul at Aden, was among the drowned. It is feared the death list will largely exceed 200. Washington is reserving judgment regarding the sinking of the ship until the facts clearly develop.

The German war office announces that in the French bombardment of Lutterbach in Alsace on Jan. 1 one girl was killed and one woman and three children wounded.

Germans recently removed from American ships on the high seas by the French cruiser Descartes have been ordered released by the French government in response to representations made by the United States.

Sinking of the Japanese freighter Kankoku Maru of 2,019 tons by a German submarine in the Mediterranean on Dec. 29 was announced in Tokio today. There was no loss of life.

Japan has decided to send a squadron to Suez canal waters, presumably for the protection of Japanese vessels, a Tokio newspaper announces.

GRAIN HANDLINGS FOR 1915 IN RECORD VOLUME

Receipts for Twelve Months, of All Grains, 127,000,000 Bushels.

Board Members Had Most Prosperous Year in Duluth's History.

Handlings of grain were in record volume at Duluth during the calendar year 1915, and generally speaking members of the local board of trade had the most prosperous business year in their experience.

Receipts of all domestic grains at this point during the year aggregated 122,459,501 bu, as compared with 90,751,289 bu in 1914. In addition 4,792,119 bu of bonded grain came to hand.

Receipts of domestic wheat showed an increase of 30,757,000 bu over 1915, amounting to 91,098,170 bu as compared with 60,341,506 bu. The growing favor of durum in trade circles was attested in receipts last year of 29,049,000 bu as against only 15,838,000 bu in 1914. It is estimated that a large tonnage of durum is still held by farmers in the Northwest and on the score of the prospective Italian and Greek demand, it is predicted that it will command a substantial premium over spring wheat in the near future.

Grain shipments from the elevators here last year were reported at 120,773,000 bu as against 87,336,908 bu in 1914. Domestic wheat shipments aggregated 87,939,871 bu as compared with only 58,226,328 bu in 1914.

PREDICT NEW STEEL RECORD

Remarkable Developments of 1915 Due for Eclipse, Experts Say.

Domestic Demand Constitutes 80 Per Cent of Manufacturing.

The year just closed is regarded as having been one of the most remarkable in the history of the iron and steel industry, and the coming twelve months will also establish a new epoch in the trade, so experts predict.

Early in 1915, steel manufacturers predicted that not more than 65 or 70 per cent of the steel capacity of the country would be employed at the outside, and pessimism was the rule at all the leading industrial points. Later, almost before they were aware of the astounding change in conditions, steel makers were deluged with orders and all the mills and furnaces gradually went into operation with order books so congested as to make it impossible for them to take on much more new business.

Record Steel Earnings.

Earnings and productions of the companies have been setting new high figures during the last few months, and the steel companies are said to be in a better financial and physical condition than in years. Steel makers are reported to be turning down orders every day for the reason that it has become a mechanical impossibility for them to take care of all the trade offering. A leading Eastern manufacturer is quoted as saying that the mills could sell 1,000,000 tons of shell steel and semi-finished steel to Europe if they had the capacity. While steel prices are higher than they have been in years, it is the general belief that the top has not yet been reached.

Gratification is expressed over the enormous gain in domestic business during the last few weeks. It is now estimated that 80 per cent of the steel now being produced is for home consumption.

Leading producers estimate that orders for war materials will show an increase rather than a falling off this year. It is stated, for example, that France has ordered from the Midvale Steel company 384,000 shells, whereas heretofore only rounds and billets had been bought here by that government. Barb wire for France is again in demand on a large scale, over 30,000 tons having been bought last week.

Rail Mills Sold Up.

Rail mills of the United States Steel corporation are reported to be sold up till next October. Several large orders from some of the leading railroads are said to have been booked during the last ten days.

The prosperity prevailing in steel trade circles is regarded as having been illustrated in the fact that it is estimated the Bethlehem Steel company will show a surplus of $100 a share for last year, after writing off $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 for depreciation and allowing for its fire losses and interest and preferred dividend charges. Net earnings of Bethlehem Steel for the current year are estimated all the way up to $500 a share for its common stock.

The following advances in prices were announced during the past week: Pig iron, No. 2 furnace, Chicago, $18 to $18.50 per ton; bessemer, Pittsburgh, $19.95 to $20.45 per ton; forging billets, $52 to $55 per ton; tin plate, per box, $3.50 to $3.60, Pittsburgh.

Commenting upon the general situation in the industry, the Iron Trade Review says:

"Holiday festivities brought little decrease in buying of pig iron and finished materials and the volume of business is extraordinary for this season of the year. Foundries continue to place orders for tonnages of pig iron to supplement their needs and prices are firmer and, in the leading centers, higher. In Eastern territory, there is considerable buying of pig iron for delivery during the last half of next year.

"In finished materials, tremendous demand for steel for the manufacture of shrapnel and high explosives is still a feature.

"In machinery lines, buying by foreign countries is not so active, except in the case of Russia, but the demand from domestic sources is very active."

PAY BONUSES TO SALESMEN

Traveling Men Receive Sums Varying From $100 to $1,500.

Many thousands of dollars were paid out to Duluth traveling salesmen during the meetings held by three of the big Duluth wholesale houses recently, when their roadmen were in for the holidays.

The Marshall-Wells company, the Kelley-How-Thomson company and Stone-Ordean-Wells company all paid out bonuses or profit sharing prizes, and as every roadman shared in the distribution of money, the total amount ran into big figures.

In many cases the bonuses ran well over the $1,000 mark. Some men who had been with their companies for some time, were paid more in a single bonus than they received in salary the first year they were with the house.

The Stone-Ordean-Wells men were paid on the profit sharing plan on the amount of business done in their respective territories. The Marshall-Wells company paid big bonuses for the business done by their traveling men, and the Kelley-How-Thomson company also paid out a large amount of money on the largest volume of business ever done by that firm.

The sums received by the traveling salesmen varied from $100 to $1,200 and even $1,500 in one or two cases.

WILL COMPLETE CORPS FORMATION

Aviators and Engineers Will Be Organized at New Armory Meeting.

At a meeting to be held at the new armory tonight an engineer and aviation division for the Duluth naval militia will be formed. Mechanics electricians, machinists and aviators are particularly in demand to complete the roster of fifty men, according to Capt. Guy A. Eaton.

Duluth will have an aviation instructor in the near future who will be paid for full time at the Head of the Lakes. Capt. Eaton said that a prominent Duluthian who made an offer some time ago to stand the cost of such an undertaking is now ready to make good on his offer. Capt. Eaton says that the aviation feature of the work is very important and also very difficult to handle, as only men of special aptitude for this department of work can be accepted. A number of applicants have already put in an appearance.

Tonight's meeting is expected to bring about a complete organization of the division.

County Taxes Larger.

Lisbon, N. D., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ransom county property owners will contribute $10,000 more in taxes this year than last, according to the figures compiled by the county auditor. Most of the increase in taxation will go to the state government, funds for which have previously been inadequate, and which are being increased this year through a general boost of property assessments throughout the state.

"PROBLEMS OF YOUNG MEN"

J. W. Hoffman Begins Series of Sermons at First M. E. Church.

Choice of Life Work Is Theme of First Address.

Last night J. W. Hoffman, pastor of the First M. E. church, began a series of short discussions of "The Problems of Young Men." The first was a treatment of the choice of a vocation.

"Every young man has three things to invest in life: Himself, his skill and his opportunities," said Dr. Hoffman. "Most important is his choice of a life work. Never should he leave this selection of a career to circumstances or to impulse. His decision should be deliberate and intelligent.

"Know yourself is the first advice offered by every expert in vocational guidance. One need not become a conceited fool simply because he studies his own aptitudes, abilities, tastes, and resources. Difficult as a proper appraisement of one's powers may be, it is essential. To discover in the early years of one's life whether we have the active type of mind or the scholarly is to save many a heartache in later years.

"It is most unfortunate for a man with legal abilities to be fettered by the requirements of medicine.

Square Pegs in Round Holes.

"Select that career which will employ the best and biggest resources you possess. It is a pity to find the mechanician in the pulpit and the orator behind the counter. There are third rate business men who might have become physicians, lawyers or farmers of unusual skill. They are not working along the lines of their greatest power. Recognition and real worth come only to those who employ their finest abilities in their particular business in life.

"Determine that you will master the conditions of maximum service to society with the expenditure of minimum energy and strength. To do this one must eternally combine enthusiasm with thoroughness and grace with grit. An uncongenial occupation may satisfy one until middle life after that for such an one, 'Business is slavery, law is dreary drudgery, medicine is a perfect bore, and the ministry is a trivial routine.' Only as one fits his calling or craft does he see in it the biggest thing he can do for the enrichment of human life and for the progress of the race. He converts a defeat into a triumph and a failure into a victory."

NOBLE RESOLUTION CONTAINS SUBLIME

Has Vision, Determination and Courage, Declares Rev. H. A. Ingham.

"Despite the jests that we make of resolutions, there is something about the nobler resolution that is sublime because it has in it vision, determination and unconquered courage," declared Rev. Hardy A. Ingham, pastor of Endion M. E. church, in a sermon yesterday on "The Calendar of Life."

"It seems very fitting," he said, "that Christmas and the beginning of the calendar should come so close together. That the determination to inaugurate a new regime in life should have the help and inspiration that the Son of God can bring into it, is very timely.

"There is little doubt but that the year will bring the spring time and autumn, the sunshine and shadows, the change of the seasons, some days with biting cold and others with warm and refreshing showers. And with about equal regularity it will bring the joys and sorrows of life. One day will be filled with most delightful fellowship, the next with bitter disappointment and bereavement. Why? I do not know. There is one thing we should not forget, that the calendar of life does not record the dawning of a day in which the presence and power of God may not be found to equal every need of life.

"What a pivotal point life is today. What a fulcrum upon which to place the lever of the human will. Today holds all the accumulated forces of life. All ages pour their treasures at our feet. It should be no surprise that the age is demanding so much of us."

Alleged Forger Taken.

Hazen, N. D., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The alleged forgery operations of L. A. Lockwood, which local officials say extend pretty generally over the southwestern section of the state, have been brought to a close by his arrest at Golden Valley by Mercer county officials. Lockwood was accused here of forging a check with Joe Evans' name, realizing on the check by cashing it with a local merchant.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—Advertisement.

HOME MORE THAN HOUSE

Rev. G. Brewer Preaches on "Home Makers and Home Breakers."

Impossible to Sow Wild Oats and Reap Domestic Happiness.

Popular Sunday evening evangelistic services began at the First Presbyterian church last night. The opening subject was "Home Makers and Home Breakers." Rev. George Brewer spoke of the home as the unit of civilization, an institution more powerful than all other institutions combined.

"A home is more than an inhabited dwelling place," he said. "A dwelling place is simply a structure of wood, brick or stone, furnished and inhabited by human beings; a home is the abiding place of mutual life, of mutual trust and hope, in the things of time and eternity. A true home is the best symbol the Great Teacher ever found of the Heavenly Father's house. According to Christ's teaching, the home is the earthly impersonation of heaven itself. There are many people living in cheap houses into which are crowded all the beautiful things of a genuine home—the mutual life, love, trust and hope. But there are also many people living in beautifully furnished palaces, who are homeless because they are Godless, loveless, Christless and without character. It takes more than a house, more than money, more than pleasure. It takes men and women, God-fearing, Christ-made men and women of character to establish a home."

With vivid word pictures of modern "home-breakers" the speaker revealed the glory of clean, right-living in the every-day home life. He exalted the marriage relation and glorified the home by his striking contrasts with domestic unfaithfulness and double living. He proved to all the men present that they cannot "sow wild oats" and expect to reap home, and heart happiness.

Two outstanding pictures will not soon be forgotten, one of a young man married a few months ago, who by reason of his unclean life as a boy had completely wrecked his home long before it was established. Another was of a father with a family of little children growing up about him, who by his dissolute life is fast wrecking his home, while sorrowing friends stand by powerless to stop him in his rush to destruction.

The story of the prodigal had been read as the lesson of the evening, and the interpretation of that parable was the basis of the plea to accept Christ as a personal savior, as the only one who can wipe out the sins of the home-breaker and restore broken hearts.

DEED BETTER THAN CREED

Good Works More Important Than Dogma, Says Dr. Gebauer.

Courtesy Springs From Soul; Does Not Consist of Smooth Words.

Deeds and not creeds are most important in a person's life according to Dr. George R. Gebauer, pastor of the First Unitarian church, who preached yesterday morning on "The 'Therefore' of Religion." In part he said:

"However high Paul may lift us by his speculative preachments, his ecstasies of religious emotion, above the earth, he always brings us down again to the solid ground of common sense. The practical Jew believed in a worship of God, in a faith which would make a man faithful to the common duties of life. He demanded of himself and others the fruits of a moral life. After exalting God, he turns to his hearers and says, 'I beseech you therefore, brethren, that you give your bodies a living sacrifice.' Here we have a deep and fruitful thought. Has not Christianity at all times just failed in this that it did not translate worship into morality, faith into works? Has it not from the earliest centurics exalted certain beliefs, made them the shibboleth of salvation and forgotten the 'therefore' of the religious life? Is it not still the reproach of our churches, that the repentent sinner believes, that he is saved because he has accepted as true the story of Christ's sacrifice? What of the 'therefore' which Paul teaches? asks the world without. We have no objection to what you may believe as to your salvation, but what of your life? What is the good use in having a good creed, having a patented theology and 'fireproof' dogmas, if your daily life smells of sulphur and brimstone. We can not believe that you have found the God of truth and love as long as you are not truthful and loving.

Deeds Most Important.

"What a simple argument and how irrefutable. And how after all not our belief, our creed, but our life becomes either a stepping stone or a stumbling block to others. And sad indeed where a man's life contradicts his creed. No greater hindrance to social progress than the fellow who is so cocksure of heaven and is such a miserable scamp, who talks about the love of God and has himself no affection for his fellows, who prates about his salvation and never lends a helping hand to a brother. 'Thou knowest not what argument, thy life to thy neighbor's creed has lent'. What makes skeptics in religion, despisers of churches is to a large decree the hypocrisy of the church members, who claim to be God's elect, to understand the mind of God and to walk with Christ, and yet have not the spirit of truth and love in them. And so too are stumbling-blocks and stones of offense the men and women, who so glibly palaver about the ideals of life and are without fruit. They will 'hitch their wagon to a star,' but will not ride in it. Indeed in our day there is much more of real moral hypocrisy than any other. Whatever we may believe, whatever faith we may have, whatever ideals and principles we may exalt, they are of little account, if they do not lead us into the 'therefore' of action, conduct, life. If we believe in the reality of love, little matter, if we call that reality Gor or no, we must prove our faith by what we are, by what we do. And when we are truly earnest with what we believe, then we shall become wellsprings of living water, that means we shall express spontaneously the good that is in us. The truly good man never thinks about how he shall act under given conditions. Nothing indeed shows so much how little the ideal is ingrained in us, as when we study our departs, as when we consciously and deliberately try to act good and be good. The man, who is filled with good intentions, who has presented his body a living sacrifice, simply is himself and his acts take care of themselves.

True Courtesy.

"What is true courtesy? Is it something you may learn by mere imitation? Is it something that you can buy from your dancing master? Has it anything to do with polite phrases and scrapings and sweet twaddle? No, I rather believe that these outward signs of politeness are often designed to cover and hide inward discourtesy. The most ungentlemanly fellow is often the man, who uses the softest and gentlest words. True politeness comes spontaneously out of the soul, which deals gently with the faults of others, which is considerate of the wellbeing and happiness of others. And sometimes the most courteous may use uncouth, awkward words and phrases.

"Give yourself religiously to a living ideal of life, let it live in you, worship it in spirit and in truth, and you have the faith that will help you and save you. And if you have no living love and truth in you, no church creed no matter how mysterious, is going to bring you to the God of love and truth."

PRAYER SECRET OF HAPPY LIFE

Communion With God Is Key to Success, Says Pastor White.

"The secret of a happy, clean, active, Christian life lies in the fact that he who daily feeds upon the Word of God, will more and more manifest his complete and continual, yet mutual, dependence on God in all things through prayer. Though prime minister of Medo-Persia, whose work was so thoroughly scrutinized by ambitious political schemers as to afterward admit that 'never was there any error or fault found in him' concerning the Kingdom, Daniel, the prophet of God, found time to kneel upon his knees three times a day in direct supplication to the living God," declared Pastor Stemple White, Seventh Day Adventist, last evening at the I. O. O. F. temple, corner of West Fourth street, and Missabe avenue, where he spoke on "The All-powerful Key."

He said in part: "Prayer is the all-powerful key in the hand of faith which will unlock to any confiding, trusting, obedient child of God, the infinite storehouse of Jehovah, and since there can not fill one word of all His good promise,' the promissory notes of our Heavenly Father can be cashed in Jesus' name in Heaven's bank for grace and help in every time of real need. While our Heavenly Father is more willing to give us good gifts, than an earthly parent deals with his own children, yet let us also remember that 'he that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer shall be abomination.'

"The Bible abounds in wonderful experiences of victory and blessing in answer to prayer of those who trustingly and humbly knelt before God, Jesus himself, as our Savior and example, manifested an utter dependence on the Father—often departing into a quiet place alone to pray—and frequently spending whole nights in earnest communion with God. While Pharisees and Herodians were secretly pulling political wires and plotting for His life, the lowly Nazarene on bended knees, was drawing power from the Heavenly sanctuary for His work of lowly service to others. 'No prayer, no power; little prayer, little power; and much prayer, much power, is a law of the higher life.'"

SEEKING REASONS FOR HALL'S ACTS

Theories Afloat Respecting North Dakota Triple Murder and Suicide.

Williston, N. D., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two possible motives for the murder of Mrs. A. M. Hart and her two sons at Ray, N. D., by Guy Hall, alias Bruce Parkinson, have been unearthed by Williams county officials and they may explain the triple murder and Hall's suicide.

One of these was Mrs. Hart's denial of Hall's continued association with Mrs. Hart's eldest daughter, which was forbidden by the mother because of Halls addiction to liquor; another is that Hall had, several days previous to the murder, hauled a load of flax to market, selling it and pocketing the proceeds.

The coroner's investigation into the triple murder and suicide leads him to believe that Hall first killed the boys and then the mother. That the boys were slain while making inquiry with reference to the proceeds for the load of flax is the generally accepted theory.

Further Crime Prevented.

Hall's threat against the life of Grace McFarland, a niece of Mrs. Hart, which was uttered at Mrs. McFarland's home in Ray, immediately preceded his suicide, the arrival of George McFarland preventing his fulfillment of the threat.

Officials have inquired, so far without results, of officials in Washington, Hall maintaining that he was an escaped inmate of the Washington state reformatory. No word has come from relatives, inquiry in Seattle, where Hall said he lived, being in vain.

The murderer's body was buried in Ray this morning.

The remains of Mrs. Hart and two sons will be buried tomorrow, as the funerals were delayed because of the absence of the husband and father, who was at the deathbed of his father in Iowa when the murders occurred.

GRAIN COMING FROM CANADA

Railroad Congestion in Dominion Is Described as Appalling.

Elevators at Canadian Head of Lakes Are Rapidly Filling.

Shipments of Canadian grain to Duluth are predicted in the near future.

According to advices from Winnipeg, the elevators at the Canadian Head of the Lakes are rapidly filling, and dealers on the Winnipeg board of trade are already figuring upon routing grain this way. It is fully expected that the volume will reach the proportions of 1912, and sales of large tonnages of bonded wheat to American millers are regarded as probable.

The railroad congestion in the Canadian West is described as appalling. Fifty cars of grain were taken out of Fort William for St. John, N. B., last Thursday, being the first that had been loaded for that port in more than two weeks.

More than 9,800 loaded cars are reported to be on the Canadian Pacific railway's tracks in the West. There were 1,300 loaded grain cars in its yards at Fort William last Thursday, and it had then 1,282 cars of freight of all kinds in its Montreal yards awaiting shipment to West St. John. The Canadian Pacific is now consequently refusing to start shipments east from Fort William until there is some chance of getting them unloaded. A little Canadian flour is going through to New York, but that is a special concession to the millers.

Denials have come from Winnipeg of the report that the Government railroad has made a cheap rate on grain to the East. The Canadian government is said to have no means of relieving the congestion, as every port on the Eastern seaboard is blocked.

HOLIDAY TRAFFIC HEAVY.

Great Northern Had Best Business in Several Years.

Holiday traffic over the Great Northern was the heaviest in several years, according to A. K. Noble, general passenger agent of the road, who was the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Ober, 4305 Cook street. Mr. Noble left for St. Paul early this afternoon.

The average business on the road has been excellent throughout the fall, he said, especially in the farming regions of Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana. Crops were good, and, as a result, trade conditions developed steadily.

EMPLOYES GET CHANCE AT STOCK

U. S. Steel Offers Common But No Preferred—None in 1914.

The United States Steel corporation has fixed $85 a share as the price at which it will offer 35,000 shares of common stock to employes under the profit-sharing plan of 1916. No preferred stock will be offered.

The situation a year ago was so uncertain that neither common nor preferred stock was offered to employes for subscription in 1915.

For the year 1914, preferred stock to the amount of 42,926 shares was sold to employes on a basis of $105 a share, and 47,680 shares of common stock at $67 a share.

In 1913 employes took 34,551 shares of preferred at $109 a share and 25,793 shares of common at $66; in 1912, 30,619 shares of preferred at $110 and 30,735 common at $65; in 1911, 19,229 shares of preferred at $114 and 29,119 shares of common at $70.

In 1910 no common stock was offered, but employes bought 24,672 shares of preferred at $124 a share. In 1909 common stock to the amount of 15,318 was sold to employes at $50 a share and 18,000 preferred at $110.

TWENTY INJURED AS APARTMENTS BURN

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 3.—Twenty persons were injured, six seriously, two of whom will die, in a fire that destroyed the Bellevue apartments here early last night. Mrs. Elizabeth Gestrum and two children of Mrs. Nellie Buchard are missing and are believed to have been burned to death. Some of the victims were hurt in heroic attempts to save others, while many leaped from windows in the upper stories of the building and were more or less seriously injured.

Wilson Grady and his wife, each 30 years old, were caught in their apartments on the fourth floor and were so badly burned that physicians hold out but slight hope for their recovery. They had been married less than a year.

The apartment house was an L-shaped, five-story brick building. It contained twenty-eight apartments and at the time of the fire, about 200 persons were in the building. The blaze started in a wastepaper bin in the basement.

THIEVES BREAK WINDOW AND STEAL JEWELRY

Eight watches, valued at more than $200, were stolen from the Erd Jewelry store, 29 East Superior street, early yesterday morning by burglars who smashed the display window with a brick or rock.

Patrolman J. Woods, making the rounds a few minutes later, noticed the window and the broken glass, and called headquarters. Officers there notified E. W. Boerner, store manager.

Mr. Boerner, although he had not checked over the display, said that probably seven or eight timepieces were gone. He mentioned one particularly valuable one, which he valued at $95.

The burglars, standing in the entry way to the store, broke the window near the door, and evidently were not bothered, as the storm of Saturday still was raging at that time.

Police are working on the case.

MILLIONAIRE'S LUNCH

John D. Rockefeller's Limit of Thirty Cents Rather Higher Than Average in Duluth.

It was John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who declared that 30 cents was quite enough to pay for a luncheon. Maybe young Mr. Rockefeller had something to do with the prevailing tendency of the business man to eat sparingly and most simply at the noon day meal, for if the chefs of Duluth hotels and clubs are correct, the heavy and sometimes soggy meal of old has given away to the light and charmingly simple repast of a cereal, milk, maybe soup and a sandwich, and the 30-cent limit is rather higher than the average in Duluth.

One chef sized the situation up this way:

"Business men, or some of them," said he, "find they can't work with clear heads after a heavy meal. When this discovery was made, the heavy luncheon was doomed. Some men are naturally gourmands and eat to repletion, but the average business man today eats sparingly and chooses his menu with attention to nutritious and health-giving food.

Millionaire's Lunch.

For instance, it is not at all strange to see a man possessed of considerable wealth, lunching at the Kitchi Gammi club on shredded wheat and a glass of milk, or on bread and milk. One might think he had wandered into a health food sanatorium rather than an exclusive club.

"Business men are paying more attention to their health than ever before," said the chef of a Duluth hotel. "We have noticed the difference in the meals, especially the luncheon. I believe that most men realize they can't eat a heavy meal at noon and work at high tension for several hours afterwards. We have noticed the difference."

The coming of the cafeteria also brought in the light lunch. Most of the go-as-you-please restaurants specialized in dairy lunches and this helped along the growing habit of taking only a light lunch, merely enough to stay the hunger.

Sitting around the light lunch restaurants you will see prosperous business men discussing politics, business or the attempted drive of the Russians, over a cereal or a sandwich.

SECOND NEW PATROLMAN

Martin J. Stephen Joins the Force for Second Time.

Examination Will Be Held Before More Are Appointed.

The second of four new police patrolmen to be appointed as a part of Safety Commissioner Silberstein's 1916 schedule went on duty Jan. 1 at 6 p. m.

He is Martin J. Stephen, Jr., 905 East Seventh street, formerly a fireman on the Union Towing company's tug Harvey D. Goulder. This is the second time Stephen has been a member of the force.

On April 15, 1911, he was appointed patrolman under Former Chief Chauncey H. Troyer and on Sept. 22, 1912, he was discharged for leaving the city during the street car strike without permission of his superior officers.

It was reported at the time that Stephen asked for a few days' leave of absence, so that he could attend to pressing business affairs in connection with some land which he owned. When this was refused he is said to have left without the consent of the chief.

His name was high on the civil service list. Aside from the one instance, Stephen gave good service as an officer, according to police officials.

Another examination for prospective "cops" will be held before any more appointments are made. There is but one eligible man left on the waiting list kept by Ruben Johnson, secretary of the civil service commission, and the chief wants at least three names from which to choose the other two men.

Patrolman Stephen has not been given a station as yet, as he has been doing relief work at headquarters so far. The first patrolman added to the force for this year was Stanislaus Nesgoda, also working from headquarters.

TEMPERATURE DROPS WHEN STORM CEASES

The weather man, on Saturday, promised zero weather. It arrived, but not in conjunction with the storm. During that period, the temperature was comparatively mild, for the lowest it got was on Sunday morning, at the tail-end of the storm, when the mercury stood 13 degrees above zero. The lowest temperature since the drop was promised, was this morning, when it reached 4 degrees below zero.

During the storm, ten inches of snow fell and the wind reached a velocity of forty miles per hour. The lack of cold weather, however, saved much distress that otherwise would have been occasioned.

AUTO DEALERS TO ORGANIZE

Association Will Be Formed at St. Louis Hotel Meeting.

Shows, Sports and Credits Will Engage Attention of Organization.

All the automobile dealers of this city will meet at the St. Louis hotel this evening to organize the Duluth Auto Dealers' association.

This new body, according to the dealers behind the movement, will stage all future automobile shows and make a special effort to boost winter and summer motor sports.

The business and organization meeting will follow a dinner at 7 o'clock, it was announced this morning. It is expected that all of the twenty-four dealers in the city will be present.

"In addition to staging auto shows and boosting sports," said a prominent dealer this morning, "the organization will unite the dealers in guarding the credits of the members and make a special campaign in behalf of safety first regulations, motor legislation and against the theft of automobiles.

"Whether or not we will stage an automobile show this year will also be decided on at the meeting this evening. It is rather late to begin plans at this time, as the factories will be unable to ship us exhibits or special features, which have been scheduled for a string of the shows from now on until April. Duluth will not be able to get any of these exhibits and it would be wiser to wait until next year.

"As soon as the organization is completed, we will make plans for a winter carnival on ice, including automobile and motorcycle races on a large course to be laid out in the bay."

ARRANGING FOR LAYMEN MOVEMENT

Ministerial Association in Session; Conference Tuesday Evening.

A meeting of the Duluth Ministerial association was held at the Y. M. C. A. this morning, at which plans were talked over for the "laymen's missionary movement," which will be pursued in Duluth Jan. 19 to 23. It was decided that each of the clergymen present would send delegates to a meeting and dinner to be held tomorrow evening at 6:15 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A., to discuss final plans. A revised program received will be discussed, but as it is understood that it will be added to considerably, it will not be announced at this time.

Tomorrow evening, Rev. F. J. Peterson of Superior will address the meeting, and other talks will be made.

Next Sunday, in connection with preparations for the laymen's movement, a committee of those active in the affair here, will go to Virginia and Hibbing, and it is likely that another delegation will go to Two Harbors. At Virginia a union meeting of churches in Eveleth, Mountain Iron and Virginia will be held at the Presbyterian church, and another union meeting of nearby churches will be held at Hibbing. Addresses will be made at these two by W. L. Smithies, Frank Crassweller and E. D. Ranck.

ASKED TO SEND DELEGATE.

Western Electrical Workers Will Meet Late in January.

In a communication received by Mayor Prince this morning, the city of Duluth is invited to send an official representative to the eleventh annual convention of the Western Association of Electrical Workers to be held at Chicago, Jan. 25-27.

William S. Boyd, secretary of the association, states in the letter that cities throughout the West will send delegates. Mayor Thompson of Chicago will be one of the principal speakers.

The communication will be read at the regular council meeting this afternoon.

CITY DEATH RATE LOWER

Health Department Statistics Fix It at 10.82 Per Thousand for 1915.

Births for Year More Than Double Number of Deaths.

According to the reports prepared this morning by Ruben Johnson, secretary of the department, for Health Director Fahey, the city's death rate for 1915 is 1 per 1,000 lower than it was the previous year.

In 1914 there were 1,049 deaths in Duluth, with a population of 88,663, making a death rate of 11.83 per 1,000, while last year there were 937 deaths in an estimated population of 91,213. This makes the death rate 10.82 per 1,000, or a decrease of practically 1 per 1,000. In 1905 the death rate was 12.69, while five years ago it was 13.04, showing a noticeable decrease in the figures of 1905, 1910 and 1915.

During the last year there were approximately 2,160 children born in Duluth, equaling the figures of 1914. The report is not complete, as more birth reports are expected by the department during the next two or three weeks. The figures to date follow:

MINNEAPOLIS MART HAS NEW RECORD

Grain and Flour Far in Excess of Former Years.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 3.—The year 1915 was by far the greatest ever known in the Minneapolis grain and milling trade, according to figures made public today.

With figures for three days yet to be counted in, it is estimated that Minneapolis received 233,000,000 bushels of grain, thereby breaking every former high record by 42,000,000 bushels.

Flour shipments exceeded 19,000,000 barrels, making a new high record in the milling industry.

Wheat receipts were approximately 140,000,000 bushels, while complete receipts in 1914, the record year, were but 115,389,000 bushels.

Oats receipts at 33,500,000 bushels exceeded last year's total by more than 11,000,000 bushels. The former high record is broken by nearly 7,000,000 bushels.

Barley receipts at 36,500,000 bushels are 8,000,000 bushels greater than last year and 1,000,000 bushels greater than the former high year.

Rye receipts were 6,200,000 bushels and pass last year by 125,000 bushels, setting a new high record.

Millstuffs loaded out by the Minneapolis mills equalled 665,000 tons, exceeding former high record, that of last year, by 15,000 tons.

BRITISH STEAMSHIP ST. OSWALD IS SUNK

London, Jan. 3.—The British steamship St. Oswald has been sunk.

The St. Oswald was in the service of the British government and presumably was sunk in the Mediterranean. Her movements had not been reported since Oct. 13.

The St. Oswald was 361 feet long of 3,810 tons gross. She was built in 1905 and owned by the British foreign steamship company of Liverpool.

Plan to Mobilize Militia.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—A plan to mobilize the entire militia strength of Illinois, Iowa, India and Wisconsin, 25,000 men, comprising one full division, has taken Frank S. Dickson, adjutant general of the Illinois National Guard to Washington for a conference with United States military officials, it was announced here today.

LAST TRIBUTE TO HAMMOND

Nearly All Business Stopped for Five Minutes at Funeral Hour.

Special Exercises Held in Duluth Schools During This Period.

All commercial and industrial activities in Duluth was stopped, transportation came to a standstill, and special memorial services were held in the schools for a period of five minutes after 2 o'clock this afternoon as a tribute to the late Governor Winfield Scott Hammond. At The Duluth Herald office all activity was suspended during that period and at the New Grand theater the show was stopped and a funeral march played. Both the Western Union and North American telegraph offices were closed.

The Duluth board of trade closed at noon instead of at 1:15 as a mark of honor to his memory.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon the funeral of the late chief executive took place at his former home in St. James, where the body was laid in its final resting place.

Yesterday morning Mayor Prince issued a proclamation, urging that all commercial activities cease for five minutes after 2 o'clock. Prominent business men throughout the city took up the plan immediately and not only stores and factories ceased operations for five minutes, but street cars stopped and activity in the railroad yards came to a halt during this period.

Supt. of Schools Denfeld said yesterday that immediately after the children were assembled in the afternoon, a short period would be given over to discussion on the life of the late governor, followed by a special memorial service at each school house in the city, and this program was carried out.

All work in the city hall, courthouse, Federal building and other public institutions came to a halt during the five-minute period this afternoon.

Mayor Prince's proclamation follows: "To the People of Duluth:

"At 2 o'clock Monday afternoon the mortal remains of Minnesota's distinguished, greatly esteemed and beloved governor, Winfield Scott Hammond, will be laid at rest. As a tribute of respect to the memory of the distinguished dead, it is suggested that, insofar as circumstances and conditions will permit, for a period of five minutes, immediately after 2 o'clock, commercial and industrial activities cease; that the wheels of transportation be stilled, and that the thought of our people generally and of the pupils in our schools in particular be employed in contemplation of the splendid qualities in mind and in heart possessed by Governor Hammond and of the greatness of the service rendered by him to the state and to the nation.

"W. I. PRINCE,
"Mayor."

the memory of the dead governor.

The body, viewed by more than 25,000 people during the twelve hours it lay in state at the capitol here yesterday, was placed aboard a train departing for St. James at 10:30 a. m. At the conclusion of the funeral services set for 2:30 p. m. the special train with accommodations for 600 people, will return to the Twin Cities. The Masonic lodge will direct the services and burial will be at St. James.

Governor Burnquist, whose illness, it was announced, would not permit him to attend the funeral, issued a proclamation fixing today as a day of mourning throughout the state.

A list of honorary pallbearers who followed the body of Governor Hammond included three former governors, personal friends and men prominent in the Democratic party from all parts of Minnesota. The list is as follows:

GOVERNOR HAMMOND'S LAST LETTER ONE OF HOPE AND CHEER

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 3.—One of the last letters written by the late Governor W. S. Hammond before his last trip to the South was a Christmas letter to Miss Carrie E. Eppley, superintendent of Hopewell hospital, Minneapolis' home for tubercular patients. It breathes a deeply religious spirit and an optimism which was part of the late governor's philosophy.

The letter follows:

My Dear Miss Eppley:

Each has his burdens to bear. The more cheerfully they are carried, the lighter they seem to be. How fortunate it is that we may always hope for a tomorrow brighter and happier than today.

Troubles may disappear. Business may be better. The sick may again be strong. The distressed may have relief. Hope makes one cheerful, and cheerfulness aids us in getting over the rough places in life.

God is good. He has given us the right to hope for better days in this world, and assurance of the happiest days in the world to come. Christmas is the anniversary of the birth of Him who has given the children of the earth their greatest joy and dearest hope, the Apostle of love and sunshine, the foe of hate and gloom.

Let us all rejoice that on this day centuries ago Christ was born. May His loving kindness rest upon the patients of Hopewell hospital and bring them joy on this Christmas day, and assure them of a happy, bright New Year. W. S. HAMMOND.

Miss Eppley had written to several officials, asking each to send a Christmas message to the patients, and this letter was the governor's response.

"It was a beautiful letter," said Miss Eppley yesterday, "and when it was read at our Christmas entertainment, the patients appreciated it so much. I would be very glad if everyone could read it."

RUSSIAN ARMY IS SAID TO BE GAINING GROUND

Saloniki. It is expected that so far as Greece is concerned the incident will be closed with the release of the consuls under safe conduct. While requesting some such action by the Entente powers, Greece also has protested to Germany against the aeroplane attack on Saloniki. Germany and her allies denounce the arrest of the consuls as a violation of international law, while Bulgaria also already has retaliated by arresting the French vice consul at Sofia.

Ireland Included.

England awaits with the greatest interest details regarding the bill for compulsory military service which Premier Asquith will introduce in the house of commons Wednesday. It is announced that Ireland will come within the scope of the bill.

Opposition to the measure, according to some morning newspapers, probably will be divided into two parties, one opposing conscription in any form and the other, while admitting the necessity of some kind of compulsion, opposing enlargement of the army.

FORD PEACE PARTY MAY GO THROUGH GERMANY

back to the United States from Copenhagen.

It is announced that the expedition will disband at The Hague on Jan. 12, most of the members returning home from Rotterdam on that day.

Ford Reaches New York.

New York, Jan. 3.—Henry Ford entertains no doubt of the eventual success of his peace movement. That was the first announcement of the Detroit manufacturer who financed and led the peace expedition which left here Dec. 4, on the steamship Oscar II for Copenhagen, when he arrived in New York yesterday on the steamer Bergensfjord.

Mr. Ford confirmed cable reports that his leaving the party he organized had been hastened by illness, but declared his return had been hastened only a few days, as he had intended when he left, to return within the month.

"The movement is now organized and under way," Mr. Ford said. "People are talking about it and, while some criticize it, when people talk they think and when they think, they think right.

"I am simply financing and carrying out as far as possible the work set under way at the meeting at The Hague the last year of the women's national peace congress. This work ultimately will bring Europe to its senses, and stop the war."

None of his experiences in Europe tended to change Mr. Ford's previously announced attitude toward President Wilson's preparedness plans.

Against Preparedness.

"I am against preparedness, as preparedness means war," declared the pacifist. "No man will arm himself unless he means to attack. Even when he takes a fork in hand, he is preparing to attack an oyster or a beefsteak. It would be better for the administration to find out first if the people want armament. If they do, they will eventually get what Europe is getting now."

Mr. Ford's future plans with respect to the peace expedition were uncertain, he said. While he had several ideas in mind, he deemed it too early to speak of them. He left the party in charge of Gaston Plantiff, he stated, in accordance with his original plans; and, despite all reports to the contrary, when the party left the Oscar II, it was as harmonious as could be desired.

Confers With Bryan.

William J. Bryan conferred for more than an hour here last night with Henry Ford, who returned yesterday morning on the steamship Bergensfjord from his peace pilgrimage to Europe.

Mr. Bryan declined to reveal the nature of the discussion but said he had come here on receipt of the telegraphic request from Mr. Ford.

Mr. Bryan denied that he would sail for Europe Jan. 4, as previously planned, declaring that he has "more important work to do here for the present."

LOSES LIFE WHILE SEEKING FOR PARDON

Hazen, N. D., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Bound for his home near here to beg forgiveness of his brother for the theft two years ago of a horse, Chris Christmann, aged 22 years, was drowned while attempting to cross the Little Missouri river near Elbowoods, north of here.

Young Christmann had not been heard from since his theft of the horse, but during the interval it is known that he had been in Canada and Montana. Letters found in his pockets revealed his desire to return home to plead forgiveness of his brother, and presumably he was bound here on that mission when death overtook him.

GRAVE SITUATION CALLS PRESIDENT BACK TO CAPITAL

government could contend the Persia was armed for destruction of submarines and had instructions to ram or destroy the submersibles. The disposition is not to assign the incident of the gun to a place in consideration of the case until all the facts are known.

Same as German Campaign.

Officials consider that the Austrian submarine campaign in the Mediterranean has brought on just such a crisis as did the German submarine campaign in the declared war zone around the British isles. Coming close on the conciliatory assurances in Austria's Ancona note, the continued submarine activity principally around the entrance to the Suez canal has alarmed and amazed American officials, who have grave apprehension over the developments of the next few days.

Secretary Lansing also said that some action would be taken to formally notify Turkey and Bulgaria of the attitude of the United States toward submarine warfare, so that all the Central power belligerents operating in the Mediterranean might not be uninformed.

Fing Will Determine.

Mr. Lansing was asked today what the attitude of the state department would be if investigation developed that Austrian submarines in the Mediterranean were commanded by German naval officers. The secretary said the department was inclined to let the nationality of the vessel itself determine the responsibility, taking the view that a submarine flying the Austrian flag would be considered as responsible to the Austrian government by whomsoever commanded.

From the inquiries which Ambassador Penfield has been directed to make, the American government hopes to sift whatever evidence there is for the conclusion that the Persia was torpedoed. No submersible was seen, but one officer of the Persia said he saw the wake of a torpedo. It is possible that later Ambassador Gerard at Berlin may be instructed to seek information.

Cuts Short Honeymoon.

Hot Springs, Va., Jan. 3.—President Wilson will cut short his honeymoon and start back to Washington tonight because of the new developments in the international situation caused by the destruction of the British liner Persia. The president will leave here at 8:45 p. m. and expects to arrive in Washington tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock.

Washington, Jan. 3.—After Secretary Tumulty had telephoned to President Wilson at Hot Springs early today it was said at the White House that the president was preparing to return probably tomorrow to take charge of the international situation.

Details concerning the sinking of the British steamship Persia are anxiously awaited today by officials of the United States government.

Tension over the incident following the receipt of advices from Consul Garrels at Alexandria, Egypt, saying that the Persia had been torpedoed without warning and that at least one American citizen, Robert N. McNeely, new consul at Aden, Arabia, was missing, was somewhat relieved by the statement of the Austrian charge here, Baron Erich Zwiedinek, that the Vienna government would be quick to "satisfactorily adjust" the matter if it were established that the submarine commander disobeyed instructions. He urged that judgment be withheld until all the facts in the case are at hand.

To Ask Information.

Secretary Lansing announced he had instructed Ambassador Penfield at Vienna to ask the Austrian government for any information which might establish the nationality of the submarine which is said to have sunk the Persia and which would develop the facts in the case.

During the morning Baron Zweidinek, charge of the Austrian embassy, called on Secretary Lansing and asked that judgment be withheld until all the facts were known and expressed his belief that a final explanation would be satisfactory. He also sought any available information for the benefit of his government.

Baron Zweidinek also assured Secretary Lansing that if it were proved that an Austrian submarine had sunk the Persia his government would give full reparation and satisfaction.

Torpedoed Without Warning.

London, Jan. 3.—Unofficial dispatches from Cairo, state that the British steamer Persia, sunk in the Mediterranean on Thursday was torpedoed without warning and sank in five minutes.

Between 150 and 160 survivors have been landed at Alexandria, Egypt.

Reuter's Cairo correspondent makes the unreserved statement that Mr. McNeely lost his life. Charles H. Grant of Boston was saved.

Details of the sinking of the Persia came in slowly, but such information as was received made it appear that the number of persons who escaped in the four boats which were put off, were larger than was hoped when the first news was received. The Peninsular & Orient company, which owned the liner, announced that 158 survivors had arrived at Alexandria. The survivors comprise the chief officer, second officer, seven engineers, twenty-seven seamen, sixty-three lascars and fifty-nine passengers. A Lloyd's dispatch gives the number as 168, fifty-nine passengers, of whom seventeen are women, and ninety-four members of the crew, including fifty-nine lascars.

The survivors include ten military officers and eight persons who are not British subjects.

Ship Struck Amidships.

"The ship was struck amidships on the port side at 10:10 p. m.," says Reuter's correspondent at Cairo. "She had disappeared completely by 10:15.

"Survivors say it was little short of a miracle that anyone was saved. There was no panic. Four boats were launched with the utmost promptitude.

"The captain was drowned. When last seen he was swimming after the liner had plunged beneath the surface."

Both the Peninsular & Orient company and Reuter's Cairo correspondent say that Mr. Grant has been landed at Alexandria.

Telegram from Survivor.

The Peninsular & Oriental Steamship company last night received the following telegram from Colonel C. C. Bigham, who was among the survivors of the Persia disaster:

"A torpedo struck the ship on the port bow at 1:05 o'clock in the afternoon when about forty miles south of the east end of the island of Crete. No warning was given, nor any attempt made to assist. Within five minutes the ship had sunk.

"It was impossible to lower the starboard boats, owing to the heavy list. Five or six boats were lowered on the port side. I did not see this myself as I was washed overboard when the boat capsized.

"The conduct of the passengers and crew was splendid; there was no struggling and no panic. Four boats, after thirty hours at sea, were picked up by a warship.

MME. MALMBERG'S ROOM IS SEARCHED

Finnish Woman, Known on Range, Has European Experience.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—A cable dispatch from Copenhagen, Denmark, telling of the searching of the hotel room of Mme. Aimo Malmberg, a member of the Ford peace party, accredited to Chisholm, Minn., on suspicion she was engaged in revolutionary work against Russia, attracted attention all over the Mesaba range, where she is quite well known. She never lived permanently at Chisholm or any other point on the range, but came to this section and lectured in behalf of her native country, Finland, from which she was banished by the Russian government. She was here when Mr. Ford wired her and asked her to join the Ford peace commission, which she did. She has many friends on the Mesaba range.

Seek Incriminating Documents.

The Copenhagen cable in speaking of the search of Mme. Malmberg's room says under date of Jan. 1:

"It was learned here tonight that a spy searched the room of Mme. Aimo Malmberg of Chisholm, Minn., a member of the Ford peace party, both at Christiania and Stockholm, suspecting that Mme. Malmberg, who is a citizen of Finland, was engaged in revolutionary work against Russia. Mme. Malmberg's son, who lives in Finland, visited her on Christmas day. While she was absent from her room it was thoroughly searched and the upholstery cut to ribbons in the hunt for incriminating documents.

It was reported that Mme. Malmberg's son was accompanied to Stockholm by a young Finlander who was shot to death when on his way home."

London, Jan. 3.—The destruction by fire on Sunday night at Aarhuus, Denmark, of the oleomargarine and oil factory, one of the country's largest industrial establishments, is reported by the Copenhagen correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company. He adds that this will temporarily put an end to Scandinavia's entire manufacture of oleomargarine since this was the only one of its kind in Scandinavia. The establishment is said to have been insured for £1,000,000 with a British company.

JAPS TO SEND FLEET TO THE SUEZ CANAL

Warships to Be Dispatched at Once, Presumably to Protect Shipping.

Tokio, Jan. 3.—Announcement is made by the Jiji Shimpo that a squadron of Japanese warships will sail for the Suez canal presumably to protect Japanese shipping. It is said that the armored cruisers Kasuga, Tokiwa and Chitose have been assigned for this service.

The reported decision of the Japanese government to send a squadron to the Suez canal follows the sinking of two Japanese steamships in the Mediterranean. The passenger liner Yasaka Maru was torpedoed off Port Said on Dec. 21. The freighter Kenkoku Maru was sunk by a submarine on Dec. 29. Those on board both vessels were rescued. The Japan Mail Steamship company, which controls the bulk of Japanese shipping, has abandoned the Suez route.

CLOQUET CLOSED VERY BUSY YEAR

Last Quarter Said to Have Eclipsed Same Period in 1914.

Cloquet, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—In spite of the dullness of the lumber business during the early part of the year, due to the nation-wide stagnancy of the lumber market since the beginning of the war, it is reported that shipments of lumber for the last quarter of the year showed a marked increase over the same period of 1914 and the year closed with a very bright outlook for 1916.

The principal feature of the year in the local business field has been the erection of the three large brick and concrete buildings by the Northwest Paper company for the new sulphite plant, which required the outlay of a large amount of capital. The plant operating night and day gives steady employment to a large number of men. The daily output, fifty tons of wood sulphite, made from spruce and balsam, also furnishes the settlers an increased market for these forest products. Besides the progress made locally by this concern, the new plant now being erected at Brainerd, is the result of improved business conditions of 1915.

The Cloquet Electric company has also expanded considerably during the year, having built and put into operation a transmission power line to the plant of the Great Northern Power company, enabling them to supply electricity for local factories at reduced rates. This company has also extended its service from Moose Lake, on the Northern Pacific railroad, to Sturgeon Lake and Willow River and north from Cloquet to Brookston, and are now improving and increasing the capacity of their boiler plant.

Creamery's Busy Year.

The Cloquet creamery enjoyed an increased business during the year, necessitating the addition of a 18x20 foot building to its plant for the installation of an additional boiler.

The erection and occupancy of the new fire hall costing in the neighborhood of $12,000 and the building of a new water supply tank at Spring lake, of 325,510 gallons capacity, at an expenditure of about $10,000, were the principal municipal improvements made during the year. A large amount of concrete sidewalk was built, water mains and sewer extensions made and much street paving and road construction work was done and concrete curbs built. As a result of the year's work the city now has 14.8 miles of concrete sidewalks, 12 miles of sewers, 13.9 miles of water mains, 14 fire hydrants and two miles of concrete curb and gutter.

KAISER IS SAID TO BE SERIOUSLY ILL

Dispatches From Switzerland and Italy Say Emperor Underwent Operation.

Paris, Jan. 3.—Press dispatches from Switzerland and Italy continue to affirm that the illness of Emperor William is serious. It is stated that he was operated upon last Wednesday successfully, but the nature of the operation is not specified.

It is stated that the emperor is suffering from a deep seated affection of which the cutaneous eruption is but an incidental symptom and that the malady is complicated by the reappearance of his old throat trouble which has extended to the mouth. It is even asserted that it will be necessary to provide him with an artificial palate made of silver.

ONE ACCIDENT DURING STORM

Jitney Hits Street Car—Former's Driver Sustains Skull Fracture.

Nine-Inch Snowfall Occurred—Traffic Not Badly Blocked.

Traffic troubles caused by Duluth's storm of Saturday afternoon and night resulted in but one serious accident. No deaths will result, doctors said today.

Olaf Dahl, Thirteenth avenue east and Ninth street, was thrown through the windshield of his jitney when a street car struck it, and sustained a slight skull fracture, in addition to a number of cuts about the head.

The bus was caught in the car tracks and could not turn out in time to pass the opposite bound car, although Dahl made frantic efforts. Emil Harris, 517½ West Second street, was Dahl's only passenger. He was slightly hurt.

The street car company, and railroad, telegraph and telephone companies kept their "trouble" crews busy during Saturday night, during the nine-inch snowfall which was accompanied by a thirty-five-mile gale.

Temperature Going Down.

The minimum temperature during the storm was 10 degs. but since that time the mercury has been going down steadily. The weather forecaster predicts from two to ten days of zero or near zero temperatures.

The street car company worked its snow plows all night Saturday, and succeeded in keeping the lines open, although there was considerable delay earlier in the evening. Railroads had less trouble than expected, all of the Saturday and Sunday trains being on time or but slightly behind.

During the worst of the storm Saturday night, the Zenith Telephone company reported some trouble in getting connections to the south and east of Duluth, but otherwise communications with the outside were maintained.

The storm was easily the worst of the season.

PIMPLES ON FACE ITCHING INTENSE

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I noticed that my face was covered with pimples which began getting bigger. They were large and hard and were very red and there were so many festered at a time that I had to squeeze them out and they formed like a boil under the skin. They scattered all over my face and the itching was so intense that I had to scratch my face so much it bled.

"The trouble lasted about a month and I used ——— tablets, but they did not do any good. I noticed a Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement so I thought I would try them. The next day I saw the pimples were going away and I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I was healed." The Sussex Register of Newton said: "Mr. Young, a clever singer with a tenor voice of much sweetness, impressed his audience with the fact that he has a brilliant future. He showed much cleverness in the evening cantata. At the morning service, the young man sang 'This Day Is Born a Savior' in a manner that won for him a host of admirers."

Friday, the day after Governor Hammond's death, Mrs. Burnquist said to a reporter:

Florada-Otis Wedding

Ceremony Performed at Home of Bride's Mother---Out of Town Guests Present.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Florada and Paul Franklin Otis took place at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Edward, Florada 221 Twenty-third avenue east.

Mrs. Florada and her sister, Mrs. M. L. Husted of Berlin, Wis., received the guests in the hall where a trio, composed of Miss Esther Gomberg, pianist; Mrs. Bruce Ter Bush, cellist, and Louis White, violinist, played before the ceremony, merging into the "Lohengrin" march as the bridal party came down the stairs. Schubert's "serenade" was played softly as the service was pronounced by Rev. Charles N. Thorp of Pilgrim Congregational church, and Mendelssohn's march was the recessional.

The bridal procession was led by the ushers, Worth Doane of Brookline, Mass., and Irving Fish of Minneapolis. They were followed by the bridesmaids Miss Helen Congdon and Miss Lucile Bradley, and by the flower girl, little Alice Cole, daughter of Mrs. William H. Cole. They were met by the bridegroom, his brother, William P. Otis of Boston, Mass., who was his best man, and Dr. Thorp, before the fireplace which was banked with pink azaleas. A row of graduated candles burned on the mantle on which there were tall white baskets of Easter lilies.

Bride's Gown.

The bride wore a gown of white satin made with points over a flounce of silver lace. The tulle veil, which was arranged with a Normandy cap, extended over the long train which was caught at the side. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

Miss Congdon wore pale pink taffeta and Miss Bradley pink tulle over green taffeta. Both carried Killarney brilliant roses. The flower girl, who scattered rose petals before the bride, wore a white lace frock trimmed with garlands of rosebuds. She wore a wreath of rosebuds.

The bridal party alone received the guests. Assisting about the room were Mrs. James Wanless, Mrs. Chester A. Congdon, Mrs. John H. Hearding, Mrs. William H. Cole and Mrs. Herschel B. Fryberger.

The wedding supper was served in the dining room which was hung with vines, with a basket of sunburst roses as the centerpiece. Assisting her were Miss Millet Davis, Miss Mary Baldwin, Miss Gertrude Hegardt and Miss Louise Frick.

The out-of-town guests were Mrs. M. L. Husted, Berlin, Wis., Mr. and Mrs. George B. Edgerton, St. Paul; William P. Otis, Boston, Mass.; Worth Doane, Brookline, Mass.; Irving Fish, Minneapolis.

The bride wore a blue going-away costume. After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Otis will be at home at the residence of the bride's mother, who will leave soon for Philadelphia and New York, where she will spend the rest of the winter. Her sister, Mrs. Husted, will remain in the city for a few days.

Peggy Peabody's Observations

Feed the Birds in Winter.

A neighbor of mine, to whom Dame Rumor was not kind, commended herself to me on many occasions by her care and thoughtfulness to stray and dependent animals. No homeless dog ever had a better friend than the one he found in this woman. She would forsake a whole afternoon's pleasure to restore a lost canine to its owner, and never rest until the vagrant dog had a home or was put beyond the possibility of wandering around aimlessly and hungrily and about to be abused and finally die of starvation.

In winter many birds such as brave the season in the North are regular visitors to her casement ledge, where a plentiful supply of bread crumbs and cake crumbs were sprinkled every day. And the sparrows were not neglected. In the summer, the sweetest-throated songsters lodged and built nests in the trees about her home and I have wondered if this might not be in appreciation for her kindness to members of the bird family who did not fly southward at the first sign of winter.

Though I cannot say that this woman did not deserve the opprobrium of her neighbors, she certainly lived in several particulars a far more Christian-like life than do many who think themselves righteous and quite beyond reproach.

Feeding the birds with bread and crumbs during the winter months, when they are usually in dire need of it, affords a splendid opportunity of impressing kindness and consideration to all helpless things upon the children of a family. There is not a little boy or girl anywhere who will not be other than delighted with the idea of feeeding these small creatures and thereby making friends of them and becoming familiar with the members of the several bird families.

It is a human act to scatter what would otherwise go to waste in your dooryard for the consumption of the birds. It takes but a second or two of time and, if one must be repaid, the sight of the pert little creatures enjoying their breakfast is, or should be, ample recompense.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

NEW GRAND—Vaudeville and photoplay.
REX—"Jordan Is a Hard Road," photoplay.
LYRIC—William Farnum in a "Soldier's Oath."

"Henpecked Henry."

"Henpecked Henry," billed as a musical comedy, appeared at the Lyceum yesterday afternoon and last evening. With some new scenery, a new and enlarged chorus, some new costumes, some new songs, and some comedy material, "Henpecked Henry" might be almost mediocre. At present it is neither musical nor comical.

Theater Gossip.

William Fox has in "A Soldier's Oath," which opened at the Lyric yesterday an interesting production from the standpoint of story, direction and interpretation. It is a picture that produces dramatic crises continually.

WILLIAM FARNUM AT THE LYRIC

Thanks to Oscar Apfel, who directed as well as shared in the preparation of the scenario with Mary Murillo, there is comedy a-plenty. "A Soldier's Oath" would be too intense if it were not for several light comedy touches scattered carefully between the heavier moments, punctuating their intensity in appreciable style. William Farnum as the French soldier, gives one of his best and most versatile performances.

"Cold Feet and Hot Heads," a Pathe comedy, furnishes a welcome bit of nonsense after the high-keyed tension of "A Soldier's Oath."

As every one knows the usual Western films have had a tendency to make peaceable living lessness; also plays that tend to reform usually point their moral by exposing vice in a sensational way so that one is calculated to choose the way of righteousness, not because it is attractive, but because vice is terrifying. But like everything that D. W. Griffith does the photoplay, "Jordan is a Hard Road," while a Western story, is nothing like the usual wild and woolly west play. It will be shown at the Rex today, tomorrow and Wednesday.

NEW WESTERN PLAY AT REX seem tame and dull as compared to law-

Eight big-time headliners—every one a star—are the cast for the merry making at the Rex Beautiful today, tomorrow and Wednesday. There is an opportunity to see the famous droll comedians, Willie Collier, Sam Bernard, Weber and Fields, Mack Sennett, "Fatty" Arbuckle, Ivy Crosthwaite and Joe Jackson in a burlesque on the life of the moving picture actors called "Stars of Broadway," a novelty Triangle-Keystone.

Heading the new bill at the popular New Grand for the first half of this week are the Five MINSTRELS HEAD NEW GRAND SHOW. Corks in a miniature minstrel show of burnt cork suggestion.

Against a scenic background suggesting the palmy days of minstrelsy the members of the quintet appear in conventional evening dress and observe the traditions by arranging themselves in the customary half-circle.

Neal Abel, billed as the man with the mobile face, is a comedian capable of creating merriment by mere facial expression. However, Abel does not rely on his comedy face alone to gather in the guffaws, for he has a line of songs and talk.

An athletic diversion entitled "The Lady Demonstrators," the offering of the Three Keeleys, is replete with comedy and athletic feats.

Murphy and Kelly offer a singing and instrumental melange.

"The Tides of Retribution," a three-reel subject, toplines the photoplays. "A Ready-Made Maid," a comedy, and "The Third Party," a Vitagraph drama, are among the other photoplays.

Tomorrow and Wednesday the second of the famous Stingaree stories, "The Voice in the Wilderness," will be added to the program.

Duluth's musical contingent, with a decided sprinkling of society, was strongly in evidence

GRAND OPERA SEAT SALE OPENS. when the grand opera public seat sale opened at the Lyceum this morning, and the indications are that the San Carlo stars will be greeted with large and discriminating audiences. Patrons were buying for all four performances, as the repertoire has been so arranged that a choice is made a perplexing matter. All of the celebrities of the big organization are to be heard, some of them upon two occasions, and purchasers of tickets were discussing this artist, and that artist, and when each was to appear, in a fashion that indicated a hearty interest in what promises to be the supreme musical affair of the present season.

HUGHES AND THE FASCINATION OF THE UNATTAINABLE.

It would be interesting to know, too, just how much of this yearning for Hughes there is so much strange evidence of in the Republican party is due to the very human trait that makes the unattainable always seem the most desirable.

And it would be interesting indeed to watch what would happen to the Hughes boom if Justice Hughes should suddenly resign from the supreme bench, as he would have to do to be even a receptive candidate, announce his active candidacy for the Republican nomination for the presidency, and start out after the New York delegation—because a candidate is badly handicapped if he lacks the support of his home delegation.

Some people, in that event, would be in a pretty pickle.

There's Col. Roosevelt, for instance, who whenever he is a secret candidate for the Republican nomination bristles with ardent advocacy of the nomination of Knox and Hughes and the Man in the Moon and others whom he knows to be out of the question. He has said he would support Hughes, whom he defeated for the nomination in 1908. What would become of his eagerness for Hughes if Hughes should become a candidate?

And then there are the old boys of the Old Guard who are scheming laboriously, and with not quite all of their old cunning, apparently, to intrigue uninstructed delegations that the politicians can handle when the convention gets together in Chicago. They are talking Hughes, too, though they fought him tooth and nail when he was governor and helped keep him out of the Republican presidential nomination in 1908. They are talking Hughes in a peculiar way—coupling his name with Root's as possible nominees, trying to prevent committing delegations to Cummins or Burton or anybody but harmless favorite sons. They are talking Hughes but they don't mean it any more than Roosevelt does, and would fly to the woods if he came out as an active candidate. It would be funny to watch them if he should take them at their word and come out for the nomination.

Hughes is out of reach, and therefore it is perfectly safe to pretend to be an Aggressive Progressive and to prove it by professing to be a Hughes man.

Hughes is out of reach, and therefore he is like the far pastures that look greenest and, like all unattainable things, much more fascinatingly desirable than anything that is within reach.

If he suddenly placed himself within reach by resigning from the supreme bench and seeking delegates, what a pickle some people would be in!

They're making money out of iron and zinc in Europe. Maybe that good old phrase "the tin" was really prophetic after all.

A NOBLE SUGGESTION.

The Iron Trade Review is greatly vexed by the suggestion that if this country is going into the armament business, the government ought to manufacture all its own war materials.

It speaks wrathfully of "present alarming socialistic tendencies," and tramples ferociously upon the prostrate form of Bishop Charles D. Williams of the Episcopal church for proposing "that all munitions should be manufactured in government plants for the reason that no man should be allowed to profit by meeting the demands of war for ammunition."

But what interests us chiefly is the psychological beauty of the remedy the Iron Trade Review proposes against this threat of "socialism." It would undoubtedly be a very effective remedy, and we should rejoice in seeing it tried. It proposes that "leading cities through their commercial bodies declare their opposition to the building of armor plate and munition plants, and SAY THAT THEY DO NOT WISH SUCH PLANTS LOCATED WITHIN THEIR BORDERS."

Let us picture, if you please, Uncle Sam approaching Cleveland, say, or Duluth or St. Paul or Bridgeport or any town, with the offer of a government ammunition plant.

"Here," says Uncle Sam, "is a large, handsome armor plate plant that will add ten million dollars to the value of your industrial property, that will employ two thousand men, involving the addition of ten thousand people to your population—ten thousand more people for your merchants to feed and clothe—a pay roll of forty thousand dollars a day to be added to your community's revenue. Take it, dear Cleveland or Duluth or Bridgeport, and be happy."

But Cleveland—or Duluth or Bridgeport—has read the Iron Trade Review and has determined to put a stop to these "present alarming socialistic tendencies."

"Not so!" says Cleveland or Duluth or Bridgeport through its doughty commercial club. "Not for us! We do not believe in socialism, and we will not encourage it by accepting this plant. To be sure, we have a splendid site for it, conditions for it are ideal, and if it were to be run by a nice corporation we'd be mighty glad to get it. But we refuse to be a party to anything that smacks of socialism, so you will have to run along with your armor plate plant. We will have none of it."

Can't you picture the pathos of it, to see poor Uncle Sam trudging wearily from city to city, trying to find one that would accept such a plant, and meeting nothing but discouragement and reproaches and rebuffs wherever he goes? Sad, sad thought!

Mrs. Belmont having prepared a stage vehicle to promote the cause of suffrage, she will doubtless cast Rosalie Jones for the part of walking lady.

THE WAY TO HAVE IT.

A naval officer who, with local expert aid, has been investigating the "harbor defenses" of the port of Duluth, reports them to be "totally inadequate."

That's good! That's the way to keep them.

It looks as if penny valentines would again be in order this year among the crowned heads.

AUSTRIA.

The assassination of the passenger liner Persia, presumably done by Austria though there is no evidence of it yet, seems quite the most barbarously and coldbloodedly brutal deed of the kind yet recorded in the black book of the war's horrors. Austria speaks fairly, and those speaking for her now say that if it is true that the Persia was sunk without warning and without any attempt to help or save her passengers and crew, the guilty commander will be "punished." He should be punished; it is hard to be brutal enough to wish him the punishment he deserves.

There was talk, by the way, that Austria might suggest that we arbitrate the Ancona case, though she did not. That thought brought up another thought that we cannot forget.

If Austria had arbitrated what little there was left of its dispute with Serbia after Serbia had agreed to nearly all its humiliating demands, there would be joy today instead of woe in millions of blasted homes in Austria, Hungary, Bohemia, Poland, Serbia, Bulgaria, Germany, Italy, France, Belgium, England, Ireland, Wales, Scotland, Australia, New Zealand and Canada.

It would be interesting, at least, to know just what would rank as 100 per cent efficiency in a war.

PAN-AMERICANISM—WILSONISM.

The first utterance of the recent Pan-American scientific congress in Washington was a hearty approval of President Wilson's noble act in expanding the Monroe doctrine and bringing it up to date and into perfect harmony with the ideals of human brotherhood and American liberties.

One of the finest and most splendid developments in recent decades is this change from the Monroeism which was an empty threat at Europe and an affronting patronage of the weaker Latin-American republics, to the Wilsonism which associates all the American republics on terms of equality and fraternity.

The modern doctrine of Wilsonism or Pan-Americanism is not an empire, not a suzerainty, not an overlordship, but a community of interest—all for one and one for all. In a year it has revolutionized the relationships between the United States and its sister republics of this hemisphere, and changed suspicion and fear to confidence and respect.

It is the American system of preparedness—mightier than all the battleships and great guns in the world—as mighty as the lesson of the four thousand miles of boundary between the United States and Canada without a battleship, a fort, a gun or a soldier.

It is the substitution of humanity and brotherhood and mutual helpfulness for the power of force—war.

It is the offering of the Americas to the world, pointing the way to the glory of peace.

In such an arrangement as this there is a "place in the sun" for every nation, great or small; and therein lies the burden of the lesson it offers to Europe—and to ourselves.

History will record the doctrine of Pan-Americanism as the most glorious jewel in the glory-crown of the Wilson administration.

The queer thing is that it isn't a submarine that endangers the water wagon so much as it is just an ordinary schooner.

Blissful Depravity.

Saturday Evening Post: In a border Southern town lives an elderly negro carpenter, who is locally distinguished for two things—his use of large words and his abiding fear of his wife, who is big, impressive and domineering. In this town a trio of young professional men keep bachelor quarters together.

Not so very long ago one of the three called the darky to do some small repairing jobs about the apartment.

"Boss," inquired the old man, in the midst of his work, "does you white gen'l'mens live heah in total depravity of de feminine sex?"

"We do," was the answer.

From the bottom of his hempecked soul the old darky fetched up a long, deep, sincere sigh.

"Well, suh," he said, "ef I wuz ez you is, I should suttinly remain so."

Tributes of the Press to Winfield S. Hammond

An Honor to the State.

Mankato Free Press: Mr. Hammond was one of the distinguished men of Minnesota and the Northwest. He was a man of signal ability, honest, upright and conscientious. Death has cut him down in his prime and the state of Minnesota and the country has suffered a serious loss. He was an educated, polished gentleman and an honor to the North Star state. He was a patriotic American citizen, whose utterances in behalf of America were spiced with a loyal flavor. He was not a policy man, but did things because he believed they were the right things to do. He possessed strength of character and was morally clean and upright. By his death a prince has fallen.

Efficient Official and Good Citizen.

St. Paul Pioneer Press: Minnesota will unhesitatingly enroll him as among the best of her chief magistrates and with genuine sorrow her people will mourn the loss of an efficient official and good citizen

Of Marked Ability.

Cloquet Pine Knot: Governor Hammond was a man of marked ability. He was modest as to his own attainments, of most likable personality and with the rare faculty of gaining stanch friends and keeping them. That a man and citizen should be taken so suddenly from the high position he has filled with credit to himself and the state has cloaked Minnesota with sorrow.

Not Easily Spared.

Mankato Review: Minnesota has lost a man whom it cannot easily spare, and many of us have lost a friend for whom there is no replacement.

A True American Gentleman.

Red Wing Republican: He was a man of strong personality, and was the embodiment of the true American gentleman. Few men have bigger hearts or were filled with real human sympathy more than the late Governor Hammond. He will be truly mourned by the people of Minnesota.

An Able Executive and Loyal Citizen.

Brainerd Dispatch: Governor Hammond for years represented his district in congress and was considered one of the able men of that body, and his advice and counsel were sought by men of his party in both state and national affairs. In his death the state loses an able executive and a loyal citizen.

Able, Honest and Fearless.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: As a member of the state normal board, as member of congress from the Second district, and as governor of the commonwealth, he rendered the state faithful and patriotic service.

He was a man of splendid character, with ability of high order, an orator of power, and a man who was honest in his intentions and fearless in advocacy of his convictions.

The loss of no man, since the death of the late Governor John A. Johnson, will be as sincerely mourned by Minnesotans as will that of Winfield Scott Hammond.

Not an Ordinary Man.

Rochester Post and Record: Governor Hammond was a man of unblemished character, and his popularity was evidenced by the vote he, as a Democrat, received in one of the strongest Republican states in the Union. No ordinary man could have succeeded against the natural opposition as did he. As governor he has given the state a clean, honest administration. His death will be regretted not only by his political friends, but by the state at large.

"We Needed Him. We Shall Miss Him."

Minneapolis Tribune: Many men prominent in the political, business and professional life of the state have spoken estimates of him, and in each of these expressions some particular characteristic of the man and officer has been brought out as a personal impression. Here are some of them: Ability, courage, integrity, industry, fair-mindedness, conscientiousness, patience, nonpartisanship, poise, high motives—these are some of the excellent qualities which have been ascribed to him. These are the things that make up character.

Through every stage of his career he exhibited the same qualities which have commanded such generous expression of respect for his performance in the office of governor. His untimely taking off is a great loss to Minnesota. Men of his type are an invaluable social asset. We needed him. We shall miss him.

A Deluge of Buncombe

Sioux City Tribune: Thursday, Dec. 16, was a wonderful day in the national house of representatives for the tongue-tied and bashful and those who are halting of speech and impoverished of ideas. The subject under discussion was the problem of the government's revenues, about which politicians generally know less and talk more than any other subject under the sun.

Moreover, under the rules of debate in the national house of representatives one doesn't have to confine himself to the subject. In fact, the necessity of upholding a reputation of great learning demands that the subject be used only as a hub from which the speaker may radiate in any direction to the very rim of conversation and then run the entire gamut of 360 degrees of talk without ever touching the heart of the question.

This in itself was temptation enough to make it a field day of vocalization, but other inducements were offered. After a few of the leaders had delivered themselves of a quantity of political buncombe and a few others had frankly admitted they couldn't compress their remarks into a ten-minute speech and had asked unanimous consent to "extend their remarks," Republican Floor Leader Mann said he observed a number of gentlemen who would like to talk but couldn't, so he suggested they be given permission to extend their remarks in the Congressional Record. Whereupon the Congressional Record sets it down as an official procedure:

> Mr. Kitchen: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all members who desire to do so may extend their remarks in the Record until Jan. 4, 1916.
> Mr. Sabath: Does that mean all members who have spoken, or all members?
>
> Mr. Mann: All members.
> The Speaker: The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that all members may have until Jan. 4, 1916, to extend their remarks in the Record on the joint resolution which has just been passed. Is there objection?
> There was no objection.

And thus it came to pass that every member of the national house who can commandeer a corps of copyists and the assistance of a librarian will be occupied during the holiday recess revamping extracts from famous, ancient and modern orations in order that some subsequent issue of the Congressional Record may contain a verbatim report of his speech of the date of Dec. 14—a speech he never made, elucidating ideas he never had the honor of entertaining.

Great is the god, Buncombe, and congress is its tabernacle.

Real Music.

Cincinnati Inquirer: "Are you fond of music?" asked Miss Oldgirl.

"Not very," replied Mr. Oldbach, "but I prefer it to popular songs."

The Moral Mollycoddle

Editorial in the San Francisco Bulletin.

The bravest man in Europe has not been in the trenches nor gone up in an aeroplane nor down in a submarine nor taken part in the war in any way. He has not received a military decoration and he isn't going to receive one. His courage is moral courage, and moral courage is not popular in countries which are at war, nor in countries which, like our own, are obsessed with a childish fear of war. This man's name is Karl Liebknecht. Liebknecht has voted against, or refused to vote for, each of the reichstag war loans, from the first to the last, has denounced the policy of conquest advocated by the German military party, and has repeatedly run the risk of punishment for treason. When he last rose to speak in the reichstag members of his own party joined in howling him down. He has stood almost alone against the determinations of a great empire at the zenith of its power.

But Karl Liebnecht, if he were an American, would certainly be a pacifist. What would his valor then avail him? He would be the bullseye for the entire battery of Rooseveltian contempt. He would be ridiculed and slandered because we have not now a very great respect for moral courage.

Moral courage, however, is almost the rarest of human qualities. Physical courage is not rare, either in man or inanimals. The bulldog is not very bright, but it has as much physical courage as a man. There is hardly any animal, however timid, which will not fight for its young. Physical courage is too common to be wondered at. If it were not almost second nature to young men in good health war would not have played the prominent part it has. It is much easier to charge into a hostile battery than to endure the disgrace of running away from it. But when everyone is scared the fear of public opinion is lessened. Cowardice and courage are both infectious. There are innumerable stories of armies which ran away like sheep, and ran back again like lions. The famous battle of Winchester was such an occasion. All normal men are brave at times and cowardly at times, just as they are good at times and bad at times; and the bravery dominates more often than the goodness, simply because it is partly an animal quality.

Moral courage probably came late in man's development. It is pretty hard to define it, although it is easily recognized. All champions of unpopular causes need moral courage. It took moral courage, as well as physical courage, to be an abolitionist in the days when abolition was unpopular. It takes moral courage now to be an out-and-out pacifist. It takes moral courage to endure the imputation of physical cowardice, which, without any reason whatsoever, is cast at the pacifists. The foolishness of the charge was made evident, although no proof was necessary, when Henry Ford's shiploads of peace-seekers steamed away, to run the risk of mines and submarines, perhaps to face prisons and mobs, certainly to endure the weight of ridicule and cynical opposition. If any poltroons, weaklings or mollycoddles went on that ship it was not that particular act which justified the epithet.

Besides being rarer than physical courage moral courage demands a higher form of intelligence. All that the physical courage of Europe is doing now is to ruin that continent. Moral courage, on the part of any one of a dozen powerful men, might have averted the war. Moral mollycoddlism is one of the great causes of war, of the fear of war, and consequently of militarism. Moral mollycoddlism is abroad in the United States today. One would not say that Col. Roosevelt has it, but it has infected many of the politicians and publicists who have sought cheap approval by trailing in his bombastic wake.

Just a Moment

Daily Strength and Cheer.

Compiled by John G. Quinlus, the Sunshine Man.

"But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen."—I Cor. xv, 5.

Son of Man, whenever I doubt of life I think of Thee. Nothing is so impossible as that Thou shouldst be dead. Therefore, when oppressed by the sight of death, I shall turn to Thee. I shall see my immortality. I shall read the possibilities of my soul in Thee. I shall measure the promise of my manhood by Thee, I shall comfort myself by the impossible conclusion, "If there be no immortality, Christ is dead."

Jesus gave us strength in weakness,
He our shield and stay has been
When the clouds have gathered round us—
Oh, how sweet on him to lean!

When the din and strife seemed greatest,
And we longed for peace and calm,
Came a whisper from Our Father,
"Trust my everlasting arm."

Oh! what joy, what peace, what comfort
Comes to us when trusting Him!
Sure our hearts are filled with gladness
When we strive to do His will.

Refrain.
He is able to deliver,
He is able to sustain—
He is able to deliver
All who call upon His name.

—Margaret Hargreaves Davies.

Dayton, Ohio.

"The Old A. P."

He is everywhere that anything is doing,
His hours per day are four-and-twenty, plus.
From pole to pole the wheeling earth he's viewing,
'Twas for him was writ the word ubiquitous.

From provincial to urbane he runs the gamut,
He's daring when the measure calls for dare;
He is reticent or candid, just whichever is demanded—
Or to put it in a word—he's there.

You find him on the outposts of creation,
You find him in the swirling rush of things;
Today in some obscure and lowly station,
Tomorrow in the solemn courts of kings.

When the submarine submerses he's aboard her,
On the aeroplane he sails the blazing air—
Where a torch of freedom's lighted or a vested wrong's indicted,
You can gamble all you've got he's there.

War knows him in the reddest of the trenches,
Peace greets him in its highest parliaments;
The trusted friend of jurists on their benches,
Hail fellow with the sportiest of gents.

He speaks in all the tongues by man invented
From farthest east to farthest western sea.
No frills are in his diction, and with him taboo is fiction—
He's the chap we call "The Old A. P."

—Bart Howard in the St. Louis Republic.

America, the Only Nation Without a Budget.

The World's Work: We are the only civilized nation that hasn't a budget system. France, Germany, Russia, Japan, England, Italy, Spain, Roumania, Serbia, Portugal, Bulgaria, and Venezuela—all these countries, and many more, have budgets. In each country, that is, certain responsible officers prepare a definite plan for doing things, estimate the cost of executing it, and suggest means for raising the money. There is only one important nation that has no business plan, and that is the one that has chiefly distinguished itself as a nation of business men—the United States.

Keeping Up With Minnesota Editors

Scattered Comments Taken From Minnesota Papers.

As to Fort Snelling.

Madison Independent Press: If in the general cleanup of useless navy yards and defunct army posts in the interest of the general good, old Fort Snelling must go, all well and good. However, owing to its inland location, nearby and government-owned water power, etc., the site would be an ideal one upon which to build government factories for the manufacture of arms and munitions as well as other things necessary for the army and navy. Still, if there is a better place, let Fort Snelling cease to exist, except in name, if such a step is deemed to be best for the nation as a whole.

Let's Fool 'Em!

Little Falls Transcript: In spite of the great protest against the militarism of the Old World, many seem determined to thrust the same system on this country.

A Poor Suggestion as to the Legislature.

Red Lake Falls Gazette: The agitation for reducing the size of the legislature would probably meet with much more favor if it carried the suggestion that one branch of the legislature be made up of one member for each county, with the other branch having a smaller membership.

And What Would St. Paul Gain?

Alexandria Post-News: Minneapolis would at least have this to gain from a civic union with St. Paul—an efficient police administration.

How Preparedness Works Out.

Fergus Falls Free Press: This is about the way the "preparedness" policy works out:

A certain nation prepares to defend itself against possible aggression by increasing its army and navy. The other nations view these preparations with misgivings and alarm, fearing that the nation in question has designs against them, so they prepare for the danger by increasing their armies and navies. Every nation thus prepared becomes firm and bold in its attitude toward other nations, which leads to ultimatums, defiance—and then to war.

Come on and Help Push.

Benson Monitor: The demand for a smaller state legislature is growing throughout the state. It is too large and unmanageable and steps should be taken to bring about much needed reforms. We hope some good will come from the campaign started by The Duluth Herald.

That Would Be Too Cheap for You, Joe.

Mankato Free Press: A dispatch from Watertown, S. D., says that "Clarence Schulze, commonly known as Schlitz, a local bookkeeper of unmistakable nationality, short, fat and jolly, with a face like John Bunny's, has been offered $1,500 a week by a Chicago moving picture house." We know of another fat man who would be willing to sell his face to a moving picture house for $1,500 per week.

And That's But as a Drop in the Bucket.

Red Wing Republican: There are indications on every hand that the country has entered upon a great period of prosperity. Here is one of the many that is of special interest to the Northwest: President Hannaford of the Northern Pacific railroad is authority for the statement that that road in November moved about 20,000 more cars of freight than in the same month a year ago.

North Dakota Notions

Various Views Expressed by Newspapers of That State.

Here's Wishing You a Happy New Year.

Bottineau Courant: A fashion magazine states that skirts will be worn a great deal shorter in 1916. But then they won't be skirts—only just belts.

Europe and the President.

Bismarck Tribune: Col. George Harvey hurries home from London to tell us that "next to the kaiser," President Wilson is "the most unpopular governmental head in the world." We are all expected to be very low in our minds because the policy of the American government does not command the approval of London. It would not be difficult for President Wilson to be popular in London. Indeed, he could easily be more popular there than any member of the British government. If he would simply let the British foreign office dictate the foreign policy of the United States government, the thing would be done. London does not ask us to come into the war. It would be satisfied to take charge of our diplomacy.

About Mortgages.

Minot Optic-Reporter: If the mortgage represents extravagant living or the gratification of some unnecessary pleasure or an investment merely for luxury, it is a danger. But the man who mortgages his farm to make a first payment on another quarter is showing shrewd business judgment. The man who mortgages his home and uses the money to engage in business in which he makes a reasonable success is doubly capitalizing his home. The evil of mortgages lies in the use and efficiency of the money derived from the mortgage.

The President's Position.

Fargo Democrat: President Wilson has now the satisfaction of seeing his course generally approved, and instead of his popularity with the people waning as another national election approaches, it is increasing. The president has broken new ground in statesmanship and has done his work well.

Out-Villa-ing Villa.

Bismarck Tribune: If Gen. Villa wants to be known as the meanest man in the two Americas, he is going about it in the right way. For some time past he has been William R. Hearst's candidate for the Mexican presidency. Now he steals Mr. Hearst's million-acre ranch in Chihuahua and runs off the cattle. The next thing we know he will start a red-ink newspaper in Los Angeles and selling advertising space below cost.

A Sound Argument.

Ryder News: We are glad to note the strong sentiment against war, the sentiment against preparedness. We have got just one little two-and-a-half-year-old boy, one that was given to us for nothing, but we would hate to think that he would have to go out and face a shower of bullets. If the powers which control the destinies of nations will leave him alone, he never will have to. He will do nothing to promote war. He will not belong to the class which promotes war. When the plutocrats learn that the common people are not going to fight their battles any more, they will use more judgment in causing war.

Where the Plan Failed.

Philadelphia Telegraph: A white man walking along a road where an old colored man was whitewashing a fence noticed that the brush he was using contained very few bristles.

"Look here, Rastus," exclaimed the man, pausing and looking at the operation, "why don't you get a brush with more bristles in it?"

"What fo', Mistah Smith, what fo'?" returned Rastus, glancing from the fence to his questioner.

"What for?" expressively replied Mr. Smith. "Why if you had a brush with more bristles in it you could do twice as much work."

"Dat's all right, Mistah Smith," said Rastus, negatively shaking his head, "but I ain't got twice as much work to do."

Europe and the President

Editorial in the New York World.

Col. George Harvey hurries home from London to tell us that "next to the kaiser" President Wilson is "the most unpopular governmental head in the world." It appears that "there is no feeling against Americans but there is a real bitterness against the present administration," and we are all expected to be very low in our minds because the policy of the American government does not command the approval of London.

It would not be difficult for President Wilson to be popular in London. Indeed, he could easily be more popular there than any member of the British government. If he would simply let the British foreign office dictate the foreign policy of the United States government, the thing would be done. London does not ask us to come into the war. It would be satisfied to take charge of our diplomacy.

By a similar process the president could win a vast popularity in Berlin or in Paris.

Americans who are much more concerned about their social status in England or in Germany or in France than about the welfare of the United States are much disturbed because the president has persistently put America first. Abroad they devote much of their time to inciting foreign dissatisfaction with the United States government. At home they abuse the president and pose as the only people sensitive about the national honor.

But in the mean time Woodrow Wilson is president of the United States. If he lives he will remain president of the United States until March 4, 1917. And while he remains president of the United States the foreign policy of the United States will be directed from Washington, D. C.—not from London or Berlin or Paris.

To one who knows the history of the American people, all this sniveling snobbery over foreign disapproval of the United States government need not be taken too seriously. We went through a similar period of foolishness in 1793 when Washington proclaimed neutrality in the war between England and France. In comparison with the abuse that pro-British and pro-French Americans heaped upon George Washington at that time, current criticism of President Wilson at its worst is almost flattering. Even Lincoln was never smeared with such vituperation as the frenzied partisans of the British and the French plastered over Washington, who roundly cursed the day that he ever became president, but who held the country firmly to the wise and sane course that he had charted.

What Europe thinks of the United States may be important. But what we think of Europe is far more important. Europe is always in a state of either hating us or despising us. Occasionally a surface friendship is professed for the United States when our interests happen to run parallel to the interests of some European country or we are patronizingly permitted to do them favors; but there is no love for us over there, never has been and probably never will be. Nor is there any particular reason why there should be.

At the present time the cause for hatred is of infinite proportions. Blundering European statesmanship has plunged civilization into the greatest war of all history. American statesmanship has thus far succeeded in keeping us out of it without yielding any of our rights under international law. The belligerents are bleeding themselves to death. Future generations will be burdened with a load of debt that already staggers the human imagination. We are not bleeding to death. We are immensely rich and prosperous, and we are likely to be the commanding nation of the world after the European powers have exhausted themselves in a war brought on by third-rate diplomacy. Naturally, feeling runs strongly against a government that thinks more about the welfare of the United States than it thinks about the interests of the countries that are at war.

In the circumstances we are unable to mingle our tears with those of Col. Harvey or to lament the president's unpopularity in London. We should as soon think of lamenting his unpopularity with the kaiser. The Declaration of Independence has never been repealed.

Ebb and Flow.

I walked beside the evening sea,
And dreamed a dream that could not be;
The waves that plunged along the shore
Said only—"Dreamer, dream no more!"

But still the legions charged the beach;
Loud rang their battle-cry, like speech;
But changed was the imperial strain:
It murmured—"Dreamer, dream again!"

I homeward turned from out the gloom,—
That sound I heard not in my room;
But suddenly a sound that stirred
Within my very breast, I heard.

It was my heart, that like a sea
Within my breast beat ceaselessly;
But like the waves along the shore,
It said—"Dream on!" and "Dream no more!"

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters must not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

INADEQUATE FOR WHAT?

POEMS ASKED FOR.

The Herald acknowledges with thanks the receipt of the following poems:

"When You Were a Tulip," etc., from Miss Frances Barrett of Hurley, Wis. This has already been published.

"I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen," from J. M.

"'Tis a Picture From Life's Other Side," from Miss Marguerite Hall of Bunker, Minn.

Requests have been received for the following:

"After the Ball," from Miss Frances Barrett of Hurley, Wis.

"A Long Time Ago Lived an Irishman Named Doherty," from Henry Hayton of Stevens Point, Wis.

I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen.

I'll take you home again, Kathleen,
across the ocean wild and wide,
To where your heart has ever been since first you were my bonny bride;
The roses all have left your cheeks,
I've watched them fade away and die;
Your voice is sad whene'er you speak, and tears bedim your loving eye.

Refrain.

Oh! I will take you back, Kathleen,
To where your heart will feel no pain;
And when the fields are fresh and green,
I'll take you to your home again.

I know you love me, Kathleen, dear,
your heart was ever fond and true;
I always feel when you are near that life holds nothing dear, but you;
The smile that once you gave to me, I scarcely ever see them now,
Tho' many, many times I see a-dark'ning shadow on your brow.

POLITICS IN THE NORTH STAR STATE

Comment on Candidates, Near-Candidates and Those Willing to Be Candidates for Public Office; Flotsam and Jetsam on the Surging Sea of Politics.

The sad death of Governor Hammond in Louisiana last Thursday has had the effect of subduing political discussion in a public way so far as governorship nominations are concerned, making it seethe in private. It leaves matters pretty much at sea.

It is rare, indeed, that the death of a public man results in so thoroughly jumbling political matters. The death of Governor Johnson did not, for more reasons than it is necessary to recount here, for the governor's death was not unexpected, for one thing, and the opposition party was not in the chaotic condition that marks it at present.

Governor Hammond was like a guidepost to the both parties. To the Democrats, he was the one man, and there could be little question that he would be the nominee of his party again had he lived—hardly more that he would be re-elected. That simplified matters for the Democrats.

For the Republicans, Governor Hammond was "the man we have to beat." The question of who stood the best chance of beating him—all acknowledging that it would be a hard job—was the chief subject of discussion. This, to a degree, simplified matters for the Republicans, although they had and still have many more sores of their own making to heal.

Have Percentages Changed?

The passing of Governor Hammond has made a new governor—Joseph A. A. Burnquist, a Republican. Now one question is: Have the percentages in chances of candidates for the Republican nomination changed?

Earlier in last year, it was believed that Mr. Burnquist, then lieutenant governor, would be a candidate for the nomination of his party for the chief place; and for a time, he traveled here and there about the state, making speeches and acting generally like a man who was a candidate for something, which was presumed to be, in this case, the governorship. For quite a while Mr. Burnquist kept up this activity; but of late had subsided and it was given out that he and his friends had decided that the time was not yet ripe for him to get into the race, and that he would seek a third nomination for the lieutenant-governorship. With this decision on Mr. Burnquist's part, the other candidates went ahead with their plans.

Now all that is changed. Mr. Burnquist is governor, and it may as well be considered, without his announcing it right away, that he will be a candidate to succeed himself. If the usual rule is still a good one, it might be assumed also that the fact that he is actually governor gives him a tremendous leverage for the nomination. Other candidates will not, of course, admit this; but there is good ground for the belief. He will be governor for six months by the time the nominating primaries come around, and much may be done to strengthen his position in that time.

How About Schmahl?

While the other candidates have conceded no such strength to Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, and potential candidate for the governorship nomination, the rank and file of the party have expressed the belief pretty generally that Mr. Schmahl, backed by the "wets," as it is believed he would be, stood the best show of those talked of, two of whom have filed.

Mr. Schmahl has not yet filed, nor has he said that he will file. If he has intended to, will this unlooked for change of affairs alter that determination, or will it have the effect of making up his mind to get into the race? It may cause the latter decision, for Mr. Burnquist is a "dry," and if the fact that he has become governor makes him strong for the nomination, a "wet" candidate will be badly needed, and the state will look to Mr. Schmahl to represent that element in the primaries. Thus, the fight would develop into an out-and-out liquor battle in the Republican party. The other candidates for the nomination are either for the "drys" or non-committal.

However, it is far too soon to make predictions in the matter and nobody is trying it, but everybody is watching what the effect of the conditions will be.

Other Possible Effects.

Among the possible effects of the sudden change of conditions that politicians of the state are debating, are two concerning Mr. Schmahl and Mr. Lindbergh. The former, not yet an avowed candidate for the governorship, may conclude to file again for the secretaryship of state.

And Mr. Lindbergh, who has filed for the governorship, may decide to file again for congress in the Sixth district. Papers all over that district have been predicting such a switch anyway. But Mr. Lindbergh may take a different view of the matter, and conclude that the entrance of Mr. Burnquist into the race will help himself.

So far as the Democrats are concerned, they are, in the moment, at sea. While others have been talked about vaguely as possible contenders for the nomination, the party as a whole had been considering nobody but Governor Hammond, for his record as congressman and governor was unimpeachable, and it was conceded that the Republicans stood but little show of nominating a man strong enough to beat him.

There is yet a long time before candidates must file, and there is no reason to believe that the party will fail to draft a man who will take well with the people; but right now, before they have had time to think about the matter, there is a hiatus in the list.

The Democratic state central committee was to hold a meeting in St. Paul this afternoon to consider plans for a state conference to select candidates for places on the state delegation to the national convention, and to select presidential electors. Out of respect for the memory of Governor Hammond, whose funeral took place at St. James this afternoon, this meeting has been put over until tomorrow afternoon. It may be that the question of the governorship will be taken up at this time, and some steps taken toward meeting the situation.

Don't Like Northrop Movement.

The projected plan to have the Republicans send a delegation to their national convention to put up the name of Cyrus Northrop for the presidency, is not being favorably received. Dr. Northrop himself met the delegation that waited on him with most amusing comments on "the honor" they offered him, and showed that he is keenly alive to the facts and purposes of the movement. He gave no definite answer to the importuning of the delegation, but told them that if they would get all other candidates to withdraw, he would consider it. That he assigned "some job," is certain.

The papers of the state look upon the move as being in the interest of the politicians who wish to circumvent the state primary law, and not only get their grip on the party again but to cast discredit on the primary. Following are a few of the comments:

St. Cloud Journal-Press: It looks very much as though the contest in Minnesota among the Republicans is over the selection of delegates to the national Republican convention, and that the choice of candidate for president was a second consideration. With the request from Elihu Root that his name be not used in the Minnesota primary, an effort has been made to have Hon. Cyrus Northrop become the "favorite son candidate," so that by the use of his name some of the experienced politicians could ride to victory on his popularity. President Northrop is worthy any honor that can be given him by the people of the state, but we doubt if it would add to his prestige to be used by the politicians to further their own plans. Such a movement might be resented by many of his best and unselfish friends.

Elk River Star-News: A movement is on foot among a coterie of Minneapolis Republicans to tie up the Minnesota delegation to the national convention by making Cyrus Northrop a "favorite son" candidate. It is a pity to make a spectacle of so great and good a man as our former university president, but there are no lengths to which the machine politicians will not go to get political advantage. We are surprised that President Northrop would lend himself to such a scheme.

Cambridge North Star: The people of Minnesota would line up almost unanimously behind President Northrop for any position to which he might sincerely aspire—but if he should allow a party of selfseeking politicians to use him as a stalking horse in the presidential contest he would at the end of the game indorse the soundness of Abraham Lincoln's aphorism relative to the folly of attempting to fool the people.

Grand Rapids Herald-Review: A state might honor a man by presenting his name to a national convention as a candidate for president. Then, again, it might insult one of the most dignified and distinguished educators in the United States by putting him forward simply as trading stock. If the Republicans of Minnesota do this to Cyrus Northrop it will simply be another indication of the depths to which they have fallen.

WILL STUDY CENTER WORK

Will Investigate Activities in Larger Cities at Own Expense.

Miss Katherine A. King, principal and instructor in the Duluth public schools for twenty-four years and for the past eleven years principal of the Bryant school, has tendered her resignation to the school board and will devote herself to community betterment and social centers in schools. The resignation will take effect at the close of this semester, Feb. 1.

Miss King will pass the remainder of the year in visiting social centers of the large cities and communities where that class of work is being carried out on a larger scale. Her work of investigation will be done entirely at her own expense.

Social center and community work is a hobby with Miss King. Her work in that line began about twenty years ago shortly after being appointed principal of the Lowell school. Here she organized the first parents' and pupils' club in the city. She was principal of the Lowell school for five years and later principal of the Fairmont school for five years. Her first three years in Duluth were passed as teacher in the Lowell school.

The penny savings idea for school children was started by Miss King shortly after she became principal of the Bryant school and nearly three years before it was thought of in other institutions of the city. For a long time she received the deposits of the children, doing all of the work of keeping each account and regularly depositing the small sums in the bank. For some time this money had to be kept by her in her own personal account because of the skepticism of banks in believing that the penny savings were anything but an unprofitable branch of the banking business. During the first three years of this work she paid the interest on the deposits principally out of her own account.

Miss King has always taken an active interest in bringing closer relationship between parent and teacher and through clubs created a community spirit of a high order for her school. While engaged in this work she has studied the social center work from many sides but believes that there are many improvements that can be made in the work. It is for the purpose of devoting herself to improving the work that she is now resigning her position.

STRICKEN WHILE AT A FUNERAL

Fred Anderson Dies After Acting as Pallbearer for Friend.

Fred Anderson, aged 23, was suddenly stricken with illness while returning from the Lutheran cemetery, where he had acted as pallbearer and paying final tribute to his departed friend, Amundus Peterson, and seven hours later died at St. Luke's hospital.

The funeral service was held at 2 o'clock from the home of J. E. Anderson, 1717 Piedmont avenue, a cousin. Fred Anderson was asked to be one of the pallbearers.

While in the carriage returning from the cemetery he complained of feeling ill and became unconscious before reaching the city. He was rushed to the hospital, where he died at 9:30 o'clock.

Mr. Anderson made his home at 523 Garfield avenue. His only relative in the city is a cousin, Charles Hanson. The body was taken to the Olson & Hoppenyan undertaking rooms. Funeral arrangements will probably be made this afternoon.

REPENTANCE OF SOCIAL IMPORT

Brings New Attitude to Man, Says Rev. Milton Fish.

Repentance is of social importance as well as of religious import, said Rev. Milton Fish, pastor of the Central Baptist church, Twentieth avenue west and First street, in speaking of "Repentance," the fourth of a series of New Year's sermons last night. He said that there was a difference between repentance and conversion.

"Repentance is a change of mind, purposes and feelings wrought by the Holy Spirit," said Rev. Mr. Fish. "It is new attitude of the man so vital that he renounces self help and self merit in his trust of Jesus Christ as all sufficient Savior and Lord. Conversion is the resulting change in outer relationships. To Zaccheus conversion meant the restoration of his ill-got gains. To the candidates for baptism of John it meant the bringing forth fruits meet for repentance. To an embittered life it means 'first go and be reconciled with an aggrieved brother.'

"Repentance toward God is acceptable and effective. A self confessed murderer does not by confession to man cleanse his soul. A careless engineer who has wrecked his train may run away, unable to forgive himself. However, if we confess our sin because we have yielded in faith to Christ, we find our guilt washed and cleansed by the Savior.

"The penitent who has been overmastered by the holiness of Christ has hope for pardon because his past sins were committed in ignorance of the depth of his iniquity. If one sins in the full light of knowledge that he is attacking Christ, that one is a hardened wretch. If after the gospel reveals to a sinner that he is fighting against Christ and the sinner persists, he is in danger of committing the unpardonable sin. As a result of true repentance, God wipes out all our sin and cancels all morally guilty accounts.

"Repentance brings a great peace and refreshment into the peace-blessed individual. Every repentance has a social and cosmic value. A man converted makes the angels sing, gladdens the heart of Christ and adds to the number of the church that God is gathering out of all nations and ages. When a certain number, known only to God, is gathered into the kingdom and unto invisible church, then Christ will come and the whole world will be blessed later with the long prophesied redemption of society and the world."

SUCCESS BASED ON RESOLUTIONS

Must Be Adhered To to Bring Results, Declares Pastor.

The importance of resolutions in the life of men and their value to the maker were discussed last night by Rev. J. Emmett Porter, pastor of the Grace Methodist church, Twenty-second avenue west and Third street, in a sermon on "Resolutions." The pastor said that the great men of the present and past were those who made resolutions and kept them.

"Resolution is the forerunner of all great and worthy achievement," said Rev. Mr. Porter. "The unstable in mind are those who have gravitated toward the foot of the hill of life, and are to be found there in great multitudes and on the heights are to be found the few who have resolved, 'this one thing to do,' and have kept the resolution—cost what it might. Every achievement that history has found worthy a place in its pages has been the result of well thought out plans—the execution of some mighty resolve.

"There are those people in the world who pride themselves that they make no resolution. They are the accidents in life. The almshouse is filled with them; the prison lists are crowded with them; they ultimately become the parasites of society. The drunkard is still in the gutter, who never resolved for the first time that this should be his last drink.

"But resolutions are not enough of themselves alone; they indicate only the best desire of the mind and must be followed up with a consecration of every vital energy of the creature, mind, muscle and spirit. He who makes resolutions that are not to fail and leave the resolver a weakling, must consecrate himself to service, two-handed service, not half-hearted make-believe endeavor. It is not the number of resolutions made that marks the world's great men, but the resolutions steadfastly kept until the ideal has been attained.

"The New Year season is a good time, though not the only time, for the formation of ideals and resolving to seek their perfection. There is something about the season when everyone is thinking of the new and hoping for the wonders which their planning will bring, which makes it eminently the time of decision for the better. We all work better in a company that is marching to success than we alone on a lonesome road toward failure—get thee, therefore, into the van of this marching company of 'sixteeners' who have aims higher than a daily meal and a curbstone for a pillow."

BRICKLAYERS ELECT.

Also Plan at Annual Meeting for Social Entertainment.

Plans for a social entertainment to be held under the auspices of the Bricklayers' International union No. 3 at the Bricklayers' union hall, Nineteenth avenue west and First street, have been formulated. The union held its annual election of officers on Friday evening last. It resulted in the election of the following: President, F. Garforth; vice president, J. G. Carlson; recording and corresponding secretary, William Towner; financial secretary, S. G. Nelson; treasurer, J. W. Getty; director, S. Ramstad; delegate to building trades council, J. H. Lillijander.

CHURCH IS PROSPEROUS.

First Swedish Baptists Hear Favorable Annual Reports.

The annual business meeting of the First Swedish Baptist church, Twenty-second avenue west and Third street, was held Saturday afternoon. Reports of officers showed that each society of the church had paid all expenses for the year and carried surpluses for the new year. Rev. Swaney Nelson was presented with a purse as a New Year's gift from the congregation.

The officers chosen are as follows: Angris Viren, re-elected secretary; Joel Johnson, re-elected treasurer; C. J. Palen, vice president; Joel Johnson, C. J. Palen, trustees three years; Fred Palen, trustee one year; Jacob Stohre and Axel Petersonsdeacons three years; William Hammerstrom, superintendent of the Sunday school; Leonard Anderson, assistant superintendent; Miss Hulda Larson, chorister, and Prof. N. E. Larson, church organist and choir leader.

Plans for holding a series of prayer meetings every night for the first two weeks of the new year were made.

HJELM HEADS CONGREGATION.

The congregation of the Swedish Mission church, Twenty-first avenue west and Second street, held its annual business meeting Saturday afternoon. Gust Hjelm was elected president.

The other officers are: Dennis Johnson, vice president; Elrod Anderson, secretary; Albin Carlson, secretary of finance; Hjalmar Fallgren and Nels Person, trustees; Charles Erickson, elder; C. A. Lundgren was elected treasurer for the trustees.

For the East End mission John A. Turnquist was elected superintendent of the Sunday school and Axel Anderson assistant. John Beckman was selected as leader for meetings at the East end branch.

Prayer services are to be held at the church every night this week.

Larson-Anderson.

The wedding of Miss Edith S. Larson and Axel E. Anderson took place at 8:30 o'clock Saturday evening at the home of Rev. Swaney Nelson, pastor of the First Swedish Baptist church, 2212 West Third street. They were attended by the bride's sister, Miss Esther Larson, and the groom's brother, Gust Anderson. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will make their home on Garfield avenue.

West End Briefs.

The annual church supper and meeting of the congregation will be held at the Central Baptist church this evening. Supper will be served for members and their families at 6 o'clock.

Arthur Sjolund, a divinity student at the Bethel Academy of Minneapolis, who has been spending his vacation supplying the pulpit at a Baptist church at Sandy Lake, Minn., was visiting relatives in the West end yesterday. WILL HOLD HOTEL OWNER TO ACCOUNT

Would Have Kept Lodger From Hospital Because of Small Bill.

City commissioners may be asked by Police Chief R. D. McKercher to inquire into the methods of Frank Muccilli, saloon and hotel proprietor who, police allege, refused to allow an apparently dying roomer to go to the hospital because of an $8 or $10 board bill.

Muccilli, who lives at 616 West Third street, is the proprietor of the New York hotel, 636 West Superior street, and of a saloon adjoining. Charges of misconduct may be preferred against Muccilli by the chief because the latter did not show the proper spirit in the conduct of his business.

Police investigated the affair after William Neville, 1102 Minnesota avenue, visited the hotel as a representative of the local Owls' lodge, to see Edward Bell, who he had heard was an Owl. Bell was seriously ill with pneumonia.

Mr. Neville tried to take Mr. Bell to St. Mary's hospital when he saw his condition, but the proprietor interfered, according to Mr. Neville. Finally a patrolman was called and, after a warning, the proprietor stood back and allowed Mr. Bell to be carried to a taxi, Mr. Neville said.

"I don't know whether I'll try to do anything further," said Mr. Neville later. "I will present the matter to Owls at the next meeting. I think it is shameful if a man is kept from a hospital because of an $8 or $10 bill."

Mr. Bell's condition was reported as being slightly improved today.

CONDITIONS NOW IDEAL FOR LOGGERS

Heavy Snowfall Puts Roads in Shape for Hauling.

The early fall of snow this season, and especially the heavy fall of last Saturday, have brought about ideal conditions for logging in Northern Minnesota and Northern Wisconsin, according to a lumberman who discussed conditions today. Snows before Christmas enabled the men to start work on skidways at that time, and the later snows have helped the crews to make very satisfactory progress.

The water tanks were put on the roads in the woods early, and a deep, firm ice bottom was frozen, ready for the snows. Conditions for ice-forming also have been good, and the roads are now as good as could be desired. The cold though not severe weather has also made working conditions pleasant for the men.

Work hauling logs to the roadways began early this year. Already there is a good supply of them ready to be hauled on sleds to the scene of the spring drives. In some cases logs are hauled ten to twelve miles to a stream or railway siding.

WATCHING FOR PIGGERS.

Polk County Authorities Looking After Lawbreakers.

East Grand Forks, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Polk county authorities evidently are determined to prevent violations of the county option law, as to subpenaing of four men as witnesses in a state's attorney's inquiry, to be convened shortly, followed very closely on a raid on Torvald Hagen's pool hall, where a search for evidence of gambling was made.

The Polk county grand jury will meet this month, and it is understood the county authorities intend to present evidence to that body bearing upon the liquor and gambling situation in East Grand Forks. Since the county went dry, and over thirty saloons were forced out of business here, it has been freely reported that liquor could be readily obtained, and it is the purpose of the Polk county officials to sift these reports before the grand jury.

Are Still in Hospital.

Jamestown, N. D., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fred Hins and his son, Felda, wounded over a week ago by J. Muller, who also wounded Mrs. Hins, still are in a local hospital, with physicians uncertain as to their chances for ultimate recovery.

WILL DECIDE ON SALARIES

Council Will Give Several "Raises" and Some Reductions.

Most Changes Will Occur in Safety and Works Departments.

During the latter part of this week the city commissioners will hold a special conference to decide on the 1916 salary schedule for the city employes.

Although several salary increases will be authorized, it is generally understood that one or two surprises will be sprung by the cutting down of two or three salaries now considered too high by a majority of the council members.

Following the conference this week Commissioner Voss, head of the finance division, will introduce a resolution authorizing the schedule for this year. The measure will come before the commissioners at their regular meeting a week from today.

Commissioner Farrell, works head, has submitted his salary list to Commissioner Voss, and it is expected that the other department heads will send theirs in during the week. Mayor Prince, Commissioner Voss and Commissioner Merritt say that there will be but slight changes in their divisions.

In the safety division, Commissioner Silberstein expects to ask a $300 raise for Fire Chief Randall, slight raises for all the captains and lieutenants of the fire department, and a graduated increase for all the members of the police department. He expects to reach a settlement with the patrolmen regarding raises for this year. They will either receive $2.50 a month additional, beginning Jan. 1, or $5 a month after July 1 next.

"JACK THE PEEPER" BUSY IN WEST END

A "Jack the Peeper," who has terrified residents of several West end homes by frequent visits, is being sought by police of the city.

More persistent in his annoying journeys abroad than any offender called to police attention recently, he also has been more successful in evading officers.

Isaac Deatherage, 313 North Twenty-fourth avenue west, told police today that the "peeper" had visited his home almost nightly for about two months, and that women in his family were afraid to leave the house alone after dark, or to stay at home alone.

Since recent snowfalls, the family has found fresh foot prints beneath every ground floor window, showing that the nocturnal visitor was busy. Even during the blizzard New Year's eve, he stood in the snow at various windows for a long time, judging from the trampled spots near each window.

On one occasion he climbed to the porch roof and crawled along it on his hands and knees, Mr. Deatherage said. Tracks in the snow next morning were very plain, but no one had seen him.

Complaints of this nature have been scarce recently.

CLOQUET PLANING MILLS OPERATING

Resume Work After Brief Shutdown for Repair Making.

Cloquet, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The planing mills of the Cloquet Lumber company and the Northern Lumber company, which were closed all last week, undergoing their annual overhauling and repairs, started up this morning on what promises to be a busy year's run. It is reported that owing to the improved condition of the lumber market, the planing mills and shipping crews will run full ten hours a day, which is unusual during the short days of winter.

Although the planing mills were shut down last week, practically all of the crews were kept at work straightening up the yards and overhauling the plants. The saw mills are also undergoing repairs furnishing employment to a large number of men. The repair work on the upper mill of the Northern Lumber company is almost completed, and is expected to resume operations about the middle of the month furnishing employment for about 300 men.

FEW ARRESTS IN DECEMBER

Large Part of Total of 584 Made During Christmas Season.

Duluth was on its good behavior during December, for there were but 584 arrests in the month, and a large part of these came during the Yuletide season.

Until Christmas day excitement was lacking in police circles, but since that patrolmen and detectives have been "doing a good business" as the chief put it.

In November arrests passed the 700-mark, setting a new high record for the city and indicating that prosperity was widespread, according to Chief R. D. McKercher.

"They all seem to have money," he said, "and so they spend it. That's bound to bring trouble."

The month just passed was a prosperous one, too, but the offenders were too busy with their jobs to do much skylarking until along toward the last, when activities slackened at the approach of Christmas and New Years. That is the police explanation of it.

New Duluth had the second largest month in its history, September being first with twenty-nine arrests. Last month there were twenty-seven. A feature of Lieut. Robert McDermott's report was the scarcity of drunkenness in that section of the city.

"We had but seven or eight drunks," he said. "Most of the cases were of disorderly conduct or carrying concealed weapons. That's a most unusual state of affairs." West Duluth contributed thirty-three to the total.

An even score of female offenders were brought to headquarters, two rooming raids netting half of the twenty arrests. In November there were but thirteen females arrested.

LOSES BROOCH AT NEW YEAR'S DANCE

Mrs. Sidney A. McPhail, 1525 Jefferson street, reported the loss of a $450 diamond brooch yesterday.

Mrs. McPhail first missed the jewelry while dancing at a New Year's eve party in the ballroom of the Spalding hotel, but waited for some time before coming to headquarters.

Yesterday she decided to ask the police to help her search for it.

No trace of the brooch had been discovered up to a late hour this afternoon.

"GOOD HOME FOR EVERY WILLING BOY"

No boy willing to work needs to go without a good home, according to Mrs. Agnes L. Atwood, head of the women's department of the Minnesota State Free Employment agency. Since she had an appeal published in The Herald last Friday to secure a home for a 13-year-old boy, she has received a steady stream of answers, first by telephone and later by letter. Letters were still coming in today.

"It now looks as if the case was practically settled," said Mrs. Atwood today. "A good citizen of Duluth is taking the matter up and taking care of the details necessary to take over the boy and obviate all opposition from the boy's former keeper, who horse-whipped and abused him.

"Judging from the immediate response that followed the article in The Herald, I am convinced that there is a home for every boy who is willing to work and be a desirable helper in a home."

EXTENSION WORK STOPS

Too Much Frost in Ground for Laying Water and Gas Pipes.

No more gas and water extensions will be laid this winter.

This announcement was made today by Manager Reed of the water and light department, who said that there is a heavy frost in the ground and that winter extension work would be too expensive. Active operations, however, will be continued the first thing next spring, he said.

During 1915 the water and light department laid approximately twenty miles of gas and water mains in all parts of the city, exceeding the previous year by two miles. In 1914 the department laid 10.05 miles of water pipe and 8.45 miles of gas pipe.

According to Manager Reed, a new record will be established next year, as approximately $200,000 will be spent in new extensions out to the steel plant, Morgan Park, New Duluth and Gary, and the average extension in all other parts of the city.

"During this winter," he said, "we will continue authorizing improvements, so that our program will be outlined before the spring activities begin."

Hasten Back to "the Road."
Commercial registrations at all of the Duluth hotels today were unusually heavy, following the holiday lull. MEMORIAL TO LATE GOVERNOR PROPOSED

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Plans to erect a memorial to the late Governor Hammond, in the form of a statue to stand at the capitol entrance, opposite the statue of Governor Johnson, are being made by Insurance Commissioner S. D. Works and other friends of the deceased governor. No definite method of obtaining the fund for the purpose has yet been decided upon, but the sentiment of those who knew Governor Hammond appears to be much in favor of the idea.

WILL BUILD ORE CRUSHING PLANT

An application for permission to lay a temporary spur in the alley south of Oneota street, between Thirty-eighth and Fortieth avenues west, was received by City Clerk Borgen this morning from G. A. Sherwood, general agent for the Soo road.

SOUGHT FORTUNE WITH SKATES AND FIDDLE

Sunday afternoon police found Henry in an orchestra seat at the Lyceum theater's matinee performance, and took him home.

After taking him home, the patrolman took the boy to headquarters, where he was booked for petit larceny. Mr. Lundgren told officers that his son had made a visit home on Saturday, taking $5 from the parental trousers and a watch from the parental vest.

He may be arraigned in police court this afternoon, in case the father decides to prosecute.

"I thought he was working in an orchestra somewheres," the father said.

INJUNCTION IS SOUGHT

Coal Company Would Prevent City Constructing Trunk Sewer.

Injunctional proceedings have been instituted in the district court by the Boston, Coal Dock & Wharf company, by which it is sought to have the city of Duluth perpetually enjoined and restrained from taking further steps with the construction of the Thirty-seventh avenuue west sanitary trunk sewer unless it changes its plans about having the terminus in the company's slip at the foot of Thirty-seventh avenue.

The company in its moving papers declares that the city proposes to make the slip alongside the dock a dumping place for sewer debris and asks the court to enjoin the municipality from carrying out its program with reference to the sewer. The city during the fall of 1913 started proceedings to condemn a sewer easement over and across certain property owned by The Duluth Transfer Railway company extending from the southerly line of Oneota street to the northeast corner of the dock property and the northwest corner of the slip.

The sewer in question is designed to furnish drainage for that portion of West Duluth lying between Thirtieth and Forty-first avenues west and from the Northern Pacific railroad right-of-way to the city limits to the northwest.

CHRIST FRIEND OF COMMON PEOPLE

Earned Bread By Sweat of His Brow, Says Dr. Krantz.

Dr. John A. Krantz, pastor of the Elim Swedish Lutheran church, referred to Christ as the friend of the common people in his sermon last night. The pastor spoke on the life of Christ.

"Never has a child entered into life in so humble conditions as did Christ," said Dr. Krantz. "Though Son of the King of Glory, there was no palace open to receive Him nor even a lowly inn. The uninviting stable was the only retreat open for Joseph and Mary and the lowly manger became the cradle of the Most High. No embroidered dresses awaited Him, only the plain swaddling clothes.

"Truly He came to share our poverty and mingle with men even in the very lowest conditions of life. And as we find Him growing up, He learned a trade and earned His bread by the sweat of His brow in order that the laboring men should in Him find a friend and a sympathizer who in afterlife could admonish them: 'Come unto Me, ye all that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.'

"We also find Him mingling with the sad and sorrowing ones and He shares so humanly and sympathetically with them that they feel that never did the heart of the nearest kin beat so tenderly as did the heart of this truest of friends. He mingled His tears with the tears of sorrowing friends and helped to carry their burdens. Wherever He finds a soul suffering from bodily ailments or anguish of soul, there we always find Him present in order that He may extend to them His helping hand. Wherever He finds a fallen soul, He goes into the mire and very depths of sin and crime to rescue that soul from death and destruction, not merely by raising that soul up, but by taking the burden of sin and shame upon Himself and in His own body atoning for the same, causing the curse thereof to rest upon Him.

"We find Him hated and rejected of men for no other reason than that He had revealed the love of His heavenly Father and yearned to save men from their sins. No love so unselfish as His has ever been revealed in the world, and yet he had to be exposed to the bitter hatred and murderous attempts upon His life. But seeing the lost condition of humanity, He took upon Himself the sins of the entire world, suffered the penalties in order to redeem us from the curse of the law and thus make us partakers of His righteousness.

"He shared with us even the death which we had been subjected to on account of sin. He dies our death in order that He may free us from death and open the gates of glory for us that we may live forever with Him."

BAD START IN NEW YEAR

C. Anderson, Salvation Army Worker, Strays From Narrow Path.

Finds Check Book and Is Later Taken for Forgery.

Led into the "straight and narrow" path by Salvation Armyists, C Anderson found a way to leave it for the "broad and easy" highway while working in the Army home.

He found an old check book among some scrap paper gathered by the Army, to be sold to scrap dealers, and wrote four bogus checks, signing the name "C. Moran" and making them payable to him. He was baling paper when he found the book, and straightway quit his job.

Bright and early on New Year's day Anderson sallied forth, equipped with his checks. He stopped at the saloon of Carl Jannetta, 1201 West Michigan street, cashed a $5 check, took a little drink—the first one since he had acquired religion—and went on.

He stopped at Sam Ginsberg's grocery, 1514 West Superior street, and disposed of another $5 check a little while later, and then he came back towards town, walking into a saloon at 519 West Michigan street.

Oscar Lindstrom, bartender, smelled a rat when Anderson pulled out a check signed by "C. Moran" and drawn on the First National bank. He nodded to a helper, and a little while later Detective J. L. Bradley, with Patrolmen Ricketts and Monahan, walked to headquarters with the check passer.

Before Judge F. H. Cutting in municipal court this morning Anderson waived a preliminary examination on a charge of attempted forgery and was held for the grand jury.

By S. G. NYGREN, Pharmacist.

Encouraging health discourages the undertaker, and the best and surest way to insure good health is by drinking a glassful of West Baden Sprudel Water at least once each week. More than a million men and women depend upon this excellent natural laxative water to keep them feeling fit. None are disappointed.

Headache, rheumatism, stomach and intestinal upsets, lazy liver and similar afflictions are due to sluggish bowels. West Baden Sprudel Water is the gentlest and most positive laxative water known. It has none of the unpleasant griping common to physics and its use does not breed the laxative habit.

Office workers and others of sedentary habits will find West Baden Sprudel Water their best health insurance. This laxative water now is bottled at the Mother Spring. Druggists sell the small size at 15c and the large at 35c.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

KILLED TO SAVE SELF

Claim of Alleged Montana Murderer Caught in North Dakota.

Dickinson, N. D., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Self-defense will be the plea of Joe Reiser, the Hungarian, arrested here by Sheriff Brown of Stark county on a Montana warrant charging him with killing Joe Fink, a fellow countryman, in a cabin near Salesville, Gallatin county, Dec. 23. Before Reiser left here in custody of Sheriff D. E. Gray of Gallatin county he is said to have confessed the crime and claimed he acted in self-defense because Fink attacked him during a quarrel in their shack. Reiser will be tried at Bozeman, Mont.

The arrest of Reiser clears up a mysterious murder that puzzled the Montana authorities since the crime was discovered, Dec. 23, when some one entered the cabin occupied by Reiser and Fink near Salesville and found the latter's body stripped of clothing and badly mutilated. Reiser dropped from sight and the mystery was deepened because the two were known to have been boon companions, both having visited Butte and other places seeking work, and to have been on the most friendly terms. They had a little money and planned to live in the shack till spring, when they hoped to get employment. They formerly lived in St. Paul, where Fink's body was buried.

Forgery Charge First Made.

The charge of forgery was first preferred against Reiser that led to his arrest here, a Cando, N. D., bank having issued a warrant for his arrest for forging Joe Fink's name to a $240 check drawn on that bank. Two hours after his arrest Reiser called for Sheriff George Brown and confessed to killing Fink. Reiser had been in Dickinson several days first trying to get a check cashed at a local bank and then waiting until it should pass the Cando bank. Mean time he put up a hard luck story about needing hospital treatment because of an injured arm and received a personal loan of $40.

The Cando bank passed the check, but almost at once discovered the forgery and phoned the local bank not to turn over the cash. Just as Reiser was boarding a train for the East, officers received word to arrest him for the murder of Fink. A bank clerk located the man for the officers. Reiser told the sheriff he had never been in jail before and that he wanted to make a clean breast of it.

He and Fink had been chums all their lives, their families living together in Hungary; they came to St. Paul in 1902, and worked during harvest near Cando, going west to Missoula, Butte and Bozeman, and then out in the country twenty miles to Salesville, where they were "baching"; it while looking for work. The night of the tragedy, he said, they quarreled over the bed covers, Fink claiming Reiser had more than his share. The quarrel waxed furious, Reiser says, and Fink fired at him, but missed, then Fink took an ax and struck him, injuring his arm. Reiser says he then got the ax and hit Fink over the head and killed him. He had receipts and papers belonging to Fink and two watches, two suits of clothes, etc.

Reiser is about 28 and has a wife and child in Hungary.

RED LAKE COUNTY DITCH IS ACCEPTED

Red Lake Falls, Minn., Jan. 3.—Judge William Watts of the district court held the final hearing here on Judicial Ditch No. 60, which marks the completion of the largest drainage undertaking in Red Lake county.

It drains valuable lands in Pennington, Red Lake and Polk counties. In the system are more than thirty miles of ditches and about as many more miles of road grade have been made.

The cost of the ditch was not far from $60,000. The D. A. Foley company receives $41,086.75 for excavation and the Borgan Manufacturing company, $6,677.80 for culverts. M. R. Hussey of Crookston has received $10,035 for concrete work and there have been other expenses of the proceedings necessary to legally establish and construct the ditch.

Engineer's Final Estimate.

The final estimate of George A. Ralph, the engineer, was accepted, showing that the construction work is practically completed. It will be necessary for the construction company to remove a small amount of silt from the ditch in the spring and to do a small amount of road grading or leveling. To cover this work $1,200 was withheld from the D. A. Foley company until the work is done. Three culverts are still to be placed by the Borgan Manufacturing company and a little work to be done on three others. To cover this $300 was withheld from this company until the work is completed.

The Hilltop-Victoria properties have had a somewhat checkered career having been operated by sundry weak interests since the lease upon them to the Steel corporation was surrendered. It is understood that the new owners are financially strong and that they will operate extensively here after they get started.

CHRISTMAS HOST FOULLY MURDERED

North Dakotan Begins Long Term for Brutal Murder.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 3.—Special to The Herald.)—Andrew Anderson has entered the North Dakota penitentiary to commence serving a 25-year sentence for murder, imposed on him by Judge Frank Fish of Williston, following his plea of guilty to the charge of slaying Ole Halgrensen, his neighbor, ten days ago.

The murder was most brutal, Halgrenson being shot from behind, his head being nearly blown off, and is said to have resulted from intoxication, Anderson having imbibed freely from a jug of blindpig liquor he had himself furnished.

Halgrenson had gone to Anderson's farm to invite Anderson and his family to attend a Christmas dinner. Anderson began drinking heavily, and while laboring under the delusion that Halgrenson had in some manner crossed him, he slew Halgrenson.

Anderson had a family of seven children, and Halgrenson had a family of nine.

SIBLEY SCOUT BURIED.

Funeral of Indian Uprising Veteran Held at Litchfield.

Litchfield, Minn., Jan. 3.—The funeral of Vincent Coombs, a Meeker county pioneer and veteran of the great Indian uprising who died Friday, aged 76, was held here today.

Mr. Coombs came to Meeker county with his parents from Crawfordsville, Ind., traveling the entire distance in a prairie schooner. Crawfordsville was named for ancestors of the family who settled in Indiana in an early day.

Mr. Coombs was one of the original Sibley scouts and helped to bury the first persons who were killed at Acton in the Indian uprising of August, 1862. All the members of his family had taken refuge in the woods near a small lake, where they were found by John Other-Day, a friendly Indian, who led them to Hutchinson, where they found a new refuge in a stockade which had been built there.

Mr. Coombs joined the scouts soon after and accompanied them through various parts of North Dakota and finally helped to capture a son of Chief Little Crow near what is now the village of Velva, N. D. It was then the Indian boy learned of the tragic death of his father at the hands of the settlers.

The Coombs family lived for many years on a farm in this county, but had retired and had lived in Litchfield for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Pritchard departed in the afternoon for Duluth and will go to Thief River Falls to live, where a newly-built home awaits them.

Olson, whose body was found frozen in the ice of the Missouri river a short distance northwest of Williston and southeast of Mondak, Mont.

That Olson, who disappeared from Wildrose, N. D., about a year ago, after he had withdrawn his money from a bank there, was murdered and robbed, is the theory held by the officials of the two counties. They also believe that the crime occurred at Mondak, near which point Olson was last seen alive.

DYSPEPTICS! END STOMACH MISERY, GAS, INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" Neutralizes Acids in Stomach and Starts Digestion.

Stops Any Sourness, Heartburn, or Food Rising in Few Moments.

The question as to how long you are going to continue to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak stomachs should take a little Diapepsin occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, sour risings, gas on stomach or belching of undigested food, headaches, dizziness or sick stomach, and besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.—Advertisement.

An Interesting History Supported by Endorsements from Many Institutions Throughout the Country.

In 1848 Father John O'Brien, a noble priest, came to Lowell, Mass., to do the work of his order in St. Patrick's parish.

In 1915, Father John, as he is fondly known to his people, was attacked by a serious cold, which developed into a stubborn cough and affection of the lungs, causing the gravest alarm for the health of the beloved clergyman.

Medical skill was unable to stay the progress of the disease. Finally, an English specialist was consulted who, after Father John's description to cure the cold and remove the lung trouble, as well as to build up and strengthen the body. The physician took the prescription to a local drug store of Carleton & Hovey, Lowell, Mass., the firm that put up Father John's medicine prepared. The cough soon disappeared and his people were delighted when he declared that he had been made as well and strong as ever.

Father John recommended the medicine to his parishioners and friends, and the results were well and strong testimonials. In getting this preparation it was always called for "Father John's Medicine," and as it was introduced by the people and advertised all with the approval and sanction of Rev. Father O'Brien because he desired all to benefit by its cure.

While it is not a "cough syrup" or "tonic," nothing equals this prescription for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, consumption, and all throat and lung troubles. It has the most soothing and healing effect, at the same time builds up the body and makes strength.

We have permission to refer to the Sisters in charge of the following Homes and Hospitals where Father John's Medicine is in use: Sisters of Charity, St. John's Hospital, Lowell, Mass., Notre Dame de Lourdes hospital, Manchester, N. BASEBALL MAGNATES HAVE A BIG TASK TO PERFORM

There Are Many Ills That Should Be Cured; It Is to Be Hoped That Those in Control of Baseball Will Take the Lessons of the Past Well to Heart.

BY BRUCE.

IT is all well enough to dwell deliciously on the harmony that is to dwell in baseball, now that the rupture has been cemented by the visitation of the dove of peace and the fissures healed by the opening of many bottles of sparkling stuff—but—perhaps now and then some bold and defiant lance of the turbulent past is going to feel the weight of managerial oppression; will have the iron of corroding hate twisted a bit into his system.

We have in mind players of the stamp of Hal Chase, for instance. What magnate is there that covets Chase? Some one may fancy this erratic individual perched on his first sack, but there has been no pell-mell rush to grab off the once brilliant Californian.

There will possibly be others. The war has cost the magnates much, and when you cause a man to lose money, especially a rapacious and covetous person, you open a deep wound. It wouldn't be surprising if an occasional player was let out before his time and that in his case there would not be the least difficulty encountered in securing waivers. There are a few players who have been particularly offensive to the leaders of organized baseball, and in their cases, maybe they will run into snags of managerial opposition or persecution. This is but an idle fancy upon our part, but it may work out in the end.

Last Revolt for Some Time.

IT will probably be years ere there is another fight against the very bulwark of organized baseball. There may be dissention and a threat to break away upon the part of the minor leagues, as there has been a rumbling of discontent these past seasons, but the invasion of the Federal league has pretty well demonstrated that there is not money enough in the land for three big leagues, and that, on top of this basic consideration, the players are not to be had.

If you will read your baseball history from the growing development of the primitive game of rounders, you will find that about the only really successful fight that was carried clear through, was that of the American league. One of the essential ingredients of success possessed by the American league, was a group of baseball men of a high and energetic caliber.

That is something that surely cannot be said of the Federal league. We have read of the multifarious millions that were back of those pompous individuals who were wont to tell of what they were about to do, but insofar as real baseball ability was concerned, the Federal cause was woefully shy of men of the big bulk of Charles A. Comiskey and Connie Mack, those two stalwarts who stood in the thick of the American league fight.

Every follower of baseball hopes the game is cured of its ills. If baseball ever reaches the stage where it is treated indifferently upon the part of the American public, it is good night to professional sports. The beginning of the end will have been reached.

All scandalous charges against baseball have been promptly and speedily disproven. Of late years intelligent men have professed to believe wild stories of world's series game tampering. But in the main the following of the game believes implicitly in its honesty. The danger to baseball lies in the overdoing of the commercial side. It is on this score that every well-wisher of the game fervently hopes that the ending of the war, rather than making the magnates vain and pompous, will cause them to realize how radically the game stands in need of some reforming.

Case of Football.

DURING the past few years baseball has experienced a lamentable falling off in attendance. Critics have assigned various reasons to this defection. Golfing and automobiling are two of the chief cases enumerated. But it should be remembered that while the attendance at baseball games has shown a decrease of so great proportions as to cause real alarm among the club owners, the football crowds have been increasing.

This may be the American public's tribute to real sportsmanship and a protest against the dollar sign in sport. The Yale Bowl has proven too small to hold the crowds at the big games, and Yale football is at a mighty low ebb, too.

There is something the matter with baseball—and whatever it is, it is hoped that they operate, if no other means can be discovered of treating the sick person successfully. The baseball war is ended and it is time that a period of reconstruction be inaugurated—that the damage of the past be repaired.

HERRMANN AGAIN TO BE CHAIRMAN

National Commission Annual Meeting On; Waiver Rule in Federals.

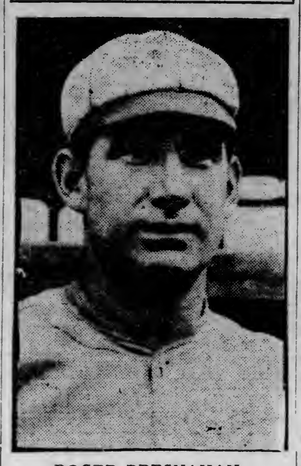

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan 3.—Unless something now unforeseen happens, August Herrmann will be re-elected chairman of the national baseball commission at its annual meeting here today.

Likewise it is almost a certainty that John E. Bruce will be re-elected secretary.

The commission was to convene at noon today to take up, among other things, the question of the waiver rule as it shall be applied to the players formerly on the St. Louis Federals and the Chicago Federals, if the Chicago Nationals are purchased by Charles Weeghman, former president of the Chicago Federals.

A number of other matters will come up, but it was announced yesterday by Chairman Herrmann that nothing of an exceptional nature was among the regular matters to be discussed.

MAY MAKE TROUBLE FOR THE CUB TEAM

ROGER BRESNAHAN.

There seems to be an air assumption that Joe Tinker is going to be the manager of the Cubs. Charles Weeghman wants the man who landed the Federal league pennant for him, despite the fact that Brenahan has a contract that has several years to run. The Duke will, probably, have to be taken care of or there will be legal entanglements.

MEETING IS CALLED.

Amateur League Hockey Heads Will Discuss Financial Matters.

A meeting of the Duluth Amateur Hockey league heads is scheduled for today. Finances will be taken up, there being some money matters that demand immediate attention.

President Charles Horn of the league declared that it was the intention of the league heads to get all details smoothed out before the next games of the league. It is expected that the contests of this week will start promptly on time.

Officials had difficulty getting the games of last week under way, but that little delay was all that marred the opening. The meeting of today is expected to clear up all matters that have been pending settlement.

DR. WILLIAMS SAID TO BE CHOICE OF YALE COMMITTEE

Minnesota Football Coach Likely to Be Asked to Succeed Frank Hinckey as Head Coach at New Haven—Shevlin Sang Praises of Gopher Instructor.

New Haven, Conn., 3.—That the choice of the new head of the football coaching staff at Yale has been shifted from Tad Jones, until now most seriously considered as the favorite, to Dr. Harry Williams of Minnesota, and that soon after the holidays an announcement will be made that Dr. Williams is to be the man became known here yesterday.

Vance McCormick, former mayor of Harrisburg, and a member of Yale corporation, who is chairman of the committee of three selected by the general athletic committee of Yale to choose the coach, has been here the last week, and is understood to have conferred with the college officials concerning the choice. The other two members of the committee are Brinke Thorne and John R. Kilpatrick, both of New York City.

Dr. Williams Interviewed.

Dr. Williams has been in New York also during the Christmas holidays, having come east from the university of Minnesota, principally to attend various conferences concerning college athletic matters in New York City, but also to talk over the Yale football situation with Mr. McCormick, Mr. Thorne and Mr. Kilpatrick.

The selection of Dr. Willams is all but settled. No terms have been agreed upon, and before the contracts are finally made the committee will consider some other recommendations, but long before the spring football work is commenced the announcement as to next fall will be made.

If Dr. Williams is unable to leave Minnesota for the spring work here this year, that undoubtedly can be satisfactorily arranged. Dr. William T. Bull, who has charge of the Yale backs, possibly would take charge of the squad in the spring work, which will be largely rudimentary, and devoted to punting.

The committee seriously considered Tad Jones, who is one of the most prominent and popular athletes who graduated from Yale. There is a growing sentiment that Yale must have some one of long experience and cease to experiment with coaching systems. Harvard has one well nigh perfect and Princeton is in a fair way to duplicate under "Speedy" Rush.

Shevlin's Recommendation.

The thing which practically settled the committee for Williams, however, was the strong recommendation in favor of Harry Williams by Thomas Shevlin. A letter to the effect that Williams should be put in charge of the Yale football squad and speaking most heartily in his favor was sent to the committee by the great end rush just before he was stricken with his fatal illness. That Shevlin was an excellent judge of coaches as well as players was recognized by the committee and Shevlin's yeoman work for Yale in 1910 and 1915 put him in a position to be of great influence in the selection of the next coach. Furthermore Shevlin has never been aligned with any of the so-called factions in Yale athletics. He was individually and temperamentally too big. He was unselfish, never forced his views on Yale committees and seldom offered them, but when sought they were always forthcoming and generally emphatic. His recommendation of Dr. Williams had great weight.

SCHEDULE IS ANNOUNCED

Four Teams in American Amateur Hockey Association This Year.

Hockey Championship Held By Soo Team, Says Webb.

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 3.—The schedule of the Western division of the American Amateur Hockey association was announced by Charles E. Webb, the president, today. It follows:

There are no eastern or central division this year.

President Webb said:

"Owing to the fact that the Cleveland Athletic club, holders of the Cleveland membership in the American Amateur Hockey association, is not this year maintaining a hockey team, that city has no team in the association and the other eastern and central cities also have kept out.

"Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Syracuse and Boston have hockey teams and while they nominally recognize the authority of the association, are not playing regular schedules.

"New York teams never have affiliated with the association, but we are reasonably confident that next year the New York city league will affiliate and then all the eastern and central teams will come in. We then will be able to carry out our original plan of forming eastern, central and western divisions to play for sectional championships, the winners to play for the national championship and the MacNaughton cup.

"The hockey championship of the United States," said President Webb, "is held by the Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., team of the American Amateur Hockey association, which last winter won the MacNaughton cup, emblematic of that championship, in competition with teams from Cleveland, Houghton, Calumet and Duluth.

"The Soo team stands ready to defend the amateur hockey championship of the United States, which title was conferred on it by the only organization with any right to confer a title in hockey in the United States."

PLAN STATE BODY OF FARMERS' CLUBS

Representatives of Gopher Farmers' Club Meet in St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 3.—Representatives of 900 farmers' clubs gathered at the state university farm and agricultural school here today for the purpose of forming a state federation. Agriculturists, dairymen, fruitgrowers, breeders and livestock men to the number of nearly 2,000 were present at the opening session.

The meeting is to continue for five days. Daily sessions will begin at 8:30 a. m. and continue until 10 p. m. without a break. Side meetings and conferences are set for every hour of the day. All questions pertaining to farming and to the welfare of the farmer will be discussed. Tabloid courses in thirteen various lines of work, condensed to embrace only the cardinal points of any subject, also will be conducted.

To Interest City Folk.

The various activities, particularly the courses, were made sweeping in their appeal, the object being to interest the city folk as well as the farmer. There are technical courses in fruit propagation and farming designed to attract amateur gardeners and truck farmers.

Courses of interest to women have been arranged. Mrs. Harriet B. Darling of Boston, lecturer on home problems, will address the women daily, as will other experts on various technical subjects.

BIG JOB FOR JOE STECKER

Famous Farmer Boy Agrees to Throw Each Opponent Twice.

Dodge Grappler Ranked as Greatest the Sport Has Produced.

BY BRUCE.

Joe Stecker's appearance in Duluth Wednesday evening will mark the third appearance in this city of a great mat sensation.

Frank Gotch came here when he was being talked of far and near. George Hackenschmidt likewise invaded Duluth almost in the heyday of his career, though it is probably true that the great Russian Lion, truly one of the most marvelous athletes of all time, was slipping some at that time.

Now Stecker, probably the most sensational mat performer of all time, is coming.

Word received from J. F. Hetmanek, manager of Stecker, stated that the young Nebraskan would arrive here late Tuesday or early Wednesday. According to Hetmanek, the $5,000 belt donated by the citizens of Nebraska and officially presented by the governor of the state will be lugged along.

Right after Stecker gets through with the task of dumping two men in the same evening here, a task of no small proportion when you think that Joe is taking on two real contenders in the big Clemens and the swift and shifty Ernest Kartje, one of the greatest light heavyweights in the game, he will be matched with either Frank Gotch or Yussiff Mahmout, who is on his way to the United States from Europe.

Mahmout Will Test Him.

It is claimed for young Stecker that he is the greatest the mat game has produced, and Yussiff Mahmout, it is believed, will show decisively just how good the young farmer boy is.

In choosing two men to oppose Stecker, Cub La Joy is going to give the fans a run for their money. Stecker has been heaving his opponents so rapidly that it was believed that in picking but one opponent for the latest and greatest mat sensation, the fans would see but little of the leg scissors marvel. In agreeing to throw each of his opponents twice or forfeit the match, the local fans will have ample opportunity to get a line on the Dodge, Neb., phenom.

It is said that Stecker can fasten his famous scissors hold on any part of an opponent's body. It is also said that the farmer kid is as fast as Beell in his prime and it is because of his remarkable speed and shiftiness that he has been able to get behind every man he has as yet met.

Shows Cutler Up.

Charley Cutler moves very fast, as the fans here know, but Stecker made the big Chicago moose appear slow and wrestled rings around the man generally named as the American successor to Frank Gotch, up to that fatal meeting with Stecker, July 5 last.

In securing a big and strong opponent as well as a fast and remarkably clever wrestler to oppose Stecker, La Joy figures that the fans will have a chance to see Stecker extend himself to the limit and let out some real wrestling.

Olaf Johnson, who won the Olympic championship as representing Norway and Theodore Zorbas will meet in the preliminary, while the wrestling royal is expected to prove a novel and interesting event.

PROVES POWER OF MENTAL SUGGESTION

Bartender Assists Young Men to Acquire New Year's "Souse" Without Alcohol.

It doesn't even take beer to get some persons drunk—especially on New Year's eve. This was proved conclusively not further away than last Friday night in Duluth.

A bartender with a psychological turn of mind, decided to put the "Q. E. D." after this interesting proposition on the festive night. Beholding three embryo Bohemians apparently obsessed with the idea of "organizing" for the new year, the barkeep set about his interesting task of helping them to "go the limit." The three reckless young "topers" lined up against the mahogany, and the leader threw down three nickels for three glasses of beer. The bartender took down three schooners and filled them with a non-alcoholic beverage resembling beer. The three swallowed the drinks without stopping for a breath.

"Three more," exclaimed the second of the party.

Three more schooners were drawn and placed on the bar, and three more sighs of satisfaction were heard as the young "souses" gulped down the drinks.

"Three more," said the third, and each of the young men began to feel intoxicated, tipping his hat rakishly over one eye, extending the chest, and assuming that despefate look sometimes characteristic of Charlie Chaplin just before he puts his foot into some big fellow's stomach.

The ordering of drinks kept on for some time and the drinkers got more boisterous, and now and then one would let out a whoop. About this time, however, the bank must have begun to get low, for they took a final round of drinks—the same thing—and started out. Whether they were searching for "the face on the barroom floor" cannot be learned as they are still sobering up, but at any rate they zigzagged toward the door, and started down Superior street singing:

"Cheer, cheer, the gang's all here."

HERBERT KAUFMAN WILL SPUR YOU ON

Articles By Remarkable Writer Will Be in The Herald.

What a powerful orator can do with his spoken words in inspiring men to higher and better actions, is no more wonderful than what Herbert Kaufman can do in the way of giving inspiration through his writings.

To few has there been given a power similar to that of this man—to none has it been granted to excell him in putting dynamic energy into the form of the printed word.

The Herald has made arrangements for the publication every week of articles from Kaufman's pen, and any reader who fails to read these inspiring paragraphs will be missing something he cannot well afford to miss.

And these Kaufman articles will not consist of glittering generalities. They will be definite arguments for the development of the best that is in you; for recognizing and grasping of opportunities as they come; for the advancement of your individuality as a positive and worth-while quality.

"As a figure, a personality, a force, he has no living rival."

The Kaufman articles will appear in The Herald on Saturdays, beginning on Jan. 8.

RECEIPTS AT KANSAS CITY ON THE INCREASE

Over 6,000 More Cars of Livestock in 1915 Than in 1914.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 3.—Receipts at the Kansas City stock yards in 1915 were 6,121 carloads more than received the year previous, according to figures announced today. A gain was made in the number of cattle, hogs and horses arriving, while sheep and calves dropped off. Analyzing the report, officials declare it indicates the producers are withholding calves from market for growth, and a plentiful supply of hogs and cattle in the districts shipping to the local yards.

Heavy shipments of horses and mules came forward because of the demand made upon the local market by buyers for countries now engaged in war in Europe.

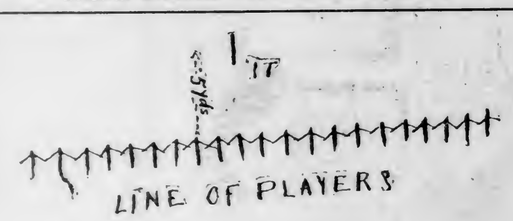

Receipts of cattle for 1915 were: 1,863,000, compared with 1,827,246 in 1914. Hog receipts were 2,525,000 in 1915 and 2,264,805 the year before; sheep, 1,816,000, against 2,002,042 in 1914; calves, 103,500, compared with 129,406; horses and mules, 102,000, against 87,155 in 1914.

Unusually heavy shipments of cattle and sheep were received from all Pacific coast states, and from all the mountain states. Stock cattle from Iowa and Minnesota found a market here in large numbers during the year. Consignments of hogs came from new territory, including Idaho, Montana and other western states, where irrigation has made the production of hog feed possible.

A new high record for cattle receipts in a single day was established Oct. 25, 1915, with 43,320 head received.

SOME WINTER SPORTS

Written for The Herald By J. R. Batchelor, City Recreational Director—No. 9—"Pinch Oh!"

Starting and Safety Line

Pinch Oh! on Skates

PINCH OH! ON SKATES.

In "Pinch Oh!" the players form a line joining hands and the one who is "it" keeps five yards ahead of this line. On the word "go" the players and the one who is "it" skate forward, and the player on the left of the line squeezes the hand of the player next and so on across the line until the player at the extreme right gets the signal and calls out "Oh!" at which time the player who is "it" turns and tries to tag any in the line before they reach the safety line. In skating forward the "it" man must keep going and the line must keep up to the five-yard distance all the time.

Proclamation!

TO THE PEOPLE OF DULUTH:

At 2 o'clock this afternoon the mortal remains of Minnesota's distinguished, greatly esteemed and beloved governor, Winfield Scott Hammond, will be laid at rest.

As a tribute of respect to the memory of the distinguished dead it is suggested that insofar as circumstances and conditions will permit, that for a period of five minutes, immediately after 2 o'clock p. m., commercial and industrial activities cease; that the wheels of transportation be stilled, and that the thought of our people generally and of the pupils in our schools in particular be employed in contemplation of the splendid qualities in mind and in heart possessed by Governor Hammond and of the greatness of the service rendered by him to the state and to the nation.

(Signed) W. I. PRINCE, Mayor.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

The Baby Sheds His Band

IS THE baby's band efficacious? Does it really serve the purpose for which it is intended?

It is the ancient argument that the baby band makes his little tummy warm and helps digest his food; that it strengthens his back; and that babies have worn abdominal bands ever since cloth was first woven, and hence should continue the habit.

Science holds that the only function or excuse for a baby binder is to retain the umbilical dressing. Science deposes and says that a band won't keep the baby any warmer than his shirt; that the band is so loose and twisted out of place half the time that it can't offer appreciable support to the back, and anyway the back needs no such support.

A good many anxious fathers have paced the floor many and many a night with a cantankerous baby, made so by the irritation of a needless band. A good many doses of colic cure, soothing syrup and other poisonous dopes have been poured into babies who were endeavoring to explain that they wished some sane person would remove that confounded, itching, twisted, annoying, heating binder.

At the age of 3 weeks, in most instances, and surely at the age of 1 month, every baby should shed his binder, whether his parents like the idea or not. This advice we give the babies in the interest of the health and strength of the coming generation. If babies would only use a little common sense and not be guided by foolish old tribal customs handed down by our savage ancestors, the binder evil would soon be corrected.

A baby's tummy will stand a great many hard knocks. It is sturdily built for the purpose. Give it a chance. It is capable of keeping nice and warm against heavy odds. Don't coddle it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Sitting Up in Bed.

How soon after confinement should a mother sit up in bed? How soon may she get out of bed? How soon may she go downstairs? How soon may she go outdoors? How soon may she wheel out the baby?

Answer—She should never sit up in bed. When she sits up she should sit in a chair. Sitting up in bed is hard work. She may sit up as soon as she wishes, in an uncomplicated case—say, the second or third day—this is the modern practice. She may go downstairs, as a rule, at the end of two weeks. She may go out for a short ride, or a very few steps walking, after the end of three weeks. She may wheel out the baby after the end of four weeks. Meantime father should take the baby for a ride, when the weather is not extremely severe. It is never too soon to take a normal infant out for an airing, and most babies suffer for want of open air.

Hookworm.

Please give a remedy for the hookworm disease.

Answer—Five or ten drops of the oil of chenopodium (American wormseed) given in capsules or on sugar, on empty stomach, followed in two hours by about a double dose of castor oil—the treatment should be repeated for two or three days.

Dr. Brady will answer all questions pertaining to Health. All questions will be answered, whether they come from people residing in Duluth or outside, provided they comply with the rules here stated.

JUSTICE LAMAR PASSES AWAY

Member of United States Supreme Court Dies of Heart Failure.

Fifty-Eight Years Old and Five Years on High Bench.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Arrangements are being made today for the funeral of Joseph Rucker Lamar, associate justice of the supreme court, who died at his home here last night of gradual heart failure. He was 58 years old and had he lived until noon today, would have completed a service of five years on the supreme court bench. Following custom, the court, after meeting today, adjourned in respect to the memory of the late justice.

The burial will be at Augusta, Ga., for many years the home of the late justice. The funeral party, which probably will include his associates on the supreme bench, will start for Augusta Tuesday afternoon.

It was believed here today that because of the important cases now awaiting consideration before a full court, President Wilson will make an appointment at once to fill the vacancy caused by Justice Lamar's death. Last fall, when Justice Lamar's health became impaired, and when a movement was started to retire him on full pay, Secretary of the Interior Lane and Solicitor General John W. Davis were mentioned in discussions as his possible successor.

Appointed by Republican.

Associate Justice Joseph Rucker Lamar had the distinction of being one of the few members of the court appointed by a president of opposite political faith. President Taft appointed him in 1910 with only two precedents for such action, those of Justices Jackson and Lurton.

Justice Lamar was born in Ruckersville, Elbert county, Ga., Oct. 14, 1857. He attended the University of Georgia and later Bethany college, where he was graduated in 1877. He attended the law school at Washington and Lee university, and was admitted to the bar at Augusta, Ga., in 1878. He lived at Augusta until appointed to the supreme court bench.

Coming from distinguished southern stock, he was one of the few men whose family had previously had a representative on the bench. The justice was a cousin to Associate Justice L. Q. C. Lamar of Mississippi, who served on the bench from 1888 to 1893.

He was honored by his state by many positions for which his learning and ability as a lawyer fitted him. First he was a member of the Georgia house of representatives, and in 1892 was appointed by the supreme court of Georgia as one of the commissioners to prepare a code of laws for the state, which code was adopted by the general assembly in 1895. He was again honored on Jan. 1901, by appointment to fill an unexpired term as associate justice of the Georgia supreme court and was elected to the same position at the ensuing election. In 1905, he resigned to resume the practice of law.

In the practicing of law, he largely represented railroads and other big corporations, and, yet, in the day of antipathy to corporation lawyers, his integrity was so highly regarded that the senate without delay confirmed his nomination.

Early in his service on the supreme court bench, he became recognized as one of the most powerful members. His opinions were finished works of logic. Applications for rehearings were rare in cases he decided.

Coming to Washington as a man little known beyond his state, his rise in public estimation as a member of the court, led President Wilson to select him as the principal commissioner for the United States in the ABC mediation at Niagara Falls in 1914 between the United States and Mexico over conditions in the southern republic. In this position he acquitted himself with distinction.

YOUR BRONCHIAL TUBES

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes, with that weakening, tickling cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head jars with every cough and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from alcohol or drugs. Refuse substitutes.

STATE NARCOTICS LAW IS IN FORCE

More Explicit as to Possession of Drugs Than Federal Act.

On Saturday last the Nimocks law, enacted by the 1915 legislature prohibiting and forbidding the sale of any preparation contsining narcotic drugs except by a licensed pharmacist, went into effect. If the preparation contains narcotics below a certain strength, however, it can be sold without a prescription. The new act covers chloral. Violations of the statutes are punishable as a felony.

In a recent decision, Judge Wilbur F. Booth of the Federal court ruled that mere possession of a narcotic by an authorized person was not punishable as a violation of the Federal act. The state law, however, is more explicit and the statute is plain in this regard.

Another law which went into effect Saturday was an act passed by the last legislature requiring every county treasurer to have printed on the back of receipts for current taxes a statement showing how the tax levy is apportioned to different purposes.

WAR RELIC PLACED IN MEMORIAL HALL

Instrument Used Throughout War Obtained From Veteran's Widow.

To the collection of Civil war relics in Memorial hall, courthouse, has been added the bass drum which led the First Minnesota infantry from Fort Snelling to St. Paul on June 15, 1861, and which was with the company until the men were mustered out of the service four years later.

The instrument was secured recently by Asa Dailey, custodian. It was formerly owned by the late Gilbert R. Thurston of Ellsworth, Wis. Mr. Dailey and Mr. Thurston were comrades. Some time ago, Mr. Dailey requested the drum for the Memorial hall collection. Since Mr. Thurston's death the request has been complied with by his widow. Spanish War Veterans are endeavoring to secure relics from the Philippine service for the collection.

STATE AID TO SUFFERERS

Nearly $1,000,000 Spent in Last Three Years in Sanatoriums.

Twenty-Five Centers to Fight White Plague Are Established.

Minnesota and the various counties of the state have within the last three years expended nearly $1,000,000 in aid to tuberculosis sufferers

The Nopeming sanatorium of St. Louis county was built in conformity with the provisions of the state law. Other county sanatoriums are located as follows: Goodhue, Hennepin, Ramsey, Lac Qui Parle, Chippewa, Yellow Medicine and Renville, Beltrami, Hubbard and Koochiching, Wabasha, Becker and Clay, Polk and Norman, Roseau and Marshall, Todd and Wadena, Aitkin and Crow Wing, Ottertail, Lincoln, Lyons, Pipestone, Murray, Rock, Nobles, Jackson and Cottonwood.

Funds Grow Rapidly.

The 1913 legislature began the movement when it passed a law creating what is known as the advisory commission's sanatorium for consumptives and made a total appropriation of $600,000, which was to cover a period of three years. The final $100,000 of the amount became available last August.

Under the law any county or group of counties may establish sanatoriums in aid of those afflicted with tuberculosis and the state will aid to an amount not to exceeed $50,000. Nearly a score of counties have taken advantage of this law, and on their own account have deposited in the state treasury $310,327.76. This is being added to almost weekly and State Treasurer Smith, who is custodian of the fund, believes it will reach the $500,000 mark before spring.

The sanatorium fund has also received aid in the shape of 10 per cent from the boxing contests held in the three large cities. These contests have contributed to date $4,484.60.

TAILOR SHOP FIRE BLOCKS TRAFFIC

Fire starting in the tailor shop adjoining the Park hotel, Sixth avenue west and Superior street, Saturday night, blocked traffic on all Superior street car lines passing Sixth avenue west and delayed homeward-bound theatergoers for more than half an hour.

The worst snow storm of the year added to troubles of the traffic, although order was restored shortly before 11 o'clock. The fire loss at the hotel was estimated at $300.

A pedestrian, seeing flames in the tailor shop, turned in the alarm, and a minute later several score of lodgers at the hotel were thrown into a near panic when they discovered fire in the adjoining rooms.

The nine-inch snowfall impeded the fire department equipment from outlying districts considerably, but they made fast time, considering, and reached the building before the fire had made much headway. Smoke and water caused most of the loss.

IRON INDUSTRY WILL PAY $6,239,005 IN TAXES IN 1916

Shoulders Two-Thirds of the Tax Burden of the County.

St. Louis county's iron ore industry will contribute $6,239,005.48 to the public tax funds during the coming year, according to figures which are now available at the office of County Auditor Hilden.

The mines this year will shoulder the heaviest tax burden. They will contribute 63.8 per cent of the total taxes to be collected. Last year the percentage of the total taxes paid by the mineral interests was 67.4 and for the year previous it was 68.3.

The assessed valuation of mineral lands in the various taxing districts of the county showed practically no increase this year, although there is an increase of nearly $500,000 in the amount of taxes to be collected from the ore operators.

The taxes for the current year are now due and payable. On the books of the county auditor and county treasurer, they are 1915 taxes based on levies made last year and figured on valuations as of May 1, 1915. The following tables show comparisons in the assessed valuations and the amount of taxes assessed against mineral interests in the various range towns:

CAN KEEP OR LOSE TRADE

Washington, Jan. 3.—Whether the foreign trade of South America reverts to European markets after the war will depend largely upon the interest shown now by American investors, said George E. Roberts of the National City bank of New York in a paper he read today before a subdivision of the Pan-American Scientific congress. He said that for the last six months South American countries had imported more heavily from the United States.

CITY SCHOOLS REASSEMBLE

Sixteen thousand children, more or less, breathed a deep sigh this morning and started back to their respective schoolhouses, ready to begin the long grind lasting until Easter vacation.

January will be a busy month for the teachers, principals and incidentally for Supt. E. R. Denfeld. Schedules must be readjusted preparatory to opening the new semester's work on Feb. 1, and classes will be larger then than they are now, it is believed.

Grip and allied complaints made big inroads on the school attendance during the week or ten days just preceding the Yuletide holidays, but Supt. Denfeld said he expected a majority of the sick students to be back in their places again today.

In fact, meager reports from the various buildings indicated that there would be a considerable increase in the enrollment today, as compared with the closing day before Christmas.

Teachers who had been home on vacations crowded incoming trains Saturday night and Sunday, in order to be on hand for the opening gong.

Schedules will be shifted in several schools beginning Feb. 1, with the new semester, to accommodate the larger classes, according to Supt. Denfeld.

Crowded conditions in many of the special departments, including manual training, domestic science and sewing, have made these changes necessary.

More than 300 students will tonight resume work in night schools.

CONFEREES NAMED TO FORM CODE

Six commercial and trade organizations of Duluth have already selected their committees for the drafting of a proposed combined building, electrical and plumbing code.

Mayor Prince said this morning that the Duluth Rotary club, The Builders' Exchange, the Real Estate Exchange, the West Duluth Commercial club, the Architects' club and the Electrical Contractors have selected their committees. The Federated Trades Assembly, the Electrical Workers, the Duluth Commercial club and the New Duluth Commercial club have yet to appoint their committees, he said.

As soon as all the committees are appointed, Mayor Prince will call a meeting of the representatives and start work on the proposed code.

INVALID TWO YEARS, O. T. MORRIS DIES

Oliver T. Morris, 608 West Second street, a Duluth resident for twenty years and well known in railroad circles, died at his residence Jan. 1. He was 58 years old.

Mr. Morris retired from active business life about two years ago and has been an invalid most of the time since then. His death came suddenly however.

Born in Morrisburg, Ont., he came to the United States when a young man. In 1886 he was married to Miss Evie Kellene at Cumberland, Wis., and from there he went to Minneapolis, where he entered the employ of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad. In 1895 he came to Duluth for the same road, and later he accepted a position with the Duluth, Missabe & Northern as agent at Marble, Minn.

He is survived by a widow and two sons. The sons are Charles H., railroad agent at Saginaw, Mich., and George W., with the Western Union Telegraph company at Reno, Nev.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock from Grady & Horgan's undertaking rooms. Mr. Morris had been a member of the U. O. E. for eighteen years, and members of that lodge will have charge of the funeral services.

MYSTERY GIRL TO BE FILMED IN DULUTH DURING NEXT WEEK

Sometime next week, Duluth will be entertaining or be entertained by "the mystery girl," who is now in the Twin Cities and promises to invade Duluth and, later on, the lumber woods. The latter, she will "do" in knickerbockers.

This "mystery girl" is the "Mutual Traveler" girl, who is having herself filmed in various cities in a "See America First" series to be shown the nation over by the Mutual company. The camera man, W. C. Runcie, was here and took many pictures of Duluth last summer, but now the team is out to get pictures of the country in winter.

"The mystery girl" has a name, of course, but she is not telling it. She is said to be pretty and has a delightful "Lunnon" accent, but declares she is a Brooklynite.

Pictures are taken of parks, streets, picturesque spots, industrial centers, factories, etc., and for this trip, at each of them the "mystery girl" will be featured.

"THE MYSTERY GIRL."

HARMONY LEAGUE MEMBERS REFUSE TO DISCUSS WAR

Are you a member of the Harmony league?

What is it?

It's a league, the members of which are absolutely neutral and who refuse to discuss the European war.

Fred S. Hall, who recently came here from Manchester, Eng., as linen buyer for Silberstein & Bondy, is a member of this league and one of its ardent supporters. It originated in the East several months ago, he said.

"I never talk about the war any more," said Mr. Hall this morning, "because I want to avoid unnecessary arguments."

Mr. Hall has spent all his business career in the linen business in England and was brought here direct from the Smith, Hill & Co., of Manchester.

APPROPRIATION FOR NEW LIBRARY BOOKS

Mayor Prince will introduce an ordinance at the council meeting this afternoon appropriating $3,000 for the purchase of new books for the public library during the first half of 1916.

In addition, the council will take final action on the ordinance authorizing the sale of the old armory to the Shriners and segregating the money in a special fund for the new city hall site. Commissioner Farrell, who is opposed to the measure, is attending Governor Hammond's funeral in St. James this afternoon and it is expected that the vote will be 3 to 1, Commissioner Merritt opposing the measure.

The first 1916 paving job will be ordered this afternoon, when the council will authorize the improvement of First street, between Twentieth and Thirtieth avenues west.

An ordinance appropriating $250 to defray the expenses of City Engineer Ayres, who has been authorized to represent the city at the hearing of government engineers on the New Duluth bridge at Washington next Thursday morning, will be introduced by Commissioner Farrell. Mr. Ayres will leave for Washington this afternoon.

A sanitary sewer will be ordered in Luther avenue, between Anoka street and Woodland avenue.

MANY DEALERS HAVE BAD MEAT

P. Sher & Co., 80 pounds of veal; E. J. Anderson of Braham, Minn., 21 pounds of poultry; C. A. Lindor, 30 pounds of beef; North Land Market, 100 pounds of corn beef; H. Wildes, 45 pounds of veal; Peter Anderson, 49 pounds of veal; and Decker & Co., 30 pounds of veal and 63 pounds of poultry.

DECEMBER'S MILD RECORD

Weather Unusual in Lack of Gales and Zero Temperatures.

December, from a weather point of view, was an unusual month only in its lack of sensational stunts in temperature, precipitation, wind and other features of the weather business. H. W. Richardson, weather forecaster here, says that the month was remarkable in this respect and furnished far less sensation than the twelfth month of the year usually affords.

There was just one storm at the western end of Lake Superior, instead of a multiplicity of gales, that one being on Dec. 23, when the wind reached a maximum velocity of forty-seven miles an hour. The harbor ice was less all during the month than the average in December, and at the end of the month was 12 inches thick, almost 2 inches less than the usual thickness, which is 13.6 inches. The last arrival of a boat from the lower lakes set a new record, the Griffin coming in on the afternoon of Dec. 23, and the government stretched a point, for the average date of the end of the storm signal service is Dec. 15, while this year it was kept up until Dec. 20.

During December the highest temperature was 39 deg., on Dec. 7; the lowest was on Dec. 27, when the mercury reached a low of 7 deg. under zero; the average for the month was 18.6, which is 9 deg. above the normal for the month. The special feature about the temperature was the absence of lows. Dec. 27 was the only cold day of the month, when the usual thing is a succession of cold ones.

The precipitation was .87 inch, which is .35 inch less than normal, the latter being 1.22 inches.

The snowfall for the month happened to be just exactly normal, being 8.9 inches. The heaviest falls were on Dec. 16 and 22.

DULUTHIANS ATTEND LATE GOVERNOR'S FUNERAL.

Several Duluthians went to St. Paul yesterday to be present at the last rites over the remains of the late Governor Winfield Scott Hammond. A. C. Weiss, publisher of The Herald, was one of the honorary pallbearers and C. L. McNair of Cloquet was another. Other Duluthians who attended were: City Commissioner J. A. Farrell, Fred L. Ryan and A. M. Chisholm.

A number of other Duluthians had planned to attend, but were detained on business at the last minute and could not be present.

PLAN SAFETY FIRST ORGANIZATION

A permanent safety-first organization, to consist of the prominent men and women of the city, is now planned for Duluth.

This morning Glen S. Locker, safety inspector of the Duluth & Iron Range road, invited Commissioner Silberstein, head of the safety division, to attend a meeting of railroad and street car officials at the Commercial club next Wednesday noon, when the campaign will be launched for the proposed organization.

On Jan. 14 and 15 safety first lectures will be delivered at the new armory by officers of the railroads and the street car company of Duluth and it is expected that the organization of a safety-first society will follow. These lectures will be open to the public and will include special stereopticon slides. School children of the city will attend the lectures in the afternoons of both days.

"Such an organization as is proposed by Mr. Locker would be a great help to the city," said Commissioner Silberstein this noon following his conference with the railroad representative. "I only hope the prominent men and women of the city respond to the invitation, so that a good, strong safety-first society will be the result. It means much for the welfare of Duluth."

MRS. DENHAM DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Mrs. Ella Gould Denham, wife of W. H. Denham, died at the family residence, 219 East Third street, this morning after an illness of about ten days. Pneumonia was given as the cause.

Prominent in a social way, Mrs. Denham was widely known in the city. Her sudden death was a great shock to the many friends. She was 63 years old.

In addition to the husband, Mrs. Denham is survived by two daughters, Pearl and Beulah. Mr. Denham is with the Cutler-Magner company of this city.

Funeral services will be held from the residence Wednesday afternoon beginning at 2 o'clock. Temporary interment will be made at Forest Hill cemetery and later the body will be taken to the old family home at Ithaca, N. Y., for burial.

FIRST GRADE SCHOOL HOCKEY LEAGUE

Duluth's first grade school hockey league will be organized at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and the opening games will be played next Saturday morning at Chester park, according to an announcement made today by J. R. Batchelor, recreational director.

All school boys in the city weighing 110 pounds or more will meet in the council chamber after school hours tomorrow and organize the league. When this organization is perfected, Director Batchelor plans to start another league for boys under 110 pounds.

The games will be played on the eight public skating rinks every Wednesday and Friday afternoons, from 3 o'clock until dark, and on Saturday and holiday mornings up to 10 o'clock. During these periods the rinks will be turned over entirely to the skaters. The opening games will be played at Chester park Saturday morning.

Pennants and prize buttons will be awarded the winning team and the individual players, Director Batchelor announced.

ON THE IRON RANGES

NEW MESABA RANGE BUILDING READY FOR INSPECTION

MOUNTAIN IRON VILLAGE HALL.

Mountain Iron, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new village hall built under the direction of the present council, A. W. Saari, president; C. A. Webb, clerk; D. A. Mitchell, Albert Lindor, L. Charmolie, trustee, will be open to the public for inspection on Friday Jan. 16, between the hours of 1 and 3 p. m. A committee consisting of Chas. Walker, Dr. F. L. Parsons, J. F. Muench has been named by the Commercial club to assist the village council in arranging for the opening exercises.

Many invitations were being sent out to village councils and other bodies on the range and a general invitation extended to the public to visit the village and inspect the hall together with other public buildings on that day.

BAND'S FUTURE IS NOW IN BALANCE

Up to Citizens of Hibbing Whether Organization Continues.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—What efforts Hibbing makes to retain its concert band is the question on the minds of everyone at the present time.

The plans of the park board and band committee to effect a compromise have failed and the only thing open to the band boys at the present time is a popular subscription, which at the most seems like a hopeless venture, according to the musicians who contend that it has been tried out in the past and has proved without success.

Two weeks' time has been decided upon by the members of the band as the interval in which they will decide as an organization or disband.

The village council, which has in the past furnished a sufficient appropriation to carry the expenses of the band through for the current year, will again be appealed to, and bandsmen, citizens and friends alike are hoping against hope that the village "dads" will so increase this year's appropriation so the band can hold its former place as one of the best bands in Minnesota.

The concert Sunday afternoon, which attracted over 700 people from Hibbing and many towns on the range in spite of inclement weather conditions, friends of the band state, is sufficient reason that as an advertising and moral good for a community the Hibbing Concert band has more than fulfilled its mission.

VIRGINIA SEVEN WINS.

Defeats Superior Aggregation in First Hockey Game of Season.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the first hockey game of the season the Virginia city team defeated the Superior aggregation 2 to 0. Kimball, rover for the locals, scored the first goal in four minutes.

The locals outplayed their opponents in all departments of the game and showed more teamwork. The game was played in four quarters of fifteen minutes each. In the first quarter the visitors made several attempts at goal, but could not pass the puck past Goal Tender Larson. Dewey Dahl, local point, on many occasions took the puck out of Virginia's territory and made some shots at the Superior goal.

MOHAMI CLUB SPORT.

Virginia Organization Pulls Off New Year's Stunts.

Virginia, Minn., Jana. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hundreds of members of the Mohami club and their friends attended the annual New Year's night entertainment at the clubhouse Saturday, which had been arranged by the athletic committee.

The program was opened with Battling Doman going four fast rounds with Carl Morris, jr. A. Jarvinen, a Finnish miner, made his debut and showed he was an expert in the catch-as-catch-can sport. He took two out of three falls from F. Nelson, an experienced wrestler, who was outclassed. Robert Palo and E. Nelson wrestled fifteen minutes, but neither was able to get a fall. Jack Dewar again displayed his ability as a boxer, going four rounds with C. Dennison and made his bigger opponent work hard. Following the athletic numbers, coffee, sandwiches and cigars were distributed in the dining hall of the clubhouse.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Advertisement.

NETT LAKE INDIAN IS SENT TO COUNTY JAIL.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—C. Bonness, a Nett Lake Indian, was adjudged guilty of violating the state game laws today and sentenced to a term in the county jail. PRETTY ELY WEDDING.

Miss Esther Gustafson Becomes Mrs. Clarence Brown.

Ely, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The holiday season saw a pretty wedding celebrated here at the home of the bride when Miss Esther Gustafson, daughter of Victor Gustafson, was married to Clarence Milford Brown, formerly of Two Harbors, in the presence of relatives. Coral Brown and Isabel Gustafson attended the bride, while Frank Schweiger and Thomas J. Brown attended the bridegroom.

The bride wore a midnight blue velvet suit with fur trimmings and a Georgette silk crepe blouse trimmed in real lace. The modish traveling hat was of black velvet and satin. A corsage bouquet of violets was the only flowers worn.

The ceremony was performed in the living room under a pretty lattice work arrangement with showers of hearts in pink and white. The dining room was also decorated in pink and white. Pink and white carnations formed the centerpiece for the table. Immediately after the ceremony a wedding dinner was served by Mrs. C. M. Hanson, assisted by Miss Edith Anderson. The young couple left for a short honeymoon trip to the Twin Cities and Two Harbors.

The bride was born and reared here, and is a graduate of the Ely high school, class of 1913. The bridegroom was born and reared at Two Harbors and is a graduate of the high school of that city. He also attended the University of Minnesota for one year. Mr. Brown has resided in Ely since September and has been undertaker for the Laing Hardware company. The young couple will be at home after Feb. 1, on East Sheridan street in a house erected for them by the bride's father. Miss Coral Brown, a sister, and Thomas J. Brown, father of the groom, were the only members of the groom's family able to attend the wedding, the others being confined to their home with the grip.

VIRGINIA SCHOOLS HONOR NOTED DEAD

Temporary Suspension of Studies While Teachers Laud Executive.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—While there was no formal request from Mayor Boylan that stores close this afternoon during the funeral of Governor Hammond, there was a semblance of observance of the sad event, notably in the schools, which reopened today. There was a few minutes' cessation of school duties after 2 p. m. today. In all the rooms the teachers told the pupils something of the life and work of the dead executive. Mayor Boylan is in St. Paul today for the funeral.

Hibbing Offices Closed.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Public offices were closed here this afternoon during Governor Hammond's funeral.

Ministers in their sermons touched briefly on the death of the governor, while everywhere there has been sorrow expressed.

Power Pays Tribute.

Five Hibbing citizens attended the funeral today.

Mayor Victor, preparatory to his leaving for Duluth, yesterday, said:

"The loss of Governor Hammond has been a shock to me. A man who was self-made and who worked his way up into the world as Governor Hammond did cannot fail to win the admiration of everyone. He was a splendid type of American citizenship and his loss to the state he so ably served is a great one."

MAY MAKE CHANGE.

Hibbing Board May Institute New System of Making Heat Charges.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The water and light board at its meeting tomorrow night may decide on a new system of charging for heat furnished by the municipal plant because of alleged irregularities in the meter measuring system.

Under the old system, consumers paid 60 cents for 1,000 pounds of condensation. The equivalent of that radiation is about 42 cents a foot.

The water and light board decided at the meeting held the first Tuesday in December to make a change in the system of charging for heat. A number of consumers appeared before the board and requested it as their bills for December were exorbitant.

All of the bills showed an increase of more than 100 per cent. Consumers were told not to pay their bills until Tuesday's meeting, when the question will be settled.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Hurry, Mother! Remove Poisons From Little Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Bilious or Feverish.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that it's little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

COLD

The weather man said, on Saturday, that it would snow. He was right—righter than he predicted, for it snowed the hardest that this season has seen and furnished a white blanket that rivals many a season's fall. Nine inches of snowfall is worth considering, and when it comes with a 35-mile gale, it made walking inconvenient, to say the least. Yesterday was not so bad though, for the snow had been pretty well cleared from walks and the atmosphere was agreeable. Today is another nice day, with sunshine added, and the cold just at about the right degree.

A year ago today was fine. The sun rose this morning at 7:54 and will set this evening at 4:31, giving eight hours and thirty-seven minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Zero weather" covers Minnesota, the Dakotas, Northern Montana, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the lowest reported temperature being 24 degs. below zero at both Swift Current and Medicine Hat. A disturbance centered over Oregon has caused snow or rain in Western Montana, Idaho, British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, and Northern California. Heavy rain fell at San Francisco. Further snow fell over Eastern Canada, New England states and the northern portions of the Lake region during the last twenty-four hours."

Henry Turrish, Duluth lumberman, is of the belief that with the passing of Pinchotism and other afflictions of lumbermen, the lumber business of the nation, and particularly that of the Pacific coast, is bound to boom before long.

"All we need," said Mr. Turrish today, "is to get the transportation organization, including the ships, and business is bound to be big."

Mr. Turrish believes that the end of the war will see the greatest movement of lumber that the business has ever enjoyed. He, like other business men, believes that the present prosperity of the nation is a minor thing as compared to that which is due when the war ends and the period of reconstruction in Europe begins.

"That condition, when it arrives," said Mr. Turrish, in discussing the general outlook for lumber, "will help the lumber business as much as it will steel or anything else and will give the lumber trade an impetus such as we have not enjoyed in many years.

Coast Organization.

"There is talk of organization of lumber interests on the Pacific coast for the purposes of export; but such an organization has not yet been effected. It is to be hoped that it will be brought about soon, for arrangements for such export business cannot come too soon, for nobody knows when the war will end. I believe that almost immediately that the war is over, the demand for material for rebuilding will begin, and the Pacific coast will have to furnish the great bulk of the lumber needed. The exporters there will have to buy or charter ships to take the lumber through the Panama canal and over to Europe, and as that kind of work takes some time, there is, in my opinion, little time to be lost in perfecting it."

Lumber Combine Only Talk.

Mr. Turrish denied that there is a prospect of a big lumber combine, such as has been talked about among dealers on the Pacific coast.

"That talk," said he today, "came about in two ways. Some men who wanted to sell their timber holdings talked it as a consummation devoutly to be wished, and others, hearing about the proposed organization of an export company, confused the two rumors. I don't look for any other combination among coast lumbermen other than that to market their lumber in Europe."

Regarding causes that have held the lumber business back, Mr. Turrish said:

"Pinchotism and other isms, emanating from the Federal and state governments, tore the lumber business to pieces, and the result is that the last six or seven years have been a period of famine with the men engaged in the lumber trade. It looks as though the people have gotten through with that so-called progressive movement and are returning to sane ideas. That will spell prosperity and will give the 40,000 men who have been out of work something to do. So far as the Progressives are concerned, I believe that the people of the country have had enough of them, and that they couldn't get to first base now. Let's hope so, anyway, for with their ideas of tearing things to pieces, no thought is taken of the thousands they cause to starve or patronize the bread lines and soup kitchens."

FINE FOR WOODSMEN.

Hines Lumber Company Installs Some Modern Camp Cars.

Hayward, Wis., Jan. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Old-time Woodsmen will be surprised by the modern improvements installed at lumber camps in Southern Sawyer county by the Park Falls Lumber company, of which Edward Hines, the Chicago lumber king, is president. This company has just completed the construction of a new set of car camps, which are models in every respect, and if the woodsmen employed in these camps have any objection to them it will be because they are not accustomed to such luxuries and are altogether too comfortable. While the first cost of these camps is much higher than the old style, they are said to be more economical in the end, and it will not be surprising if they supercede the old style camps altogether throughout the lumbering regions within the next few years.

The new camps consist of twelve cars, accommodating a crew of 150 men and all their requirements for work in the woods. The entire train is electric lighted and heated with a vapor system, one car equipped with a boiler, small engine and dynamo, supplying heat and light. The cars are substantially built and well furnished, and present a more sightly appearance and are even more comfortable than the average city residence.

The sawmill of the Willow River Lumber company here will start its season's cut in the very near future, according to President G. C. Glover of that concern.

Wheat Turns Weak on Accumulating Stocks and Quiet Demand.

Flaxseed Trade Draggy—Prices Show Moderate Declines in Day.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 3.—After opening strong on higher Liverpool cables today, the wheat market turned weak with some selling on the expectation of a large increase in the American visible supply.

May wheat closed 1¾c off at $1.20 bid. It opened ⅛c up at $1.22¼. July closed ⅞c off at $1.19¾.

Business in durum was light, and its market showed an easy tendency throughout. The close was at the low point of the session. May durum closed 1⅞c off at $1.18⅛.

Puts on Minneapolis May wheat closed at $1.17⅛ and calls at $1.22 bid.

Out of respect for the late Governor Hammond, the Duluth and Minneapolis markets closed at 12 o'clock today. Operations during the session were somewhat draggy and holders appeared to lack ammunition to warrant support in any quarter. There was a good cash demand on the Duluth market with fair inquiry from millers in evidence. Everything offered on the tables went readily. Heaviness was brought about largely through the rapidly increasing stores in the local elevators, and belief that accumulations might become burdensome within a short time on account of the deferring of all rail-shipments to the East through the congestion at the seaboard and the embargoes placed against further forwardings until conditions in the East are relieved. Shippers are in hopes that the British and French governments will place more steamers at the disposal of the grain trade to move the accumulated stores at the ocean terminals, but as to that there is as yet no assurance.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth for the three days aggregated 630 cars against 63 last year. At Minneapolis, there were 1,201 cars against 456 a year ago, and at Winnipeg, 1,490 cars against only 295 a year ago.

Primary wheat receipts ran up to large proportions, amounting to 4,078,000 bu against 1,484,000 bu last year.

Trading in flaxseed was quiet. At the start the quotation was advanced 1c with the filling of some accumulated buying orders. Later realizing appeared and the market turned weak.

May flax opened 1¢c up at $2.23½, advanced 1¢c more and closed 1¼c off at $2.21¾.

At Buenos Aires, flax closed 2¾c off at $1.29⅝ and London ⅝c up at $2.74.

Cash Sales Monday.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Prospects of Increase in Visible Supply Bears Wheat Prices.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Prospects of a material increase of the United States visible supply total had a bearish effect today on wheat. Buying on the part of foreigners, however, led to something of a rally. World shipments other than from North America were next to nothing, and there were reports of a renewed demand at Liverpool. Opening prices here, which ranged from ¼@⅜c to ⅞@1c lower, with May at $1.24¾ to $1.25⅛ and July at $1.16⅞ to $1.17, were followed by a substantial further decline and then an upturn.

Renewed weakness ensued owing to continued liquidation by holders. The close was weak, 1⅛c to 2⅛@2¼c net lower, with May at $1.23¼ and July at $1.18¼.

Corn sagged with wheat. There was a noticeable lack of support. After opening ⅛@¼c to ⅝c lower, the market suffered an additional setback before a recovery set in.

In subsequent trading the market fell lower than before in consequence of the increased heaviness of wheat and owing to favorable weather. The close was weak at 1⅛@1¾c to 1¼c net decline.

Oats declined with other grain. The losses, though, were not severe. Firmness developed in provisions notwithstanding lower prices on hogs. Offerings were unusually light.

STRENGTH IS STILL MARKED

Flax Situation Unchanged and Demand From Chicago Continues.

Argentine Seed Said to Be Coming in Sailing Ship.

Flax strength keeps up unabated, and the prospect is for a continuation of this stiffness for some time yet. In the past week there has been an advance in price of 6@6½c in price and so far, at any rate, the predictions of the bulls is coming true.

The extreme east is not calling for much seed these days, as almost all of that which was shipped from here before the close of navigation went to Lake Erie ports for Eastern mills, but Chicago is asking for a good deal, and considerable has been going there all rail.

It is claimed that for the Eastern mills, in addition to the supply received from this port before lake navigation closed, Argentine seed is coming in sailing vessels, other tonnage being at prohibitive rates. At any rate, the market, while advancing, is not going up as fast as it might in view of the fact that steam tonnage for Argentina seed is claimed to be out of reach, and London is calling for oil and flax eagerly. The sailing vessels may be forming that check to an otherwise inevitable upward rush.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Early Loss in Securities Followed By Sharp Rally.

Buying Movement Broadens During Last Hour of Session.

New York, Jan. 3.—Fears of fresh complications arising from the sinking of the steamship Persia imparted a heavy tone to the market at the opening of the first session of the new year. In place of the strength that marked the close of 1915, prices of active issues fell from 1 to 4 points, oils, war shares, coppers and rails like Union Pacific, Reading, New York Central, St. Paul and Erie, sharing in the decline. United States Steel which changed hands in blocks of 2,000 to 3,000 shares, yielded only a substantial fraction. The market rallied sharply, however, some losses being fully recovered. Anglo-French bonds were firm.

The early rally gave way to another selling movement in which representative stocks notably steel, the Pacifics, Anaconda Copper and Smelting, sought lower levels than at the opening. This was followed by another rise in which the average of recoveries was higher. Trading on these successive movements was very extensive, the first hour's turnover totaling almost 650,000 shares. The more stable tone of the later market was ascribed to further advices from London which put a less serious phase on the Persia episode. Oils, particularly Mexican Petroleum and St. Paul were the strong features at midday. Bonds were irregular.

Oil shares continued to dominate the list, Mexican Petroleum advancing to the new record of 128½. Smelting, New York Airbrake and International Nickel also rose materially with standard issues held firm.

Standard stocks were under partial restraint in today's broad and active market, while specialties, notably oils, supplanted recent gains.

The buying movement broadened in the final hour with a persistent demand for Mercantile Marine preferred and low-priced rails. The close was irregular.

TWO FLEETS ABSORBED BY BIG COMPANIES

Leaves Only Two Independent Fleets on Great Lakes.

Pittsburgh Buys Hawgood Boats, and Inter-Lake, Cleveland Line.

Harry Coulby, president of the Pittsburg Steamship company, has announced that he has purchased the six steamers of the Acme Transit company, the Hawgood fleet, for the Pittsburgh Steamship company. The ships were purchased in the name of J. C. Wallace, but will be turned over by Mr. Wallace in the near future.

The Pittsburgh Steamship company's fleet at the opening of navigation will consist of seventy-eight steamers and twenty-one barges, unless other ships are purchased before then. During the summer three 12-000-ton ships will be delivered to the company by builders, making a fleet of eighty-one steamers and twenty-one barges, a total of 102 vessels.

In point of numbers this will not be the largest fleet ever owned by the company, but in capacity will exceed any previous fleet owned by the company. The average carrying capacity of the vessels will be larger as the smaller vessels have been sold and replaced by much larger tonnage.

The Hawgood ships, Bransford, J. M. Jenks, H. B. Hawgood, E. F. Holmes, Umbria and Wisconsin, have an average carrying capacity of 6,800 tons, or 40,800 tons a trip. In a season running light for ore they will carry about 9,750,000 tons of ore, which, with the new tonnage being built, will make the capacity of the fleet close to 18,000,000 tons of ore a season. The fleet also carries coal used by subsidiary corporations of the United States Steel corporation in the upper lakes district.

The price paid for the ships, as announced when sold to Mr. Wallace, was $1,225,000.

Some of Ships Chartered.

The ships have considerable ore under charter for next season. About 40 per cent of their capacity is under contract to another shipper and as contracts go with ships, the Pittsburgh Steamship company will get only 60 per cent of the capacity purchased for its own use in 1916. This with the fact the company bought medium-sized boats rather than build new for 1917 delivery indicates that tonnage for next year is not entirely sufficient for its needs.

The taking over of the Hawgood fleet by the Pittsburgh Steamship company and the Mitchell fleet by the Interlake Steamship company leaves only two large independent fleets on the lakes. The Great Lakes Steamship company is not strictly an independent fleet and is reported not to be for sale. The Tomlinson fleet is practically an independent fleet.

Wiping Out Independents.

Every ship sold so far has been what has been known as an independent ship. There are left on the lakes so few independent fleets that they number fewer than fingers of a person's hand. These fleets consist of one or more boats, but combined they comprise fewer than fifty ships out of the 450 on the lakes. The big fleets and some of the smaller ones are either under the management of men who have formerly been classed as independents, but who virtually represent freight producing interests and are not dependent upon the general market for their business. The last two years has seen freight connections established on long term bases which puts these ships under control of the shippers.

The deal that is being closed for the Cleveland Steamship company will result in the following ships going into the Inter-Lake fleet: J. J. Albright, 6,800-ton capacity; E. A. S. Clarke, 6,800 tons; Loftus Cuddy, 10,000 tons; A. C. Dustin, 10,000 tons; W. H. Gratwick, 6,800 tons; M. A. Hanna, 6,800 tons; H. S. Holden, 6,800 tons; Lagonda, 5,200 tons; Walter Scranton, 6,800 tons; Joseph Sellwood, 10,000 tons; Moses Taylor, 6,800 tons, and Pendennis White, 7,000 tons.

Stockholders of the Cleveland Steamship company will vote on the sale of the ships tomorrow. Details of financing and other necessary arrangements for buying the boats have not all been completed by the Inter-Lake Steamship company.

It is understood that holders of Cleveland Steamship stock will net somewhere between $123 and $129 for their stock, including a dividend just paid. Stories that the Inter-Lake will be merged with a steel combination are denied by Inter-Lake officials.

Cleveland Fleet Sold.

Subject to the approval of stockholders of the respective companies, the Interlake Steamship company has purchased the vessel property of the Cleveland Steamship company, consisting of thirteen modern ships. The purchase price has not been made public, but is in the neighborhood of $3,000,000 cash.

Largest Deal Yet.

This is the largest boat sale made since the buying movement started and with all transactions reported as completed makes a total of forty-eight ships to be sold for lake service in the bulk freight trade. In addition to the sale of these ships, seven 12,000-ton ships and one 9,500-ton ship are under construction for delivery to lake owners next season.

The fleet of the Interlake Steamship company now consists of fifty steamers and two barges. It is the largest fleet outside of the Pittsburgh Steamship company fleet. The two fleets mentioned own one-third of the boats in the bulk freight trade on the Great Lakes.

The sale of the Cleveland Steamship company fleet will practically amount to the retirement of Capt. John Mitchell from the lake business, with which the name of Mitchell has been prominently identified for a quarter of a century. He will retain only the steamer J. J. McWilliams, owned by the Gratwick Steamship company, and for which there has been some inquiry by prospective buyers, and will continue as manager of the Buffalo Steamship company, which is largely owned by Rogers-Brown interests of Buffalo. The Buffalo fleet consists of the steamers S. M. Clement, Hugh Kennedy and W. C. Agnew.

Since the buying movement began two months ago seven managers have left the lake business by the sale of vessels. Hawgood, Carter, Mehl, Craig, Mitchell, Mills and Bradley have long been well known names on the lakes through fleets owned by men of those names. In their places only one new name appears, that of James A. Paisley, who purchased the Carter and Craig fleets.

POLISH FUND GROWING.

Another Contribution Added to $50 Received Last Week.

One dollar came in to The Herald today for the war sufferers of Poland. A check for $50 was received last week and so the fund is now $51. It is expected that the contributions will come in faster since the subject has been given publicity through the proclamation of President Wilson.

The Poles of Duluth are urging their countrymen to contribute as much as possible, as they say conditions in the war zone of Poland are even worse than those in Belgium. Contributions are being received by The Herald, A. Grabakowicz, Rev. Father Ichek and The News Tribune. The fund now stands:

UNITED STATES TO ACT PROMPTLY

EXPECTED ATTACK BY SENATORS ON FOREIGN POLICY IS NOT MADE

Senate Adjourns Until Wednesday After Ten-Minute Session.

Members Having Matters to Present Are Not Ready.

International Situation Uppermost in Minds of Congressmen.

Washington, Jan. 4.—An expected attack on the administration's foreign policy and its course in the submarine crisis, failed to materialize in the senate today when that body, after being in session less than ten minutes adjourned until noon tomorrow.

The reason assigned to the sudden adjournment by leaders on both sides was that several senators who had expected to have business to present, did not have it ready.

Rumors of Attack.

Earlier in the day Chairman Stone, of the foreign relations committee, in conference with President Wilson over the submarine crisis, told the president he had heard intimations that some senators were going to assail the administration's course and that some others were going to attack the Mexican policy.

The international situation was uppermost in the minds of members of both senate and house as they reassembled today for the real work of the session after the holiday recess.

Senator Fall, Republican, of New Mexico, had ready a resolution calling on President Wilson to inform the senate to what government he proposed to accredit Henry Prather Fletcher who has been nominated for American ambassador to Mexico. He will introduce the resolution tomorrow and it is expected that it will be made the vehicle for a general Republican attack not on Mr. Fletcher, but upon the administration's Mexican policy.

INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC IS BECOMING SERIOUS

Spreading All Over the United States From Coast to Coast.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Influenza is spreading over the United States from coast to coast in the most serious epidemic ever known, taking a large toll in lives and causing economic loss by incapacitating workers in all walks of life. Reports from public health service officers made public last night by Surgeon General Blue show that already the disease has created a grave problem for many of the larger cities and is spreading to the rural communities.

New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, San Francisco, Seattle, Cleveland and Detroit reported the disease widely prevalent. Cleveland and Detroit each have probably 100,000 cases. Of the larger cities, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, San Diego, Dallas and Mobile reported no signs of an epidemic.

There is practically nothing the federal government can do toward aiding in suppression of the epidemic, it was said. The situation must be dealt with by local authorities, and they in turn explained, are almost helpless without co-operation from the public.

Statistics on influenza are difficult to obtain, because the disease is not classed as "reportable" in many cities. Consequently most of the public health officers were obliged to send in information based to some extent on their personal observations.

ACADEMY AT FORT SNELLING

Bill Introduced By Miller Provides for Military Institution.

Would Be Run on Same Basis as West Point.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, Jan. 4.—A bill providing for the establishment of a United States military academy at Fort Snelling was introduced today by Representative Clarence B. Miller. Mr. Miller proposes to appropriate $10,000,000 for the purchase of land adjacent to Fort Snelling, the erection of buildings and the necessary equipment. The Middle West academy is to be run on the same basis as West Point, cadets to be appointed in the same way, with all the privileges and duties of the West Point boys.

Ideal Location

Mr. Miller said that he had conferred with military officers, who indorsed Fort Snelling as the ideal location for a military academy to serve the entire West. It would be adjacent to a large military post, where all branches of the regular army are stationed in ordinary times. Railroad facilities are abundant, the climate is unexcelled and conducive to hard mental work, such as is required of young men training for army officers. Its location near two large cities also is an argument in favor of the establishment of a second academy at Snelling.

Bird of Massachusetts Puts Candidacy Issue Up to G. O. P.

Says Bull Moose Will Reject Other Presidential Nominees.

East Walpole, Mass., Jan. 4.—The following open letter has been sent by Charles Sumner Bird of Massachusetts to George W. Perkins, chairman of the executive committee of the Progressive national committee. Mr. Bird, as the Progressive candidate for governor in 1912, received 116,000 votes, and again, as a candidate in 1913, received 126,000 votes, defeating the Republican candidate by over 10,000 votes.

"Mr. George W. Perkins, chairman of the executive committee, National Progressive committee, New York, N. Y.

"My dear Mr. Perkins: The Progressives, more than 2,000,000 strong, await with much interest the action of the National Progressive committee, which meets in Chicago on Jan. 11. We are largely anti-Democratic, and yet many of us will vote the Democratic ticket rather than support a reactionary Republican candidate, or subscribe to a narrow, stand-pat platform.

Would Hear From Leaders.

"The time is at hand when the responsible leaders of the Progressive party should declare, in no uncertain words, what they propose to do in the national campaign of 1916. This is no

GREEK STEAMSHIP ADRIFT IN A GALE

Towline Parts, Leaving Thessaloniki Again at Mercy of Waves.

New York, Jan. 4.—The Greek steamer Thessaloniki, which was being towed to New York by the steamer Patris, is again adrift in a gale 300 miles east-southeast of New York today, her towline having parted during the night. Wireless messages sent by the Thessaloniki to other steamers asking aid told shore stations her plight. Her 300 passengers have been transferred to the Patris.

The steamers Finland and Stockholm are reported to be "standing by."

A radio message received here early today from the Scandinavian line steamship United States said that steamer had turned from her course and headed toward the Thessaloniki. The captain said he would confine his efforts to aiding the passengers and crew of the disabled Greek steamer, as the prevailing northwest gale would make it impossible to tow the Thessaloniki. At 7 o'clock this morning it was thought that the United States was about 100 miles away from the Thessaloniki.

A later message today from the steamer Stockholm said this vessel was nearing the position given by the Thessaloniki in her SOS. call at 2:15 a. m.

ADOPT RESOLUTIONS ON LATE GOVERNOR

Minnesota Delegation in Congress Expresses Sorrow on Hammond.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

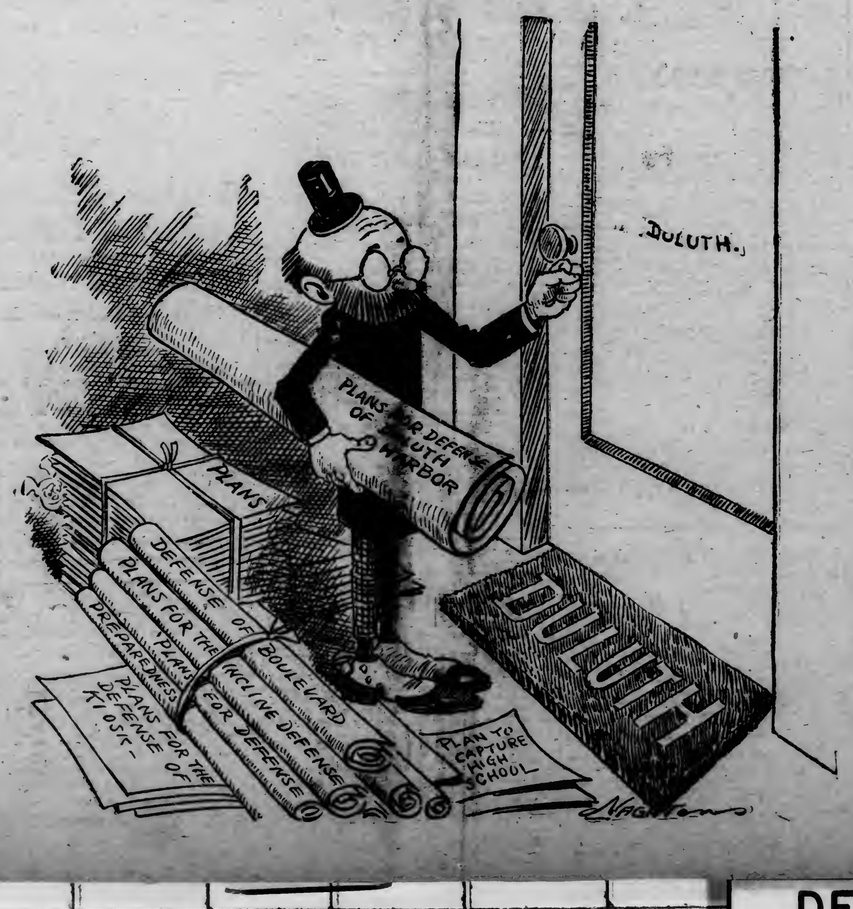

Washington, Jan. 4.—At a meeting of the Minnesota delegation today the following resolutions on the death of Governor Hammond were adopted.

"The members of the Minnesota delegation in congress, having heard of the recent death of Governor Winfield Scott Hammond, met and adopted the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That we express our sincere and profound sorrow at the sudden death of Governor Hammond. Having known and associated with him, his death is a personal loss to us all. In his official life he was a man of the highest character, faithful and efficient in the discharge of his duties. In his private life he was modest, kind and considerate to others. He deserved and earned the highest regard and esteem of all who knew him. His death in the prime of his power and usefulness is a distinct loss to the state and nation he loved so well.

"Resolved, Further, That we tender to the relatives of the deceased our deepest sympathy in their hour of bereavement."

NATIONALITY OF BOAT SINKING PERSIA TO BE ESTABLISHED FIRST

Little Can Be Done Until Detailed and Specific Information on the Affair Is Received.

Ambassadors and Consuls Instructed to Gather and Forward All Matter as Soon as Possible.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Official announcement that the government will act in the newest phase of the submarine crisis brought on by the sinking of the Persia was made today at the White House.

Secretary Tumulty issued this statement for the president:

"The president and the secretary of state are taking every means possible to obtain the full facts in this grave matter and will act just as soon as the information is obtained."

In the absence of detailed and specific information on which to base the next step, President Wilson cancelled the cabinet meeting which was to have been held today, but conferred with Chairman Stone and some members of the senate foreign relations committee.

Chairman Stone told the president there were intimations that some senators were preparing to make speeches on the sinking of ships with loss of American life. The president is understood to have simply replied that the administration was doing all it could to protect American rights.

Getting in Touch With Situation.

The president instructed Secretary Lansing to bring immediately to the White House any new information which came to hand and then busied himself reading the official dispatches so far received and getting in touch generally with the situation.

The administration is depending largely on the inquiries which Ambassador Penfield has been instructed to make at Vienna and that which consuls are gathering elsewhere, to establish the nationality of the submarine which is said to have sunk the Persia and to develop the facts in the case generally.

Senator Stone told the president that when the foreign relations committee met tomorrow he wanted to be prepared to meet any situation that might arise. The senator said after his talk with the president that until the facts regarding the Persia were obtained nothing could be done. Any nation, he

Alexandria, Egypt, Jan. 4, via London.—Charles Grant of Boston, one of the two Americans known to have been on board the British steamship Persia when she was torpedoed in the Mediterranean last Thursday, has arrived in Alexandria. Mr. Grant, so far as is known, is the only American from whom can come the story of the Persia's sinking. He gave to the Associated Press today the most detailed account yet received of the disaster.

"I was in the dining saloon of the Persia at 1:05 p. m.," he said. "I had just finished my soup and the steward was asking what I would take for my second course when a terrific explosion occurred.

"The saloon became filled with smoke, broken glass and steam from the boiler, which appeared to have burst. There was no panic on board. We

Name Does Not Appear in List of Additional Saved From Persia.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Consul General Skinner at London today advised the state department that the telegraphic list of survivors of the torpedoed liner Persia received there from Alexandria did not include the name of Robert N. McNeely, American consul at Aden, but does include Charles Grant of Boston.

Eleven survivors including Lord Montagu have been landed at Malta, according to advices to the state department from American Consul Kebbinger. His dispatch said seven Indians of the Persia's crew had been found clinging to a damaged open boat by the steamship Hingchow. All the men said the Persia had been torpedoed without warning.

ILLINOIS SOLONS TO MEET NEXT TUESDAY

Special Session of Legislature Called to Authorize State Bond Issue.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Illinois legislators at a second special session of the general assembly, which is to meet next Tuesday at Springfield, are to be asked to authorize a state bond issue for road improvement.

The announcement was made by Governor Dunne here today. The amount of the proposed bond issue was not indicated but those in touch with the administration believe that the lowest figure would be $100,000,000. The special session will be called primarily to provide additional relief for stock raisers affected by the second outbreak of the foot and mouth disease.

HUERTA'S CONDITION REMAINS UNCHANGED

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 4.—The condition of Gen. Victoriano Huerta, former provisional president of Mexico, who is seriously ill at his home here, was reported unchanged early today.

CONGRESS ASKED TO LOCATE AN ARMOR PLANT IN DULUTH

Representative Miller Introduces Bill Providing for Its Establishment.

Would Manufacture Plate, Arms, Ordnance and Other War Supplies.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Representative Clarence B. Miller today introduced a bill providing for the establishment of a government armor-plate and ordnance and munitions plant at or near Duluth. It is to cost $12,000,000, which is to be expended under the direction of the secretary of the navy. Armor, arms, ordnance and other military and naval supplies, stores and appliances are to be manufactured there.

Location Unequalled.

"Duluth is the place for the government armor-plate and munitions factory," said Mr. Miller. "It is located where it is not likely to be captured by an invading force. The raw material for the steel is there, and the supply will not be exhausted for a hundred years. While it is in the interior, it is on one of the greatest water highways in America, and the manufactured products could be shipped to every naval station in the United States entirely by water.

Economy in Expense.

"Battleships are manufactured on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and Duluth is practically equi-distant from each, and there would be economy of expense and time in the shipment of armor-plate to the Pacific.

"There is a model steel plant at Duluth, employing a highly-trained force of iron and steel workers, whose home it is sure to be for many years to come. With a government plant at Duluth, there would be no difficulty in getting workmen to manufacture armor-plate and munitions of war at all times."

SUMMARY OF THE WAR NEWS

President Wilson returned to Washington today and consulted with members of the senate foreign relations committee regarding the situation created by the submarine campaign in the Mediterranean. The president and secretary of state are taking every means possible to obtain the exact facts and will act as soon as the information is obtained, it was announced in a statement issued by the president's secretary.

Particulars regarding the sinking of the Peninsular & Oriental steamer Geelong are still lacking, except that it is known that there was no loss of life when she went down.

Under the earl of Derby's plan for British recruiting 2,829,263 men presented themselves for service, 1,679,263 being married and 1,150,000 unmarried.

The British cabinet is expected to consider the draft of the compulsion bill today. London considers further changes in the cabinet possible owing to divergence of views over this problem.

Petrograd chronicles the continuation of heavy fighting on the front from Volhynia to Bukowina and claims that the Russian forces are continuing to advance northeast of Czernowitz despite numerous counter-attacks.

Paris reports the failure of a German hand grenade attack west of Tahure in the Champagne district. There has been great artillery activity in the Vosges south of Hartmanns-Weilerkopf.

Formal announcement was made in the house of commons of the resignation of Sir John Simon, secretary of state for home affairs. His resignation was because of his non-agreement with the decision reached by the cabinet on the question of compulsion.

The German war office announced that important developments on the various fronts were lacking yesterday.

NEW FACES WILL BE SEEN

New Federal Officials Will Serve at January Court Term.

Barton Replaces Oakley and Lloyd Takes T. H. Pressnell's Place.

When the January term of the United States district court opens Jan. 11 at the Duluth Federal building, there will be a number of new faces among the Federal officials. The turn of politics and the Grim Reaper have wrought the change.

In place of Capt. Thomas H. Pressnell M. S. Lloyd, former deputy municipal clerk of court, will serve as deputy clerk of the United States district court. Mr. Lloyd has now begun his work in that office.

In place of Assistant United States Attorney Egbert S. Oakley of Duluth Elijah Barton of Minneapolis, appointed by United States Attorney Jaques, will help prosecute all Federal cases. Joel M. Dickey, another assistant of Attorney Jaques, is ill with pneumonia at his home in St. Paul. His condition is reported as quite serious.

Judge Page Morris will preside in Duluth and Judge Booth will preside over the cases tried in the southern part of this district. Attorney Alfred Jaques will be in charge of the prosecution of cases.

Clerk Charles Spencer of St. Paul will also be here and will be assisted by Deputy Clerk Catherine Neff and M. S. Lloyd.

There are only four cases for the January calendar, which was completed today. It is probably one of the shortest calendars ever tried here. The cases follow:

Charles Kotcher vs. Vermilion Lumber company.

J. C. Hanson and H. L. Erickson, members of the Chippewa Falls Construction company, vs. the board of education of the city of Duluth.

Fred A. Grosser vs. town of Deer River.

J. S. Murphy vs. National Woodenware company.

NEW RECRUITERS HAVE LONG RECORDS

E. A. Nippa, new naval recruiting officer at right of picture, and J. C. Poor, assistant naval recruiting officer at the left.

The new official heads of the Duluth naval recruiting station with headquarters at the Federal building are experienced in their work.

Officer Nippa has the title of chief turret captain, which indicates that he has served a long time in the artillery branch of the service. He has done excellent work as recruiting officer at Virginia, Minn.

Mr. Poor has lived under the sea so long that he knows more about the submarine service than he dares to tell. He says Uncle Sam is "touchy" on the point of publicity regarding submarines.

"MYSTERY GIRL" HERE

Heroine of "Movies" Will Be Pictured in Northern Scenes.

"The Mystery Girl" and W. C. Runcie of the Mutual company, which is filming the chief cities of the country in a "Seeing America First" series, arrived in the city this morning and will be here for a few days, during which views of Duluth, in which "the mystery girl" will be featured, will be taken. In a few days more "the mystery girl" will go to the woods in knickers, and there be filmed again among the lumber camps, skidways and other logging scenes.

Mr. Runcie says that the young woman likes the North country, but just the same is pining for the trip south, which is to take place as soon as the work up this way is concluded.

"How is it that you find it cold up this way, coming from Brooklyn and New York?" the young woman was asked.

"Why?" said "the mystery girl."

The questioner explained that New York has a bad record for big storms and that this winter, already, it has been snowbound, transportationless and otherwise inconvenienced by snow, when the "North" has been free from such things.

"Well," she explained, "one feels it more here, I guess. But I was not speaking of hearts when I spoke of coldness. Oh, no, not at all. Everybody I meet is warm-hearted, or shows inclinations of a willingness to be."

She would not explain herself further, but evidently Duluthians who have met "the mystery girl" have proven susceptible.

At any rate there will be several opportunities to see "movies" in the making during the next few days.

NO PEACE UNTIL THE ENEMY IS EXPELLED

So Says Emperor Nicholas in Address to Russian Chevaliers.

London, Jan. 4.—During a review of the Russian army on Jan. 2, Emperor Nicholas delivered an address to the Chevaliers of the Order of St. George, according to a news agency dispatch from Petrograd. The emperor is quoted as saying:

"To you as the most valiant representatives of our army I offer my most cordial and profound appreciation of your services which in this campaign have been full of bravery and sacrifice. I beg you to transmit to your respective regiments my sincere gratitude for your painful efforts which have succeeded as all Russia as well as I understand, and rest assured that, as I said at the beginning of the war, I will not conclude peace until we have expelled the last enemy from our territory and I will only conclude this peace with the full according of our allies, to whom we are bound, not by paper treaties, but by real friendship and blood.

"I ask you personally to convey to all the troops my recognition of their devoted service which gladdens my heart. May God protect you."

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS; DIES AT HOSPITAL

Mystery Surrounds Death of Lodger at Local Hotel.

Found unconscious in a room at the City hotel, Sixth avenue west and Superior street last night, a lumberjack whose name is believed to be Sam Klusko or Carl Lusko, was rushed to St. Mary's hospital by police, and died an hour or so later.

He did not recover consciousness, and nothing more was learned concerning him, despite the fact that authorities used every means within their power to identify him.

Coroner C. F. McComb will hold an autopsy this afternoon in an attempt to clear up the mystery surrounding the man's death, and to learn more of his home address or connections.

Staggering into the hotel Sunday night, he registered as Sam Klusko, and said he had a cold. He seemed to be intoxicated, according to the hotel clerk, and was coughing considerably. Nothing more was heard from him until late Monday afternoon, when hotel employes found him lying on the bed, unconscious.

A hospital ticket issued to Carl Lusko by the foreman of Alger-Smith Lumber company's camp No. 4 was found in a coat pocket, and local authorities have communicated with the company.

The body was taken to Grady & Horgan's undertaking rooms.

State Sells Two Lots.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—State Auditor Iverson today disposed of two lots in St. Paul belonging to the state. They were sold to Louis Blender for $475. The two lots were acquired in a suit brought against Fenton G. Warner, a former state oil inspector, who failed to turn over oil inspection collections.

PROSPERITY, WAR OR PEACE

David T. Adams Says Business Is on Firm Basis.

David T. Adams, wealthy Chicago mine owner, formerly of Duluth and the ranges, reached Duluth today on a brief business trip. Mr. Adams is registered at the Spalding.

"Good times are here to remain for years," said the mine operator, when asked for an expression of his opinion on the business situation. "Good business has been more or less concentrated heretofore, but in the future I believe you will see more far-reaching effects; that is, the good that has come to the steel business, for example, will be communicated to other lines of industry as a natural result of trade expansion.

"In Chicago business is very much better than it has been for some time. There is a feeling in the air that good times have come and that they are of the permanent, unshakable sort.

"I believe that the war is going to continue for some time, but whether it does continue for some time or whether a hasty peace is concluded, I am of the staunch belief that this country is set safely on the high road of prosperity."

Duluth's domestic animals were healthier in 1915 than they were in 1914, according to the annual report of the city veterinarian submitted this morning to Health Director Fahey.

Out of 2,048 cattle that were given the tuberculin test during the last year, fourteen reacted and were condemned, making a total percentage of .68 of the animals found unfit for milking. In 1914 the percentage was 4.3.

UNABLE TO FILL ORDERS

Oil Products Are in Big Demand at Home and Abroad.

Standard Oil stockholders have profited enormously through the great increases in quotations of gasoline and other oil products during the last year. As it is now the demand for oil is so heavy, both for domestic consumption and for export, that even with the company's complete facilities, difficulty is being experienced in covering contracts. All the other oil concerns are said to be in the same boat, too.

Statistics show that the market value of Standard Oil shares has increased threefold since the company was dissolved on May 15, 1911.

John D. Rockefeller has been the greatest beneficiary in this upturn. Prior to the dissolution of the old company he held 247,692 out of the 983,383 shares outstanding, or roughly 25 per cent. His holdings had a market value of $167,192,100 or $675 a share when the decision of the supreme court was handed down. Today these shares have a market value of more than $421,000,000, based on a price of $1,700 a share for old Standard Oil stock. As a matter of fact the price is said to be more nearly $2,000 a share and it is considered that figure only partially represents the present and potential value of the stock.

The old Standard Oil company of New Jersey was controlled by ten individuals and two estates. With the exception of the stock that has been set aside by Mr. Rockefeller for various purposes, it is believed that the holdings of the big Standard Oil stockholders are intact to a large extent.

Big Jump in Gasoline.

It is to be noted that gasoline prices have advanced from around 10 cents a gallon last June to an average figure of 19 cents a gallon wholesale now the country over and at the same time consumption is steadily galining. Gasoline consumption in the United States for 1915 is estimated to have aggregated 1,445,000,000 gallons, and with the increased number of automobiles in use the figure for the present year is placed at 2,000,000,000 gallons. The present consumption of crude oil is said to be much greater than current production necessitating large drafts on storage supplies. In Oklahoma, for example, consumption is placed at 65,000 barrels a day ahead of the output of the wells.

REAR ADMIRALS NOT ALLOWED TO SPEAK

Secretary Daniels Forbids Them Making Addresses on Navy Program.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Secretary Daniels disclosed today that he had declined to permit either Read Admiral Fiske or Rear Admiral Knight to speak on the navy program, even though he was assured that the proposed addresses would not be made public. The request was made by John W. Scott, president of the Commercial club of Chicago, by telegraph to President Wilson. Secretary Daniels replied in part as follows:

"It is my conviction that the expert opinion of the navy department having been given to the public and congress, and the president having outlined a policy of naval construction, it is better for civilians to lead the fight for enlargement, while naval officers follow the unbroken policy of not attempting to influence legislation. Until I became secretary of the navy, the reports of the general board had been regarded as confidential. I have published all their recommendations for increase in the navy. Navy experts will give their views to the naval affairs committee in congress and hearings will be published. This gives congress and the people the opinions of the experts."

WORK FARM COMMISSION REORGANIZES FOR YEAR

FRED WARD.

ARTHUR H. CRASSWELLER.

St. Louis county's work commission organized, elected officers and made plans for a busy year at a meeting held at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the institution.

It was the first meeting of the board of managers under the new plan of county management. The joint county and city commission wound up its affairs on Dec. 31, when the city of Duluth withdrew from the joint proprietorship of the institution.

The new board consists of three members instead of five. They are Arthur H. Crasweller, who was yesterday elected president for 1916; A. P. Silliman of Hibbing, who was chosen vice president; and Thomas Olafson of West Duluth.

The board retained the services of Fred Ward, superintendent, for another year and adopted the rules and regulations which were in use under the joint plant. The appointment of Mr. Ward and the adopting of the rules was made subject to the approval of the judges of the district court.

Since the city has withdrawn from the joint ownership of the farm, a charge will be made for all city prisoners at the farm who have not been committed for a violation of a state law. In the future if a prisoner is committed for the violation of a city ordinance, a charge of 24 cents a day will be made against the city for him.

Nineteen fifteen was a busy year at the work farm. The annual report of Supt. Ward shows that 1,576 prisoners were handled during the year. Of this number 196 were at the farm during the month of December. The monthly average for the year was 126.

An astonishing feature of the report is the remarkably low percentage of escapes noted. In 1915, 3 per cent of the total number of men handled escaped. And of this number several were brought back and required to serve out their time. This is considered to be a remarkable record in view of the fact that the farm is located in the woods where the opportunities to escape are exceptionally good.

SIR JOHN SIMON HAS RESIGNED

Secretary of State for Home Affairs Quits as Was Expected.

London, Jan. 4.—Announcement was made in the house of commons today of the resignation of Sir John Simon, secretary of state for home affairs.

The resignation of Sir John Simon had been forecast in press dispatches and the formal announcement today was generally expected. The home secretary was not in agreement with the decision regarding the compulsion question reached by the cabinet and his retirement was due to his divergence in opinion.

Sir John entered parliament in 1906 after a successful career at the bar and entered the ministry in 1910 as solicitor general. When the present coalition cabinet was formed he assumed the post he has just relinquished, declining the lord high chancellorship because he wished to continue his political career.

It was said of him recently that he was so far a pacificist that when the war broke out he was on the point of resigning as did Viscount Morley and John Burns, but was prompted to remain by the fact of the German invasion of Belgium.

At Least City Will Print Enough License Blanks for That Period.

City officials are not afraid of county option for the next four years, at least.

This morning Mayor Prince authorized City Clerk Borgen to order 1,000 saloon licenses printed and as there are but 170 saloons in the city, it will take from four to five years to use this new allotment.

Several slight changes are being made in the licenses for the first time in years.

FALL PROVES FATAL TO EDWARD SNYDER

Dies at Hospital After Being Unconscious Several Days.

A fracture of the skull sustained on the day after Christmas resulted fatally for Edward Snyder, aged 49, 405 North Twenty-fourth avenue west. Mr. Snyder died this morning at St. Mary's hospital after having been unconscious most of the time since the accident.

Mr. Snyder had stepped out of the rear door of his residence for the purpose of bringing in some coal when he slipped, striking the back of his head with terrific force on the steps. He was rendered unconscious and after being taken to the hospital, failed to regain consciousness except for brief periods.

Mr. Snyder is survived by his widow. There are no children. He was employed on road construction for the D. M. & N. railroad at the steel plant. The body was taken to Olson's undertaking rooms where funeral arrangements will be made this afternoon.

STREET CAR MEN IN POOL TOURNEY

Annual Contest Along Different Lines From Former Ones.

About thirty pool experts will take part in the annual pool tournament to be held this month at the clubrooms of the carhouse of the Duluth Street Railway company. From the number of employes registering for the tournament it is expected that at least that number will be entered.

Instead of holding two events as was done last year, there will be only one. All of the employes of the company, including the car men, office force and machine shop men will be entered in one. The tournaments last year included one for the office force and one for the car men, the winner of each meeting in a championship event.

With thirty men entered, each player will contest in twenty-nine games, each being required to play every other man entered. Each game will be of 100 points. Record of each game as well as the average balls per shot made during the games will be kept.

As a closing feature to the tournament the committee in charge is planning another social event in the form of a musical entertainment. A feature of this affair will be musical numbers to be given by the car men's orchestra.

Play in the tournament is expected to begin early next week.

PATROLMAN SHOT IN LEG; ACCIDENT

Nels Magnuson Drops Gun at Home; Now Laid Up.

Patrolman Nels Magnuson of the West end station is confined to his home with a bullet wound in his left leg as a result of an accident which took place at his home, 2206 West Twelfth street, Saturday evening, as he was finishing his day's work.

On reaching home at about 6:15 o'clock, New Year's day, Magnuson hung his heavy fur coat in the basement and then took his revolver out of the overcoat pocket. In doing so the gun slipped out of his hand and dropped on the floor, striking first on the hammer and causing its discharge. The bullet entered the left leg just below the knee.

The physician who was called says that Magnuson may be laid up for several days as a result of the injury. From the looks of the wound he is of the opinion that the bone was grazed, but feels certain that it was not fractured.

The buying of advertising space has been raised by this method to a plane of efficiency never known before.

We will furnish advertisers detailed Audit Bureau of Circulations reports on the circulation of this newspaper at any time. All other newspapers in which you advertise should do the same. You should pay for only what you get, not for what you are promised.

EDUCATION IN COUNTY IS COSTING $3,000,000 YEARLY

Increase in the Enrollment; Boys Outnumber Girls in Schools.

Male Teachers Better Paid; Fewer Districts, But More Schools.

N. A. YOUNG.

School costs have been steadily climbing and the point has now been reached where the administration of education in this county costs nearly $3,000,000 annually.

School expenditures for the 1914-15 year, including the high and graded schools of the cities and villages and the semi-graded and rural schools of the outlying districts, were $2,898,146.78, which is an increase of $29,721.55 over the previous year and $432,720.68 in excess of the amount expended for school purposes during the 1912-13 year.

These figures are given in the annual report of N. A. Young, county superintendent of schools, which has been completed and which was available yesterday afternoon.

As compared with the previous year, school costs for 1914-15 in St. Louis county have been in proportion to the increase in enrollment. The 1914-15 report shows that 37,286 children were enrolled for that period as compared with 36,292 for the previous school year. Of this number, 34,028 attended schools that were qualified to receive aid under a state apportionment based on attendance records. On the other hand, 3,268 were in schools that were not entitled to receive aid from this source.

A table showing how the apportionment was divided among the city and rural districts follows:

	High and Graded Schools.	Semi-Graded and Rural Schools.
Pupils entitled to apportionment	26,472	7,556
Pupils not entitled to apportionment	2,702	556
Total enrollment	29,174	8,112

More Boys Than Girls.

Boys attending school outnumbered the girls by 1,482. The report shows that of the total number enrolled in the schools of the county, 19,384 were boys and 17,902 were girls.

The average attendance for children enrolled in the high and graded schools was 158 days, in the rural schools, 118 days and in the county at large, 149. Of the total number enrolled, 35,811 children ranged in age from 5 to 21 years. Of this number, 27,713 attended the high and graded schools and 8,098 went to the rural and semi-graded institutions of learning.

The number of teachers employed during the 1914-1915 year was 1,273, an increase of seventy-one over the previous year. Of this number, 1,123 were women and 140 men. The women teaching in the high and graded schools numbered 819 and in the rural districts 214. Of the men teachers, 117 taught in the high and graded schools and twenty-three in the semi-graded and rural schools. There were in all 936 teachers employed in the high and graded schools and 337 in the other schools.

Men Better Paid.

In the matter of wages, the men teachers fared much better than did instructors of the gentler sex. The average monthly wage paid to men teachers, taking the county as a whole, was $124.29, while the women instructors received but $78.61. The average monthly wage paid to all teachers whether men or women in the county at large was $83.63.

Better wages were paid in the high and graded schools than in the county districts, as is the usual case. The average wage for teachers in the high and graded schools was $88.76. For men, it was $130.62 and for women teachers, $82.68. In the country schools, the average monthly wage for all teachers was $69.69. Male teachers received an average wage of $92.12 and the women $68.01.

Previous training of the teaching staff and other qualifications of the personnel of the force of instructors is detailed in the report. Among other things, it is pointed out that in the county at large, there are 214 college graduates on the teaching force. Of the total number of teachers 711 were equipped with a normal school training and 835 with a high school education.

In the high and graded schools, the proportion as to qualification of teachers was as follows; College graduates, 177; normal training, 567, and high school, 621. In the semi-graded and rural schools, teachers were qualified as follows: College graduates, 37; normal training, 144; high school, 214.

Has 346 Schools.

St. Louis county a year ago had 315 schoolhouses. During the 1914-1915 school year thirty-one were added to the list. Of this number twenty-five were of frame and six of brick construction. Twenty of the new buildings were built in the outlying districts and eleven were high or graded schools. The total cost of new buildings constructed during the school year was $740,987.44.

St. Louis county now has fifty-eight school districts as compared with sixty for the 1913-1914 year. During the period covered by the latest report, the county superintendent's office paid 684 visits to the schools. The following interesting facts are also statistically recorded in the report:

County teachers' meetings held	2
Total enrollment at county teachers' meetings	1,400
Districts in which pupils are transported	42
Consolidated schools	2
Districts in which less than ten are enrolled	1
School officers' meetings during year	2

SURPRISED AT CHARGES

County Officials Think Young's Bills for Auto Hire Reasonable.

Public Examiner Calls $3 an Hour "Reckless Extravagance."

Charges of "reckless extravagance beyond parallel" made against N. A. Young, county school superintendent, by Charles R. Boostrum, assistant public examiner, in a report to his chief, Andrew E. Fritz of St. Paul, and made public yesterday afternoon, were received with considerable surprise among county officials who are acquainted with the nature of the so-called "extravagance."

Mr. Young's official duties require him to make visitations to numerous schools scattered over a large area throughout St. Louis county. In making trips to and from the schools, he has employed an automobile and has submitted a bill to the county for the use of the machine. The charge made was $3 an hour for driving time and $1 an hour for standing time.

Although county commissioners have for years been honoring similar charges for automobile hire for other county departments, the public examiner's office calls the charge "an example of reckless extravagance without parallel." Automobile hire by deputy sheriffs on the range has been allowed by the board at this rate and during the street car strike in Duluth in 1912 a charge of $4 an hour was allowed.

Boostrum's Report.

With reference to the automobile charge, Mr. Boostrum says in his report;

"In October, 1914, the county superintendent of schools began to present bills for the use of his own auto in visiting schools at the rate of $15 a day. The total sum of $649 was paid to him when the county board, acting on the advice of the special attorney, refused further payments. This is undoubtedly a violation of section 1089, G. S. 1913.

"Since the superintendent ceased to use his own car the following bill was presented for the use of O. Elhstrom's auto by the county superintendent and is an example of reckless extravagance beyond parallel.

O. Elhstrom's Auto Livery.

Aug. 26.	To auto service, driving 4 hours at $3	$ 12.00
Aug. 26.	Standing service, 1½ hours at $1	1.50
Aug. 27.	Driving 9 1-3 hours	28.00
Aug. 27.	Standing 1½ hours	1.50
Aug. 31.	Driving 9 hours	27.00
Aug. 31.	Standing 2½ hours	2.50
Sept. 1.	Driving 4½ hours	13.00
Sept. 1.	Standing 3½ hours	3.50
Sept. 2.	Driving 9 1-3 hours	28.00
Sept. 2.	Standing 2½ hours	2.50
	Total	$119.50

Examiner's Deduction.

"Presumably the time spent by the superintendent in his official duties was the time charged as 'standing service' or a total of 11½ hours. At this rate the traveling expense of the superintendent for auto service alone would be $10.40 an hour."

Assistant Examiner Boostrum also holds that the county board is not authorized to purchase an auto for the sheriff. "The law," quoting from his report, "provides that the expenses of the sheriff shall be allowed and paid as other claims against the county. The legislature of 1913 amended the law to permit the sheriff to be paid for the use of his own auto and before the county can legally provide a car for the use of the sheriff additional legislation will be necessary."

Among other things, Mr. Boostrum points out that "Chapter 242, G. L. 1901, which creates a county poor commission and prescribes its operation, provides in effect that the poor fund shall never be overdrawn."

He then gives figures to show that the poor fund of 1913 was overdrawn $10,479.03; in 1914, $37,213.80, and that the total overdraft on Aug. 18, 1916, was $48,949.62.

Law Is Repealed.

The law on which Mr. Boostrum rested his criticism against making an overdraft on the poor fund has been expressly repealed and is no longer in effect.

The report of the examination of the books of the probate court refers to the judge of this court as the "Hon. Stanley Gilpin."

Several of the county officers are praised. "Mr. Vivian" (county treasurer) the report says, "is a careful capable officer."

"Affairs in the auditor's office were found to be in good condition. The work is systematized and the office force is well trained and efficient," Mr. Boostrum says.

"The examination," says Mr. Boostrum in conclusion, "discloses an excellent condition of affairs in the various offices of the county and that a praiseworthy devotion to duty characterizes the work of the county officials."

WEDDED FIFTY YEARS.

Grand Marais, Minn., Jan. 4.—Mr. and Mrs. Matthias Johnson, one time residents of Duluth, celebrated their golden wedding here a few days ago. Twenty of their friends and relatives were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were married in Tjomo, Norway, fifty years ago. They are both 76 years old and have enjoyed the best of health all their lives, except that Mr. Johnson injured his eyes through an accident about seven years ago, which caused his sight to be steadily failing, otherwise he is quite robust. Mrs. Johnson is still in the best of health. They immigrated to this country in 1888 and first settled in Duluth. Five years later they moved to Grand Marais and have made their home here since. They took up a homestead on Good Harbor Hill, where they lived for many years. Mr. Johnson was also engaged in the fishing business. About ten years ago they moved to town and are now making their home with their son, Matt Johnson.

Resinol Soap

a friend to poor complexions

Resinol Soap is not only unusually cleansing and softening, but its regular use helps nature give to the skin and hair that beauty of perfect health which it is impossible to imitate. Tendency to pimples is lessened, redness and roughness disappear, and in a very short time the complexion usually becomes clear, fresh and velvety.

The soothing, restoring influence that makes this possible is the Resinol which this soap contains and which physicians have prescribed for over twenty years, in Resinol Ointment, in the care of skin and scalp troubles.

If the skin is in bad condition through neglect or an unwise use of cosmetics, Resinol Soap should be aided by a little Resinol Ointment.

ON Jan. 6, which will fall on Thursday of this week, there will be celebrated the feast of the Epiphany. Twelfth day, or Little Christmas as it is variously called.

It is termed Twelfth day because it is the twelfth day after Christmas. This feast commemorates the visit to the Infant Jesus of the three kings from the East, the Magi, and through them the manifestation of the Savior to the Gentiles.

In some places it is customary to burn candles on the eve of the Epiphany, as on Christmas eve. Those who observe the custom strictly, burn a three-in-one candle which typifies the three kings.

Jan. 6 is the end of the Christmas season and it is customary to take down at this time all decorations, such as Christmas trees, holly wreaths and other holiday devices.

Much Interest Shown in San Carlo Opera Company

MME. SOPHIE CHARLEBOIS,
Lyric Soprano, With the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, Coming to the Lyceum Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

A great many inquiries are being received at the Lyceum box office regarding the four grand opera productions of the San Carlo Grand Opera company, the artists who will appear, the dates and other particulars. Prices and repertoire are usually the first consideration in events of this magnitude and importance. The Lyceum management has arranged with the San Carlo company for a scale of low prices, it being understood that no seat in the theater will cost more than $2, save the box seats. This applies to the three evening performances, and the matinee prices will be proportionately reduced. The opera festival should prove a joyous occasion for music lovers, students of music and others whose chances to become acquainted with the master works of song are so few and far between. The arrangement of the operas, also, appears to have had the most careful attention of the opera management. The list is as follows: Thursday evening, Jan. 6, Donizetti's beautiful three-act masterpiece, "Lucia di Lammermoor"; Friday, Verdi's spectacular opera, "Aida"; Saturday matinee, double bill offering, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" (to be sung by two separate casts of principals); evening, Verdi's three-act favorite, "Rigoletto." The productions have been so planned that the entire roster of twenty principals of the organization will be heard, some of them upon two occasions. The seat sale opened yesterday.

Wetzler-Monderer Wedding Followed By Reception

The marriage of Miss Helen Hazel Wetzler and Bernard S. Monderer of Springfield, Mass., took place at 8 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Wetzler, 1504 East Third street. Dr. Maurice Lefkovits performed the ceremony in the living room before a bower of smilax and palms. Tall white and gold baskets of Easter lilies formed an altar. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Her gown, which was made short, was of bridal satin trimmed with silver lace and draped with Georgette crepe embroidered in silver. The tulle veil, which formed a train, was arranged in coronation effect, with pearls and natural orange blossoms. She carried her mother's wedding handkerchief of point lace and a white prayer book, from which fell a shower of lilies of the valley.

Miss Irene Wetzler, cousin of the bride, was the maid of honor. She was gowned in yellow taffeta with opalescent trimming and carried a colonial bouquet of Warde roses. Helen Kunody, the flower girl, wore white lace, made empire style, and carried a basket of Warde rosebuds. The bride's mother was gowned in black velvet and jet.

At the reception of 150 guests which followed the wedding, Mrs. Louis Wetzler presided in the dining room. She was assisted by Mrs. Max Simons and Miss Harriet Simons, both of Virginia, and Miss Alice Wetzler. A color note of yellow was carried out in this room, the centerpiece being a miniature garden in which jonquils bloomed.

Mr. and Mrs. Monderer will leave tonight for an Eastern trip before going to Springfield, where they will make their home.

Peggy Peabody's Observations

Leap Year Proposals.

Leap year ought to be worth a little serious consideration from woman's point of view. It is supposed to bring a momentous privilege of which all women may avail themselves during the 366 days of its run, if they will. I refer to neither more or less than the time-honored privilege of allowing the woman to pick and choose her own mate.

An eminent scientist has approved of the idea of a woman selecting her own mate and claims that there is no doubt that the selection of a husband should rest with the woman, and to prove that is the way nature intended cites the arrangement in the animal world, where the female invariably chooses its mate. Left to herself the scientist maintains that woman would be a most discriminating chooser, and that with all sorts of men to select from she would not mate with the first man who showed a preference for her society.

The idea of woman's proposing is one of the matters that I should insist that women not take a hand in any more than they do at present. Proposals from women, while they might serve to make women more contented, is merely a shifting of the misery and dissatisfaction on to the shoulders of human beings less able to endure them. I do not know that it is any more advisable to have men unhappy except from a selfish standpoint than women, and women, because they have suffered in the connubial state ever since the days of Eve, are able to make light of matters that would simply annihilate a man in his inexperienced state.

I am inclined to think that men would be more sensitive than women over the matter of a woman's proposing marriage, directly or indirectly. If there is one thing a man abhors it is the thought of being made ridiculous and of becoming an odd stick. To be singled out as being undesirable as a husband—ah, wouldn't he be likely to accept the first one for fear that there might never be another?

Giving women the power to propose would not remedy the matter in the least. The present way is by far the best and just as effective in making happiness. Let the men propose while the women continue in their roles of first aid and prompters.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

NEW GRAND—Vaudeville and Photoplay.
REX—Photoplay.

GRAND HONORS HAMMOND.

Show Is Stopped for Five Minutes—New Bill Pleases.

The most conspicuous feature at the New Grand theater yesterday afternoon was the tribute paid to the memory of Governor Winfield Scott Hammond. At 2 o'clock the late governor's picture was thrown upon the screen and everybody in the theater stood up while the orchestra played a funeral march. Then the following tribute, arranged by Manager Frank N. Phelps, was put upon the screen:

"As a tribute to the distinguished dead, our late beloved Winfield Scott Hammond, we dedicate five minutes in memorial that the thoughts of our patrons be employed in contemplation of the goodness and worth of this great man, against whom the monarch of the tomb has turned his remorseless dart."

The new show was full of vaudeville and photoplay features throughout. The headline entertainers, the Five Burnt Corks, gave a "corking" good minstrel show. The jokes were witty and to the point and the song numbers were of the popular, catchy kind. The whole act was received with marked favor.

Neal Abel, the man with a mobile face, entertained well with a number of popular songs and a bunch of clever stories. At both he is very efficient and he will undoubtedly be a favorite during the remainder of his engagement.

The Three Kelleys offer an athletic diversion, including bag punching and other feats of skill. An athletic young woman proves more than the equal of her male opponent in a sparring match. Murphy and Klein appear to advantage in a vocal and instrumental act.

"The Tides of Retribution," a three-reel photoplay, heads the film program. A number of comedy films prove good fun producers.

Today and tomorrow the second installment of the Stingaree stories will be shown as an added attraction.

Theater Gossip.

Frank Campeau, who carries off new honors as Bill Minden in "Jordan is a Hard Road," hails from Detroit. Mr. Campeau made his great hit in "The Virginian" in New York, when he was cast for the villain Trampas. Although Dustin Farnum was the star of the western piece, Campeau fully shared the honors and his portrait of the sneaking, venomous greaser was acclaimed a masterpiece of character acting. He begged Mr. Griffith to cast him for once as a "good" man. And as such he appears in today's Griffith-Triangle feature, "Jordan is a Hard Road" at the Rex Beautiful.

FRANK CAMPEAU AT THE REX

Is There Any Flavor To Your Home Cooking?

Why is this?

Why is it that a woman will say, "I didn't have much luck with my roast"? What does she mean?

She means she has failed somehow to retain all the flavors that were in the meat—her roast lacked flavor.

When there are Steero Cubes in the kitchen, every meat or soup can have flavor, for Steero is a condensed, concentrated extract. It is the flavor of beef, of vegetables, of spices.

One or two Steero Cubes in a roast, a gravy, a sauce or a soup will impart fragrance, palatability, snap and tastiness.

Buy a box from your nearest Druggist, Grocer or Delicatessen Dealer, and find out how true this is. Steero Cubes are sold in boxes of 12, 50 and 100 Cubes. Be sure you get Steero. There are imitations.

ROOSEVELT, MARPLOT.

In their scramble for concrete issues to bolster up the general issue, which is "anything to beat Wilson," partisan Republicans have been hugging Mexico for a long time. Mexico is one thing they have been banking on to use against Wilson if everything else failed.

It is true that the growing triumph of Carranza in Mexico has steadily undermined this hope, but still it is possible to hit at Wilson by condemning Carranza, no matter how victorious he may be. And Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, who is a sort of candidate for president, outlines one argument that will be heard frequently no matter what happens in Mexico. A Washington dispatch to the New York Sun quotes him as follows:

> First in importance, however, Senator Weeks believes the present administration's failure to protect American lives and property in Mexico during the entire three years it has been in power is the one shortcoming that should effectively preclude a return of the Democrats to power.

And before Senator Week's dulcet piccolo had ceased to play this tune, along came Roosevelt with a bass drum on which he was beating out THIS tune:

> The present administration has behaved as regards Mexico in a way to make every decent American hang his head with shame. But in this respect it has merely followed in the footsteps of the previous administration (Taft's). What has been done for nearly three years by Mr. Wilson as regards Mexico is only what was done for nearly two years previously by Mr. Taft.

If Roosevelt and Weeks are right—Roosevelt who always favors violent methods and would rather fight than eat, and Weeks who is not only concerned as a Republican leader in finding an issue to help out "anything to beat Wilson" but some of whose stockbrokerage clients may have investments in Mexico—if both are right, then for five years America has failed to protect American life and property in Mexico. Whether it was its duty to do so and to what extent, what methods other than those undertaken by President Wilson could have been used, whether it is the duty of the United States to follow with its army every American who takes his dollars into an anarchy-ridden black-and-tan republic—regardless of these questions, both the Republican and Democratic administrations are equally blameless or blameworthy. We have Roosevelt's testimony for that.

We don't believe either of them deserve blame. They have both done the best they could with a distressing situation. Wilson has done more, and his plan seems to be working out. But nevertheless it is a churlish trick for Roosevelt to play, to break in thus and smash an issue on which many minor Republican ballyhooers were banking so much.

The Toledo Blade led the field by printing a seed-catalogue editorial on Dec. 31.

THE RAILROAD TRESPASSER.

The railroads would like some legislation in their behalf, and since there has been so much legislation against them, and this particular piece of legislation seems so reasonable, we favor their getting it.

What the railroads want is some fairly stiff laws against trespassing on railroad tracks; and they ask this not because pedestrians wear out the ties or the roadbed, but because pedestrians are perpetually getting themselves ground to death under the wheels.

Largely under compulsion, we are sorry to say, the railroads have adopted better car construction, block systems, safety appliances and safety rules, so that today those who travel on passenger trains are vastly safer than they ever were before. The railroads carry more than a billion passengers every year, yet fewer than a hundred are killed in a year nowadays; which makes travel on passenger trains about as safe an enterprise as you can engage upon. Under the modern rule of "safety first" enforced by safety appliances and rules, you are in about as little danger when you go riding in a passenger train as you are sitting at home.

Yet every year about five thousand people are killed by the railroads who wouldn't have been killed if they had kept off railroad property where they had no right to be. Some of them are tramps stealing rides. Some of them are farm boys walking home on the tracks, or anglers taking a short and easy cut, or school children walking home. Whether tramp or school child, they are caught on the tracks and killed—thousands of them every year.

The railroads have tried to break up the practices that expose trespassers to danger, but they have failed. People simply resent what they seem to think the smallness of the railroad magnates in grudging them the "right" to walk on the tracks. So they keep on walking and get killed.

Therefore the railroads are seeking legislation that will put the strong arm of the law back of their effort to protect trespassers against themselves. They ought to get it.

Not meaning to be inquisitive, but how do those newly turned leaves look by this time?

BRIDGEPORT.

The World's Work has an eye-opening picture of one development of the war-order business that will bear watching. It tells about what is going on at Bridgeport, where new plants for the manufacture of war munitions are springing up almost in the twinkling of an eye, covering acre upon acre and employing many thousands of men and giving occupation to many millions of capital.

All these plants, an incredible number of them, have sprung into existence in response to war orders from Europe—and Bridgeport is but one community where that sort of thing is going on.

Suppose the war to be ended—as ended it must be sooner or later.

What of these mighty plants then?

War orders from Europe will cease when the war ends. Europe in time of peace will be able to make all the war supplies it needs, and at the present rate of going there will be small appetite left in Europe for war supplies when the war is over—and certainly there will be little money or credit to pay for them.

What are these new munition plants going to do when that happens?

Naturally, the first thing they will do will be to look to the United States for domestic orders. If the orders are not forthcoming as numerously as their managers would like, it is equally natural that they will intrigue to manufacture the demand—just as the Krupps spent millions in Europe to manufacture a demand for Krupp products before the war.

It is a thing to be kept in mind and never forgotten. It is also to be remembered in passing on the proposal that if this country goes extensively into the business of preparing for war, it should manufacture its own war supplies, in order that there may be nobody to work under cover artificially to stimulate the demand for war supplies.

Even these people who protest at the number of diplomatic notes sent to Europe would doubtless prefer the sending of even more notes to the sending of a warship with the kickers themselves on board.

NO, THANK YOU!

New York World: The moratorium in France has been extended for ninety days. In Paris you cannot collect a debt. In Berlin you go to jail if you refuse paper money for gold. In London, you are warned that half your income will be needed for the war.

And in all embattled nations the best manhood is being wantonly destroyed, and future generations are being loaded with an appalling burden of debt.

Yet some people are inviting us to take a stroll down the road that carried Berlin and Paris and London and Antwerp and Belgrade to the pickle they are in now. Shall we accept the invitation, even when it is framed so persuasively as Theodore Roosevelt frames it?

This spreading of the report that kissing spreads the grip may be only an underhanded attempt to cast slurs on certain young women.

What Classics Have You Really Read? Be Frank

Don Marquis in the New York Sun: How many of us, if we were really honest, could make a list of great books that we have tried to enjoy and couldn't rise to?

We have for our own part a greater sin than that on our conscience. There are a number of books that we habitually pretend we have read which we have never read at all. They are great books, we suppose. At least we've heard a lot about them and read a lot about them and people who assume to know say they are great books. Some of them we have tried to read and couldn't find, but we have pretended at one time or another to have read all of them. Here is our list of shame:

"Tom Jones." We have tried to read it four times and could never get five pages into it.

"The Vicar of Wakefield." We have attempted it at least six times and taken the count in the first round every time.

"Dante's Divine Comedy." We have been going against the Cary translation, which we hear is a good one, at least once a year for twenty years and we can't get interested in it. Yet up to the present moment we have always pretended that we had read all of it and liked it.

"Don Quixote." We have read a little of it and we know all the usual things that are said about it, and we even wrote some stuff about it one time, saying all the things that are usually said about it, for which we got $25, but we don't really like it; it puts us to sleep; it seems long drawn out and clumsy to us.

"Boswell's Life of Johnson." We never read any of it. But we have pretended to, and have pretended at times to quote incidents from it and have got away with the incidents.

We have always pretended that we were familiar with Walt Whitman's poetry, but as a matter of fact we never read anything through excepting "When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloomed."

Profit-Sharing.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: One of the finest demonstrations of the holiday spirit this year has been the liberality shown by employers to those whose labor enters so largely into the equation of their own success. In many branches of commerce and industry the past few days have seen the inauguration of various profit-sharing plans by which corporations show in substantial fashion their appreciation of the services performed by employes during the past season.

The tendency symbolizes not only the spirit of Christmas, but the better understanding between capital and labor that has been manifested in recent years. There is developing a better understanding on each side of its dependence on the other.

Employers in increasing numbers see the justice of sharing their surplus earnings in some measure with the men and women who make up their payrolls. There is no charity in this. It is a mere matter of brotherly consideration, as devoid of condescension as is the issuance of a dividend.

A Readable Book

By Sarovard.

Washington, Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the sensations of the season in bookland is a volume entitled "Recollections of a Long Life—1829-1915," by Isaac Stephenson, lately a senator in congress from Wisconsin. It is a most readable book, and a perusal of it leads to the conclusion that the author is an extraordinary man. The narrative is simple, natural, and flowing. It is the story of a man born to toil, but gifted with the virtues of self-denial, self-reliance, boundless physical energy, admirable common sense, a keen perception of justice and a sincere sympathy with those who struggle in fortune's strife.

Until I read this book I had a mighty poor opinion of the man. To me he appeared a vulgar, selfish, stolid, lucky millionaire with a whim for public life and a vast store of personal vanity, and it is pleasant to find him of excellent mental endowment, a student of men and things, a broad-minded, far-seeing man, and according to his lights a friend of his fellows in all walks. He is the son of a Scotch-Irishman who crossed the water in 1809 and located in New Brunswick, where Isaac Stephenson was born in 1829. Before he had completed his third lustrum his father located in the state of Maine and continued the vocation of "logging" which he had followed in the British province, where the son was his helper ere childhood had given place to adolescence. Throughout his youth and early manhood, as is related in this artless recital, we find illustrated the passage, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things."

I shall not follow his career as a business man in the lake states of Michigan and Wisconsin, where he accumulated his millions in the lumber industry, except to say that his story is calculated to stimulate the ambition and encourage the hope of every struggling young man thrown upon his own slender resources.

What interested me most was his account of his public career. In his boyhood he became a Whig in politics, probably due to the fact that a lady in his presence characterized the Democrats as "locofocos." Be that as it may, he was a Whig till that party became extinct, when naturally he joined the infant Republican party. He tells how he read and studied the debates in congress preserved in the old Congressional Globe. These afforded him food for thought during the hours of rest in the logging camps, and we find him, a young man, engaging as stout a champion as Governor Horatio Seymour of New York in a disputation about states' rights, in which he falls into the fatal and fundamental error of looking on the Federal establishment as a full, complete original sovereignty, not confined to the powers delegated to it in the charter of government. However, that is a Republican heresy and we can let it go at that.

But Uncle Ikey is not a Republican from hide to marrow. For example he favors free raw materials as an economic principle and a tariff policy, thus ranging himself on the side of John G. Carlisle, Roger Q. Mills, Henry G. Turner, William L. Wilson and Woodrow Wilson, and in flat and defiant opposition to "Pig Iron" Kelley, William McKinley, John Sherman, Thomas B. Reed, Nelson Dingley, Nelson W. Aldrich and Sereno E. Payne. It is but a step, indeed, from where your Uncle Isaac stands on the tariff to free trade.

All of us have read a great deal about the "octopus," the encroachments of invisible government, the corruption rampant at state capitals when legislatures were in session and amendments to corporate charters were under consideration, the active part taken by corporation agents in the conventions of both political parties, and all that. Nowhere were such conditions more open and notorious than in Wisconsin, and it was in Wisconsin that the octopus chase was the most exciting and the most spectacular.

In this book Mr. Stephenson tells how the railroads bossed both political parties in Wisconsin, acquired special privileges, and intrenched themselves in the fastness of "vested rights." And here Uncle Ike delivers himself of a profound truth:

"But I thought at the outset and still think that if their (the railroads') influence had been curtailed it would have been better for themselves and better for the state generally. The increase in traffic that would have followed the adoption of a more liberal policy would have more than compensated for any immediate losses they might have sustained; economies would have been achieved and popular confidence would have supplanted the distrust in which they came to be held. Nevertheless, they did not elect to follow this course."

There is the whole case—it was folly for the corporations to stint the goose that laid the golden eggs. They skimmed the country instead of fertilizing it. They overloaded the business that was, rather than encouraged the business to be. That is what made the octopus chase. That is what made the "interests" and the people adversaries instead of allies. A corporation should be a valuable servant; instead, the corporation made itself an odious master.

This book goes on to give Stephenson's version of the political transactions of the firm of La Follette and Stephenson, and it makes a thrilling chapter, which I hope to deal with in my next.

The Last Leaf.

I saw him once before,
As he passed by the door,
And again
The pavement stones resound,
As he totters o'er the ground
With his cane.

They say that in his prime,
Ere the pruning knife of Time
Cut him down,
Not a better man was found
By the crier on his round,
Through the town.

But now he walks the streets,
And he looks at all he meets
Sad and wane,
And he shakes his feeble head,
That it seems as if he said,
"They are gone."

The mossy marbles rest
On the lips that he has prest
In their bloom,
And the names he loved to hear
Have been carved for many a year
On the tomb.

My grandmama has said—
Poor lady, she is dead,
Long ago—
That he had a Roman nose,
That his cheek was like a rose
In the snow.

But now his nose is thin,
And it rests upon his chin
Like a staff,
And a crook is in his back,
And a melancholy crack
In his laugh.

I know it is a sin
For me to sit and grin
At him here;
But the old three cornered hat,
And the breeches, and all that,
Are so queer!

And if I should live to be
The last leaf on the tree,
In the spring,
Let them smile, as I do now,
At the old forsaken bough
Where I cling.

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

To the Failures

Editorial in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In front of a King's Highway church the other morning stood an easel bearing a placard upon which was printed these words: "After all, wasn't it your own fault? Take heart and try again."

That was the whole of it. Not a word to explain its appearance there. It was not an announcement of a lecture or a sermon. It was apropos of nothing. It merely stood and stared into the street, asking of all who came by this abrupt, almost impertinent personal question.

There were many who passed along the broad and beautiful highway that day who saw it not. There were many, perhaps, who saw it with eyes that carried no impression to the mind.

But there were some, there must have been some, whom it struck like the lash of a whip. For going up and down this street, up and down every street, there are always people who have failed in one way or another, in something big or something little, or who have had a succession of failures.

But big or little, serious or trivial, it is characteristic of human nature to place the blame upon something or somebody else, to find all manner of excuses for self. It wasn't my fault. If it hadn't been for him or them or that, things would have come out differently.

But is that true? Let any man who fails put himself under indictment, interrogate and answer his questions impartially. Then let him condemn with justice. If the fault is his, he loses much in self-respect by whining about the acts of others. If the fault is his he gains much by self-appraisement, by coming to a just understanding of his own abilities; and he learns, too, by this self-analysis, where he has gone wrong and how he may in future avoid the mistakes from which he suffers.

And then, having found himself, having taken his own measure, the remedy is often seen to be within his hands or within his reach. Many a success has grown out of failure. There are many, many men who can look back over their lives and see that what they thought were failures were but the stepping stones of success. "Take heart, and try again."

How a Brave Woman Can Die

A parliamentary report on the death of Miss Edith Cavell, the English nurse shot as a spy in Belgium, contains the following statement made by the Rev. H. Stirling T. Graham, the British chaplain in Brussels:

On Monday evening, the 11th of October, I was admitted by special passport from the German authorities to the prison of St. Gilles, where Miss Edith Cavell had been confined for ten weeks. The final sentence had been given early that afternoon.

To my astonishment and relief I found my friend perfectly calm and resigned. But this could not lessen the tenderness and intensity of feeling on either part during that last interview of almost an hour.

Her first words to me were upon a matter concerning herself personally, but the solemn asseveration which accompanied them was made expressedly in the light of God and eternity. She then added that she wished all her friends to know that she willingly gave her life for her country, and said:

"I have no fear nor shrinking; I have seen death so often that it is not strange or fearful to me."

She further said:

"I thank God for this ten weeks' quiet before the end. Life has always been hurried and full of difficulty. This time of rest has been a great mercy.

"They have all been very kind to me here. But this I would say, standing as I do in view of God and eternity, I realize that patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness toward anyone."

We partook of the holy communion together, and she received the gospel message of consolation with all her heart. At the close of the little service I began to repeat the words "Abide with me," and she joined softly in the end.

We sat quietly talking until it was time for me to go. She gave me parting messages for relations and friends. She spoke of her soul's needs at the moment and she received the assurance of God's Word as only the Christian can do.

Then I said "Good-by," and she smiled and said:

"We shall meet again."

The German military chaplain was with her at the end and afterwards gave her Christian burial.

He told me:

"She was brave and bright to the last. She professed her Christian faith and that she was glad to die for her country. She died like a heroine."

An Angel of Angel City.

Doran's Publicity Sheet: Shortly after the publication of "Back Home," Mr. Cobb's first collection of Judge Priest stories, the author visited the Pacific coast and spent a few days in Los Angeles with his friend, Charles E. Van Loan, author of "Buck Parvin and the Movies."

The Angel City newspaper men were very kind to Cobb, interviewing him copiously, and Van Loan suggested that it would be a graceful thing to repay their courtesies with autographed copies of the new book.

"Fine!" said Cobb. "Let's go buy 'em now."

With Van Loan he visited six book stores in rapid succession, and the following is a sample of the conversation which took place in each one:

Cobb—Have you "Back Home?"

Clerk—What is it—a book or a magazine?

Cobb—It's a book.

Clerk—Ah—er—do you recall the name of the author?

Cobb (surprised)—A man named Cobb wrote it—C-o-double-b, Cobb!

Clerk (hopeful)—Sylvanus or Ty?

Cobb (exploding)—No! No! No! Irvin S. Cobb.

Clerk (disappointed)—Oh! Some other Cobb, eh? I don't think we have it. There hasn't been any call for it. Probably not a popular work, sir.

And so on, with variations. Nobody had a copy of the book, apparently nobody had ever heard of it. In the sixth store Cobb's patience left him and he leaned over the counter with a glare in his eye. He had just been asked if he was not mistaken in the name of the book or the author or something.

"Listen to me, stranger!" said the exasperated Kentuckian. "The name is 'Back Home,' and there is such a book, honest Injun. I know it because I wrote it myself. It's a right nice little book, I'm told, and if you can't afford to buy any copies of it I'll send you one with my compliments! Good day!"

Cobb spent the rest of the afternoon abusing the boneheaded booksellers of Los Angeles. The only thing that he didn't know was that Van Loan had gone over the route earlier in the day and rehearsed the clerks, preparing them for Cobb's visit and having them remove all copies of the book from sight.

A Soldier's Message to His Wife.

London Times: Some of the best stories of the war come from the base hospitals, and are bestowed on the doctors in the same spirit that grateful patients bestow gifts on their medical attendants in civil life. One told recently has traveled from the farthest outposts in Mesopotamia. A Turkish officer, captured in the Mesopotamian campaign, asked and received permission to telegraph to his wife when he was brought to Basra. His message read: "Safely captured."

No Relation.

The late governor's character and ability win general praise.

His Name Will Live.

Deerwood Enterprise: Loved and respected by men of all parties and in all walks of life, the news of his untimely demise has spread gloom and mourning through every city, village and community of our state. Winfield Scott Hammond is dead, but his name will live in history as one who labored for the welfare of his fellow citizens and his state.

He Commanded Nation-Wide Respect.

Grand Forks, (N. D.) Herald: The sudden death of Governor Hammond of Minnesota was a shock to the people of the entire Northwest. As a man deeply interested in the public affairs of his state and nation he had attracted the atention and commanded the respect of the whole country, and by those especially who were his close neighbors, he had been regarded as a man of unusual ability, a man of strong convictions and of unusual courage. To the people of his own state, his death is a distinct loss.

He Won Popular Confidence.

St. Cloud Times: In his whole public career, and especially as governor, he had won popular esteem, confidence and admiration. He was a man of excellent character, high sense of honor, superior ability and an eloquent, logical and convincing orator. While a Democrat, Governor Hammond was not of the rock-ribbed kind, and he numbered among his warmest friends hosts of Republicans. In many respects, he resembled Governor John A. Johnson. Between them there existed the warmest friendship.

Capable Official; Faithful Friend.

Faribault News-Republican: Politically, the friends and the foes of Mr. Hammond are united in the deepest of regret, that the life of so fine a gentleman, so capable a public officer, and so faithful a friend is ended. Personally there is that same unanimity of feeling all over the state for it has been said that Mr. Hammond had not a single personal enemy. The force of his personality had made him a marked man, and every calculation of the political future of Minnesota started out with a definite, known quantity—Governor Hammond. It is true that it was his social and political position which made the news of his death a shock to a whole state. But he it was who won his position, who held it, and did it honor.

He Wore No Man's Collar.

Winona Independent: Governor Hammond wore no man's collar. He was subservient to no interest save the welfare of the people whom he swore to serve. His determination to listen to no dictation, which was early apparent, stamped him at once as a man of exceptional strength of character, so it was not surprising to occasionally hear that Mr. Hammond was being considered for high honors and that some were even classing him as proper material for the presidency at a later date.

In view of these facts the death of Governor Hammond is untimely and his country's loss is greater.

A Loss to the Nation.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Independent: Governor Hammond of Minnesota was one of the great figures of the Northwest. A man with a great future before him and to be so suddenly cut down, is a distinct loss not alone to Minnesota, but to the nation. He was a man who did things, who was sagacious, foreseeing, and who built for the future. No man since the late Governor Johnson had a stronger hold upon the people than Governor Hammond.

An Official to Be Proud Of.

Crosby Crucible: Minnesota has lost one of its good citizens—a man who typified all that is meant in good citizenship, a friend, a lover of mankind, a man of sterling character, of honest purpose, of unexcelled fairness, of broadmindedness and big heartedness has been taken. As governor of this great state, he was an official whom the people had reason to be proud to claim as their chief executive. In politics, he played the game fairly and honestly and his successes were attributed to these qualities. His campaign pledges to the people were fulfilled, regardless of the after effects they might have had on his political career. There was nothing ostentatious about the man either as governor or plain citien. He preferred the background to the spotlight. While of a different type of personality, both as official and citizen, Governor Hammond was much like the late Governor Johnson, and among the first of Minnesota's good governors, the name of Governor Hammond deserves a place with that of Governor Johnson.

Fearless and Businesslike.

Floodwood-Broadaxe: He was one of Minnesota's most prominent figures as a political leader and a man among men; one who has, during his brief tenure as chief magistrate of the state, conducted the official duties devolved upon him in a fearless and businesslike manner by the appointment of men to office whose qualifications were measured by merit instead of political affiliations.

That the state has lost a good governor, amply qualified to discharge the many complex problems of that office, no one will deny.

His Career a Heritage.

Bemidji Pioneer: His public career is a heritage to all the people of the state. Governor Hammond was a high minded man. He had an infinite capacity for attention to details and nothing passed through his office until he knew it was absolutely right. Every question that he decided was on the basis as to whether it was right or wrong, and not whether it was expedient or advisable politically.

He was a quiet, modest, unassuming man, not given to advertising his good deeds, and what impressed most of his friends was his uniform courtesy, his kind-hearted sympathy and his absolute integrity.

He was a charming conversationalist and a public speaker of rare eloquence and unusual persuasive power. The entire nation bows in grief for his loss.

Crossing the Bar.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and roam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again to home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

—Alfred Tennyson.

How About It, Professor?

New York Evening Post: Prof. Muensterberg proves that Wilson is pro-British by showing that all four of his grandparents were of immediate British extraction. Does the professor recall how pro-British were once 2,000,000 colonists who were born as British citizens?

Why They Don't Understand Ford.

New York World: There are a great many Americans who can never understand why a man who has so much money as Henry Ford should employ his time in doing anything except making more money.

The Call of the Times

Cardinal Gibbons in New York Independent.

The call of the times is for men, sturdy Christian men, and women, too, endowed with the courage of their convictions. We need men who are controlled by conscience rather than by expediency, men who are guided by principle rather than by popularity, men who are influenced by a sense of duty and not by self-interest, who are swayed by a spirit of patriotism rather than by a desire of political preferment. Above all, we need men of strong Christian faith who are prepared to uphold their religious convictions in the face of obloquy and popular prejudice. In a word, we need men and women of upright Christian character.

But this fidelity to religious and moral principles demands no small measure of heroic virtue. Many a soldier who fearlessly rushed to the cannon's mouth has quailed before the shafts of ridicule. The man who calmly fulfills a duty against public clamor displays a higher courage than the captain who captures cities. The man who acts up to his conscience has but one master, and that master is God. But the slave of human opinion has as many masters as there are individuals whose censure he dreads, or whose smiles he secures at the expense of duty.

That is why I not only am hopeful, but feel a certain assurance that the republic of the United States will continue for innumerable generations to come. I base my belief on the genius and good sense of our public men, the wisdom of our legislation, and on the patriotism of our people at large. The evidence of these characteristics of our nation that the republic will persevere is all the stronger because we are a religious nation.

Amid the continual changes in human institutions, the church is the one institution that never changes. Amid the universal ruins of earthly monuments, she is the one monument that stands proudly pre-eminent. Amid the general destruction of kingdoms, her kingdom is never destroyed. Ever ancient and ever new, time writes no wrinkles on her divine brow.

Just a Moment

Daily Strength and Cheer.

Compiled by John G. Quinlan, the Sunshine Man.

Give me, dear Lord, Thy magic common things,
Which all can see, which all may share.
Sunlight and dewdrops, grass and stars and sea,
Nothing unique or new and nothing rare.

Just daisies, knapwood, wind among the thorns;
Some clouds to cross the blue, old sky above;
Rain, winter fires, a useful hand, a heart,
The common glory of a woman's love.

Then when my feet no longer tread old paths
(Keep them from fouling sweet things anywhere),
Write one old epitaph in grace-lit words:
"Such things looked fairer that he sojourned here."

—Spectator.

Be Unselfish.

If we all had the fraternal spirit that characterized Jonathan and David, and could ratify the covenant they formed, the true brotherhood of man would be consummated, and people would no longer selfishly seek their own welfare, but that of their neighbors. It is said that "the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and that he loved him as his own soul." That blessed state of love was outwardly illustrated in this beautiful way: "And Jonathan stripped himself of the robe that was upon him and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle." In that act of love Jonathan transferred his own honor and rank and position to his friend, David, finding more pleasure in seeing him thus deservedly recognized than in wearing the honors of royalty himself. That was, indeed, "in honor preferring one another." Such brotherly turns make the world happier.—W. W.

The One Need of 1916.

Boston Herald: Cannot something be done to stop this terrible war, with its threat to the civilization of the western world? And, then, cannot something be done to organize the nations so that their disputes can be settled in some other way? Here is an opportunity in statesmanship compared with which the discoveries in surgery and sanitation and the inventions in mechanics and applied science pale into insignificance. The world has found a way to get along without religious wars, and without a duel, both of which were long explained as sure to persist as long as human nature remained. In other words, the world has brought to pass changes in what we had been accustomed to regard as inherent in our infallible human nature. We must bring to pass a change in the settling of the disputes of nations if we would have our civilization endure.

IT'S HUMAN NATURE TO RUN THE OTHER FELLOW'S JOB

To the Editor of The Herald:

The war will be attended to over there and it is little we can do about it. Ford's critics, many and able as they are, have not shown where they could have done any more. At least Ford is accomplishing as much as the gentlemen who favor us with rail fence opinions on what Russia or Germany or France ought to have done—or especially England. Everybody seems to have a word of advice or reproof for England. I repeat the management of this war is something with which we have little to do, on which our opinion can have little effect.

The war will be settled over there. Peace will be established by the whole world. The enthronement of "the idea of public right" will be achieved not by Europe but by the whole world. It is in erecting that idea into a governing force that the United States can most help. It is especially our business, yet we are giving it the least attention.

Floods of discussion over the campaigns in Europe which we cannot touch, hardly a thought of the means of establishing peace which we can largely accomplish.

It is in America now, perhaps in Washington this week, that the peace of the world is getting under way as the peace of America becomes more and more firm and enlarged. It is peculiarly our business.

Shall we attend to it?

THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER.

Duluth, Jan. 3.

SUSPICION.

To the Editor of The Herald:

After having studied at my leisure the faces of the people and their actions on the streets and in business places of Duluth, I must say it is surprising to see how skeptical and suspicious each one is of another. Always surmising something wrong about other people, especially if the people are of a respectable class. The very idea of it. They would almost accuse one of theft, who is no doubt more honest than they are. What a conscience to carry. Of course it is found among the illiterate, but is on the increase in all classes. Why don't the distrustful individual put such imaginations to one side before it gets control of the mind entirely, for if this continues there would not be enough wise people left to take care of the insane. Suspicion shows a guilty conscience.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department does not pretend to be infallible. It will endeavor, however, to answer questions sent to it by readers of The Herald to the best of its ability, reserving the right to ignore all that are trifling or of concern only to the questioner, or that ask for advice on legal or medical questions.

To receive attention, every inquiry must bear the name and address of the person sending it. This is not wanted for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.

F. M., Virginia—Could you please tell me through the Open Court the exact date of President Wilson's first wife's death?

Ans.—Aug. 6, 1914.

John Warrington, Hubbell, Mich.—If a person from a European country (England) holds his first citizenship papers, can he be compelled to serve his native country in time of war?

If a boy comes to this country with his parents and his father becomes a United States citizen, does the boy need to take out citizenship papers?

If a girl of this country marries an alien, does she forfeit citizenship and protection from this country?

Ans.—England has not yet adopted conscription and nobody can be forced to serve there. With other European countries this matter has never been fully settled. If a native of Italy or Austria or Germany were caught in those countries in war time he would be compelled to serve, whether he had American citizenship papers or not. America would perhaps object, but the matter has never been brought to a head.

II.—Not if the father is a citizen when the boy comes of age. Otherwise, yes.

III.—Yes.

POEMS ASKED FOR.

The Herald acknowledges with thanks the receipt of the song "Where the Silvery Colorado Wends Its Way" from Miss Ida Abrahamson of Ely.

"Where the Silvery Colorado Wends Its Way."

The twilight softly gathers 'round my home among the hills,
And all nature will soon settle down to rest,
While I sit and sadly ponder and my heart with longing fills,
As I often think of one that I loved best;
We were wedded in the June-time, and our hearts then knew no pain,
Fair nature seemed to smile on us that day;
Now she sleeps beneath the lilacs and she'll ne'er come back again,
Where the silv'ry Colorado wends its way.

CHORUS.

There's a sob on every breeze,
And a sigh comes from the trees,
And the meadow lark now croons a sadder lay;
For the sunlight plays no more
'Round my cheerless cabin door,
Where the silv'ry Colorado wends its way.

The silv'ry snow is gleaming on yon distant mountain side,
Where we often used to wander, Nell and I,
And the birds are gaily singing in the valley far below,
Where I long some day to lay me down and die;
Then our lives were gay and happy, in the shadow of the hills;
My heart beats fonder for her day by day;
And I feel her presence near me as I sit alone tonight,
Where the silv'ry Colorado wends its way.

OLD SOLDIER ANSWERS CALL

Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, Veteran of Civil War, Is Dead.

Soldier of Valor and Also Pioneer Builder of Railroads.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Jan. 4.—Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, soldier and railroad builder, who died at his home here yesterday, will be buried in this city Thursday with military honors. The funeral services will be in charge of Col. Matt A. Kinney of the Iowa national guard, in accordance with Gen. Dodge's wishes, expressed shortly before his death.

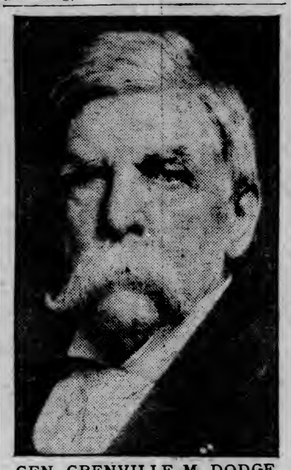

Two notable services to his country assure Maj. Gen. Grenville Mellen Dodge a place among the history makers of the Civil war and reconstruction periods

As a soldier his valor is attested by the fact that four horses were shot from under him in the battle of Pea Ridge, and that he himself received wounds in several battles.

Pioneer in Railroad Building.

As a pioneer in Western railroad building he has the Union Pacific railroad, whose line he located and whose construction he superintended, standing today as a monument to his memory.

Some sixty years ago, the then young Dodge, who had moved from New England, where he had studied civil engineering, to Council Bluffs, Iowa, entered the employ of the Illinois Central railroad. Abraham Lincoln, who had done legal work for the same company, met the young Yankee. They talked of building a railroad over the Rocky mountains and beyond. The world had been laughing at the project. Lincoln and Dodge agreed that it was feasible.

GEN. GRENVILLE M. DODGE.

The federal government shortly afterward decided to begin surveying for the proposed line. Dodge jumped at the chance of leading the party. Several trips were made as far as the Rocky mountains searching for the most feasible route, the men under Dodge plunging into many a wilderness to meet stubborn resistance on the part of the Indians.

Civil War Breaks Out.

In the midst of the undertaking the Civil war broke out. Dodge, born at Danvers, Mass., in 1831, was just 30 years old. He had had some military training at Norwich university in Vermont, and some experience fighting Indians. Securing a colonel's commission from his old friend, President Lincoln, he raised, drilled and equipped at his own expense the Fourth Iowa infantry regiment.

Within two weeks Col. Dodge was leading his command against the rebels in Northern Missouri. His gallantry soon afterward at the battle of Pea Ridge won almost instant promotion to the rank of brigadier general. He lost one-fourth of his entire command but he saved the day for the Federal army. He again distinguished himself in the decisive battle of the Atlanta campaign, July 22, 1864, when he defeated Gen. Hood's desperate movement to the rear of the Army of the Tennessee.

Wounded in Head.

Later while standing in a trench before Atlanta, Gen. Dodge was shot and severely wounded in the head.

After the fall of Vicksburg, he received appreciative recognition from Gen. Grant, being promoted to major general and given command of the Sixteenth Army corps.

The hanging of "Sam" Davis, a Confederate spy who was captured in Tennessee, was one of the incidents of Gen. Dodge's career. On Davis were found complete plans of the fortifications at Nashville, which evidently he had received from some Federal officer high in authority. Gen. Dodge offered the young spy his freedom if he would reveal the name of his informant, but the accused man refused. Half a dozen times before sending the man to the gallows, Gen. Dodge offered him immunity. The spy went to his death with his lips closed. "He was the bravest man that ever died," said Gen. Dodge.

Back to Railroad Building.

When Gen. Dodge retired in 1866, it was to go back to railroad building. Once, in the meantime, Lincoln had summoned Dodge to Washington for a conference on the route. Dodge suggested Omaha as the eastern terminus of the railway and it was at his suggestion that this decision was made. Work had progressed but slowly, however, up to 1866, when Dodge took charge again. By May, 1867, he had 12,000 men along the River Platte, and he kept them steadily moving westward. Within three years the last spike was driven.

In addition to his military service and his engineering successes, Gen. Dodge remained up to late in life an active and influential man. He was elected to congress the first year after the war, and it was said that a promising political life was before him, but he declined renomination, in favor of the railway project. He was later a delegate to the Republican national conventions of 1868 and 1876. In 1898 he was chairman of the president's commission to inquire into the management of the war with Spain. He was for a time commander-in-chief of the military order of the Loyal Legion and an officer of numerous patriotic organizations.

Clark Trial Postponed.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 4.—The fourth trial of Dr. B. Clark Hyde, charged with murdering Col. Thomas H. Swope, a Kansas City millionaire philanthropist, was postponed to the April term of the circuit court here yesterday. The continuance was asked by the prosecuting attorney, who asserted that the state was not ready for trial.

ENGINEER CORPS STILL NEEDS MEN

Twenty-Five Are Enrolled; Almost as Many More Required.

Engineers and machinists still are needed to fill up the ranks of the new engineering division of the state naval militia. This division now is being formed, and twenty-five men were enrolled at a meeting last week, and at another last night.

The full complement of forty-eight men probably will be made up within a few days, and the division then will be mustered in. It will be Duluth's fourth division, as the city now is the home of two deck and one engineering companies.

"We still need engineers and machinists," said Capt. Guy A. Eaton last night. "We want to make this division include an aviation corps as well as to complete the list of men needed to man the U. S. S. Topeka, which will be stationed here as a training ship."

Another meeting will be held Friday of this week, when the rest of the forty-eight are expected to come in.

FOR A BAD COUGH

Here is a fine old-fashioned recipe for coughs, colds or catarrh trouble that has been used for many years with great success. Get from your druggist 1 oz. of Parmint (double strength) and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful 4 times a day.

No more racking your whole body with a cough. Clogged nostrils should open, air passages of your head clear up so you can breathe freely. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has a stubborn cough, or hard cold or catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial.

LITTLE HOPE OF DAHL'S RECOVERY

Autoist Injured in Saturday's Snowstorm in Serious Condition.

But little hope is held out by physicians for the recovery of Olaf Dahl, the only man to be injured in traffic tangles during Saturday night's snowstorm and gale.

A street car struck the automobile he was driving, head-on, when Dahl was unable to turn out. Blinded by the snow, he didn't see the car until it was close to him. He was thrown through the windshield and sustained a fractured skull.

Dahl resides at Thirteenth avenue east and Ninth street.

SWITCHING RULING UPHELD BY JUDGE

Railroads Lose Mill City Switching Case and Appeal Expected.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 4.—Judge W. C. Leary, in the Minneapolis switching case, which is being watched for precedent by railroad attorneys and is of importance to Minneapolis, Monday upheld the order of the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission of Jan. 8 last relative to the Milwaukee and Omaha railroads and the Minneapolis Eastern.

The order means that the court affirms the commission's ruling that the two systems may not charge $1.50 a car for switching to or from their lines and the Minneapolis Eastern.

The railroads undoubtedly will take the case before the supreme court. Until they have had time to digest the court order, railroad attorneys will make no comment, but Judge Leary's own language in the order indicates that he expects an appeal.

W. S. HAMMOND LAID TO REST

Body of Late Governor Buried at Mount Hope Cemetery, St. James.

Great Crowd of Prominent Men From All Over State in Attendance.

St. James, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the presence of mourning thousands, Winfield Scott Hammond, late governor of Minnesota, was buried late yesterday in Mount Hope cemetery, a hillside graveyard a mile from this town. It was in St. James that Mr. Hammond made his home for years before taking up the office a year ago.

Rev. E. L. Fisher of the Presbyterian church, which the late executive long attended, conducted the funeral services.

The body was brought here from St. Paul yesterday afternoon aboard a special train, which also carried several hundred prominent Minnesotans, who had participated in the service at the state house at St. Paul this morning.

Great Crowd Present.

Such a crowd in size as this little city never before held endured the sharp January air and marched over the snow late today from the railway station to the Methodist church and thence to Mount Hope cemetery, a mile and a quarter away, paying sadly their tribute to St. James' distinguished son.

Every resident of St. James who was physically able, citizens of Watonwan county from every township, who had known and loved Governor Hammond, and thousands of others from the Twin Cities and elsewhere in the state showed by their presence and their participation in the last scenes their high regard for the late chief executive. Long before the funeral train was scheduled to arrive a large crowd had gathered at the railway station awaiting the coming of the body and its escort of honor. Others lined either side of the blocks over which the cortege moved.

Insignia of Mourning.

On every hand were insignia of mourning and flags were at half mast on the courthouse and other public buildings. All the nine churches of the city were hung with black and white bunting and floral decorations.

Thousands of visitors poured into St. James on regular and special trains.

Because of the length of the procession, it made a detour in going from the station to the Methodist church, only three blocks away, and covered a distance of eleven blocks.

The Second regiment band of New Ulm was present to head the funeral procession. It was preceded only by the Masonic grand master.

On arrival at the Methodist church the casket was borne inside and opened to permit those who had not seen the face of the dead governor to view it for the last time. For more than half an hour the crowd filed through the church door, down an aisle, past the casket for a moment's pause, and out another door.

Services in Charge of Masons.

The service was in charge of the Masonic bodies, and Rev. H. W. Fisher, Presbyterian pastor, himself a Mason, co-operated in the service. He delivered a eulogy in the church and the Masonic quartet of Minneapolis sang two songs. The ritual service, begun at the church, but for the most part carried out at the grave, was in charge of A. E. Clarendon of Minneapolis, past master of Minneapolis lodge No. 19, A. F. & A. M. He was delegated to act by Harry M. Burnham of Jackson, grand master of the Minnesota grand lodge.

At the conclusion of the church service the casket was carried out into the street and down two blocks between lines of Masonic bodies in attendance. The same line of march that had been formed at the station again was arranged, but for the trip to Mount Hope cemetery carriages or automobiles were provided for all but the band and the military escort.

At the cemetery the impressive Masonic ritual was recited, the lead being taken by Mr. Clarendon and the responses being given by Blue Lodge members. As the green sprigs were torn from the coat lapels of the attending lodge brethren and cast upon the casket, mortal man ceased to view even the receptacle containing the mortal clay, and the mourners sadly turned away, returning to St. James in the gathering dusk.

time to tenpocize, to finesse, to play the dog in the manger. The responsibility for failure to unite Progressives and Republicans into a solid anti-Democratic body, should be put squarely up to the Republican organization. The responsible leaders of the Republican party should be made to understand, in clear terms, that the nomination of a reactionary, or second rate candidate, will widen the breach of 1912 and insure the election of President Wilson and the control of congress by the Southern Democracy. They should be told frankly, and publicly, that if the Republican leaders force upon the country a reactionary candidate, the Progressive organization will put into the field a straight ticket which Progressives of all parties can conscientiously vote for.

No Middle Course.

"This is not the time to adopt a middle of the road platform, or to waste effort in the serious consideration of 'favorite sons.' Grave dangers threaten the country, both in domestic and international affairs. Preparation for war is essential, but preparedness in industry is of equal importance. Enormous business difficulties are ahead of us at the expiration of the war. To take the tariff out of politics, through the creation of a tariff commission, is absolutely essential to the welfare of both labor and capital.

"Above all we must re-create a virile and consistent foreign policy that will re-establish our respectability and rank among the nations of the world.

"These, and other great questions, make it imperative that past political differences and petty feuds be put aside, and that the Progressives lead the way to unite the anti-Democratic forces in nominating a candidate courageous enough, able enough, patriotic enough, for the Herculean task that the next president will have to face.

Hughes or Roosevelt.

"There are two men, and two only, who have a ghost of a chance to defeat President Wilson next November—Justice Hughes and Col. Roosevelt. Either would be acceptable to the great majority of Progressives; either would be satisfactory to the rank and file of the Republican party.

"Mr. Hughes, as governor of New York, was independent, efficient and courageous. Undoubtedly he would make a great president. There are some, however, who feel, as he undeniably does, that a supreme court justice should not step from the bench to a political fight. There are others who realize that Mr. Hughes' opinions on the issues that will be paramount at the next election are unknown. It may be that he believes in President Wilson's Mexican, European, tariff-for-revenue-only, business-persecuting policies, and if he does, his nomination would obviously be an absurdity. However, Justice Hughes is a strong man and undoubtedly would be supported by Progressives and Republicans alike.

Praise for Roosevelt.

"Theodore Roosevelt was a great president, a strong executive, who called to his cabinet the ablest men of that time. First of all he is a patriotic and loyal American. At all times, under all circumstances, he has hit hard for Americanism, for national honor and for our national responsibility in the work of the world. Had he been president during the past three years, the crimes done in Mexico would have been averted; the Lusitania would have been afloat, and our rank among the nations of the world nothing to be ashamed of. Col. Roosevelt is the only prominent public man who has protested effectively, and openly, against the crime of Belgium; the rape of American women in Mexico, and the murder of American citizens on the ocean. Other public men have ducked and dodged and played the coward. He has swept aside all shams and called a spade a spade.

Not Afraid of Germans.

"While giving due praise to the German people for the economic results accomplished in the last generation, he has condemned in no measured terms their militant bureaucracy that has ridden rough-shod over treaties and promises. He has not been stopped by the fear of losing German-American votes, but has stood four-square to every wind that blew.' Theodore Roosevelt is known world-wide as an exponent of national patriotism and he, above any other man, can make a real fight against the milk-and-water foreign attitude of the Democratic administration. He can not only unite the Progressives and Republicans, but he will get many Democrats who, under no conceivable condition, would follow any other Republican candidate.

"Theodore Roosevelt for president. Elihu Root for secretary of state! What a sigh of relief and confidence would come from every section of the country. I repeat—put it up to the Republican leaders. If they refuse to see; if they decline to act, then the responsibility for another Democratic victory will be theirs. Yours very truly, declared, which outraged the United States should be dealt with severely.

"CHARLES SUMNER BIRD."

Flood Calls on President.

Later Chairman Flood of the house foreign affairs committee, called at the White House and conferred with President Wilson on the situation.

White House officials said both the senate and the house would be kept informed of all important developments in the foreign situation, probably through conferences between the president and senate and house leaders, although if any drastic action is taken it is possible that the president may send a message to congress.

There was no indication today of what the prospects were for the United States formally acquainting Bulgaria and Turkey of its position on the question of submarine warfare. It has been proposed that should be done so that none of the central power belligerents could plead lack of official information as Austria did at first in the Ancona case. The course of the United States in that regard will be developed definitely later.

It was disclosed today, however, that some time ago the complete submarine correspondence with Germany showing the contentions of the United States and the extent of Germany's acquiescence was sent to the American diplomatic representatives in Turkey and Bulgaria and also was delivered to the diplomatic representatives of those two countries in Washington.

President at White House.

Washington, Jan. 4.—President Wilson arrived here at 7:50 a. m. today from Hot Springs, Va. He went immediately to the White House to take personal charge of the situation brought about by the sinking of the British steamer Persia.

The torpedoing of the Persia with the loss of at least one American life caused the president to cut short his honeymoon in Virginia.

Officials were making every effort today to obtain all the facts bearing on the circumstances of the attack on the steamer. No action will be taken by the Washington governments pending receipt of full information, but it is represented as being determined to take any step warranted by the facts elicited.

BOSTON MAN TELLS STORY

went on deck as though we were at drill and reported at the lifeboats on the starboard side, as the vessel had listed to port. I clung to the railing. The last thing done was to tie on Capt. Sprickly's lifebelt.

"As the vessel was then listing so badly that it was impossible to launch the starboard boats I slid down the starboard rail into the water. I got caught in a rope which pulled off a shoe, but I broke loose and climbed on some floating wreckage, to which I clung.

Bow in the Air.

"The last I saw of the Persia she had her bow in the air, five minutes after the explosion.

"After floating about on the wreckage until 4 o'clock in the morning, I saw five boats. I was pulled into one of them. We rowed about looking for stragglers.

"The boat became overloaded and the occupants were redistributed. Four boats were tied together by their painters and the fifth followed some distance away.

"My boat left the others in order to search the more frequented steamship channels for help. We rowed for three hours. Then we saw a cruiser and called out, 'We are English.' We explained that we were survivors of the Persia, and gave directions to the cruiser as to where the other boats were. They were soon found and the occupants were taken off immediately by the English sailors.

"Robert McNeely, American consul at Aden, sat at the same table with me on the voyage. He was not seen, probably because his cabin was on the port side.

"It was a terrible scene. The water was black as ink. Some passengers were screaming, others were calling out good-by. Those in one boat sang hymns."

CITY IN DRY COUNTY CANNOT GIVE LICENSE

Judge McClenahan Upholds State in International Falls Case.

Brainerd, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge McClenahan of the district court here today ordered the injunction made permanent, thus sustaining the state in its contention that the village council of International Falls had no authority to issue a saloon license in a "dry" county option county, notwithstanding the village operates under a home rule charter.

The permanent injunction is directed against the mayor and city council and restrains them from issuing to Fred Shaw or any other person a saloon license until such time as the voters of Koochiching county shall declare by their vote that the sale of intoxicating liquors shall not be prohibited. The case will go to the state supreme court.

JUSTICE IS RELENTLESS

Youth, Paroled for One Crime, Is Punished for Second.

Brought From California to Be Sentenced to Reformatory.

Several months have elapsed since Leonard C. Pester, 21, fugitive from California, where he was wanted for forgery, turned penitent and retraced his steps to the Golden state and announced that he was ready to take his punishment. They had previously located him in Chicago, but he had successfully resisted extradition.

Pester has learned, however, that the "way of the transgressor is hard."

Put on parole by the California authorities he was arrested shortly afterwards for the St. Louis county authorities and extradited to this state.

In district court before Judge Dancer this morning, the young man pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with the crime of grand larceny in the second degree and was sentenced to a term of not more than five years in the state reformatory in St. Cloud.

The administrative arm of justice is relentless. Pester's crime was committed in November of 1913. He was working as a fur solicitor in Duluth for a Minneapolis house. He took several orders, got the goods from his employer, sold them, collected the money and went to Chicago. Then he struck out for the West.

On March 20, 1915, he committed a forgery in California. He left the state returning to Chicago. In Chicago he was married. The California authorities traced him and had him arrested but the Illinois governor refused to give him up. Then he wanted to go into the moving picture game and decided to return to California and throw himself on the mercy of the court. This he did and secured a parole and later a job as animal trainer for the Selig moving picture firm at the Universal city. His wife assisted him. Then the Duluth authorities found out his whereabouts and brought him to Duluth. Mrs. Pester has returned to Chicago.

MUST FACE CHARGE OF SHOPLIFTING

Mary Selkana Bound Over to the Grand Jury.

Four silk waists, a pair of silk stockings and pair of gloves were found in the clothing of Mary Selkana, 30, a good looking woman dressed in black, arrested at the Glass Block department store yesterday.

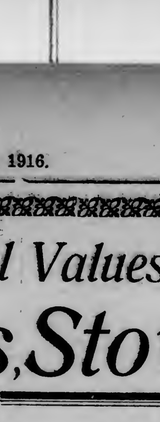

Store employes allege that they caught her in the act of "lifting things from the counters" and her arrest followed. With her at the time was Kate Hanninen, 20, also well gowned and good looking. The Hanninen woman is not unknown to police.

Police Matron Mary Connelly found the extra clothing on the Selkana woman after the pair were taken to headquarters. She was arrested about two years ago for stealing a muff and was acquitted.

When arraigned before Judge W. H. Smallwood in police court today the Selkana woman waived examination on a charge of second-degree grand larceny. She was bound over to await the action of the grand jury in $150 bail. Her companion forfeited $25 when she failed to put in an appearance at headquarters today.

ARMORY SALE AUTHORIZED

Council Decides to Let Shriners Have Old Building.

First Street Paving Ordered; Pool Hall Amendment Passed.

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID.

Passed the ordinance authorizing the sale of the old armory to the Shriners on their offer of $50,000.

Tabled the applications for saloon license transfers to Gary.

Passed the amendment to the Hicken pool hall ordinance removing the present limit on pool tables.

Heard second reading of the ordinance appropriating $20,000 for the removal of all the old wooden bridges during 1916.

Awarded the contract for laying a sanitary sewer in Luther avenue to Gust Hiner on his bid of $2,211.20.

Heard first reading of an ordinance appropriating $3,000 for the purchase of new books for the library during the first half of 1916.

Postponed action on the application of Chris Tracey for a transfer of his saloon license from 5610 Raleigh street to 410 Central avenue.

In one of the shortest meetings on record since commission government went into power, the council yesterday afternoon passed the ordinance authorizing the sale of the old armory, ordered the paving of West First street and indefinitely tabled the applications of Lubratovich & Danculovich and Caron & Brchich for saloon license transfers to Gary. The entire meeting lasted exactly twenty minutes.

Merritt Opposes Measure.

The final vote on the ordinance authorizing the armory sale was 3 to 1, Commissioner Merritt opposing the measure. Commissioner Farrell, who is also against it, was in St. Paul yesterday attending the funeral of the late Governor Hammond.

On the motion of Commissioner Silberstein, safety head, the council tabled the applications for the transfer of saloon licenses to Gary. It was also voted to postpone action for a week on the application of Chris Tracey for a transfer of his saloon to 410 Central avenue, as a large number of West Duluth residents are opposed to the change.

The paving of First street, between Twentieth and Thirtieth avenues west, was ordered, this being the first big improvement scheduled on the 1916 paving program. The roadway will be forty-two feet wide and will probably be paved with brick.

The council passed the amendment to the pool hall ordinance, removing the present limit on pool tables. There are 208 tables now in use and the council has been restrained from granting any additional permits. As soon as the amendment becomes effective on Feb. 5, the commissioners plan to grant permits for new pool halls in Gary and New Duluth.

Appropriation for Books.

First reading was given the ordinances appropriating $3,000 for the purchase of library books during the first half of 1916, $250 to defray the expenses of City Engineer Ayres in attending the hearing on the New Duluth bridge at Washington next Thursday, $250 for overtime work on the aerial bridge during the first half of this year, $165 for street lighting at Proctor, $211 for the maintenance of gas lights on Kent road during 1916 and $900 for general power current for the aerial bridge this coming year. Second reading was given the measure appropriating $20,000 for the removal of all the old bridges.

An arc light was ordered on Boundary avenue and Sixth street, the cost to be divided between Duluth and Proctor, as the standard will be located directly on the line between the two cities.

Cigarette licenses were granted to the following: P. J. Mulligan, 420 West Superior street; Spalding Hotel company, 428 West Superior street; Edward M. Stone, 221 West Superior street, 2615 West Superior street, and Alworth building; C. Manilla, 517 West Superior street; J. W. Monaghan, 1702 London road; L. E. Strum, 24 First avenue west; Fitzgerald & Winchester, 203 West Superior street; Lenox Hotel company, 601 West Superior street; Emil Otalia, 1601 Commonwealth avenue; Herman Olson, 1823 West Superior street.

TETTER ON HANDS FOR TEN YEARS

Itching and Burning. Would Scratch For Hours. Almost Distracted. Could Scarcely Get Any Rest.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"Dry, rough places would appear on my hands accompanied by itching and burning. It was so severe that I would have to scratch and rub my hands for hours at a time until I was almost distracted. Sometimes they would crack open and bleed and would get so sore that I could not use them for days. I could scarcely get any rest at night.

"At last unable to endure it longer I had a treatment but found none that made a permanent cure until I obtained Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had been affected with tetter for about ten years and I had only used one box of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap until my hands were completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Geo. Robertson, Harrodsburg, Ind., July 21, 1915.

AUTO DEALERS ORGANIZE AND ARRANGE FOR DULUTH SHOW

E. J. FILIATRAULT, President.

WILLIAM F. DALY, Director.

Twenty-five automobile dealers of this city met at the St. Louis hotel last evening, organized the Duluth Automobile Dealers' association and arranged to stage the second annual auto show at the new armory during the week of Feb. 7.

The newly organized association will stage all automobile shows in the future, it was decided, and William F. Daly, who promoted the exhibit last year, was selected to take charge again this year. Mr. Daly announced this morning that he will attend the Chicago show during the week of Jan. 22 and the Minneapolis show the following week, arranging for the shipment of some of the exhibits to Duluth.

E. J. Filiatrault was elected president of the new dealers' association and chairman of the show committee to assist Mr. Daly. Joseph T. Peacha, Jr., was named vice president and secretary, and a treasurer will be selected at a meeting of the dealers to be held at the St. Louis next Tuesday evening. The other members of the executive committee are: Mr. Peacha, secretary; Fred G. Kleyn, George Maxson, W. M. Turner, Alexander Davis and Leonard McNamara. The committee will hold a special meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the offices of the Mutual Auto company to make preliminary plans for the show.

The entire main floor and balcony of the new armory will be used for the second annual show, it was announced this morning by Mr. Daly. There will be pleasure cars, electrics, trade vehicles and trucks on the main floor, while the accessories will be shown on the balcony. A stand for the band will be erected in the center of the floor and the entire building will be decorated for the occasion.

Director Daly is now negotiating for the use of the armored Packard car shown at the San Francisco exposition last June, while he has already received word that the Cadillac company will send a large white nickel chassis to be exhibited at the local show.

In addition to staging the annual automobile shows, the newly organized association plans to direct a series of summer and winter auto sports throughout each year.

PETERSON OUT; SCHMAHL NOT EXPECTED TO FILE

Burnquist, Iverson and Lindbergh Contestants for G. O. P. Nomination.

Minneapolis Man Withdraws in Favor of New Governor.

Iverson Obeys Friends By Sticking; Lindbergh in on Principle.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—James A. Peterson of Minneapolis, having announced his withdrawal as a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor in favor of Governor J. A. A. Burnquist, it looks today as though the fight for the nomination will be three-cornered.

S. G. Iverson, former state auditor, and Congressman Charles A. Lindbergh of the Sixth district, who have already filed for the nomination, have decided to stick; and so far they are the only ones who will make the race against the new governor.

Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, who has been generally talked as a candidate for governor, and accorded the support of the "wets," will not, it is believed, file for the office, and is expected to become a candidate to succeed himself.

Mr. Schmahl has never announced himself as a candidate for the governorship nomination, and while he is saying nothing either way as yet, there is good ground for the belief today that he will not enter the race.

Iverson Obeys Friends.

Mr. Iverson, who was a candidate two years ago, and who was retired from the contest by the elimination conference at Minneapolis, which chose William E. Lee of Long Prairie, has already filed for the nomination, and has announced, in reply to urgings that he withdraw and make the way clear for the governor, that he cannot do so in justice to the supporters already pledged to him. He said today that, regardless of his own desires in the matter, which he did not indicate, his friends have demanded that he remain in the race, now that his support has lined up behind him and is urging his nomination, and that, therefore, in justice to his friends, he will continue to be a candidate in the primaries.

Congressman Lindbergh, now in Washington, who was asked by telegraph his position, and urged by some to withdraw, declined in the following wired statement:

Lindbergh's Statement.

"In the original announcement of my candidacy I stated that it was a plan that I wished to present and not a personal matter. Everybody was shocked by the sudden death of our esteemed late governor, and I did not wish to make any statement relating to political matters when interviewed last Saturday. I felt that it was due the governor's most intimate friends that no statements be made until the state had recovered from the first shock of his death.

"As I have publicly stated, I have certain plans for state government which I wish to place before the people of Minnesota. They are the conclusions which I have reached as a result of my experience in both private business and public life and from my observations of things generally. I feel that they merit the consideration of the citizens of Minnesota and have decided that the best method of placing those plans before the people is through a campaign for the office of governor of the state. I reached that conclusion some time ago and recently announced my candidacy for the office, stating that I would present to the people a statement of my economic views on public questions and plans for a better economic system.

"An altered condition in the political aspect is not material. I still have the same object in view that I had before. An examination of my pamphlet, which has been in print for several weeks, plainly shows why I became a candidate and why I should continue to be."

Mr. Peterson, in withdrawing in favor of Governor Burnquist, made the following statement:

Would Unite the Party.

"Although I have not announced my candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor at the next primary, it was generally understood throughout the state that I intended to be such candidate. The most important thing to be accomplished in the state of Minnesota, and the nation, during this year is to reunite the Republican party and gain control of the state and national governments. In order to do that we must place party and state patriotism above personal considerations.

"The sad removal by death of our late Governor Hammond has made Mr. Burnquist, Republican, governor of the state. Mr. Burnquist is a man against whose record nobody can take any exception. It is true he is a young man, but Mr. Burnquist has ability, integrity and competency, and I can see no reason why the Republicans of the state should not rally around him as the next Republican candidate for governor. What all true and loyal Republicans want is harmony and a good candidate. Mr. Burnquist's nomination will furnish both.

"I want to say to my loyal friends throughout the state that I appreciate very much their efforts in my behalf and I thank the people of the state for the good will they have shown toward me. Nevertheless, I feel it my duty to come out at this time and declare that I shall support Mr. Burnquist for nomination and election and do all in my power to see that the Republican party is victorious both in the state and the nation.

"I sincerely hope that the Republicans throughout the state will see this in the same light that I do."

MERIT TROPHIES GIVEN SAMARITANS

Duluth Council and Members Honored; New Officers Installed.

At the installation of officers of Duluth council No. 3, Modern Samaritans, held last evening in the old Masonic temple, much pleasure was added to the occasion by the presentation of trophies and other gifts for merit. Lime Medication in Tuberculosis

In the N. Y. Medical Record of December 5, 1914, Dr. John North of Toledo says: "I have come to the conclusion that one of the most prominent causes (of tuberculosis) is 'lime starvation.' In all cases of incipient tuberculosis there is a deficiency of calcium. Many do not eat food containing enough lime. In such cases we must resort to lime medication."

Eckman's Alterative should be given a fair trial in such cases, because one of its chief ingredients is calcium (lime), in such combination with other remedial agents as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

Where its use is combined with proper diet, fresh air and hygienic living conditions, we believe it will prove beneficial in any case of tuberculosis.

It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. From your druggist or direct.

ALLEGED ROBBER HELD AT ASHLAND

Ashland, Wis., Jan. 4.—After a preliminary hearing, Matt Mattson was held to circuit court on a highway robbery charge. It is alleged he and two others held up, shot and robbed Matt Hakola on the road several miles out of Marengo on the night of Nov. 17. The hearing was postponed until yesterday because Hakola, the victim, was in a hospital recovering from his injuries and unable to appear in court. He positively identified Mattson as one of the highwaymen. The other two robbers are still sought.

BOUNTY PAYMENTS IN ASHLAND COUNTY

Ashland, Wis., Jan. 4.—The sum of $471.75 was paid out by Ashland county during 1915 in bounty. This is slightly over the average amount paid out each year.

There were thirty-two wildcats killed in this county during the last year, to which the county's share of the county money is $96, $3 being paid by the county for each animal. Thirty-seven wolves were trapped and shot, netting the hunters $370, the county paying $10 each. Twenty-three hen hawks were killed. The bounty for each hawk amounts to 25 cents, which brought the total amount paid out for the birds to $5.75.

GIVE REASONS FOR NOT SIGNING ARMORY REFERENDUM PETITION

Members of the city commission who voted for the sale of the old armory to the Shriners on their offer of $50,000 give the following reasons for their action, which they point out in urging voters not to sign a referendum petition:

Retaining the building means a big expense in repairing it and putting it into condition for future use.

The structure needs an entirely new roof, a new heating plant and many interior improvement.

Keeping the building means an expenditure of $2,000 a year for janitor service, heating and lighting.

The city will lose $750 each year on taxes that would be paid by private owners.

The annual insurance on the building will range from $75 to $100.

The building could not be used by the water and light department because it is too far from the center of the city and the repairs will entail an expense of about $15,000.

The works division has already arranged to build a municipal garage and workshop.

The only use to which the building could be put would be for a public meeting place and the new city hall will be built so that the council chamber, with its balconies, will serve that purpose.

The new armory is always open to the public for meeting places and debates.

The money from the sale of the armory will go into a fund for the new city hall site and public sentiment favors the erection of a city hall as soon as possible.

The Shriners will pay 5 per cent on the balance, after the first payment of $12,000 is made. This is practically $2,500 a year.

The city will pay 4½ per cent interest to the county on the city hall site and this money is growing every year, so that the sooner payments are made, the less the expense will be to the city.

A referendum election will cost the city $3,000.

HESITATION COSTS PRISONER LIBERTY

Frank Roscoe, Sr., Held to Grand Jury as Accomplice.

One little word—and a moment's hesitation, turned the scales against Frank D. Roscoe, alleged accomplice of Frank Roscoe, Jr., and Marmaduke Meyer, in police court yesterday afternoon.

The father was facing a charge of receiving stolen property—property which his son and Meyer already have pleaded guilty to stealing. After one or two postponements, previous to which police offered the older Roscoe a chance to plead guilty to petit larceny, the preliminary hearing, to decide whether or not he should be bound over to the grand jury, was brought before Judge F. H. Cutting.

"The defendant's answer to the question regarding his acquaintanceship with Meyer was a little slow, and it was disappointing to his attorney," the court remarked.

Discrepancies in testimony by a Superior blacksmith, to whom Roscoe is alleged to have sold the stolen property, and that given by friends of the defendants, also went against the father.

Frank Roscoe, Jr., and Marmaduke Meyer came from the county jail to shoulder the blame for all the questionable transactions, but the older Roscoe's story did not convince the court.

He was bound over in $200 bail, and faces a possible penitentiary term, because he refused to plead to the lesser charge, which probably would have netted a thirty-day work farm sentence.

LOVE TRYST LEADS GIRL BACK "HOME"

Wily Miss, Who Escaped From Sauk Center, Taken With Sweetheart.

A slender little girl, with a pretty, innocent face walked into police headquarters yesterday afternoon, accompanied by two men, one of them a detective.

"I'm," she said briefly, with a little smile.

She was known to most of the officers in the room as one of the most daring characters they had met, and one of the few girls who had escaped from the Sauk Center home.

A little more than a month ago an automobile drove up under the wall of the Sauk Center home and two girls made a dash for it. Two young men in the car helped them in, and they started a chase across the southern part of the state by automobile and train that finally landed the girls in St. Paul.

Several days ago the girl came to Duluth, to meet Frank Long, an old sweetheart, and the matron at Sauk Center learned of it. She told Chief R. D. McKercher and a rapid bit of detective work on the part of Officers Toewe and Bradley landed the pair at headquarters within an hour.

Last night the girl went "home" to Sauk Center. The man will be arraigned in court this afternoon on a disorderly conduct charge, according to police.

PENMANSHIP TOO GOOD.

Spencerian Flourishes on Check Involve Two Woodsmen in Difficulties.

Two lumberjacks, both of whom were taught the Spencerian system in the grade schools years ago, nearly came to grief today because of their penmanship.

First, there was a forged check for $78. It might have been written by either prisoner, detectives said, after comparing the twists and twirls.

Second, each lumberjack pointed a figurative finger at the other and said: "He done it."

Tom Egan, arrested for complicity in the affair yesterday by Detectives Toewe and Bradley, was released later, and rearrested this morning.

Egan's friend talked his way out of jail, and Tom now faces the attempted forgery charge alone. The check was offered to Sam Smith, bartender in a saloon at 320 East Superior street, by Egan.

Smith promptly collared Egan and they went to the police station.

This time it looks as though Egan is here to stay. He will be arraigned for a preliminary hearing this afternoon.

M'KERCHER AND TOEWE SUBPOENAED

Duluth Officers Must Give Testimony in Mill City Case.

Subpoena servers caught Chief R. D. McKercher and Detective Herman Toewe today at headquarters.

Although the officers have served subpoenas many times themselves in their careers as guardians of the law, they seldom go into court because of subpoenas.

Both men will leave for Minneapolis tonight to testify in the case of Hugo Eden, alleged bank robber, who was caught in a West end hotel several weeks ago. Eden was identified as one of three or four men who entered the Camden State Bank of Minneapolis and secured $1,400 at the point of revolvers.

When the alarm went out from Minneapolis that the robbers had left in an automobile, police of Duluth started a search, and soon rounded up Eden. The other two deserted Eden some time before police reached the room, and were not captured.

WIRE PROVOKES HER.

Mrs. Grignon Tires of Paying for Telegrams and Has Husband Arrested

Wiring home for money when stranded in a "foreign" town is one of the favorite stunts of A. D. Grignon, according to his better half.

She doesn't object to sending him car fare home, but she hates to pay for the telegram which requests the money, she told police yesterday.

The paterfamilias was in Ashland when he sent the last heartrending wire, and when he reached Duluth, his wife was waiting for him. She was with a policeman.

Grignon stayed in jail over night and was released this morning to go to the range, where he has a job waiting for him, he says.

READ SIGNS "WRONG."

Police Captain's Fur Coat Gets "Beggar" Into Trouble.

"Fur coats are sure signs of prosperity," was the motto of William McLaughlin, 37, a knight of the road, who has found the going hard.

Now his motto is: "Fur coats are sure signs of prosperity—or policemen."

He didn't know that all Duluth policemen, except, perhaps, Chief R. D. McKercher, wore fur coats, and he tackled Police Capt. A. G. Fiskett in an attempt to make a "touch."

"You don't want a meal," said the captain, "you're drunk."

"Well," was the retort, "what of it?"

"Come with me," was all the captain said.

McLaughlin was sent to the work farm for fifteen days for begging, when brought into municipal court.

DYNAMITER BOUND OVER

Brainerd Man Admits Trying to Blow Up Paper Company's Dam.

Brainerd, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charged with attempting to destroy the dam of the Northwest Paper company, across the Mississippi river, in Northeast Brainerd, by placing 100 pounds of dynamite under it, William Fischer was arraigned in municipal court this morning, waived examination and was bound over to the grand jury by Judge Halvorson.

"I am guilty, all right," said Fischer to the judge. "But there was not 100 pounds in the suitcase, only fifty pounds of dynamite."

Fischer, who is 34 years old, single, owns a homestead four miles north of the dam. Five years ago he is said to have settled for the flowage rights at $100. To W. E. Glenn, special agent working on the case, he said he wanted to blow out the dam to get the water off his property.

Makes Confession.

His confession, made before Sheriff Claus A. Theorin, County Attorney S. F. Alderman, W. P. Glenn and others, was that he rowed out to the dam and lowered the satchel loaded with what was afterwards ascertained to be 200 sticks of 40 per cent Dupont dynamite, Twenty-three feet of fuse passed through a long rubber tube connected with the cap. Twice he lit the fuse and each time it failed to explode. When found the next day by employes of the paper company the fuse had burned clear up to the cap. Had it exploded the whole east half of the dam would have been torn out, Brainerd's pumping station would have been swept away and other damage done below.

New at Business.

The dynamite was handled in such a way, said W. P. Glenn, as to clearly indicate the work of a novice.

At the dam the Northwest Paper company is putting in a $500,000 pulp and paper mill. The satchel was found Nov. 8 by employes and the confession made Jan. 3. Fischer has been employed as a blacksmith's helper at the Northern Pacific railway shops here since July 6. He does not seem to realize the enormity of his offense.

HOW IS TIME TO MOVE FORWARD

In Public Affairs, the monthly bulletin of the Duluth Commercial club, Editor George D. McCarthy urges business men to take a greater interest in matters of public interest, and in this connection says:

"If Duluth is ever to attain the place at which its citizens have aimed for many years, now is the time to move forward.

"With the steel plant in operation, with prosperity on every hand, with every indication that general prosperity will continue and particular prosperity will come to Duluth, the men of Duluth should take a keener interest in the welfare of the community—in the community development work that is conducted through the Commercial club.

Duluth's business is growing apace. Duluth's market is being extended constantly in territory and in population in the nearby areas. Duluth's governmental machinery is becoming more complex and municipal problems more pressing. The man of foresight can see in the immediate future questions of great moment to the welfare of the city and problems that will require the best thought of the best men of the community for solution.

The New Year's resolution which the officers of the Commercial club recommend to the members is the resolution to take a greater interest during the year in the affairs of the club, and that means to take a greater interest in the various questions affecting the commercial, industrial and civic progress of the city which arise during the year. The committee member who has been lax in attendance is invited to new interest and energy; the club member who has been indifferent is requested to consider his own relation to the community. The statement that he profits most who serves best is no idle play on words in its application to community service."

ACUTE AND CHRONIC RHEUMATISM

The exact cause of rheumatism is unknown, though it is generally believed to be due to an excess of uric acid in the blood. It may be also said with equal truth that no remedy has been found which is a specific in all cases. In fact the literature of rheumatism shows that there are but few drugs which have not been given a trial. In the hands of one observer we find that a certain drug has been used with the utmost satisfaction; others have found the same remedy to be a great disappointment. All physicians, however, agree that every method of treatment is aided by the administration of some remedy to relieve the pain and quiet the nervous system and Dr. W. S. Schultze expresses the opinion of thousands of practitioners when he says that anti-kamnia tablets should be given preference over all other remedies for the relief of the pain in all forms of rheumatism. These tablets can be purchased in any quantity. They are also unsurpassed in headaches, neuralgias and all pain. Ask for A-K Tablets.

PAID NO ATTENTION TO COURT ORDER

Trifling with mere court orders has proved to be an unpleasant experiment for J. Lakse.

Lakse was this morning sentenced by District Judge Fesler to ten days in the county jail on a charge of contempt of court.

By way of explanation, it might be mentioned that Lakse paid no attention to legal papers containing judicial signatures.

He was defendant in a suit brought by the Knudsen Fruit company. The firm obtained judgment against him and desired to collect it if possible. He was cited to appear before J. E. Gardner, court commissioner, and testify under oath as to his assets.

Lakse neither wished to disclose nor disgorge. He remained neutral and paid no attention to the court commissioner's order. Then came another order, this time from the district court. Lakse still remained indifferent and failed to show up at appointed hours.

Judge Fesler yesterday issued an attachment for Lakse and ordered the sheriff to bring him in.

Lakse said he was working when the paper was served on him and didn't take the time or trouble to read it.

ATTENDANCE SETS RECORD

Twenty More Pupils Enrolled in Duluth Night Schools.

Most of New Students Register in Beginners' Class.

Attendance at Duluth's night schools was increased by twenty at the opening session of the new year last night, and now totals 395, the largest in the city's history.

W. H. Schilling, assistant superintendent of city schools, is in charge of the night schools, which are maintained primarily to give newly-arrived foreigners an opportunity to qualify for citizenship more rapidly.

Two new students were enrolled at the Monroe and Stowe schools, in the West end and New Duluth respectively, one new one was enrolled at the Irving Junior high in West Duluth, and fifteen new ones were found in classes at Central high school.

"Practically all of the new students joined the beginners' class," said Thomas J. Beatty, truant officer, whose duty it is to check up on all foreigners now living in Duluth eligible to attend night school sessions. The United States government immigration officials supply names of all persons arriving in this country who give Duluth as their destination.

If foreigners speak some English, they are placed in advanced classes, while others are given a class by themselves, where they are taught the rudiments of the language. The graduated system is used.

Attendance is governed by employment conditions, teachers say. Many men go into lumber camps for a month's work, and then, returning to the city, they resume school work. Attendance is not compulsory, and is well maintained despite that fact.

LESS MONTANA WOOL BUT HIGHER PRICE

Helena, Mont., Jan. 4.—The first official statement of Montana's wool clip for 1915 places the number of pounds at 25,000,000, a falling off from the 1914 figures of 4,000,000 pounds. It is thought the 1916 clip will show a still further shortage, although probably not as great. But although the 1915 clip was less in quantity, the growers will receive about $1,000,000 more for their product than in 1914, by reason of the superior quality of the wool and the higher prices brought about by the European war.

MISSOURI RIVER CAPTAIN PASSES

Capt. Marsh, Reputed to Have Carried Custer Massacre News, Dies.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 4.—Grant Marsh, 83, the oldest steamboat captain in actual service in the United States, died in a local hospital Sunday night.

Capt. Marsh ran a steamboat on the Missouri river in the '50s and was up in the Yellowstone river at the mouth of the Little Big Horn at the time of the Custer massacre Curley, an Indian scout, brought him news of the battle.

Marsh made a famous run to Bismarck and told the news of the massacre to the world. He will be buried on a high bluff overlooking the Missouri river and old Fort Lincoln.

Another Claimed Glory.

Helena, Mont., Jan. 4.—Who gave the first news of the Custer massacre to the world early in July, 1876, has always been a mooted question that may never be settled. While many credit [illegible] with the distinction local news of the great massacre. He was then of the firm of Fisk Bros., publishers of the Helena Daily Herald, an afternoon paper printed in the then chief point in Montana. It was the 4th of July, 1876, and "Jack" Fisk as he was called happened to be in the Herald office when a horseman dashed up and calling to him said that Gen. Custer and his command had been surrounded by Sioux Indians and cut to pieces a few days previously on the Little Big Horn river. The only wire out of Helena was a privately owned uncertain affair running to Fort Ellis, near Bozeman where connection was made with the military wire to the east. Mr. Fisk saw the importance of the news and being the Associated Press correspondent sent a bulletin to that news organization outlining the "story." Pretty soon he began to receive calls from the Associated Press and from various big eastern papers for complete "stories" of the affair. He interviewed the bearer of the news, embellished the story and fairly "burned up" the wire with his second-handed account of the biggest news story that had "broken" in years. All that night and far into the next day the "story" kept going out of Helena to papers all over the country. Then the big papers rushed special men to the battle scene, John Finerty, Col. John Cockerell and a host of the star writers, but Jack Fisk always claimed he sent the first story and gave the world the "tip."

CLOQUET SCHOOLS ARE FORGING AHEAD

Good Progress Along Several Lines Made During Past Year.

Cloquet, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The past year saw no little advancement in the local schools which are considered of a high grade and Supt. Peter Oleson as well as the teachers feel proud of the record made.

Early last year there was added a teachers' normal course with twenty-three students, under the direction of Miss Emma Williamson, which has marked a notable improvement in the high school work. The night school which was started a short time ago with an enrollment of 120 has increased until it now has 179 and it is expected over 200 will be enrolled before the close of the season. Mr. Oleson states that the foreigners who attend this department would be a fine asset to any community. They seem eager to learn the English language and to become American citizens.

Considerable interest has been shown among the boys in the manual training department, several of them made valuable Christmas presents for their parents.

The college course which was started last year has proved a success. Four of the students who took up this work last year were admitted to the sophomore class at the University of Minnesota and are doing good work.

Schools as Social Centers.

Mr. Oleson believes in making the school the social center of the city. The Cloquet Mothers' club, the largest in the state, meets once a month at the Lincoln high school. The boys' 6 o'clock council, which is reorganized every year, also meets once a month, at which time they enjoy a social hour and are served with a supper by the girls of the domestic science department. Mr. Oleson also wishes to make the school a social center for foreigners. Music is furnished two or three times a week. The high school is planning an operetta to be given the latter part of this month.

SAVE YOUR HAIR AND BEAUTIFY IT WITH "DANDERINE"

Spend 25 Cents! Dandruff Disappears and Hair Stops Coming Out.

Try This! Hair Gets Beautiful, Wavy and Thick in Few Moments.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine, if eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

HOW GOOD IS FRED FULTON? THAT IS A REAL MYSTERY

Rochester Hope Might Be Good and He May Be Very Bad; Present Heavyweights Average Far Below the Fighters of the Past Years; Johnson Was Last Great Title Holder.

BY BRUCE.

FRED FULTON got in the moving pictures. Fred Fulton got columns of newspaper advertising. Fred Fulton was photographed for all the papers, the only little incident that was neglected, being that Fred was not chosen as the opponent of Jess Willard.

This Is a Pleasant World.

Billy McCarney isn't making any secret of the fact that he knocked the Willard-Fulton fight. McCarney sent out letters broadcast, over his own signature, hissing venom at the mere suggestion of matching Fulton and the present title holder. When he was in Duluth last September McCarney was arm in arm with Collins most of the time.

Verily, Bill, this sporting game is a nice, genteel one. Today you are a grand fellow—tomorrow you are a bum, in the rough argot of the street.

How Good Is Fulton?

Now that it is reasonably certain that the proposed and supposed match between Willard and Fulton is non compos mentis, maybe some of the followers of the fight game will ascertain just how good Fulton is.

The Rochester hope is a mystery: either a fairly good heavyweight, or the most filmy pugilistic pretext that has ever been flaunted along in the general direction of the championship.

Perhaps Collins will speedily match Fulton with one of the Eastern heavies. If Fulton gets by with a win he will be improved as a pugilistic card. As a matter of fact Fulton has been in a perilous pugilistic ring position for some time. A loss would have meant back to the farm. It looks now as if Fred would have to go out and fight his way, if he's able, to a place where he can demand recognition as a real challenger.

A Poor Lot of Heavies.

IT doesn't require much of a knowledge of pugilism to positively know that the heavies of the present day are the worst in years. The pathetically humorous thing about it, from a boxing standpoint, is that no one has any well formed ideas as to the precise worth of Willard. It appears that Willard is the best of a very bad lot, and that's a doubtful compliment.

Some persons declare they believe Fulton can go out and beat up the entire lot, adding that they are all a crowd of old women. After Collins gets through fuming about the deal they handed him, maybe he will match Fulton against Jim Savage, Coffey, Moran or Gunboat Smith, and that will serve to give the followers of the game a little further line on the most mysterious ring quality that has bloomed for some time. We doubt if Collins himself knows how good Fulton is—or how bad.

The Old Flock.

THE last great heavyweight ceased to be when Jack Johnson passed from athletic prime into the sere and yellow of ring decadence. Johnson was once a great heavyweight, as all with an intimate knowledge of ring affairs, will admit. Like others, before and after, Li'l Artha passed and his passing left the ring deprived of a really heroic ring figure.

We have grown sort of used to Sam Langford. How good he was will perhaps never be known. Tham was so good that he was forced to pull his punches and burlesque the game. It looks like he's gone, too.

With that short battle with Jack Munro the Jeffries of infinite ring greatness banished, like a tenuous shadow before the driving sun. It was Jeff's last great fight. The pity of it was that Jeff was not in some way made to fight Johnson back in those days instead of dragging that ruined hulk of his back into the ring in 1910.

Johnson came on then and took his place among the great fighters. Willard beat the negro when he was but a shadow of other days, a mere suspicion of a great fighter. Today the title holder if opposed by the poorest lot of heavies that have ever reigned. There is hardly one in the whole lot that the public will take seriously in a fight with the champion, who in turn is not taken seriously by a lot of others.

Some hold that Sam Langford, would she point himself for a real fight, could lick all of the present heavyweights. Be that as it may, the manager who discovers a real sure enough heavyweight is due to make some money.

After a conference last evening with President Stephen H. Jones of the Duluth Curling club and several of the directors of that organization, it was decided to change the schedule of the Duluth Amateur Hockey league, in order that the games will be played on Friday nights. SKI TOURNEY NOT CERTAIN Club Directors Will Make Definite Decision at Afternoon Meeting.

It has not been decided definitely as yet whether there will be a ski tourney staged in Duluth this winter.

A meeting of the directors of the Duluth Ski club is set for this afternoon, at which meeting a decision will be made in regard to whether there will be a tournament staged during the winter. Also it is expected that there will be some changes made in the personnel of the board of directors.

As one of the directors said: "We are going to endeavor to get some new blood in the club. If we are going to stage a tournament this winter, we will have to get busy immediately."

There has been a decided lack of enthusiasm displayed in the ski sport during the last few seasons. The meeting of the Duluth Ski club set for today is an important one, inasmuch as a radical step may be taken. If the same lack of enthusiasm that has characterized the local attitude toward the sport is shown at today's meeting, it may be decided not to stage a tourney during the present winter.

Every Northwestern ski club with the exception of Duluth has already met and set a tourney date. It was stated this morning by one of the Duluth Ski club directors that either a date would be decided upon, or it would probably be decided not to stage a tourney.

TINKER SEPARATES SHEEP FROM GOATS

Choses Players He Will Keep and Offers Sale of Others.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Joe Tinker, who is slated to become manager of the combined Chicago National and Federal league teams, has sent to each major league club manager a list of thirty-three players he will be willing to trade as soon as the Cubs are sold to Mr. Weeghman. FULTON MATCHED WITH PORKY FLYNN IN SOUTH

New Orleans, La., Jan. 4.—Fred Fulton, Minnesota heavyweight, and Dan Flynn of Boston have been matched for a twenty-round bout in New Orleans Jan. 28, local promoters anounce.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Mike Collins, manager of Fred Fulton, said that Fulton's match with Dan Flynn promised better money than that with Jess Willard, which was called off. Collins added that the victor at New Orleans will be matched to fight the winner of the Moran-Coffey battle.

Fulton and party will leave for New Orleans tonight.

GEORGE HULL THROWS VETERAN AL ACKERMAN

Jamestown, N. D., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—George Hull, holder of the middleweight wrestling title of this state, last night defeated Al Ackerman of Sioux Falls, S. D., at the local armory, winning the second and third falls. Ackerman won the first fall with head scissors and arm lock, Hull taking the second with head chancery and arm lock in 21 minutes, and the third and deciding fall with double arm lock in 15 minutes.

Fred Kellogg refereed the match. The contest was the best ever witnessed in this part of the state.

JOE STECKER IS PRACTICALLY MATCHED WITH MAHMOUT

Young Nebraska Wonder to Tackle Big Bulgarian—Dodge Boy Will Arrive Here Ready to Tackle Ernest Kartje and Bob Clemens in Four-Fall Contest.

BY BRUCE.

Joe Stecker and Yussiff Mahmout were practically matched yesterday in Chicago to wrestle for the world's championship some time in February or March.

This information came in a telegram from Emil Klank, former manager of Frank A. Gotch and the present pilot of the famous Bulgarian wrestler, who, it was believed, had been murdered by bandits in his native country during the Balkan war.

According to the statement issued by Klank, Mahmout is on his way to the United States, and is expected to reach this country some time during the present month.

This statement from Klank was confirmed by J. F. Hetmanek, former postmaster of Dodge, Neb., and the present manager of Joe Stecker, the sensational Nebraska wrestler.

Hetmanek wired here from Chicago: "Stecker willing to wrestle Mahmout or Gotch on winner-take-all basis, and will offer substantial side bet on result. Stecker is the greatest wrestler in the world, in our opinion, and we will go the limit on him."

Big Test for Youngster.

If Stecker meets Mahmout, the followers of athletics will get a real line on the ability of the sensational farmer boy. Stecker has already beaten Cutler, Hussane, Americus, Westergard, Connolly, Marion Plestina, Earl Caddock and every other wrestler of note. In going against Yussiff Mahmout, the hayseed sensation is tackling a wrestler many astute judges of form have called the greatest in the world.

Stecker is expected in Duluth this afternoon or late this evening. He will be accompanied by Manager Hetmanek and will take a good long rest in preparation for the big job of tomorrow evening, when the 22-year-old youth will endeavor to demonstrate to the fans of Duluth that he is the greatest grappler in the world by taking two falls each from Ernest Kartje, world's champion light heavyweight wrestler, and Bob Clemens, the big champion of South America.

That Stecker has undertaken a big task is evident. It will be a real contest. Stecker will have to throw both of his opponents twice or lose the match. It is generally believed that Stecker is so good that he will accomplish this, but it is also believed that the phenom from the tall grass district of Nebraska will have his able hands full and will have some work cut out for those sensational 1,800-pound pressure legs of his.

It is getting to the point where Stecker is running out of opponents, and it is also getting to the point where wrestlers don't want to meet him. Stecker has been murdering them and doing it in such short order that he has left his defeated opponents little consolation after the contest.

BASEBALL KEEPING IN LIMELIGHT THROUGH UNSETTLED CONDITIONS

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 4.—The committee appointed by the recent baseball peace conference to settle the dispute between the Federal and International leagues will meet here next Wednesday. The decision was reached at a meeting of the members of the national commission here yesterday. No other news of a definite character came from the meeting room.

It is known semi-officially, however, that the waiver question, insofar as it concerns the Federal league players, was gone into and then laid over to be decided finally by the joint committee, which will also discuss questions other than the waiver and International league disputes.

What these matters are was not allowed to be divulged, but one man high in baseball circles said:

"It is natural that there are a number of details that are bound to conflict when peace is declared between the two bodies. None of these details are of importance other than that they must be attended to. The two big questions to come up, of course, will be that of the dispute between the International league and the Federal league and the waiver question. Insofar as the former is concerned, I can say very little, but in regard to the waiver question, I believe this will be decided quickly after the situation is explained to all of those concerned."

The national commission will meet again today.

Telegrams were sent last night to Harry Sinclair and Thomas Chivington, president of the American Association, requesting them to be in Cincinnati on Wednesday.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—It was learned here yesterday that Harry Sinclair, the Oklahoma capitalist, is making a hurried trip direct from St. Louis to New York with the intention, according to reports, of discussing the purchase of part of the stock of the New York National league club.

Charles Weeghman, while denying knowledge of the status of the negotiations, said he knew Mr. Sinclair would be pleased to take over the Giants and said that in a telephone conversation with him yesterday at St. Louis, Mr. Sinclair said he was on his way to New York.

St. Louis, Jan. 4.—"Yes, I have been a party to negotiations for the purchase of the New York Giants," Harry F. Sinclair, owner of the Newark Federals, said here last night.

"Mr. Hempstead offered me the Giants at a very high price. I offered him a very low price, and that is as far as the negotiations have gone," he said. Sinclair left here for Cincinnati.

New York, Jan. 4.—"Harry Sinclair, owner of the Newark Federal league franchise, will not guarantee all Federal league contracts, nor will he dispose of all the Federal league players," said James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal league, last night. "There has been an erroneous impression ever since the peace meetings that Mr. Sinclair will guarantee the salaries of all Federal league players. I have received many letters from Federal league players asking if it were so, and I replied it was not. The only contracts Mr. Sinclair guarantees are those of the Newark club."

When questioned as to the report that Sinclair will buy the New York Giants, Gilmore said:

"It is no secret that Mr. Sinclair has been negotiating for the purchase of the Giants for some time."

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Worry and the Cold Bogy

MRS. BLANK stopped for a brief chat on her way home the other day. She had a bundle and from the end of the bundle protruded a small whip. We wondered what the whip was for. Well, Mr. Blank had asked her to get one. It seemed that little Dorothy Blank was becoming incorrigible. Why, the little vixen ran away down the street to meet him yesterday, and she didn't have a thing on her head! So Mr. Blank felt that stern duty compelled him to arm himself in defense of the health of the household.

Now if one of our little girls should do a thing like that we wouldn't consider it criminal. We assume that our youngsters are not morons, and that any child of normal mentality is quite capable of coming in out of the cold if the cold is uncomfortable. And if the cold isn't uncomfortable it can't possibly do any harm. Why, it may even do good!

Think of the tremendous amount of needless, silly worrying people do about "exposure."

We dare say no competent critic will produce any scientific evidence to disprove the statement that "colds" are just as contagious as diphtheria or tuberculosis. And we venture the opinion that no evidence will be forthcoming to prove that "exposure," without contagion, can ever cause any kind of acute respiratory disease, be it "grippe," coryza, bronchitis, pneumonia or just a general and ill-defined "cold." To be sure, the casual observer will cite all sorts of instances of real or fancied "exposure" followed in due course by illness. Well, before the role of the stegomyia mosquito was discovered, people were so sure that yellow fever was contagious that they enforced shotgun quarantine when cases developed. We all know better now; we know that mosquito netting is the only absolute bar to the transmission of the disease.

Exposure which is evidently not uncomfortable or actually enjoyed by the exposee, is assuredly not a predisposing or contributing factor of ill health or disease.

Running out without anything around the shoulders never yet caused an illness, unless it was frost-bite.

Here is a rule which we commend to old folks, young folks and folks of middle age concerning the question of exposure to cold weather. If it is comfortable it is healthful.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Salt Not Antiseptic.

I am advised that salt, taken in hot water each morning, is a splendid antiseptic to assist digestion. Do you approve of it?

Answer—It is not an antiseptic, and anyway an antiseptic would tend to delay digestion. A pinch of salt in a glass of hot water sipped early in the morning is a good laxative.

Lemons and "Acidity."

Are lemons bad for one with too much acidity of the blood?

Answer—Lemons contain citric acid, which combines with alkalis and circulates in the blood as alkaline salts. Hence lemons make blood and urine less acid, or rather more alkaline—blood never becomes acid in life.

Dr. Brady will answer all questions pertaining to Health. EXPANSION REFLECTED Orders for Railway Equipment Heavy for Last Four Months.

Roads Entering Duluth Figure Largely in the Reports.

Orders for railroad equipment in 1915 showed remarkable expansion during the last four months of the year. As it is now the car companies are rushed with orders, a large proportion of them being from foreign countries.

Freight cars ordered in the United States and Canada last year came to 107,796 in number, as compared with 80,264 in 1914, and 146,732 in 1913. It is said that as a result of the wonderful improvement in business during the fall months and the realization by the railroads that they would be short of equipment to move the traffic likely to offer, more than one-half the car orders were placed after Oct. 1.

It is regarded as noteworthy that of the 107,796 freight cars ordered, only 725 were specified to be of wood and only 1708 as having composite underframes. The number of all-steel cars increased over fourfold.

Duluth Roads Prominent.

Railroads with Duluth connections figured prominently in the list. The Duluth, Missabe & Northern is credited with the purchase of 1,000 ore cars from the Western Steel company and 200 hopper cars from the Pullman company. The Duluth & Iron Range ordered 250 ore cars from the American Car & Foundry company and 500 ore cars from the Standard Steel company.

The Milwaukee road ordered 500 ore cars, the Omaha 1,500 box cars, 100 refrigerator cars and 300 automobile cars; the Soo line 400 box cars, 200 ore cars and 100 automobile cars, and the Great Northern 4,500 box cars.

Locomotives ordered during the year figured up to 1,573, as compared with 1,265 in 1914.

In the list the Duluth & Iron Range is credited with ordering three locomotives, and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern eight, all from the Baldwin Locomotive company. The Soo line ordered six locomotives from the American Locomotive company, the Milwaukee bought 30 electric motors and 4 electric switching motors from the American General Electric company for its Montana division and the Omaha 10 locomotives from the American Locomotive company.

It is the consensus of opinion in manufacturing circles that the prosperity which the railway equipment field is now enjoying will extend throughout the present year. Some of the companies are said to have sufficient orders on hand to keep them busy for several months. Orders on the books at the close of last year were from three to ten times as great as those waiting to be filled at the end of 1914.

If You Really Want to Cure Yourself of Constipation—

YOU must stop depending upon laxatives and cathartics. They afford only temporary relief and are dangerously habit-forming.

As a result of recent discoveries, leading physicians are gradually discarding the use of drugs in the treatment of constipation. Instead, they prescribe regular habits, sensible food, and an internal lubricant.

Nujol

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

A PURE WHITE MINERAL OIL

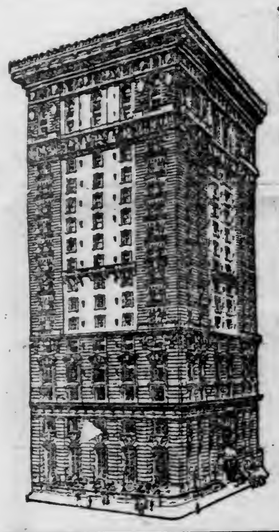

is odorless and tasteless, absolutely neutral, and is not digested or absorbed into the system. It acts merely as a mechanical lubricant.

Nujol is not a drug. Its use will not give quick, temporary relief. But Nujol is a genuine remedy in that it relieves constipation in the most natural way by lubricating the lining of the intestines, softening the intestinal contents, and thus promoting healthy and normal bowel activity

Write for "The Rational Treatment of Constipation," an informative treatise on constipation. If you cannot get Nujol from your druggist, we will send you a pint bottle prepaid to any point in the United States on receipt of 75c—money order or stamps.

STAR HOCKEY PLAYER HERE

A. R. Wellington, better known as the duke of Wellington, one of the flashiest hockey players ever seen in these parts, arrived in Duluth early today. The famous Canadian player is here on a business trip.

Wellington is as yet undetermined where he will play the present season. He does not believe he will play in Canada, the war having seriously interfered with the plans of many of the teams on the other side of the border line.

According to Wellington, the St. Paul team promises to be very strong. Also he declared that Minneapolis was showing a vast amount of interest in the game.

HAVE you ever heard men who use ordinary tobacco say anything in its favor?

But nearly all the men who are today using W-B CUT chewing—the Real Tobacco Chew, new cut, long shred—were started by the suggestion of friends who liked it better than the ordinary kind.

TRIBUTE TO HAMMOND

Unusual Distinction Paid Late Governor in Congress.

Speaker Clark and Others Speak Sorrowfully of His Death.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, Jan. 4.—An unusual tribute was paid the late Governor Hammond in the house of representatives today.

Representative Ellsworth of the Second district asked unanimous consent to submit some remarks on the death of the governor. This inspired Speaker Clark, Representative Mann, the Republican leader, and Representative Rainy of Illinois, who served with the governor on the ways and means committee, to pay their last tribute to Minnesota's chief executive.

Speaker Clark said in part: "One of the most valuable assets of a man in the house of representatives is the personal friendships he makes, and accident brought me in close touch with Governor Hammond. I valued his friendship as I did that of few men of the house. The Democrats of Minnesota have been unfortunate. Twice have the people elected Democrats to the office of governor. One was John A. Johnson, who, I believe, would have been president had he lived; the other was Governor Hammond, and he also had a good chance to become president if he had lived his time out. I regret that it is not the practice of the house to pay more extended tribute to one of the ablest, most amiable and modest men I have been associated with in the twenty-five years I have been here."

Representative Mann said: "I had a warm feeling of affection for Governor Hammond as well as a high personal regard. His removal was a great loss to the house when Mr. Hammond became governor of Minnesota, and it is a great loss to the country that he was called hence."

DULUTH DAIRIES WERE NEVER MORE SANITARY

Scorings for Last Quarter and for Entire Year, Submitted By City Health Commissioner, Show Excellent Conditions.

Duluth dairies were never cleaner, according to the annual report of Health Director Fahey submitted to Commissioner Siblerstein this morning.

In addition to the statement on the condition of the dairies and the tendency of the owners to move out of crowded neighborhoods and to reduce the heavy bacterial counts of recent years, Health Director Fahey includes the dairy scores for the fourth quarter and for the entire year of 1915. A comparison of the scores shows that the dairies indicate a marked improvement the first to the last quarters of last year alone.

Eighty-three dairies are scored in the report, J. U. Sebenius, owner of the Trianon farms, holding the record for Duluth with a score of 94.6 per cent. C. F. Colman is a close second with 94.57 per cent.

The average score for the year is 78.4 per cent and the bacterial count per cubic centimeter for all the dairies of the city is 83,539. The average butter fat is 4.0 per cent, the state law requiring 3.5 per cent.

The scores for the fourth quarter and for the entire year follow:

STEAMER TO COST $500,000 WILL BE BUILT AT SUPERIOR DURING THE COMING SPRING

A 600-foot steel steamer of the 12,000-ton type will be constructed in the shipyard of the Superior Shipbuilding company across the bay during the coming spring and summer. The cost of the vessel will be about $500,000.

This will be the first big steamer constructed at these yards since 1911, at which time the steamer Peter Reiss was built.

Work on the new steamer is expected to begin about March 15 and the vessel will not be launched until late in the summer.

Word concerning the contract came from Detroit this morning and was confirmed by G. A. Tomlinson of Duluth, president of the Superior Shipbuilding company and director of the American Shipbuilding company.

"We do not know yet what steamer will be assigned us for construction here," said Mr. Tomlinson, "but we know that it will be one of the big ones. A number of contracts have been obtained by the American Shipbuilding company for large vessels to be constructed this year, but as yet it has not been decided which one will be built at this point.

Of the Biggest Type.

"The steamer will be of the largest type and of the kind that is finding most favor with vessel owners of today. The 600-foot, 12,000-ton steamer is the favorite for various reasons, for it can be used to greater advantage than other kinds, and quite a number of them have been ordered for delivery next year from our company and from other shipbuilding concerns. The new boat to be constructed here will be of that class.

"Nobody is more pleased over the assignment of one of the contracts to the Superior yard than I am. I have been bothering—yes, that's the word—the officers and directors of the American Shipbuilding company for months for a contract. There has been a great deal of hesitancy to grant my urging for the reason that it costs more to build a boat here than down below, owing to the fact that we have to bring the steel and other material from the East to this point, while at the lower lake yards the material is at hand. I guess that the boat has been given us more on the representation that something should be done for the Superior yard than anything else, and the general intention to use the local yard for building only when other yards were overtaxed has given away before the demand.

Big Thing for Superior.

"It will be a big thing for Superior and the Head of the Lakes as a whole," added Mr. Tomlinson. "About 70 per cent of the amount to be spent in the boat—and that is $500,000—will be paid out in wages. The yard employes about fifty men now, but when work on the new boat is on, the payroll will increase to about 300 men. That means the distribution of a lot of money."

Aside from repair work, the Superior yard has been idle for five years. The last boat constructed was the C. W. Cadwell, a sand steamer, 164 feet long, which was launched in 1911. The last large steamer built in the yards was the Peter Reiss, launched in 1910. The Reiss is 512 feet long. For years the yard has been used chiefly for repair work and some small reconstruction jobs.

In the old days in Superior, chiefly in the era of boats of whaleback type, when Capt. Alex McDougall of Duluth controlled the yard, the Superior shipyard was one of the biggest, if not actually the biggest, industries at the Head of the Lakes. Shipbuilders by the hundred were employed continuously at big wages, and the yard was humming with industry day and night. In those days a great deal of the work now done by machinery was done by hand, such as riveting, and the crews at work on the ships, sometime three and four being under construction at one time, formed small armies as they issued from work in the evening and went to work in the morning. Pay day came twice a month, and Superior made ready every other Saturday night for a rain of gold in the stores and saloons. The hard times of 1893 swept out this era of prosperity and building at the shipyards like a tidal wave, and while the yards have had building eras since, nothing like the old times of the early '90s has ever returned.

DAVE ALTIZER IS IN DULUTH

Dave Altizer, a former big league baseball star and for years shortstop of the Minneapolis American association team, and one of the hitting and fielding stars of the association, is in the city today.

The Minneapolis veteran has announced his retirement from baseball and has entered business. His new business will keep Altizer at the Head of the Lakes a good share of the time.

Altizer has been known for years as one of the greatest minor league players in the country, and his consistent work at bat and in the field has been one of the big factors in the success of the Minneapolis team.

DAUGHERTY TO COACH QUINTET

Frank Daugherty has been chosen as coach of the Cathedral high school basket ball team. Daugherty is a graduate of the school and was one of the greatest basket ball players ever turned out by the school.

The first practice of the season was held yesterday, about twenty-five candidates responding to the call. Cole and Lee are the only two veterans left, but the new material is believed to be very promising, and a very good quintet is expected to be turned out this season.

A schedule is being arranged. Most of the strong teams in this vicinity will be taken on.

DETROIT EXPORTS IN BIG FIGURES

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 4.—Exports through the port of Detroit for the week ending Dec. 25, 1915, were second in value only to exports from New York. Unprecedented increases in the amount of commodities shipped brought the total to $4,080,278. Figures for the corresponding week of the preceding year are not available, but for the entire month of December 1914, the amount was $7,537,968.

Shipment of horses for Europe is a big item in the augmented figures. In October, the last month for which complete statistics have been made known, horses valued at $3,487,000 passed through this port on their way to the Entente allies. In the last six months of 1914, horse exports exaggerated only $53,000.

SIGNAL STATION AT CANADIAN LAKES HEAD

John W. Wolvin, vessel agent of Fort William-Port Arthur, and formerly of Duluth, has issued a notice of his proposal to install an office on the Empire elevator dock in that harbor, with day and night service, furnishing a whistle-signal by which ships can be directed to their docks without going into the Kaministiqua river and losing time and incurring tug bills.

The whistle signal will be used similarly to the one now used at Two Harbors, Minn., and in foggy weather will be used as a fog whistle. Mr. Wolvin has issued, in connection with his plan, a folder key-map to the harbors, showing the locations of all docks, elevators, channels, etc.

HENRY FORD DODGES DETROIT WELCOME

Avoids Delegation of Citizens Who Have Floral Piece for Him.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 4.—Henry Ford, leader of the peace mission to The Hague, returned to Detroit today but at the station he avoided a delegation of local citizens who had planned to welcome him home and present him with a floral piece in recognition of his peace efforts. He remained in his private car and proceeded to his country home at Dearborn. A public meeting in honor of Mr. Ford is being planned for the near future.

Minneapolis Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The will of the late Thomas L. Shevlin, former Yale football star, who died here last week after a brief illness, was filed for probate today. The entire estate, the estimated value of which is $3,500,000, is left to the widow and two children.

The executors also are named as trustees of the estate, a large part of which is placed in trust until the two children reach the age of 30. The money then will be equally divided between them. Mrs. Shevlin will receive an annual income of $60,000, in addition to money from certain holdings.

Although Mr. Shevlin's life was heavily insured, only $25,000 is payable to the widow, $1,500,000 being payable to two companies of which he was head.

NASHWAUK WILL DEDICATE HALL

Council Plans to Have Exercises Early Next Month.

Nashwauk, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Soon after the first of next month the new village hall will be dedicated, the exact date to be fixed later. The council at its first session in the new building last night planned partially for the dedicatory exercises by authorizing Clerk Wilbur Ohles to engage a Duluth orchestra and prepare for the event.

President H. T. Reifel appointed the following committees to take charge of the dedication exercises:

Music and entertainment—Wilbur Ohles, James Williams and M. J. Donovan.

Reception and floor—M. H. Barber, Oscar Johnston, B. W. Batcheider, John Butler, Jr., H. Haugen, James Hughes, J. M. Gannon, Pasquale Verra, J. P. Raattama, Abe Markus Peter Zagar, Dr. M. F. Hayes, William Sumi and John T. Ring.

Refreshments—A. McWilliams, J. P. Lanto, Henry Varonen, Nels Nelson and Edward Gaffney.

Invitations—Paul H. Tweed, H. T. Lafitte and H. Haugen.

Every arrangement will be made by these committees to make the dedication one that will never be forgotten by Nashwauk people as well as the many out of town visitors expected.

To Install Scenery.

J. N. Brown of Grand Rapids, Minn., was given authority to finish and install a complete set of stage scenery, including an asbestos curtain at a cost of approximately $320. The scenery will be here within the next three weeks and will be installed upon approval of the village council and Architect W. A. Hunt of Duluth. A new piano was also ordered purchased to be shipped at once.

Chief of the fire department, Abe Markus, asked for a set of sleighs to be used in hauling hose and other fire apparatus. This was granted with several other smaller items for use by the department, the chief was also given instructions to hire men to inspect the hydrants and prevent them from freezing.

Members of the village band petitioned the council to purchase a horn and sheet music, which the clerk was instructed to purchase.

All liquor licenses issued by the village heretofore were annulled, the saloon keepers having received their allowance checks for the unexpired period at the last regular meeting in December.

The building ordinance prohibiting property owners from erecting frame buildings unless fireproof, on Central avenue, affects a frame building recently erected in the rear of the Saccoman confectionery store on Central avenue, and the clerk was instructed to have the owner, whose building is within the fire limits, be made fireproof or razed.

The following estimates on the village hall were laid on the table until passed by Architect W. A. Hunt of Duluth: Home Electrical company, final estimate of wiring, $262.14; A. C. Schirmer company, final estimate on plumbing, $767.82.

The state board of control was notified to pass on the inspection of the cell work in the jail before final estimates on the cell work can be paid.

TWENTY CHARGED WITH FRAUDS AT ELECTION

Steubenville, Ohio, Jan. 4.—Twenty warrants charging fraudulent registration were served today on citizens about to vote in the special election to decide the municipal liquor question. Each was placed under $500, and forbidden to vote. One arrest for alleged illegal voting was made, and the accused, Samuel Loomer, a merchant, was placed under $1,000 bail for a further hearing. The election terminates a campaign of unusual bitterness.

Other arrests were made this afternoon. So often did the "wet" and "dry" factions clash at the polling places reserves were called out.

Mountain Iron Funeral.

Mountain Iron, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The funeral of Nels Hanson, aged 48, who lived here about twenty years and died Sunday, was held here today with interment in Virginia. He leaves a widow, one daughter, Mrs. Arthur Saari, aged 25, and three sons, all living at home. Selmi, aged 23; Neil, aged 17, and Teddy, aged 9.

CHICKS ORPHANS AT BIRTH.

Farm and Fireside: Three chickens, hatched from eggs that were never laid, composed the interesting part of a window display of poultry remedies in my drug store recently. The idea came to me several months ago when I was planning my future window displays.

Three lusty hens, a White Orpington, a Rhode Island Red and a Black Minorca, were killed. I obtained an egg from every hen. The shell of the White Orpington egg was not fully developed, so I used gum arabic and adhesive plaster to finish the shell.

The three eggs were placed in an incubator, and hatched out three chicks, a white one, a black one and a red one. The chicks are roosters and are now large enough to crow.

THE GREAT DETECTIVE.

Detroit Free Press: "Good afternoon," said the great detective. "Have a chair—temporarily, of course."

"My husband's actions have been puzzling me," began the woman with the high-heeled gown. "Every evening after supper he mysteriously disappears, and never returns until midnight. He never tells me where he has been, but I suspect the worst, for he always comes back with a smear of face powder on his right shoulder, and I've found long hairs on his coat."

"Hum," said the great detective thoughtfully, "Hum."

"I should say so," replied the woman in the high-heeled gown.

"What's the nearest dance hall to your house?" asked the detective, and she answered, "The Palais de Hop."

Springing to the telephone, the great detective called up the Palais de Hop.

"Page, Mr. Dooser, please," he requested. "Hello, is this Mr. Dooser. It is? Thank you; that's all."

"Wonderful!" breathed the woman with high-heeled gown. "I'll start in tomorrow and take dancing lessons myself."

"That's the best way to stop him," agreed the g. d. "Eleven dollars, please."

TWO SUBSTITUTES FOR NUTS.

"Pumpkin seeds are recommended as a new nut," says a writer in the Woman's Home Companion. "Our family for generations have dried apricot seeds and used the kernels in candy, cake and cookies. They have a most delicious flavor all their own."

AURORA BANK TO GIVE AID

Will Loan Farmers Money to Purchase Livestock for Creamery.

Commercial Club Names Committee to Work on Creamery Scheme.

Aurora, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Commercial club will take active steps to secure a creamery for Aurora and has the support of the State Bank of Aurora in the project.

P. M. Johnson, cashier of the bank, stated at the club meeting last night that the bank would loan money to the farmers to purchase blooded stock. Under this arrangement it is assured that there will be sufficient high grade cows to make the venture profitable.

A creamery committee was appointed as follows: Dr. Ed Darrow, O. F. Halstrom, Gust Mattson, C. R. Hill and Matt Alto. These gentlemen will interview the farmers north and south of town, ascertain the number of cows now tributary to Aurora, and how many more can be cared for by the farmers.

To Improve Roads.

The matter of roads was discussed and August Knuti, E. C. Talboys, P. M. Johnson, W. J. Rashleigh and Anton Smolich were appointed a committee to look after the road matters in this district and to meet with the good roads committee to be organized shortly at Virginia.

The Vermilion road was discussed and its importance to Aurora shown. An effort will be made by the club to have this road widened and improved the coming summer.

EVELETH CREAMERY IS QUITE POSSIBLE

Jenkins Brothers of Two Harbors and Proctor Are Getting Data.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Eveleth seems in a fair way to get the creamery for which the Commercial club has been working the past month. G. H. Jenkins, a creamery man of Two Harbors, and a brother of Proctor, met with the club and went into the proposition last night, and the prospects are bright for the opening of a creamery in Eveleth in the near future.

The Jenkins brothers are looking over the city today with A committee from the club and the closing of a lease for a building is possible within a few days. G. H. Jenkins runs a creamery at Two Harbors. He heard the report made to the club last night by a committee appointed to get an estimate of the business to be expected at a creamery located in Eveleth and was favorably impressed with the city as a location for a plant.

The only other business done by the club was the election of officers and that was quickly disposed of by the reelection of all officers. Judge J. C. McGilvery, president; L. O. Magee, secretary; Solomon Sax, treasurer and Sam Siegel and W. E. Malloy, vice presidents.

Inquiries About Eveleth.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The efforts to make Eveleth a better city to live in and a better city for the children to grow up in are attracting attention outside the boundaries of the state. There have been several inquiries from within the state about the work done in Eveleth since the survey of the city by L. H. Weir. Carl C. Ford, playgrounds director, is in receipt of an inquiry from Lackawanna, N. Y., for information about the work done here.

There is a movement on at Lackawanna to employ a playground director and do other work similar to that done in Eveleth. The slogan of the campaign will be, "If it can be done in Eveleth, why not in Lackawanna."

WOODSMAN LOSES HIS CONTRABAND

While Carrying Whisky in Pigskin, Boy Is Halted By Indian Agent.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the Indian agents are on the lookout all the time for infringers of the law was emphasized yesterday afternoon when a lumberjack stepping off the car at Station No. 7 was nabbed by Indian Agent Ellis, but shaking himself free performed record time in getting away.

Inside of a pigskin bag was a five-gallon cask of whisky. Just as Mr. Lumberman stepped off the car, Mr. Ellis made his appearance.

There was a sudden scurrying of feet and dropping of liquor. Mr. Ellis picked up the cask and destroyed it, while he gleefully watched the frightened visitor running through the snowbanks.

The stranger was supposed to be coming from Virginia.

LESS ARRESTS ARE MADE IN CHISHOLM

Last Month Showed Big Improvement Over December, 1914.

Chisholm, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Records of arrests for December, 1915, as compared with the corresponding month of 1914, show a decrease of 26. The Indian lid was on here last month. Thirty-six were taken into custody during December, 1914, and of this number 24 were drunks; while last month 10 unfortunates fell into police hands, 5 of whom were booked as intoxicated.

There is no evidence in the hands of the police of any open tilting of the Indian treaty lid, and the Federal officers have pretty well discouraged the activities of those they have suspected of bootlegging.

How to Have the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines, as a rule contain a large quantity of plain syrup. A pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50—a clear saving of nearly $2. Full directions with Pinex. It keeps perfectly and tastes good.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. Splendid for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes the inflamed membranes in the case of a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol, and has been used for generations to heal inflamed membranes of the throat and chest.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

WAS ON VESSEL ENGLISH HELD UP

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ina Maki, sister of a local barber, arrived here today from Finland, her native country, and will remain here. She tells of a thrilling war experience that befell the ship on which she was sailing to America. Just off the Shetland Islands it was held up by a British warship and all German mail confiscated. The vessel was detained two days, then allowed to resume its voyage. Outside of this experience Miss Maki says the voyage was uneventful, except that all the passengers were on the qui vive for something else to happen until they were well outside the war zone.

HARD FOR LOGGERS.

Lumber Official Says Present Winter Is Not Satisfactory.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 4.—F. H. Gilmor, superintendent of logging for the Virginia & Rainy Lake company at Cusson, says that so far this winter it has been the hardest for logging in his experience in this section of the country. He says the swamps are not frozen and that the ice in the lake is not thick enough to carry a thousand feet of logs. The recent snow will have a tendency to making logging still harder as it will prevent the swamps from further freezing even if the weather does get colder. He says it will take a real cold snap of long duration before the swamps and lakes are fitted for good fast operations.

FLUSH KIDNEYS WITH SALTS IF BACK IS ACHING

Noted Authority Says We Eat Too Much Meat, Which Clogs Kidneys.

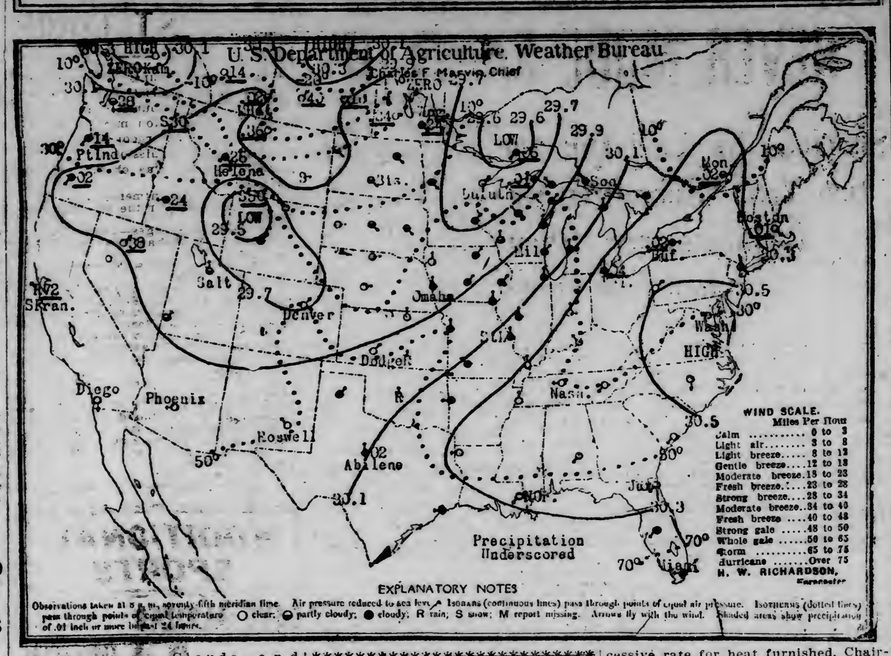

Take Glass of Salts When Kidneys Hurt or Bladder Bothers You.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

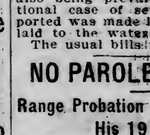

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Advertisement.

OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER

COLD WAVE

Clouds and threatening snow fails to terrify Duluth any more after Saturday night; and furthermore, the impression is growing that the much predicted open winter has been knocked in the head. Nobody wants it, and the current brand of weather, while it has its inconveniences, is just about the right thing for business, both in the city and in the lumber woods. In short it is a good commercial winter, and it is great for the season's sports; so what more could be wanted?

A year ago today was raw. The sun rose this morning at 7:54 and will set this evening at 4:32, giving eight hours and thirty-eight minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Low pressure areas centered over Wyoming and Western Ontario have caused a decided rise in temperature over Wyoming, Colorado, the Eastern slopes of the Rocky mountains, the Southwest, Lower Missouri and Mississippi valleys, and the region. Over Northern Montana and Western Canada zero weather prevails. Conditions favor a cold wave over Minnesota tonight in connection with the easterly movement of the high pressure that has developed over Northern Saskatchewan during the last twenty-four hours. In the meantime rain or snow fell over extreme Northeastern states, Western Canada, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Nevada, Northern California, Oklahoma and Texas."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Forecasts for the twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Wednesday:

Minnesota—Unsettled and much colder tonight, probably snow; cold wave in east and south portions; Wednesday partly cloudy; colder in east portion.

Wisconsin—Rain or snow and colder tonight, much colder in west portion; Wednesday unsettled and much colder, probably snow.

Iowa—Rain or snow and colder tonight; Wednesday snow and much colder.

North Dakota—Unsettled and colder tonight, probably light snow; Wednesday fair and continued cold.

South Dakota—Snow and colder tonight and probably Wednesday; cold wave in northeast and central portions.

Upper Michigan—Unsettled tonight and Wednesday. Probably rain or snow; somewhat colder.

Lower Michigan—Unsettled tonight and Wednesday, probably rain or snow in north and rain in south portion. Somewhat colder Wednesday.

SEVEN CASES REPORTED.

Two Harbors Council Takes Steps to Check Diphtheria.

Two Harbors, Minn., Jan. 4.—Seven cases of diphtheria were reported to the city council last night, five being in the family of Charles Salo, but most of the cases reported in the city are said to be mild in form.

All diphtheria cases are quarantined and steps are being taken to have the state health authorities supply serum for treating cases here.

Council ordered that the amount of hypochloride of lime used in the city water supply be increased, as it destroys disease germs, typhoid fever also being prevalent here. An additional case of several previously reported was made known. The fever is laid to the water supply.

The usual bills were ordered paid.

PAN-AMERICAN DEFENSE PLAN

Provides for Resisting Any Attack Made on Western Hemisphere.

Both Naval and Military Program Is Considered.

Washington, Jan. 4.—An army and navy capable of successfully resisting attack on any portion of the coasts of the United States, Central or South America, not only by any single foreign power, but by any two such powers in alliance, are the ultimate aims of the army and naval strategists, who formulated plans for national defense, it was learned last night.

They believe, it is said, that an adequate military policy must provide against assault by either a European or an Asiatic power, or an alliance of two such powers, which might seek to attack the new Monroe doctrine. Their plans would provide sufficient force to enable the United States to act alone with no entangling alliances in case of such attack.

Such a force, they say, would require a navy equal to those of any two world powers, excluding Great Britain, and an army large enough that a portion could be used in any Central or South American country without impairing the safety of the United States itself.

The navy board believes the shock of the present war will insure the Americans against any attempt at colonial development or trade aggression by the belligerents for ten years. The army board contemplates the completion of its plans within six years.

Information Not Revealed.

What confidential information the army war college and the navy general board may have gathered concerning the intentions of any certain power or powers is not being revealed; but there are certain matters of general knowledge which are known to have entered into the study of possibilities upon which the theory of a two-power attack upon the Monroe doctrine was based.

With the military problem agreed upon and defined, the two boards of strategy were asked what, in their opinion, would constitute adequate national defense. Their answer was to build a two-power navy and organize a Federal army of sufficient size so a portion of it could be used in any Southern country against a foreign invader without impairing the safety of the United States itself. To accomplish this, the general board then recommended for the navy:

Recommendations Made.

"1.—An authorization in 1916-17 of $300,000,000 in new ships as against a total investment in fighting equipment now afloat during the last thirty years of $450,686,561.

"2.—Construction of four battle cruisers and four dreadnaughts under this program.

"3.—Expansion of shipbuilding facilities to admit of even heavier building programs in succeeding years."

For the army the war college recommended:

"1.—Expenditure in 1916-17 of approximately $500,000,000 to produce a mobile army under Federal control, which, with its reserves would total 1,500,000 in six years; 500,000 fully trained regulars and the remainder continentals.

"2.—Increasing by 50 per cent the equipment and personnel of the coast artillery in four years at a total cost of $81,000,000.

"3.—Accumulation in four years of reserve ammunition and material worth $194,000,000."

In view of the enormous, and what they regarded as almost prohibitive cost of these proposals, Secretary Daniels and Secretary Garrison mapped out the billion dollar, six-year program President Wilson had laid before congress, providing essentially as follows:

For the navy:

1.—New construction within five years, costing $500,000,000 which will add six battle cruisers and ten dreadnaughts in the fighting line by 1924.

2.—Construction during 1916-17 of two battle cruisers and two dreadnaughts, with proportionate numbers of smaller craft.

3.—Distribution of the remainder of the building program through the next four years at a cost of $100,000,000 a year.

For the army:

1.—Expenditure within six years of approximately $600,000,000 to produce a total mobile Federal force of 1,000,000 men, 141,000 regulars and 800,000 continentals, this force to be in addition to the national guard now numbering 129,000.

2.—Expenditure of the full $81,000,000 recommended by the war college and board of review for new coast defenses.

3.—Expenditure of the full $104,000,000 recommended by the experts for reserve material.

PRICE TRIAL UNDER WAY

Work of Selecting Jury to Try Minneapolis Man Begins.

Charles Etchison Will Be Chief Witness for the State.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The work of selecting a jury to try Frederick T. Price, a local business man charged with murdering his wife more than a year ago, began in district court here today. One hundred veniremen had been summoned, as it was said difficulty would be encountered in selecting a jury.

A score of witnesses, including several physicians, will be placed on the stand by the prosecution in an effort to prove that Price pushed his wife from a cliff and caused her death with a view to inheriting her money.

Chief Witness.

The chief witness for the state will be Charles D. Etchison, a traveling salesman of Washington, D. C., indicted jointly with Price on a charge of first degree murder and who, after his arrest in Washington and while en route to Minneapolis, signed a confession in which he said he accompanied Price to the scene of the alleged crime. He further charged that Price had planned to rid himself of his wife several months before her death, and said that while he (Etchison) first refused to have a hand in the alleged crime, he finally consented to make the trip to the River Road cliff, for which it was understood that Price was to cancel a note of about $1,200 and in addition give Etchison $3,500 in cash. Etchison is expected to repeat his story at the trial.

To Attack Statements.

Counsel for Price has not made known the line of defense. That an attack upon the statement by Etchison will be made, however, was indicated in a statement issued by Price soon after Etchison's arrest. Price declared that "there will be a complete change of public sentiment after the truth has been told about Etchison."

Keen interest has been manifest in the case. Mr. Price had a wide circle of friends. She married Price against the wishes of her family.

Not satisfied with a story told by Price and Etchison that Mrs. Price had fallen over the embankment while trying to rescue her pet dog, David H. Fridley, her father, after whom the town of Fridley, Minn., was named, placed the case in the hands of a private detective agency. An investigation of more than a year ensued. A few months after the death of Mary Fridley Price, Price married Miss Carrie Olson, who is his fourth wife.

Injured in Sawmill.

Ashland, Wis., Jan. 4.—John Coburn, age 16, is in the hospital here with injuries received while at work in a portable sawmill about three miles south of the city. He was sawing four-foot cordwood in shorter lengths when his arm was caught in the belt, and he was pulled into the machinery. When his predicament was noticed by a fellow employe, the machinery was stopped. His right arm was broken in four places and his shoulder was dislocated.

EXPORT CALL BULLS WHEAT

Market Has Good Bulge on Reported Active Foreign Buying.

Flax Again Turns Strong With Renewed Inquiry From Crushers.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 4.—The market was strong at the close with renewed bidding and covering.

May wheat closed 3¼c up and July 2⅜c up. May durum closed 2½c up.

Oats closed ⅝c up at 42⅞c for on the track. Rye unchanged at 93c, and barley 2c up at from 64c to 70c for on the track.

At Winnipeg, May oats closed ½c up at 44¼c bid.

At Kansas City, May wheat closed at $1.16½ nominal and July at $1.10¾.

Puts on Minneapolis May wheat closed at $1.21 bid, and calls at $1.26.

After showing moderate weakness during the early trading today in sympathy with lower Liverpool cables, wheat prices were advanced 2c. The lever for the upturn was furnished in the reported working of a good tonnage of grain for export at the seaboard and increased apprehensions on the part of British buyers owing to shortage of supplies and the generally unsatisfactory shipping situation. So scarce is shipping for Argentina that the rate on wheat from that country to 86c a bu. That, for the present practically debars shipments from the Southern hemisphere, and leaves the supplying of the European demand to this country and Canada.

It is intimated that the British government proposes to commandeer all the ships possible for the grain movement from America, and that is affording exporters some hopes of relief, though when that will materialize is regarded as problematical. In the meantime congestion at the seaboard is serious, and the railroads, as a general rule, have registered embargoes against further all-rail shipments.

Receipts from the country are expected to drop off shortly, as marketings at the interior elevators are reported to be limited at present. Today receipts at Duluth were in fairly good volume, there being 296 cars of wheat against 73 last year. Minneapolis had 279 cars, and Winnipeg came to the front with 858 cars. Arrivals of Canadian wheat at Duluth are expected to attain some proportions in the near future, owing to the elevators at their Head of the Lakes becoming filled up. In the meantime from 20 to 25 cars of bonded wheat a day are coming this way.

An embargo against shipments from the West to its lake terminals has been declared by the Canadian Northern railroad, and unless grain can be shipped all rail to the seaboard soon, it is expected that the Canadian Pacific will follow suit. It is desired to prevent a blockade at the lake ports on the scale that occurred four years ago.

May wheat opened ¼c up at $1.20¼, eased off ⅛c and then moved up to $1.22 at the noon hour. July opened ¾c off at $1.13⅝, eased off ¼c, and later bulged to $1.21⅝.

Duluth was also strong, with good trading in it. May opened ¼c up at $1.18½, and advanced to $1.19⅞.

Flax Again Strong.

Flaxseed was strong with a renewal of good inquiry from crushers and light receipts and offerings. Operators are reported to be becoming more deeply impressed by reports coming from the country to the effect that receipts are drying up, and that holders are growing more bullish in their views.

London was strong in line with demand for oil and the scarcity of seed supplies. It closed ⅞c up at $2.24⅝. Buenos Aires was weak supposedly on account of the freight situation, closing 1½c off at $2.19¾.

May flax opened unchanged at $2.21⅜, and closed 2⅜c up at $2.24½ asked.

At Winnipeg, May flax closed 2¼c up at $2.03¾ asked.

MARKET GOSSIP.

Argentine freight rates to British ports are now on a basis of 79½c per bu for corn and 86c for wheat.

Cash wheat was again in good inquiry on the Duluth market today. Cash No. 1 northern sold at 1½c under May and cash durum at 1½c under May.

Charles E. Lewis & Co. had the following from Chicago: "U. S. exports for crop year promise 100,000,000 bu less than year ago. Spring wheat crop is 150,000,000 bu larger, therefore there is 250,000,000 bu surplus to offset reduced winter wheat yield. Winter wheat report just out shows a reduction of only 55,000,000 bu. If the most radical claim of 200,000,000 bu be confirmed, there would still be 50,000,000 bu more for carrying over than last year."

At Minneapolis cash durum was fair. No. 1 northern blue stem sold at 1c over to 1c under May, and velvet chaff at May price to 1c under May. Flour was dull. Cash No. 1 northern wheat sold there at $1.20½@1.21½ and No. 2 northern at $1.16½@1.18½. Wheat stocks in Minneapolis elevators increase 770 bu in three days.

Bradstreet's reported that world's visible of wheat increased 4,109,000 bu, corn increased 1,548,000 bu and oats increased 1,516,000 bu. The world's visible wheat supply was placed at 253,019,000 bu against 200,008,000 bu last year.

* * *

In reference to linseed, Broomhall had the following from Liverpool: "Oil continues strong and is advancing with seed stocks light. Prospects of imports are unlikely, except in limited quantities owing to the strong freights. Indian merchants are not offering. Plate shippers are easy, thereby meeting the strong freights. America and the continent are taking Plates at what is considered fair prices."

* * *

Russell's News, New York, said: "A further inquiry for wheat was reported at the Gulf this morning, but this was not general. One export house had a cable from Italy saying that buyers were uniting for lower prices, while an English cable read that demand is generally quieter."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Lower Quotations From Liverpool Give Wheat Prices Downward Swing

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Wheat prices took a downward swing today, influenced by lower quotations from Liverpool, despite the fact that the foreign decline was said to be mainly a reflection of yesterday's weakness here. Commission houses sold freely and the market ran into stop-loss orders. Buying on the break was only fair. Opening prices, which ranged from ¼c off to ⅛c up, with May at $1.23 to $1.23⅜ and July at $1.16⅛, were followed by a decided general setback, and then a rally that failed to last.

Later a sharp upturn took place owing to a decrease in arrivals northwest and because of talk of better export inquiry. The close was strong, 2⅜c to 2½@2⅝c net higher with May at $1.25¾@1.25⅞, and July at $1.18⅜@⅝c.

Corn went lower with wheat. Predictions of stormy weather with a consequent outlook for decreasing receipts, however, tended to make the bears cautious. After opening unchanged to ⅛c down, the market underwent a moderate sag all around.

The market subsequently rallied when wheat turned upgrade. There were also reports of inquiry here from the seaboard. The close was firm at ⅝c to ⅝@¾c net advance.

Oats eased off with other grain. Demand was light.

Larger warehouse stocks than had been looked for acted as a weight on the provision market. Buyers were scarce.

Wheat—No. 2 red, $1.23⅞@1.25¼; No. 3 red, $1.19@1.21½; No. 2 hard nominal; No. 3 hard, $1.16@1.18½.

Oats—No. 3 white, 43¼@44¼c; standard nominal.

STOCKS SHOW UNCERTAINTY

Prices Range High at Opening With Some Profit-Taking.

Recoveries in Final Hour With an Irregular Close.

New York, Jan. 4.—The range of prices was generally high at today's opening, though here and there signs of further profit-taking or liquidation were seen. California Petroleum preferred was heavy on rumors of a hitch in connection with its proposed merger with Mexican Petroleum. Mexican, on the contrary, opened strong, with gains in coppers, Mercantile Marine preferred and New York Airbrake. United States Steel was steady, but leading rails, including St. Paul, Pennsylvania, Lehigh Valley and Erie were higher by fractions to a full point. The strength of Anglo-French 5s suggested further investment inquiry.

Trading during the morning was on a smaller scale than yesterday but more professional, with many indications of manipulation. Oil issues were less conspicuous after the initial dealings, their places being taken by other specialties, notably Marine preferred, which rose almost 2 points to the new record of 80½. Coppers also became very active, smelting rising 3¼ to 113¾, while Miami rose 1½ to the new record of 39 on its increased dividend. Changes otherwise were more variable, but before midday a brisk demand for Union Pacific imparted general strength and activity to other high-grade railway shares. Bonds were firm.

Vague rumors dealing with the international situation contributed to the marked change of the early afternoon. Liquidation began with oils and other specialties, gradually affecting standard issues and effacing most of the morning's gains.

Uncertainty concerning international affairs and liquidation in specialties were the main features of today's market.

Recoveries of 1 to 2 points in leaders like Smelting and Mexican Petroleum checked the decline in the final hour. The closing was irregular.

BUYING SITE FOR CITY HALL

City Commissioners Closing Deal With the County Board.

Property Will Cost $108,000 With Nine Years' Interest.

City commissioners and members of the St. Louis county board will meet at the courthouse at 4 o'clock this afternoon and take first steps toward the acquisition of the new city hall site on courthouse square.

The county commissioners held their annual meeting at 2 o'clock, when they organized for the year and arrangements were made this morning by Mayor Prince to have the members of the city council hold a conference with the county board immediately after the latter's regular business session. J. O. Walker, deputy county auditor, assisted in making arrangements for the conference.

At the joint meeting this afternoon the city council will arrange to make the first payment on the city hall site, using the $12,000, which the Shriners will pay as the first instalment for the new armory, which has been sold to them on their offer of $50,000. The proper officials will be authorized to prepare the necessary contracts, so that the papers can all be signed as soon as the money is received.

Cost $108,000 and Interest.

Provision will also be made for regular payments on the site in the future. It is understood that the property cost the county approximately $108,000. The site has been held in trust for the city since 1906. In addition the city will have to pay 4½ per cent interest on this money from the time the property was purchased, as no payment has been made by the city since that time.

At the conference this afternoon, the members of the council will also start negotiations for the return of the city's share in the city and county work farm, partnership in which was discontinued on Jan. 1. It is estimated that the city has paid approximately $25,000 into the farm and the commissioners expect to use this money as a second payment on the city hall site. Part of it, however, will go toward purchasing the site and the erection of a municipal garage and warehouse at Twentieth avenue east and London road.

The Shriners have agreed to pay for the old armory in five years, together with 6 per cent interest, and this money will also be turned into the fund for the city hall site.

COMMITTEE ON NEW CODE

Only Two Organizations Have Yet to Name Delegates.

Mayor Prince announced this morning that a meeting of the general committee to draft a combined building, plumbing and electrical code for Duluth will be called within the next two weeks.

Only two more organizations have yet to select their representatives for this committee, he said, and as soon as there are in, the meeting date will be announced. The New Duluth Commercial club and the Duluth Plumbers' association have so far failed to name their delegates.

Two more organizations sent the list of their representatives to Mayor Prince this morning, making a total of eight that are now in. They are:

Duluth Commercial club—William Hoyt, chairman; C. A. Marshall and F. H. Fitzgerald.

Federated Trades assembly—Henry Perault, chairman; W. J. Dutcher and A. G. Cadlin.

Electrical Contractors—A. W. Lindgren, chairman; William Burgess and Richard Thayer.

Duluth Builders' exchange—Alex Anderson, chairman; D. R. Black, A. W. Lindgren and E. J. Zauft.

Duluth Real Estate exchange—H. W. Cheadle, chairman; E. G. Gridley and W. B. Getchell.

West Duluth Commercial club—H. H. Phelps, chairman; W. B. Getchell and Emil Zauft.

Duluth Rotary club—E. F. Burg, chairman; N. F. Russell and C. A. Graves.

Architects' club—John Wangenstein, chairman; Austin Terryberry and Abraham Holstead.

This general committee will hold its meetings in the council chamber and all clerical and stenographic help will be donated by the city, Mayor Prince announced. The procedure will follow that employed in drafting the present housing code.

As soon as the committee passes on the final draft of the combined code, it will be submitted to the council for a vote.

FATHER SUING SON FOR LOAN

Aged Parent Claims That Younger Man Has Forgotten Obligations.

Father is suing son in municipal court today to recover $100, part of which was loaned to him, and part of which is for two month's board.

Joseph Schreck, the son, came to New York from the old family home near Budapest, Hungary, in September, 1913, when his father was living in Duluth.

Eager to see his father, he wrote to Duluth and asked for railroad fare. After advancing the fare, and spending considerable money in order that the boy should have a good wedding, and providing him with a home for nearly two months, the father alleges that Joseph forgot his parental obligations.

In any event, he says, Joseph now has nearly $1,000 in the bank, and he refuses to "come across" with any help for his aged father, who now is past the age where he can do active work.

The case is before a jury in Judge Smallwood's division of court.

HEARING RATE APPEAL.

Duluth Grain Dealers Present Claims to State Commission.

A hearing before the state railroad and warehouse commission is being held at the Commercial club today, on a petition of the traffic commission of the club for relief from an alleged erroneous rate charged the Atwood-Larson company of the board of trade on a car of grain shipped from Argyle, Minn., recently.

Judge Ira B. Mills, senior member of the state railroad and warehouse commission; A. L. Flynn, rate expert of the commission, and G. G. Grant, reporter for the commission, are conducting the hearing. A. J. Grummett of St. Paul, chief clerk of the general freight department of the Great Northern road, which is involved in the case, is appearing for the defendant, and Traffic Commissioner G. Roy Hall and H J Atwood are representing the petitioners.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE—
Notice is hereby given, That default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage, bearing date the 25th day of August, 1913, made and executed by John Seaberg and Mathilda Seaberg, his wife, mortgagors, to Louis Rosenbluth mortgagee, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for St. Louis county, Minnesota, on September 15th, 1913, at 10:30 a. m. in Book 116 of Mortgages, on page 32; at the time of such recording, the date of expiration of the notary's commission was not attached to the certificate of acknowledgement, and said mortgage was re-recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds with said date of expiration affixed to said certificate of acknowledgement on October 11th, 1915, at 1:30 p. m. in Book 337 of Mortgages on page 96. Said mortgage was assigned by said Louis Rosenbluth to Max Mickel by written assignment dated October 30th, 1915, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for St. Louis county, Minnesota, on November 8th, 1915, at 4:15 p. m. in Book 306 of Mortgages on page 322.
Said default consists in the failure of said mortgagors to pay the sum of Twenty-three Hundred Twenty-two Dollars and Seventy-six Cents ($2,322.76), principal and interest, now past due, on the notes secured by said mortgage. The amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date hereof, is the sum of Twenty-three Hundred Twenty-two Dollars and Seventy-six Cents ($2,322.76), principal and interest as aforesaid; and prior to the date hereof said assignee has paid the sum of Seventy-three Dollars and Ninety-three Cents ($73.93) for taxes due on the mortgaged premises.
The property described in said mortgage and thereby mortgaged is the north half of the northeast one-fourth (N½ of NE¼); southeast one-fourth of the northeast one-fourth (SE¼ of NE¼); northwest one-fourth of the northwest one-fourth (NW¼ of NW¼); and the south one-half of northwest one-fourth (S½ of NW¼), of section one (1), township fifty-three (53) north, range thirteen (13) west; and the west one-half of the northwest one-fourth (W½ of NW¼) of section thirty-three (33), township fifty-eight (58) north, range thirteen (13) west, according to the government survey, all of said land being in the county of St. Louis and state of Minnesota.
By reason of such default, the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.
Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said premises at public auction to the highest bidder for cash by the sheriff of said St. Louis county, at the sheriff's office in the County Court House in the city of Duluth, St. Louis county, Minnesota, on Tuesday, the 8th day of February, 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage, together with the sum of seventy-three dollars and ninety-three cents ($73.93) paid for taxes by said assignee as above stated, taxes, if any, due on said premises, and fifty dollars ($50.00) attorneys' fees, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law.
Dated this 21st day of December, 1915.

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR ASKS GERMANY ABOUT NATIONALITY OF SUBMARINE SINKING PERSIA

WASHINGTON AWAITS REPLY TO INQUIRIES

Next Move Will Be Determined Upon Information Received.

Officials Hopeful Way Will Be Found for Amicable Settlement.

Only Two Americans Were Aboard Lost Steamer; One Is Saved.

London, Jan. 5.—An Amsterdam dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says that the American ambassador at Berlin, James W. Gerard, conferred today with officials at the foreign office concerning the sinking of the steamship Persia. Mr. Gerard is said to have inquired about the nationality of the submarine which sank the vessel.

Marking Time.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The administration continued today to mark time in the situation arising from the sinking of the British steamer Persia, while awaiting definite information concerning the attack on the vessel. Until the full facts are at hand, the next move in the new crisis with the Teutonic powers will not be determined upon. Information is being sought as to whether the Persia actually was torpedoed and if so what was the nationality of the submarine. Until these points are cleared up, no move probably will be made by the Washington government.

While the situation here still was as tense as ever, officials were hopeful that a new way would be found for an amicable settlement of the issue.

Only two Americans were aboard the steamship Persia when it was sunk. The American consul at Marseilles today advised the state department that he had obtained a passenger list from the steamship agent there, which definitely fixed the number of Americans at two, Robert McNeely of North Carolina and Charles H. Grant of Boston.

INTERNATIONAL LAW DISCUSSED

Chief Interest at Meeting of Pan-American Scientific Congress.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Chief interest in the work of the Pan-American scientific congress again today appeared centered in the section for the study of international law where almost all the speakers discussed some phase of Pan-Americanism. An avowal of a policy of non-intervention was advocated as an unavoidable necessity in the creation of a greater Pan-American unity, by Dr. Luis Alfredo Otero of Columbia. He insisted that this was as imperative as that policy calculated to prevent the colonization of any of the Western countries by European governments.

Unqualified support of the Monroe doctrine and what he characterized as its complement, the Drago doctrine, was given by Dr. Manuel Cavalcanti of Brazil, in an address on problems of international law peculiar to America.

Dr. Enrique Gil, delegate from the law school of the National University of Buenos Aires, discussed Pan-Americanism "in the light of the traditional international policy of Argentina."

CANADIAN PORTS WET

Port Arthur Defeats Local Option By Four Votes; To Be Contested.

Fort William Remains in Wet Column By Majority of 253.

Port Arthur, Ont., Jan. 5.—Less than four votes stood between the total score and victory for local option in the contest in this city, which was the most bitterly fought in the history of Port Arthur. The official vote stands 1,291 for local option and 867 against, the three-fifths majority saving the bars. The local option party has already announced that it will request a recount and will follow that up with an action in the courts on the ground that a considerable number of illegal votes were cast.

Before leaving the committee rooms after the returns had been made complete a couple of hundred citizens signed the petition of the Ontario

CHARGES AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION FOUND BASELESS, SAYS REPORT

Rumors in Regard to Ship Purchase Bill Set at Rest.

Officials and Shipping Interests Blameless of Any Illegal Activity.

Roosevelt Roundly Scored for Unsustained Charges Made By Him.

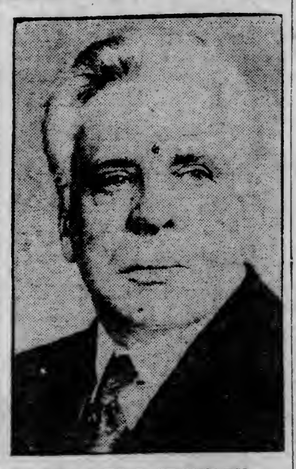

Washington, Jan. 5.—Charges circulated during the last session of congress that administration officials acted in the interest of foreign business firms in urging the passage of the government ship purchase bill were held to be baseless in majority and minority reports filed today by the senate committee appointed to investigate them. Both reports also found the shipping interests blameless of illegal activity in opposition to the measure.

The majority denounced Theodore Roosevelt for failing to appear before the committee to testify concerning his published assertion that President Wilson and Secretary Bryan "had endeavored in the interest of certain foreign business firms to secure for the United States the power to purchase the interned ships of one of the belligerents."

The charge, the report said, had its

BOMBARDMENT AT SALONIKI

Prince Andrew of Greece Tells of Aerial Attack on Allies' Camp.

Reply of Fleets at Anchor Cause Great Excitement Among Populace.

Athens, via Paris, Jan. 5.—Prince Andrew of Greece, brother of King Constantine, in an interview with the correspondent of the Associated Press, described the aerial bombardment of the allies' camp at Zeltenik, on the outskirts of Saloniki, on Dec. 30.

"The bombardment and the reply of the fleets anchored in the roads of Saloniki," said the prince, "was one of the most extraordinary sights imaginable. I was riding back from the morning's work with my regiment at about 10:30 when I was startled by a deafening explosion some 200 yards away. A great cloud of black smoke arose, followed shortly by three more explosions at regular intervals. Then came the familiar rocket-like sound of a shell passing through the air, evidently fired by one of the warships in the harbor."

"Naturally my first thought was that for some reason the fleet was bombarding Saloniki. Therefore I rode straight to the nearest British post, which happened to be a hospital not far from the Greek camp.

"'Why are you bombarding the city?' I asked the officers.

Saw Airships.

"Then for the first time I looked up and saw three machines fully 3,000 feet high flying in line from the northeast and turning just over the harbor toward the northwest, in which direction they finally disappeared.

"The bombs dropped with the greatest precision one after another, killing and wounding a number of the allies' soldiers, but not touching the city. Meanwhile the firing of the fleet grew thunderous. It was impossible to hear yourself think. In a short time it became evident that the fire from the fleet was more dangerous than the bombs from the aeroplanes, as some of the shells aimed wild whistled directly over the town, one narrowly missing

GREEK PROTEST IS PRESENTED AT SOFIA

Will Support Claims By All Means at Its Disposal.

Berlin, Jan. 5, by wireless to Sayville.—The Greek minister at Sofia has presented to Premier Radoslavoff the text of the Greek note protesting to the Entente powers against the arrest of the Geman, Austrian, Bulgarian and Turkish consuls at Saloniki, says the Overseas News agency. "The minister informed the premier that Greece will use all means at its disposal to support its claims and desires to maintain good relation with the Central powers, avoiding any misunderstanding with them."

RUSS MAKE DESPERATE ONSLAUGHTS

Czar's Army Fiercely Attacks Austro-Germans Before Czernovitz.

Repulse All Counter-Attacks and Are Steadily Advancing.

Plans of Central Powers in Balkans Veiled in Mystery.

London, Jan. 5.—While England is still debating the question of compulsion the Russians great conscript armies are making desperate onslaughts upon the Austro-Germans before Czernowitz, where, according to Russian official reports, the Russians have not only repulsed Austrian counter-attacks near the east of that city but themselves are steadily advancing.

Veiled in Mystery.

The military plans of the Central powers in the Near East are still veiled in mystery but reports received from French sources are skeptical in regard to rumors that they are on the point of resuming the offensive in Macedonia. According to these reports the Central empires have only thirteen infantry divisions available for such service, and unless Bulgaria supplies the deficiency it would be sheer madness, French critics believe, for them to attack the forces of the Entente in their entrenched positions. And it is said that Bulgaria gives little indication of volunteering such aid. According to unofficial reports she declines any further assistance on the ground that she has fulfilled her bargain by conquering a portion of Serbia and doing her share toward opening the road to Constantinople.

Small Results.

In Albania there has been much apparent activity with relatively small military results. Perhaps the most important event in Albania is the declaration of war by Essad Pasha against Austria and Germany. This irregular chieftain is erratic but an undisputed military genius with a large and loyal following and he is reported to be well supplied with guns and munitions.

England has continued her colonial warfare with success in the Kamerun, where it is officially reported that German base has been occupied by British forces. French troops also are known to be converging upon Jaunde from the east and southeast so that the fleeing Germans soon may be surrounded.

MARYLAND SOLONS FACE A DEADLOCK

Trouble Over Speakership May Delay Inauguration of New Governor.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 5.—The Maryland legislature met today for its biennial session, faced with a deadlock over the speakership of the house of delegates that may delay the inauguration of the Democratic governor-elect, Emerson C. Harrington. The date of the inauguration was set for next Wednesday.

There are 56 Democrats in the house, 44 Republicans and 2 Fusionists. The Democrats, however, have split over the choice of a candidate for the speakership, thus breaking their majority. As long as the organization of the house is delayed the canvass of the returns for governor will be held up and Governor Goldsborough, a Republican, will remain in office.

BRITISH LOST 59,666 IN BATTLE OF LOOS

Casualties of Fight Last September Are Reported to the House.

Release of Greeks Demanded.

NO IMMEDIATE CHANGES IN STATE OFFICIALS TO BE MADE BY GOVERNOR

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor J. A. A. Burnquist entered upon his official duties today, and his first act since taking the oath of office was to issue a statement. It read:

"All of us, regardless of party, are extremely saddened by the loss of an excellent governor. In assuming the duties imposed upon me so suddenly and unexpectedly through a great misfortune, I feel that the people of Minnesota will appreciate the difficulties to be encountered, and will realize the need of the co-operation of us all in doing the best we can for our common state.

"I wish to thank most sincerely the state officials and the many kind friends who have at this time expressed their sympathy and so kindly volunteered their assistance.

"Entering the office of governor upon the death of the people's choice for that position renders it entirely out of place for me to make any immediate changes. All of the appointees in Governor Hammond's office have undoubtedly made plans upon the supposition that they would hold their respective offices for at least a year longer. Sudden changes under such circumstances would be inconsiderate and unfair.

"No changes, therefore, will be made until found necessary, and then not until sufficient time has elapsed and sufficient notice given to enable the appointees to make satisfactory arrangements as to their future.

"I feel that the public will agree with me that, for some weeks at least, it will not be advisable to accept any invitations to be present and speak at different gatherings to which it has been customary to invite the governor. I trust that the public will assist me in this matter for it is absolutely necessary for me to devote my time to the duties of my office."

Derby's List Shows 2,000,000 Men Have Not Offered Services.

Earl's Report Shows Difficulties He Has Encountered in Recruiting.

London, Jan. 5.—The figures of the earl of Derby's stock-taking of the United Kingdom's martial manhood shows that over 2,000,000 men of military age have not yet offered their services in any form to the government.

Publication of the figures finds a cabinet crisis caused by the compulsion problem by no means ended. The cabinet meeting probably will come to a final decision and may result in other resignations. Ireland, which was not included in the Derby plan, also is said to be excluded from the conscription measure which the premier will introduce in the house of commons.

In his report, which is addressed to Earl Kitchener, secretary for war, the earl of Derby says:

Starring a Hindrance.

"Many difficulties have been met with, but the chief difficulty has been the unreliability of starring, as distinguishing between those who should and those who should not be taken for

PLAN MONUMENT FOR GRANGER GOVERNOR

Grave of Former Executive Taylor of Wisconsin to Be Marked.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5.—The grave of Former Governor W. R. Taylor, the famous granger executive of Wisconsin, will be marked by a suitable monument. The last session of the legislature passed a bill appropriating $500 for the purpose. Governor Taylor died at the Gisholt home for the aged, a semi-charitable institution, near Madison. Governor Philipp today appointed a committee to make a selection of the design and materials for the monument.

Swept into power by the "granger" movement in 1873, it was during his term of office that the first railroad commission law was enacted and many of the reforms proposed, which are now being regulated at the present time. Governor Taylor lost his money in speculation. He died March 17, 1909.

KANSAS CITY HONORS MEMORY OF VAN HORN

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 5.—Flags were at half mast today in Kansas City in honor of the memory of Col. Robert T. Van Horn, founder of the Kansas City Journal and widely known as editor, statesman and soldier, whose funeral was held this afternoon. Col. Van Horn died Monday at his home, "Honeywood," in this city. He had been a resident of Kansas City more than sixty years.

The public schools were dismissed today that pupils might attend the funeral, in which many organizations of the city were to participate.

ALL IRELAND IS EXCLUDED FROM TERMS

Premier Asquith Presents Long Expected Measure to Commons.

Widowers Who Have Dependent Children Not Liable for Service.

Analysis of Derby Report on Recruiting Made By Premier.

London, Jan. 5. — Under the terms of the compulsory military service bill introduced in the house of commons today all males between the ages of 18 and 41 who are bachelors or widowers without children dependent on them are liable for military service.

Ireland is excluded from the terms of the measure.

Mr. Asquith opened his address with an analysis of the figures in the Derby report. He emphasized the fact that during the Derby campaign nearly 3,000,000 men had offered their services. Even deducting those rejected on the ground of physical disability the total was still in excess of 2,500,000.

"These are wonderful, encouraging figures," the premier continued. "They ought to convince both our allies and our enemies that the people of this country have their hearts in the war."

To Facilitate Munitions Output.

London, Jan. 4.—The house of commons today passed a bill designed to facilitate the output of munitions. The bill is in the form of an amendment to the munitions act.

In appealing for the passage of the measure David Lloyd George, minister of munitions said:

"I hope the commons will not render more difficult the task of turning out munitions — a task more serious than I dare tell.

"Everything depends upon it. The length of the war depends upon it. Everything depends upon whether we turn out munitions in sufficient quantities to bring the campaign to an end this year.

"That does not depend on the soldiers, who have done their task heroically. It depends entirely upon—I say it in all solemnity—the workmen of this country doing what the workmen of France have done; frankly setting aside conditions, throwing themselves into the work and sticking to their workshops. Unless they do that I cannot tell what the result will be.

"But I can tell what the result will be if they do. They and they alone will achieve victory for this empire and the human race, and will reflect credit upon the labor movement."

HAITIANS ATTACK AMERICAN MARINES

Revolutionists Quickly Subdued After One of Number Is Killed.

Port Au Prince, Haiti, Jan. 5.—A revolutionary outbreak occurred at 2 o'clock this morning at Port Au Prince. The force of American marines maintained in this city was attacked. One of the rebels was killed by the Americans, who suffered no losses.

Several groups of insurrectionists ran through the streets discharging rifles. The Americans met them and they were rapidly dispersed.

TO RE-ELECT COX AS SPEAKER OF HOUSE

Boston, Mass., Jan. 5.—The overwhelming Republican majority in both branches made certain the re-election of Channing H. Cox as speaker of the house and the election of Henry G. Wells as president of the senate when the legislature convened today. Governor-elect Samuel W. McCall and other state officers will be inaugurated tomorrow. The session is expected to last several months.

Trying to Recall Mayor.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 5.—The question of whether or not to recall from office Mayor James G. Woodward and five members of the local board of police commissioners was before Atlanta voters at a special election today. Both sides say they are confident of winning.

SLIDE HALF MILE LONG

Duluth will have a toboggan slide a half mile in length and it will be open to the public within the next ten days.

J. R. Batchelor, recreational director, announced yesterday that a free slide will be prepared at Chester park and that it will be ready for use by a week from Saturday.

The slide will start from the boulevard in Chester park, running alongside the roadway to Fifteenth avenue east and down the avenue to Fifth street. It is approximately a half mile long and will be built by packing snow for walls and flooding the flat part as is done for a skating rink.

If this slide proves popular, Director Batchelor plans to establish parallel straight-away slides in the West end and West Duluth, these being similar to those so popular in Canada.

Director Batchelor is still trying to solve the coasting problem in Duluth and will submit some plan to the city commissioners within a short time. Boys and girls are using dangerous roadways for coasting and it is the aim of the council to establish safety zones along certain streets, where the children may coast without fear of accidents.

FORMER DULUTHIAN DIES AT SYRACUSE

Rev. W. W. Dawley Pastor of Local Church Four Years.

Rev. W. W. Dawley, at one time pastor of the First Baptist church of Duluth, is dead at Syracuse, N. Y., according to telegraphic messages today.

Dr. Dawley came to Duluth in 1902 and was pastor of the church for nearly four years. Illness of his wife made it imperative for the family to leave Duluth and in 1906 he accepted a call from the Central Baptist church of Minneapolis. From the Twin Cities he went to Syracuse, where he has been ever since. He was widely known in this part of the state.

"Dr. Dawley made an excellent record in Duluth," said W. B. Patton, "and the members of his congregation were very sorry to lose him. His death will be a big loss."

Joseph Poskovski Is Sent to Hospital With Bruised Leg.

Caught in a freight elevator shaft by a descending car yesterday afternoon, Joseph Poskovski, 612 East Fifth street, sustained slight injuries to one leg at the Duluth Paper Stock company's plant on South First avenue east.

Poskovski was taken to St. Mary's hospital in the police emergency. Hospital officials today reported that the leg was bruised, but that no bones were broken and that his injury would not prove serious.

HAULING PULPWOOD TO CLOQUET PLANT

Cloquet, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—As a result of the recent heavy snow which put the roads in excellent condition, large quantities of pulpwood are now being hauled into the new sulphite plant of the Northwest Paper company by settlers living north and west of the city. Loggers also report that the snow has made logging conditions in the woods ideal and the weather prevailing at present could not be better for carrying on their work. Heavy shipments of logs are now coming into Cloquet daily over the Duluth & Northeastern railroad to be used by the upper mill of the Northern Lumber company, which is expected to start sawing soon.

SMALLWOOD WILL HEAR CIVIL CASES

Judge W. H. Smallwood, with a venire of jurymen in municipal court, began consideration of the civil calendar for the first two weeks in January yesterday.

It was the first time in several years that any magistrate but Former Judge W. L. Windom has been in charge of the civil calendar, as Judge F. H. Cutting has made a practice of confining himself to criminal work.

Forty-seven cases were on the calendar, this list being shorter than the one for the two preceding months. The jury cases are as follows: E. G. Hillard et al vs. George R. Bertagnoli; W. A. Wagner vs. Frank Miller; Andrew Anderson vs. Ben Pruent; M. M. Smith vs. William C. Manke and Irene Manke; E. D. Cooke vs. Fred Fulton; Stanley Lutven vs. Mike Suzaich and M. Aleksich; M. Goldfarb vs. Gust Wickman; David Weinberg vs. John C. Green; Henry F. Brown vs. City of Duluth and Hoken Egerdahl vs. Carl Leland.

TEN JURORS IN THE PRICE CASE

But Two More Added to Those Selected First Day.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Slower progress was made today in the selection of a jury in the Frederick T. Price murder case than characterized the first day's proceedings. Out of seventeen talesmen questioned at the morning session, but two were added to the eight selected yesterday after they had run the gauntlet of searching questions by the state and by the defense.

It was believed that the other two jurors necessary to complete the panel would be selected before night, and possibly the state would begin introduction of its testimony.

BANKERS HOPEFUL FOR COMING YEAR

Last Year Set Record for Business Growth, Says Report.

Bankers at all the leading centers are universally hopeful regarding the outlook for business during the coming twelve months.

The progress regarded during the last year, with conditions changing from extreme dullness to marked activity in all lines, is regarded as remarkable. Summing up the situation the National Bank of the Republic in its January review of business conditions says: "The close of 1915 completes a year of the most remarkable growth ever recorded and which, in view of the greatest war in the history of nations, must long stand out as a momentous epoch.

"Only recently has the full influence of the improvement in fundamental conditions reached the consuming public. Railroad passenger revenues, the earnings of public utility companies and postoffice receipts for some time had shown the effect of larger spending power, but retail trade remained in a somewhat backward condition. The holiday season, however, furnished conclusive evidence that the widespread industrial activity, coupled with more than a year of economy, had at last reacted upon the ultimate consumer. Increased payrolls in the manufacturing sections of the East and Middle West, the succession of two crop years of exceptional money return in the West, Middle West and Mississippi valley, extending mining activity in the West and Southwest, good crops on the Pacific coast, and, finally, in the South higher prices offsetting the decreased cotton crop and the good marketing of a greater diversity of agricultural products, all these things conspired to produce a retail trade as uniform as it was gratifying."

NEW ADVERTISING MAN FOR FREIMUTH'S

Harry S. Hastie, formerly connected with the Minneapolis Dry Goods company in the capacity of advertising manager, has assumed charge of the publicity department for Freimuth's. Mr. Hastie is an advertising man of wide experience and no doubt will prove to be a valuable asset to the Freimuth organization.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—While playing with his son on a couch after he had just concluded a hearty meal, Nick McRae of Sharon died without warning.

McRae, though apparently in good health, made his will only a week ago, providing for the appointment of Thomas Mooney of Fergus as his administrator. He carried $22,000 life insurance.

WILL SEVER CUPID'S BONDS

Forty-Three Divorce Cases Will Be Heard in District Court.

Seven Actions Disputed—Hearings Will Continue Several Days.

Thirty-two unhappy wives and eleven unfortunate husbands will be given an opportunity to air their family secrets in the divorce court during the next two months. The divorce mill will start grinding this afternoon and during the next two or three days district court judges will lay aside other matters and become domestic arbiters.

And there is plenty of grist to feed the hopper at the January grind. In all forty-three cases are listed for trial. Seven actions will be disputed, but in the other cases the defendants are in default and the hearing will be largely ex parte.

SHORT SESSION FOR GRAND JURY

Disposition of the calendar of criminal cases now awaiting grand jury action will take but a short time, according to Mason M. Forbes, first assistant county attorney. The grist is a small one, being somewhat lighter than usual.

The grand jurors convened this morning and after being charged as to their duties by District Judge Fesler, adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon when the business of the term will be taken up. Mr. Forbes will present about fifteen cases from his office.

B. P. Neff was chosen by the court as chairman. Other members of the investigating body are: H. A. Blume, C. L. Burman, F. M. Fuller, Edward Fride, Charles Frank, A. E. Hathaway, C. E. Autos in Wisconsin.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5.—There will be more than 100,000 automobiles in Wisconsin in 1916, according to an estimate made by Secretary of State John Donald. Applications for licenses are pouring into the state department at the rate of 600 daily. This number will be an increase of 100 per cent in two years. There were approximately 43,000 automobiles in the state in 1914. Last year saw an increase to 79,000.

CARLTON COUNTY FAVORS BIG DITCH

Hearing at Carlton on Proposition Develops No Opposition.

Carlton, Minn., Jan. 5.—Carlton county's proposed Judicial Ditch No. 1 that will drain 60,000 acres adjacent to the Stony Brook, starting from the Northern Pacific railway track near Conora and extending north to about three miles from Brookston in St. Louis county, will not meet with opposition in Carlton, judging by the fact that no opposition developed at the hearing here yesterday before Judge Fesler on the final report of engineers and viewers.

This ditch will drain a vast area in Carlton and St. Louis counties and provide an excellent system of roads in connection with the ditch. The viewers were J. N. Sommer of Wrenshall; O. G. Olson of Duluth and Henry Knutila of Cromwell.

None Makes Objection.

Settlers and others, owning land in the vicinity affected attended the hearing and all expressed themselves as favorable to the proposed ditch. No objections were made and the report was approved. Considering the large amount of territory covered and the varying conditions found the court considered this a remarkable showing.

The report of the viewers showed total benefits of $283,000 and the actual cost of construction will be much less, therefore the property owners will not be obliged to pay the full amount of their assessment for benefits, but will pay only a proportionate share.

Court adjourned the hearing until Jan. 15 at Duluth and instructed the engineer to report at that time if the total yardage of excavation could be reduced so as to lower the cost of the ditch. C. D. Conkey of Carlton is engineer in charge of the ditch system and J. E. Diesen of Cloquet is attorney for the petitioners. It is believed that the total cost of the ditch can be lowered in some instances and a few laterals added.

SIGNOR GIUSEPPE AGOSTINI, Dramatic Tenor.

AMUSEMENTS

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

NEW GRAND—Vaudeville and Photoplay.
REX—Frank Campeau in "Jordan Is a Hard Road," photoplay.

ITALIAN TENOR IS PUPIL OF CAMPANINI

Signor Giuseppe Agostini, principal tenor of the San Carlo Grand Opera company, is a native of the artistic city of Verona, Italy, the locale of Shakespeare's scenes in "Romeo and Juliet." Agostini, at the tender age of 9, was discovered to possess a beautiful voice, and was one of the most sought-for boy sopranos in Italy. His first instructor of note was the famous Campanini, formerly of the Metropolitan forces, and he later studied with the eminent basso, Plancon, the French artist.

Agostini first sang important roles at the Teatro Costanzi, at Rome, at the age of twenty. Later he became one of Italy's most popular favorites, singing with distinguished success at La Scala, Milan; Opera Comique, Paris; Imperial Opera, Berlin; Liceo Teatro, Barcelona; Imperial Opera, Petrograd; Covent Garden, London, and he has appeared many times in place of Caruso, at the Metropolitan, New York.

Agostini's greatest successes have been scored in the operas "Carmen," "Il Pagliacci," "Aida," "Salome" and "Martha," while the tenor was the creator, in America of the beautiful role of Rodolfo, in "La Boheme." In this character Agostini is said to have no equal. He has appeared with added success with Mme. Melba, Tetrazzini, and shared honors with Ruffo, Battistini and Bellincioni.

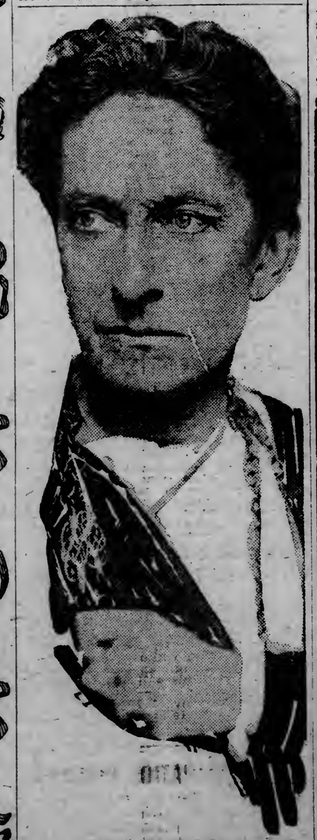

During the coming engagement of the San Carlo company at the Lyceum, Signor Agostini will be heard as Edgar of Ravenswood, in "Lucia Di Lammermoor," and again as Duke of Mantua, his greatest role, in "Rigoletto," in the final performance of the engagement.

WILL BE HIS LAST APPEARANCE HERE

When Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, the greatest English-speaking actor comes to the Lyceum next week he will be seen for positively the last time in this city. Forbes-Robertson's farewell is real. He will never return to those cities to which he has said farewell. Theatrical farewells have been so much abused that the public has come to doubt the genuineness of a farewell these days, but in the case of Forbes-Robertson one cannot but believe his sincerity. His entire career has been such as to warrant belief in his word, and he has given that.

Forbes-Robertson has always avoided the sensational in advertising. Perhaps had he indulged in more press agency he would be retiring a far wealthier man than he is, but it was not his way. Modest always, he has shunned anything that smacked of untruth.

With the possible exception of Maude Adams, no player's home life and private existence is so little known as that of Forbes-Robertson. Beyond the fact that he is married to Gertrude Elliott, the charming American actress, and that he has four children, nothing is known of his life off the stage.

SIR JOHNSTON FORBES-ROBERTSON AS HAMLET.

Theater Gossip.

Tonight will be the last showing of "Jordan Is a Hard Road," starring Dorothy Gish and Frank Campeau at the Rex.

VAMPIRE PLAY COMING TO THE REX

It is difficult to believe that a new vampire story can be written. But it seems that it not only can be, but has been written, and Thomas H. Ince has used it to excellent advantage in the intense drama, "The Winged Idol," an Ince-Triangle production, opening tomorrow at the Rex Beautiful. Katherine Kaelred, who gives a remarkable characterization as the star of "The Winged Idol," has the reputation of being one of the most accomplished "sirens on the American stage. By her sensational interpretation of the woman in "A Fool There Was" she compelled the critics to recognize her ability.

Keystone Triangles are tame indeed when they number but one or two smashups and narrow escapes from death. Nobody seeking "Crooked to the End," the comedy on tomorrow's program, can complain that the standard has been lowered in real thrills and spectacular acting.

MINSTRELS PLEASE GRAND PATRONS

Minstrelsy with its jokes and songs brought up to date is being offered at the popular New Grand this week by the Five Corks. Included in the aggregation are several vocalists of more than average quality, and the entire troupe possess pleasing voices. Their headline position on the bill closing with today's performance is well warranted by the quality of entertainment offered. Murphy and Klein, singers and instrumentalists; Neal Abel, monologist, and the Keeleys in an athletic demonstration are other feature vaudeville numbers.

The second of the Stingaree stories, "A Voice in the Wilderness," a two-reel story by E. W. Hornung; "Tides of Retribution," an intense drama in three reels and two clever comedies are prominent among the photoplays.

Tomorrow the new week-end bill will be toplined by the Five Comical Kops in a comedy sketch, "The New Recruit"; Chabot and Dixon in a musical review; the Australian Creightons offering novel eccentricities, and Howard and De Lores, singers and comedians, make up the vaudeville program. Many interesting film stories balance up a most enjoyable program.

SEEK DAMAGES FOR TWO TRAIN VICTIMS

Moorhead, Minn., Jan. 5.—The first two actions against the Great Northern Railway company for $7,000 damages each for the deaths of Edward Johnson and Fred Bassett of Little Falls, who were killed in a railroad accident at Barnesville last September, was taken up by the Clay county district court here today.

N. N. Bergheim of Little Falls, with a Moorhead attorney, is counsel for the plaintiff in both cases. One of the cases bears his name, as administrator for Edward Johnson, and in the other A. J. Bassett, a brother, is the plaintiff, as administrator for Fred Bassett. The two men were killed when the horse car in which they were riding rolled from a siding onto the main line while they were asleep and was struck by a train, smashing the car to pieces and killing men and horses.

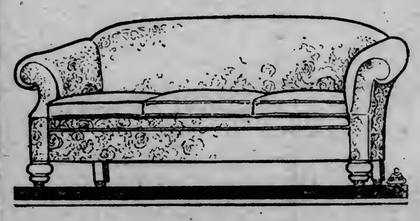

QLIVER OFFICIALS TALK OVER MINING SITUATION

The officers and general superintendents of the Oliver Iron Mining company held a meeting yesterday to discuss developments of the past year and prospects for the current one. These meetings, according to President W. J. Olcott, are held periodically, for review, and that of yesterday was of the same nature.

Nothing in the way of new plans was discussed further than has already been projected in preparation for the expected rush of business when spring opens up, for great activity is expected during 1916. Those taking part in the conference had luncheon together at the Commercial club yesterday.

ACCUSED ALSO FACES SUIT FOR DIVORCE

Dickinson, N. D., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Brown, who faces the charge of attempting to murder his 14-year-old son, must also fight divorce proceedings. Mrs. Brown has served papers in such action, asking separation because of his alleged cruelties. The divorce case probably will be hotly contested, as it involves considerable property.

WOULD ENLIST LAYMAN ARMY

Villages, Towns and Cities Near Duluth Will Be Canvassed.

Churches Hope to Pledge 1,500 Men to Attend Convention.

Villages, towns and cities near Duluth will be canvassed beginning today by laymen of various Duluth Protestant churches.

They hope to pledge 1,500 men to attend the Laymen's Missionary Movement convention which will be held at the First M. E. church Jan. 19-21, inclusive.

Members of the committee met at the Y. M. C. A. building last night to outline their campaign before starting the two weeks' work, and W. L. Smithies, who presided, told them that 2,000 names were wanted before Jan. 19.

Duluth to Get Whole Team.

Duluth's convention is one of seventy-five to be held in as many cities of the United States. There are five teams, each composed of fifteen men. Duluth will get the entire team which was divided between Minneapolis and St. Paul, according to E. D. Ranck, executive secretary.

Several men prominent in missionary work throughout the United States will participate in the program to be given during the two days' convention. Fred B. Fisher, general secretary, will talk on "India's Silent Revolution"; James McNaughton will talk on "Terrorism in Turkey"; J. E. Crowther on "Who Will Rule Africa Tomorrow"; S. Hall Young, "Alaska Today and Tomorrow"; William B. Millar, "The Laymen's Part in the Propagation of Christianity."

"Movies" will be shown each night of the convention by W. M. Gilbert of Boston, entitled "The Conversion of Jim." Scenes from foreign and home missionary fields also will be shown.

Rev. C. O. Peterson, missionary to the Philippine Islands for ten years, was the principal speaker at last night's committee meeting.

Missionary Opens Markets.

"The missionary justifies himself financially and from a business viewpoint because of the new markets he opens to American merchants," Rev. Peterson said. "The missionary is probably the largest factor in creating a prestige for American goods."

The speaker was optimistic concerning the future of the Filipino. Under American rule the death rate has decreased surprisingly, he said. Where smallpox used to be responsible for 10,000 deaths annually, it now causes but a few hundred, Rev. Mr. Peterson said.

"More persons speak the English language today than spoke Spanish after 300 years of Spanish rule," he concluded.

Watson S. Moore, chairman of the prayer committee, also gave a short address. "I have never been a foreign missionary," he said. "The nearest I ever came to it was during a ten-year term as a member of the city council."

GREY REFERS TO GERMAN OUTRAGES

Answers Complaint of Teutons on Destruction of Submarine.

London, Jan. 5.—A British statement issued yesterday says:

Sir Edward Grey, secretary of foreign affairs, has answered the complaint by the Germans through the American embassies regarding the destruction off the coast of Ireland of a German submarine and crew by the British auxiliary Baralong, by referring to various German outrages. Sir Edward Grey offers to submit such incidents, including the Baralong case, to an impartial tribunal composed of officers of the United States navy.

The foreign office has presented to the house of commons the full correspondence between the United States and Great Britain concerning the case. A memorandum from Germany concerning the sinking of the submarine includes affidavits from six Americans, J. M. Garrett of Kiln, Miss.; Charles G. Hightower, Crystal City, Tex.; Bud Emerson, Detroit; Edward Clark, Detroit; R. H. Crosby, Crystal City, and James J. Curren of Chicago. The above were all muleteers aboard the steamer Nicosia and witnessed the Baralong's destruction of the submarine.

A further affidavit from Larimore Holland of Chattanooga, Tenn., who was a member of the crew of the Baralong, was submitted. All the affidavits speak of the Baralong as disguised and flying the American flag.

The British patrol boat Baralong, according to several muleteers on the British steamer Nicosia, which arrived in New Orleans early in October, sank a German submarine Aug. 19, off Lundy. The muleteers said that marines from the Baralong killed the captain and ten men of the crew of the submarine after the underwater boat had been sunk, six of them while they were struggling in the water.

VIGOROUS PROTEST BY W. J. BRYAN

Objects to Having to Appear as Witness at His Own Expense.

New York, Jan. 5.—William J. Bryan vigorously protested yesterday against the law of New York state because he was required to come here at his own expense and give testimony in a suit for libel.

"I am here under duress," declared Mr. Bryan, "because it is the only way I can avoid contempt proceedings."

Mr. Bryan was examined in an action brought against a Greek newspaper. He was questioned concerning the sale by the United States to Greece of the old battleships Idaho and Mississippi, but said he knew nothing of the details. He denied that he gave any secrets of gunfire control to the Greek government, or that, while secretary of state, he had seen any letter written to influence him against Agamemnon Schliemann, former Greek minister to the United States. He also said he had not heard criticisms alleged to have been made of him by Schliemann.

The suit is the outgrowth of a statement in the Greek newspaper that the plaintiff, Petros P. Tatanis, wrote or caused to be written a letter with a view to bringing about ill feeling between Mr. Bryan and the former Greek minister.

LOOKING FOR BANNER YEAR

Retail Merchants Will Work With Other Civic Bodies.

Seek Better Market Facilities and More Conventions for Duluth.

Members of the Duluth Retail Merchants' association at their regular January meeting in the Spalding hotel last evening took steps to make 1916 the banner year for business in Duluth.

In an opening address, Bentley P. Neff, president of the association, urged the members to work together in making 1916 the most successful year in the city's business history.

"Everywhere we look," he said, "we see signs of renewed activity and everything we read indicates that the people are generally optimistic and look forward to this year with a great deal of confidence. Duluth is enjoying great prosperity and we, as retail merchants, may safely look forward to a year of great business activity. We should make up our minds right now, as individuals and as an association, to do everything in our power to better business facilities, to increase the prestige of this market and to raise the standard of retail merchandising."

Spring Style Show.

Among the projects to be taken up by the association during this year is a spring style show, the proposed municipal work shop, better suburban deliveries, more improved market facilities, a study of the commercial courses at the high school and co-operation with the Commercial club and other civic bodies in bringing conventions to Duluth. Objections raised against the steel plant company store at Morgan Park caused a discussion during the evening and the following committee was appointed to take the matter up with the steel plant officials: Bentley P. Neff, chairman; J. J. Moe, I. Freimuth, George French and A. K. Squier.

Committees for Year.

Committees for 1916 were appointed by President Neff as follows:

Membership—A. W. Cleveland, chairman; A. O. Anderson and E. A. Grochau.

Spring opening—George A. Gray, chairman; T. A. Reynolds, Max Albenberg and Ambrose Sauers.

Conventions — Arthur K. Squier, chairman; Frank Krelmer and C. H. Bagley.

KAISER SAID TO HAVE CANCER OF THROAT

Paris Paper Declares He Is No Longer Able to Speak.

Paris, Jan. 5.—The Matin affirms, notwithstanding denials, that the German emperor is suffering from cancer of the throat and is no longer able to speak.

"In February, 1911," according to the Matin, "the doctors were considering whether it was necessary to remove the entire larynx in order to stay the progress of the disease. They raised the question as to whether the emperor would be able to speak if such an operation were performed. The leading specialists of every capital in Europe were consulted. It was learned that an eminent surgeon of Paris had, with an artificial larynx and a breathing tube, opening into the trachea, restored the power of speech to cancerous patients, who had undergone total ablation of the affected organs.

"This doctor," whose name the Matin withholds for reasons of professional etiquette, "was asked to go to Berlin by the German ambassador. He was offered 100,000 francs and all his expenses, and was requested to bring with him a patient who had been fitted with the apparatus, so that the emperor himself might see if he was able to speak.

"Meanwhile, as a result of a minor operation with a bistoury and a few weeks' absolute rest, the emperor's condition improved, as is often the case in this disease, the progress of which is implacable, but slow. It is another operation of this kind which has just been performed.

"But it is only palliative. The German emperor must either make up his mind to complete removal of the larynx or be stifled by the growth.

"This explains why the emperor went neither to Warsaw, Constantinople nor Brussels."

"HOWDY DO, MAHONING?"

"Welcome, Little Stranger, to County's Family of Municipalities."

St. Louis county will probably have a new village this year.

The new municipal corporation—if approved by a majority of its residents—will be known as the village of Mahoning and will comprise about 1,000 acres in 58-21.

The county board at its annual session yesterday afternoon approved the petition asking the board to call an election among the residents on the question of incorporation. There are 493 people residing within the proposed corporate limits of the new village.

The election ordered by the county board will be held on Jan. 29. R. N. Marble, Jr., W. F. Pellenz, Jr., and W. C. Northen have been appointed inspectors and judges of the election.

The board yesterday afternoon authorized the following appropriations:

Duluth Humane society	$2,400
County agricultural agent	1,000
Northern Minnesota Development association	1,800
County attorney's contingent fund	1,000
Additional clerk hire, probate court	1,080
Duluth branch, state laboratory	600

At an adjourned session of the board today E. K. Coe and A. E. Dyer were appointed county road engineers. Other appointments made by the board were: Dr. F. J. Patten, county health physician; Dr. F. F. Clark, county jail physician; Frank Cowden, jail fireman.

Thirteen new roads were legalized by the commissioners this morning. Hearing dates in March were set for five new petitions which have been received by the board.

GOVERNOR HAS MANY CALLERS

State Officials and Others Call to Pay Their Respects.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Burnquist's first day of gubernatorial work was marked by a continuous line of callers. The list began at 9 o'clock with W. E. Lee of Long Prairie and at noon a large number filled the reception room awaiting a chance to see the executive.

The majority of the callers this morning were state officials and heads of departments who wished to pay their respects. The members of the state board of control saw Governor Burnquist in a body and the same was true in the case of the state railway and warehouse commission.

When the government arrived this morning a heavy accumulation of mail confronted him. There was also much official business. Much of the correspondence had to do with prospective jobs. The executive thought it would be a week before he would be able to fully get down to work.

The governor signed a resolution directing R. W. Wheelock of the state board of control and C. S. Reed, warden of the Stillwater penitentiary, to go to New York and look into the sisal situation. The governor also signed authorization for the dedication of the Rochester and New Ulm armories recently built.

To Rebuild Hatton Mill.

Hatton, N. D., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Hatton flour mill, which was burned with a total loss of about $17,000, very likely will be reconstructed next spring, according to H. H. Bissell, head of the H. H. Bissell company, which has been operating the mill several years. The fire originated from an overheated box in the upper part of the structure, and it had such a good start when discovered, that it was impossible to stop it.

"NOW FEEL MY MUSCLE"

Lincoln School Boys Will Soon Be Able to "Lick Dad."

Gymnasium equipment for the Lincoln Junior high school was voted by members of the board of education committee on schools at a meeting today.

The general board will be asked to approve requisitions for the purchase of this apparatus at the first monthly meeting of the new year, which will be held Friday.

When the Lincoln Junior high gymnasium is fitted out, practically every Duluth school with gymnasium room will have sufficient apparatus. Directors of the board of education have made an effort recently to equip every school with gymnasium apparatus, where there is a room that can be used for physical-culture purposes. The Denfeld high school, the Cobb, the Stowe and Central high school now have gymnasiums which are equipped.

The Washburn school on St. Andrews street, between Waverly and Abottsford avenues, has a room which has been used for gymnasium work, and could accommodate a little more apparatus, according to Mrs. T. J. Davis, chairman of the school committee, but that is the only one.

"The room at the Washburn is an auditorium, strictly speaking," Mrs. Davis said, "but a little more apparatus could be used, if it were installed there."

About two months ago students at the Denfeld high school criticized directors of the board for their laxity in fitting out gymnasiums. Since that time supplies have been purchased for every school with gymnasium space, except Central high, which was already fitted out.

ADDITIONAL SPORTS

CUBS SOLD TO WEEGHMAN

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 5.—The Chicago National league club was sold to Charles Weeghman by Charles P. Taft today. Harry F. Sinclair, the Oklahoma oil magnate, assisted in closing the negotiations whereby Weeghman obtained control of the Cubs.

This announcement was made by Harry F. Sinclair. When Mr. Taft was asked to confirm it a moment later he said:

"I have nothing to say now, but may have an announcement to make in a short time."

Fielder Jones in Charge.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 5.—Fielder Jones, who managed the St. Louis Federals last season, took managerial charge of the St. Louis Americans today. He also became second vice president of the club.

Lewis and Graves Matched.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 5.—Ted Lewis of England and "Kid" Graves of New York have been signed to meet here Jan. 18 in a ten-round, no-decision boxing contest, advertised as for the welterweight championship of the world.

PRICES ON TWINE TO BE MADE LATER

Unsettled Sisal Market Cause of Action By Board of Control.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—State binding twine prices for the year will not be announced until the last moment by the board of control. The board has until March to decide on what it will charge consumers for state twine, and the members said today that because of an unsettled sisal market, no action would be taken for the present.

Some time this month R. W. Wheelock of the board and Warden Reed of the state penitentiary will go to New York to inquire into the sisal situation. Reports are that a combination on sisal has been formed, and the board wants to know about it. If such is the case, Federal interference will likely be asked.

Last year the board bought heavily of raw material, and will not be affected to a great extent this year, should the sisal market fall them; but it must look ahead, and the trip to New York is one of the reasons. Chairman Swendsen of the state board of control said today that there was no need of alarm, but at the same time the board would take every precaution towards protecting its supply.

VETERAN WOLF TRAPPER GIVES HIS VIEWS ON STATE'S BOUNTY LAWS

Disputes Claim of State Forester That Timber Wolf Is Only Menace—His Diet Is Deer—Brush Wolves Feed on Sheep and Poultry.

Revision of the wolf bounty laws is much needed in the north woods of Northern Minnesota, in the opinion of N. D. Fairbanks of Goodland, veteran trapper and hunter of St. Louis county. Mr. Fairbanks, however, takes exception to the views supported by State Forester Cox with reference to the wolf bounty question.

In an interesting letter written to The Herald, Mr. Fairbanks calls attention to an article published in The Herald of Dec. 31, purporting to be the expression of the state forester's views on the subject. Mr. Cox was quoted as having stated that the next legislature would probably be asked to raise the bounty on timber wolves to $25 and to discontinue the payment of any bounty whatsoever upon brush wolves and coyotes.

"This assumes," writes Mr. Fairbanks, "that the only damage that is being done is by the depredations of 'that fearsome animal of the big north woods,' an assumption which I hold to be highly erroneous for the following reasons:

Timber Wolf's Habits.

"Those well informed of the habits of the timber wolf are willing to agree that he is a bad actor. His diet is deer, 265 days out of the year—when he is in a deer country. While many are of the opinion that deep snows, glare ice and the like are essential to the destructive action of the timber wolf, I repeat that this wholesale killing of deer is not seasonable. It is only limited by the presence of the deer and never by the time of the year. Furthermore, the timber wolf is exactly what his name implies, a native of the wilderness.

"With the advent of the settler, the timber wolf moves back. So persistent has been this tendency that, at the present rate of settlement, the last timber wolf in Northern Minnesota will have crossed the boundary for the big woods of Canada in fifteen years, if a bounty were never collected and with the possible exception of those regions where agricultural development is not feasible.

"Deer, on the contrary (which are practically the only prey of the timber wolf) thrive as well, with respectable protection, in a farming comunity as elsewhere. The 'big north woods,' which Mr. Cox refers to as the habitat of the timber wolf is rapidly becoming the home of prosperous farmers. The timber wolf is, for that reason, fast becoming extinct. I do not wish to be understood as advocating the abolition of the timber wolf bounty, but I do say that the present bounty, were it uniform in the several counties throughout the state, would prove to be as effective in the destruction of the big wolf as the $25 bounty which Mr. Cox advocates. An extraordinary bounty placed on the timber wolf would result in an influx of pelts from the big woods of Canada, which is the true home of the timber wolf.

Demand Radical Change.

"I have no fault to find with a revision of the bounty laws. There are many things about them that demand a radical change. The disposition of the state legislature to leave to the various counties the option of paying whatever bounty they choose or none at all, is the gravest error of the bounty legislation.

"A large bounty is not essential to the destruction of the timber wolf. A uniform bounty of sufficient size to be an incentive to those who pursue it along business lines, is necessary, since it would tend to eliminate the abuses more or less common, such as shifting wolves from a county paying little or no bounty, to a county paying a large bounty. The real remedy would be a national bounty of $15, applicable to every state and territory of the United States, the national government to pay one-half, the state one-fourth, and the county one-fourth; this bounty to apply to any wolf of whatever species, male or female, old or young. It would be no hardship upon those states which have no wolves, as they would have no bounty to pay, and truly, all people are, or should be, interested in the protection of game and live stock and in that way the burden would be properly distributed and there would be no counterfeits.

"Make only one exception, that to apply to the two months of the year when the cubs are in den. Say to Mr. Den Hunter: 'I am going to give you full bounty on young wolves, providing you bring the old female with the cubs.' Then it would be manifestly to the interest of every wolf hunter to use every possible means at his command to bag that female wolf, and she would be bagged.

Would Eliminate Graft.

"Understand that it would take some time to make this a national law. The state, by passing a uniform state bounty law, can do a great deal toward eliminating graft and abuse within her boundaries. Let the state quit farming herself. Make a uniform bounty, paying a fair bounty on cubs, and it will soon learn that to get rid of the young is to decrease the number of full-grown wolves it will have to pay for.

"I insist that if it is worth $15 to kill a wolf at any stage of that wolf's existence, it must be worth the full amount to do that job before he gets his eyes open. This state pays large sums through the game commission to protect game, yet, through inadequate bounties on cubs, it is raising a group of violators that are beyond the reach of the wardens and are responsible for the destruction of more game than all other violators within the state.

Brush Wolves Worst.

"To quote Mr. Cox: 'The state, in my opinion, should abolish the present bounty system, which last year cost $15,000. Let the dogs and hunters take care of the coyotes. The present system was of no public benefit last year.'

"I have described the timber wolf as being a creature of the wilderness; on the other hand, the brush wolf, sometimes miscalled the coyote, is the natural successor of the timber wolf, since he prefers a settled country to the wilderness. As to the relative damage done by the brush wolf and the timber wolf species, in the state of Minnesota, the timber wolf cannot be considered at all. The coyote has taken up his abode in parts of the state which have been settled for fifty years and is a constant menace to poultry of all kinds. Anyone interested will not have to make a longer pilgrimage from the capital than into Anoka, Isanti, Wright, Chisago or Washington counties to find communities wherein there are plenty of people who have abandoned sheep raising on account of the inroads of the coyote. I found settlers in Anoka county two years ago that were very anxious to provide me and my dogs with board and lodging to induce me to remain and hunt the brush wolves preying upon their sheep and poultry. However, the bounty on cub wolves in Anoka county at that time was so inadequate that only a philanthropist could engage in their extermination.

Sheep Herds Suffer.

"There is not a community in the north half of the state but what the percentage of risk in raising sheep is so great no one can engage in it owing to the presence of the brush wolf. I can furnish Mr. Cox with the addresses of three men who are willing to make an affidavit that one pair of wolves pulled down 108 sheep while raising one litter of whelps.

"The previous season I had picked up eight cub wolves from the same pair and not a single sheep was lost. The following year I avoided the territory owing to the presence of poisoning. In the same community an Edward Gleason, who grew up in the sheep business in Dawson county, Mont., came to this community and was so well impressed with its possibilities as a sheep country that he purchased a large tract of land, enclosing it with woven wire, and erected splendid buildings. He was literally driven out of business in three years by the brush wolf. His experience could be duplicated a thousand times in the same region.

Coyotes Not Sheep Thieves.

"It might be well to mention here that all coyotes are not sheep thieves, but once a sheep thief always a sheep thief. The same may be said of the coyotes' deer killing. I am well convinced from my study of the brush wolf that they acquire this habit through the scarcity of food or by accident. Upon once tasting mutton or venison, the appetite can only be overcome by the destruction of the individual wolf, for like the domestic canine, they seem to pursue for sport of killing as well as to supply their wants in the way of food. Let a brush wolf come upon a pair of fawns two or three days old and they become interested in the constant pursuit of that sort of game.

"Everyone knows that, in the main, rabbits are the brush wolf's national game; however, periodic epidemics among the rabbits make them very scarce. In such periods I have been curious to know what the wolf subsisted on. Repeatedly upon opening the well-filled stomach of a coyote I found all manner of game—at times as many as eleven little striped chicks, both partridge and grouse, which had been virtually swallowed alive. If sportsmen of the state had any definite idea of the number of game birds and deer, especially fawns, that form the diet of the wolf they would work shoulder to shoulder for a uniform reasonable bounty throughout the state.

"To conclude, any revision of the bounty law which does not include every species and age of the wolf family would be rankest folly and would defeat the very purpose for which bounties are paid."

DEMOCRATS WILL CONFER

Gathering Called for Feb. 1 to Choose National Convention Delegates.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—The Democratic state executive committee decided yesterday to call a state conference Feb. 1 to select delegates and alternates to a national convention.

The members of the committee did not favor the selection of candidates for state offices at this conference, but the call permits this being done if the delegates wish.

The selection of delegates and alternates by the conference amounts only to a recommendation. It is expected that anti-organization Democrats will file a complete list.

The committee apportioned one delegate to each 100 votes cast for Governor Hammond at the last election.

LOVE IS SUPREME, SAY MARRIED MEN

Jury Decides Son Need Not Pay Debt to Aged Father.

Married men on a jury in Judge W. H. Smallwood's court yesterday decided that love was the most important thing in life.

It took them just eight minutes to agree that Joseph Schreck, defendant, did not need to pay his father $100 for transportation and board.

Originally the Shrecks lived in Budapest. Schreck, Sr., came to this country in 1901 and worked hard to pay the taxes on the old homestead and to provide enough so that other members of the family could come over here.

Finally, Joseph, the son, came to New York. He wanted to come on to Duluth but he didn't have the money, so he wired for it.

In the words of the old song, Joseph

"Found the Western Union a convenience
Wherever I may roam,
For I'll telegraph my baby,
And I'll get a twenty—maybe,
So I won't have to walk back home."

Schreck, Sr., sent on the "twenty" at any rate, but as soon as Joseph reached Duluth, he fell in love. That's all there was to it.

Now he is married; has $1,000 in the bank, and has forgotten about his aged father, who is growing too old to work.

When the jury thought of the strange things they did during the heyday of their love, they decided that the son wasn't to blame, no matter what.

Man must, in these days of social evil, know the right and wrong of human acts; he must thoroughly understand the fundamental principles of the moral law, and of the Christian code of ethics. This can only be brought about by the presence of religion in education.

"From Christian ethics capital will learn that to labor it owes a just or living wage, a reasonable number of hours for recreation, a sanitary workshop, and finally, all that justice demands. From Christian ethics also labor will learn that to capital it owes honest, conscientious labor, self-sacrifice and true loyalty."

Peggy Peabody's Observations

The Bargain Season.

Annually I regret the flatness of my pocketbook at this season of the year. Every year I register a vow to make provision so that a year hence I shall have money with which to buy the things that tempt me from rack and counter.

A trip through the stores where bargains vie with each other is only a source of aggravation to me, and yet I cannot resist poking about and looking at the things I might buy for so little if I would only prepare for the days that follow closely to Christmas by setting aside a little store of gold to be used in purchasing bargains.

Twice annually the storekeepers spread a treat of this nature before us, and the woman is wise who bears it in mind and takes advantage of the surplus stocks of goods which must be disposed of to make room for an entirely different lot. These sales come directly after Christmas and in either July or August. But somehow the summer sales never appealed to me strongly.

I think, in justice to the January sales, I should say they are more interesting, more complete, perhaps, combining a more varied assortment of things for which we have a present use, or one in the very near future. For instance, there is piled up on dress goods counters of most department stores a choice line of dress goods and suitings in all weights and weaves. Sometimes there is only one dress pattern of a kind, but there is variety enough to choose from always.

No one who has the care of a house needs to be informed that there is no better time in the year to replenish the linen chest. If you will avail yourself of the bargains offered in bed linen, towels, table linen, bureau scarfs and white goods of all descriptions you will save money and secure some very choice things in these lines. Of course you cannot buy at random or in total ignorance of quality and values, but with a little knowledge and a little care money invested at this time is bound to come under the head of wise expenditure.

Underwear can be bought now to advantage. Perhaps you have what you need for this year, but how about next? Underwear is a good thing to be provided with, especially when you can make such a saving by laying in a stock at this time.

My advice to anyone who has money on hand is that they make a list of things needed and then search the stores until they find them at bargain prices. I have no doubt that many will be forthcoming.

Motion Pictures and Military Training In Schools Topics at Club Luncheon

Forty-five women gathered for the 1 o'clock luncheon that was held by the literature department of the Twentieth Century club this afternoon in one of the private dining rooms of the Spalding hotel. The tables were decorated with flowers.

After the luncheon topics of current interest were discussed. Mrs. J. C. H. Engel, chairman of the department, spoke on "Military Training in the Public Schools" and Mrs. R. Spiegel on "The Psychology of Motion Pictures." Mrs. J. H. Crowley who was to have spoken on "World Peace," was unable to be present. The discussions were followed by a social afternoon in the hotel parlors.

The members of the committee in charge of the luncheon were: Mrs. Dudley Holland, Mrs. D. H. Hayes and Mrs. Harold Crassweller.

Military Training.

Mrs. Engel said in part:

"The subject of 'Military Training in the Public Schools' is one that is demanding the attention of all educators of the time. One reason for this is evidently the great struggle that is going on in Europe. The question as to how far nations should be prepared to meet war conditions has assumed very grave proportions because of the present war. That is the reason this topic has been selected for consideration this afternoon.

"It is gratifying that the subject has been brought before our local educators and has aroused so much comment through the press. The subject is one upon which a great deal can be said on either side.

"As lovers of peace we feel that we should do everything to discourage the ideal of warfare as a profession. We do not wish our boys to grow up with the impression that it is manly to take human lives.

"However, on the other hand, there is a very fine disciplinary value in military training. Our most thoughtful educators are deploring the lack of obedience on the part of young persons and certainly military training does teach boys immediate obedience. There is the further value of physical development, which is gained by military practice. This should not be carried on merely within a building, but there should be field work such as is used in Switzerland, which is said to have the finest military system in the world."

Value of Motion Pictures.

Mrs. Spiegel spoke of the importance of motion pictures in educational problems and gave examples to show their value has been recognized by colleges and Federal and state bureaus. She said:

"The photoplay is not only moving on different roads, but on the road of education and instruction. Statistics show that the attendance at photoplays is larger than the combined attendance at colleges, libraries and other places of instruction. Many persons have learned their history and geography by attending photoplays. Our great psychologist of Harvard says the photoplay has come to supplement the schoolroom, the newspaper and the library, besides being the greatest aid in learning to concentrate and in strengthening the mentality.

"Not long ago it was considered undignified to visit a motion picture house, but today the most artistic highbrow has learned to enjoy a photoplay. Therefore, it is necessary that the national board of censorship be composed of men who have no financial interest in producing the photoplays. There ought to be a Federal board.

"Only such things as are beneficial and instructive should be shown on the screen, for there is no place today which draws the masses as the photoplay does.

"The development of the photoplay has brought about the greatest change in education. C. H. Carson, president of the Visual Educational association of California, says: 'We are on the eve of a tremendous development in the application of visual aids in educational work. We do not begin to realize the place the motion picture will take in the aid to instruction and to an understanding of problems of the classroom. Therefore, the time will come when all classrooms will have equipments to aid the teachers. For educational, industrial, social, religious and moral purposes every school ought to have a picture machine. It is not claimed that it will replace the text book or teacher, but it plays its part in clarifying the abstract ideas of students and adding a useful instrument to the equipment of the teacher.'"

Mrs. Spiegel told of California's making an appropriation for the maintenance of a bureau of visual education in connection with the schools of the state. She spoke also of the establishment two years ago by the United States bureau of agriculture of a department of stereopticon and moving pictures in conjunction with the lectures on agricultural subjects, and the use the University of Minnesota and the University of Nebraska make of moving pictures in teaching various subjects. Even in far-off India, as the speaker explained, the state has a department of motion pictures to teach the farmers agriculture.

"In closing," said Mrs. Spiegel, "I wonder how many persons know that the moving picture originated in France twenty years ago. From France it penetrated into Germany—Berlin alone has 400 moving picture houses—then into the United States. Today there is not a civilized spot on the globe that is without its motion picture houses."

Mme. Strong Is Honor Guest at Luncheon

Mrs. W. D. Bailey of 2603 East Fifth street entertained at luncheon today for Mme. Strong, who will leave soon for the South. Covers were laid for six.

Suffragists Hear Report On National Convention

Mrs. P. L. De Voist, who was a delegate from Minnesota to the convention of the National Suffrage association that was held in Washington, D. C., last month, told her impressions of it at the meeting of the suffrage association that was held yesterday afternoon in the library clubroom. Mrs. De Voist spoke in the place of Rev. John W. Hoffman, who was ill.

A short business meeting preceded the talk. Mrs. F. C. Bowman reported on the peace branch of the association; it was announced that Mrs. Albert McMahon of Minneapolis, state organizer of the suffrage association, would come to Duluth the first week in February, and a collection was taken up for the campaign fund of West Virginia. A luncheon will be given in honor of Mrs. McMahon.

Mrs. De Voist gave her audience some idea of the size of the forty-seventy annual national suffrage convention by saying that there were 648 delegates, more than that number of alternates and that the visitors also exceeded the number of delegates.

Work of Dr. Shaw.

She sketched the work of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, who was president of the association eleven years and was succeeded by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who was elected at the last meeting, saying it must be hard for her to turn over her work to someone else after she had given so many years to it. "Dr. Shaw is respected by the men of the country," she said.

A pleasing personal touch was given by Mrs. de Voist's account of the first suffrage lecture she attended. Dr. Shaw was the speaker and she held the attention of the 11-year-old child so completely that it was said she had never been so quiet for a whole hour in her life.

Of Mrs. Catt the speaker said: "In my opinion Mrs. Catt is the greatest of women speakers. No greater grilling was ever given a person than that given to her on the Constitution of the United States by congress. The chairman said that no one knew more than she did of the Constitution of the United States, except the Russian Jews, and that they knew more of it than the congressmen.

"The national Republican committee of the Republican party, that was holding its convention in Washington at the same time, gave an invitation for a suffrage plank in the Republican platform. This was the first time the invitation was ever given, though it has been asked for.

"Many of the presidents of state federations of clubs were among the delegates. There were more delegates from the four campaign states, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey, than from any of the others."

Funds for Suffrage.

Other examples that were given to show the active interest that is taken in suffrage were the mention that in half an hour the National Suffrage association raised $50,000 and that at the last meeting held by the Congressional union at the convention $47,000 was raised, which has since been increased to $100,000.

Mrs. Bowman explained that the peace branch that has been formed as part of the Duluth Woman's Suffrage association has affiliated with the American Peace society with which twelve organizations co-operate. All the members of the suffrage club are members of the peace branch, without the payment of additional dues, and those who wish to join the peace branch may do so, upon the payment of 50 cents, without affiliating with the suffrage organization. The funds of the suffrage association and the peace branch will be kept separate.

A meeting will be held the first Monday of each month, the next one to be at the home of Mrs. Watson Moore, 1829 East First street. When the branch is of sufficient size a regular meeting place will be decided on. The officers of the branch are: Secretary, Miss Marie d'Autremont; treasurer, Mrs. Seth Marshall, and historian, Mrs. George Spencer.

No definite work has been done by the peace branch, with the exception of sending out some literature at Christmas. The members are now making layettes for war babies.

THE ARMORY SALE.

The city commissioners in The Herald last night gave fourteen reasons why citizens should not sign the proposed petition for a referendum on the sale of the armory to the Shriners—that is to say, reasons justifying the sale as a business proposition. The reasons are all good, and surely there should be enough of them to satisfy anybody. The price is apparently right, the armory is not needed by the city, it is too expensive a property to hold for speculative purposes, the city cannot afford to go into the real estate business anyway, the Shriners will improve the building and make it an ornament instead of an eyesore, the city will gain $750 a year in taxes and will avoid the expense of putting the building into shape and maintaining it, etc. There are reasons enough, and there isn't the slightest possible doubt that if there should be a referendum the voters will approve the sale. Those who sign the referendum petition, therefore, are simply helping to subject the city to an utterly useless expense of three thousand dollars, which is what a referendum election would cost.

With the money received from the sale of the armory and from the city's share of the work farm property, ample city workshop and storage facilities can be provided and a large part of the cost of the new city hall site can be paid.

When the new city hall is built provision can and should be made for a community assembly hall, and in the meantime the new armory can be used whenever it is needed.

The armory sale is a sound business proposition, and a referendum upon it would be an abuse of the referendum privilege and a wanton waste of public funds.

Where are the Christmas trees of yesteryear?

WHO IS TO BLAME FOR THE PORK BARREL?

"We shall go on wasting money in pork barrel appropriations," says the World's Work, "until we adopt some system of responsible government. It is inconceivable that the executive department, if given authority to develop our waterways on commercial grounds, would undertake, for example, the absurd waterway expenditures. Only the greed of districts which are thinking, not of the national interests but of purely local and temporary profit, can prostitute popular government in this fashion."

The World's Work is carrying on a campaign for a budget system to replace the extravagant, wasteful and futile pork barrel system of congressional appropriations. It is a fight worth making, and it ought to have all possible support.

Though not all army and navy appropriations, not all public building appropriations and not all river and harbor appropriations are silly and wasteful, enough of them are so to stain the whole process and to make it disgusting. A budget system, whereby appropriations would be framed and distributed from the viewpoint of the national welfare instead of resulting from a log-rolling combination of local greeds, would be a splendid advance, and it cannot come about too quickly.

But that isn't precisely what we started to discuss. The phrase that primarily excited our interested speculation was this: "the greed of districts." It evoked the question just how much congressional districts are responsible for pork barrel methods.

They are largely responsible, of course; but we believe not quite in the way the World's Work suggests. If its phrase conjures up a picture of congressional districts all over the country madly clamoring for government appropriations of one kind or another, we think it conjures up a picture of what does not exist, except relatively.

The blame for the pork barrel rests primarily, we think, with the pork barrel type of congressman who toadies to and bribes his district with pork plucked out of the political brine of the pork barrel. The cheapskate congressman—and we have always many of them—is not big enough or broad enough to have a conception of duty to his country and its people that would justify him to his constituency as well as to the country. He thinks that if he can scheme and logroll and toady and "play the game" for the ruling powers and thereby get an appropriation for his district, he can bribe his constituency into continuing him in congress. Where the districts are at fault is that they so often prove him to be correct in that judgment. They ought, of course, to ask larger things of their congressmen than raids on the pork barrel. They ought, of course, to repudiate representatives who insult them by such an estimate of their patriotism and intelligence. But they don't; so pork barrel methods have proved politically profitable.

The trouble is, in the nation as in the state, that the general interest tends to become drowned in the scramble of local interests, because senators and congressmen, like members of state legislatures, represent primarily the local interest and only secondarily the general interest. A budget system, an adaptation of the British parliamentary system that would give the administration and the general interest voice and vote in the legislative halls, anything that will put the general interest where it belongs, is worth working for, not only in the nation but in the states.

Ha-ha! The prohibition conv——ha-ha-ha! The prohibition convention is going——ha-ha-ha-ha!——going to meet in——ha-ha-ha-ha-ha-ha!—St. Paul!

A FAIR TRIBUTE.

The Chicago Herald, which is independent in politics, clear in its vision and fair in its judgment, pays this high tribute to the Wilson administration:

> The year which has ended has witnessed many notable achievements for this country. But easily the most notable is the success of the administration in asserting the rights of neutrals without becoming entangled in the tremendous conflict which is devastating Europe. Without threats, without the exercise of force, SOLELY BY A FIRM INSISTENCE ON WHAT THE BELLIGERENTS THEMSELVES KNEW TO BE JUST, great results have been achieved. No American who today enjoys the benefits of the firm yet peaceful policy followed begrudges either the president or his capable secretary of state the praise which they deserve.

This is fair, and it is true—and the truth it expresses is a new factor in the world, a fine, noble factor which means, ultimately, the end of war and the coming of peace and civilized relationships between nations.

It is true without regard to the difficult condition existing when it was written, due to Austria's strange paralleling of fair words with foul deeds.

On its face, the victory of this policy of firm insistence upon the just rights of neutrals in the case of Austria is the most sweeping yet; and it bids fair to be followed promptly by a final settlement with Germany. It is true that the news of the victory was interrupted by the news of new and apparently still more barbarous acts; but it should be remembered that information in the cases of the Persia and the Geelong still is very fragmentary, and judgment as well as action must await the coming of clearer facts. It should be noted also that Austrian officials still speak fairly, and declare that if Austrian submarine commanders have violated the laws of humanity in these cases, appropriate action will be taken promptly.

There has been no lack of firmness. If anybody thinks there has been a lack of firmness in dealing with Germany and Austria, let him listen for a moment to the bitter complaints of the partisans of those nations in this country who are more zealous in defense of the worst Teutonic outrages than they are in cherishing the most sacred American interests.

If anybody thinks there has been a lack of firmness in dealing with Great Britain's invasion of neutral rights, let him listen for a moment to the wails of reproach that have come from England since America's protest was filed.

President Wilson's foreign policy is getting what the nation asks, and it is getting it without firing a gun or even making a threat. If it succeeds finally as it now bids fair to do, it will be the most glorious achievement in the history of the nation, bar none.

Honestly, now; what would you do for Duluth if you could?

TEACHER'S SALARIES IN DULUTH.

We are sure every citizen wants the teachers in Duluth paid as liberally as they should be, or as school district finances will permit. The most telling point made by the teachers is that salaries here are not as high as they are in other neighboring cities; and of course if that is so it means that inevitably Duluth must lose many of its best teachers as openings offer elsewhere. Duluth should pay as much as other cities, or it can't hope to maintain its schools on the high level it desires.

The school board, which is the final authority in the matter, is limited, of course, by the amount of money available. If it can't pay more now, it can't; but if it is convinced that salaries are too low it ought at its earliest possible convenience to rearrange its budget to allow higher salaries.

The teachers also want an automatic regulation of salaries according to period of service instead of the merit system, and we don't blame them. The merit system is fine in theory. The trouble with it is that it opens wide the door to favoritism, or to the charge of favoritism, which amounts to the same thing. It certainly offers the opportunity for favoritism.

We are not at all concerned about the fear that concerted action by the teachers through their organization will result in "unionizing" the teaching force. Perhaps our failure to experience alarm about this is due to our belief that no harm would come if the teachers WERE unionized. We can see much good, and no harm that couldn't be handled, in a teachers' union. But there is no teachers' union now, and in acting in an organized manner the teachers are acting in the only way they can act at all effectively.

Maybe the warring powers are just waiting to make peace on Feb. 29.

Now that William Waldorf Astor has been made a peer, the war, presumably, may stop any time it dum pleases.

No doubt, if we could read the humbler minds, we'd find that many a mere sausage thinks itself a gay dog.

The Oneidas, says President Wilson's history, "were stronger, fiercer, more constant and indomitable" than the other Indians. And still their name is spelled without an apostrophe before the "N".

What a Dime a Day'll Do

B. C. Forbes in "Finance, Business and the Business of Life."

The Scots—who know something about thrift!—have an adage: "Mony littles mak' a muckle."

In American phrase: Take care of the cents and the dollars will take care of themselves.

How much, think you, would you have in twenty years did you save a dime a day and allow 5 per cent interest to accumulate on it?

Over $1,200!

The little dime, the smallest of all our coins, can work wonders if tucked away, one each day.

A dime a day will insure a lad of 15 for $2,100, a youth of 21 for $1,860 and a man of 35 for $1,300, a life insurance actuary computed for this article. This premium would carry the usual participating privileges, including a refund for the reduction of future premiums or an increase in the amount of insurance.

A dime a day with 5 per cent interest compounded annually, would, at the end of five years, buy two "baby bonds" of the highest grade which would yield at least $10 interest every year.

A dime a day, on the same terms, if saved for your boy or girl from birth, would give you over $500 to send the child to boarding school when 11 years old; or $1,000 to start it at college at 18. At 21 the child's bankbook would show $1,300 to its credit.

To illustrate vividly how money makes money, the following table of our dime a day saved is worth presenting:

How a Dime a Day Saved and Invested Grows.

End of		Interest at 5 Per cent.
First year	$ 36.50	.....
Second year	74.82	$ 1.82
Third year	115.06	3.74
Fourth year	157.31	5.75
Fifth year	201.67	7.86
Sixth year	248.25	10.08
Seventh year	297.16	12.41
Eighth year	348.51	14.85
Ninth year	402.43	17.42
Tenth year	459.05	20.12
Eleventh year	518.50	22.95
Twelfth year	580.92	25.92
Thirteenth year	646.46	29.04
Fourteenth year	715.28	32.32
Fifteenth year	787.54	35.76
Sixteenth year	863.42	39.38
Seventeenth year	943.09	43.17
Eighteenth year	1,026.74	47.15
Nineteenth year	1,206.81	51.34
Twentieth year	1,305.65	60.34

Though in the eleventh year you are still laying by only a dime a day, your balance in that year gains $59.45 over the previous year instead of the straight $36.50 your dime a day comes to. The gain of the twenty-first year over the twentieth, still at a dime a day, is $98.84—of which you have contributed $36.50, and your savings have earned $62.34.

A dime a day would buy a 25-cent gift for 146 poor children at Christmas.

A dime a day would pay your fare, second class, to Europe and back in three years.

A dime a day would buy you in three years a share of Pennsylvania railroad stock, paying 6 per cent a year, or a share of United States Steel preferred stock, paying 7 per cent a year.

A dime a day, at 5 per cent interest, would bring you $20 a year interest in ten years, $40 a year in sixteen years and $60 a year in twenty-one years.

A dime a day could be saved by many men through smoking one cigar less a day.

A dime a day could be saved by many people through substituting a "movie" show for the theater once a fortnight or so.

A dime a day could be saved by lots of us in car fares—and the walk would do us good.

A dime a day could be saved—oh! in any one of a number of ways if we only set our mind to it.

I know of one lady who buys many little gifts at Christmas from the pennies she and other members of her household toss into a handy box during the year.

Once cultivate the habit of saving a dime a day, and ere long you will want to make it two dimes a day, and two dimes a day would double the totals in the table already given.

If everybody in the United States saved a dime a day the total would be $10,000,000 a day or $3,650,000,000 in one year, which is more than all the money in circulation in this country.

Why not start to do your share?

Save a dime a day to keep the wolf away.

Sauce For the Goose

From the Venturer, a London journal of Christian thought and practice: In Mr. Wilson's third Lusitania note to Berlin, dated July 21, two passages in particular were received with a chorus of approval in this country. One was a pointed refusal to regard the plea of retaliation against another belligerent as relevant to any question that involved the rights of neutrals. The other was an equally plain declaration that America could not consent to abate any of the essential rights of her own people because of a mere alteration in the circumstances and methods of modern warfare. "A Daniel come to judgment!" exclaimed everybody. How justly firm the president's attitude toward lawbreakers, and how irresistible his argument!

In his November note, Mr. Wilson expounds the same doctrine to Great Britain but it awakens a very different response in our press. From the beginning of the war until now, most of the instructors of the British public have revealed a singular inability to put themselves at the American point of view, or even to realize the normal relationship of America to the affairs of the Old World.

This defect has been specially notable in some leaders of opinion who, before the war, were wont to lavish extravagant and indiscriminate laudation upon everything American. Some of them evidently have at the back of their minds the conviction that, because America was founded by British emigrants, she is still under a certain obligation of informal allegiance which makes it her duty to take the British side in any controversy to waive any claims that conflict with Downing-street policies.

Impatient of Interruption.

Life: A lot of people hate the war because it has upset their routine and the running of their apparatus.

Some of them think the best way is to ignore it, and go right on as if there were no war.

These are the kind of people who, when they hear the last trump, will say: "Oh, bother this day of judgment. It will be bad for business, and besides, it will make me late to dinner."

A Rhyme of Life.

If life be a flame that death doth kill,
Burn, little candle, lit for me,
With a pure flame, that I may rightly see
To word my song, and utterly
God's plan fulfil.

If life be a flower that blooms and dies,
Forbid the cunning frost that slays
With Judas kiss, and trusting love betrays;
Forever may my song of praise
Untainted rise.

If life be a voyage, foul or fair,
Oh, bid me not my banners furl
For adverse gale, or wave in angry whirl,
Till I have found the gates of pearl,
And anchored there.

The Nerve Strain of Home-Coming

From the London Chronicle.

Probably few of those who wait at home and prepare with anxiety and excitement for the home-coming of a son or husband from the front realize that of all the experiences allotted to our fighting men there is nothing more trying to the nerves than the first hours of leave.

Wearied from the journey from the scene of his activities and highly strung with excitement—however calm and assured he may seem—the arrival in the midst of a large group of solicitous and over-attentive relations is often quite a nerve-racking ordeal for the man on leave.

It is not difficult to understand the strange feelings a man must experience upon arrival in peaceful regions, where the roar and cracks of the guns and the screaming of tortured men seem to belong to some vivid and awful nightmare, which yet obsesses him so entirely and completely that it is almost impossible to adapt himself to the quiet life about him—at any rate, for some days—and to throw himself into the little pleasures and habits and vanities of home life.

"It is astonishing how quickly one forgets!" exclaimed an officer home for a few days' leave after five or six months' hard work in Belgium. "I could scarcely recall home or my London work after three months in the trenches; that seemed to be the only life I knew. And even now that I am home again it is difficult to fit myself into my old niche and to adapt myself to polite society. I don't really know how to talk to people half the time."

"But if you were here for several weeks the soldier's life would seem just as unreal and distant?" I suggested.

"Oh, certainly!" he replied. "It only requires a couple of months in this"—his eyes roved from the blowing red fire to the cozy room, with its abundance of flowers, and rested upon his two small children rolling plasticine in their chubby, pink hands at the table—"to wipe out more than half of the horror and ugliness of war."

It is a pity that people do not bear in mind that home, in spite of its comforts, in spite, too, of the gladness with which the soldier enters it again, is almost as strange to him as were the barracks when first he answered his country's call to arms; and he needs to be "acclimatized" before he can be just the same, in the now unusual environment, as he was in pre-war days. A few hours of fireside home and cheer and quiet companionship will do so much to lessen the strain of the soldier's homecoming, and prevent the reaction which sets in after excitement and causes irritability, with its attendant unhappiness and misunderstanding all round. His feelings are the same, though much accentuated, of course, as those which you or I would experience when upon arrival home from a hard and tiring day's work we were bothered and criticized and questioned.

"Wait until I have had a wash and brush up and a cup of tea," we should say; and within half an hour, opening out like a flower in a warm room, we should chat of our own free will about the matters which were replied to with merely a disagreeable grunt before.

Mothers and wives will be so glad afterwards if they can look back and remember that upon his arrival home on leave her son or husband was met with sympathy and smiles and a quiet though hearty welcome, and not with bustle and din, criticism, and a perfect volley of questions and tiresome comments.

For the Child's Mental Health

Rules for parents to follow in safeguarding the mental life of their children were adopted at the recent meeting of the Massachusetts Society for Mental Hygiene. Here are the recommendations:

Give your child opportunity for a variety of wholesome activities and interests.

Train your child to work hard in some regular occupation suited to his ability and talents, but to avoid fatigue by alternation of work and rest.

Train your child to give attention to the present situation.

Train your child to strict obedience in a few important matters, and let him alone in regard to the unimportant things.

Avoid conditions that tend to produce overstrain.

Protect your child from shocks. Do not frighten him yourself or let other people do so.

Give your child a variety of well-cooked, wholesome food in ample quantity at regular intervals.

Train your child to avoid drugs and stimulants of all kinds.

Train your child to healthful habits of sleep in fresh air, giving opportunity for at least nine hours, and for more than that before the age of 12.

If your child becomes worried and sleepless, or has muscular twitchings or the like, consult a competent physician at once.

Take advice of a competent person concerning the peculiar, sensitive or nervous child, in order to correct a possibly bad inheritance by proper education and environment.

The best method of training is by example.

Praxiteles and Phryne.

A thousand silent years ago,
The twilight faint and pale
Was drawing o'er the sunset glow
Its soft and shadowy veil;

When from his work the sculptor stayed
His hand, and, turned to one
Who stood beside him, half in shade,
Said with a sigh, "'Tis done.

"Thus much is saved from chance and change,
That waits for me and thee;
Thus much—how little!—from the range
Of Death and Destiny.

"Phryne, thy human lips shall pale,
Thy rounded limbs decay,—
Nor love nor prayers can aught avail
To bid thy beauty stay;

"But there thy smile for centuries
On marble lips shall live,—
For Art can grant what Love denies,
And fix the fugitive.

"Sad thought! nor age nor death shall fade
The youth of this cold bust;
When this quick brain and hand that made,
And I and thou are dust!

"When all our hopes and fears are dead,
And both our hearts are cold,
And love is like a tune that's played,
And life a tale that's told,

"This senseless stone, so cold and fair,
That love nor life can warm,
The same enchanting look shall wear,
The same enchanting form.

"Its peace no sorrow shall destroy;
Its beauty age shall spare
The bitterness of vanished joy,
The wearing waste of care.

"And there upon that silent face
Shall unborn ages see
Perennial youth, perennial grace,
And sealed eternity.

"And strangers, when we sleep in peace,
Shall say, not quite unmoved,
'So smiled upon Praxiteles,
The Phryne whom he loved!' "

—William Wetmore Story (1819-1895).

Effort to "Use" Dr. Northrop Is Resented by the Press

"Favorite Son Fiasco" Falls Flat in Minnesota.

Not Only Unkind, But Cruel.

Red Wing Republican: The Republican hopes that Minnesota's grand old man, Dr. Cyrus Northrop, will not be led into any political scheme to make him a "favorite son" in the presidential primary. Dr. Northrop was always sincere and in earnest when he did things and to enter the presidential race merely to serve the purposes of others, no matter how worthy their motives may be, is not in keeping with Dr. Northrop's life and achievements.

The "favorite son" business has always been a fiasco to provide trading stock for political manipulators. Dr. Northrop is one of the most highly honored men in this nation, and it would be not only unkind but positively cruel to press him into such service at this time of life. Our sincere love and veneration for Minnesota's Grand Old Man and our decided opinion that the real sentiment of Minnesota Republicans should assert itself at the presidential primaries prompt us to make these remarks.

He Has Earned a Rest.

St. Cloud Times: Better give the "grand old man" a rest—he has earned it. The people of the state, aside from the politicians, are not seeking Dr. Cyrus Northrop as a delegate.

Displeasing to the Alumni.

Dawson Sentinel: University alumni will not look with favor on the scheme to get Cyrus Northrop into the presidential game to pull Elihu Root's chestnuts out of the fire.

If it would be undignified for Mr. Root to seek the nomination for himself, it would be worse than undignified for Dr. Northrop to allow his name to be used in a game to secure the presidency for Mr. Root under false pretenses.

If not for his own sake, then for the sake of the university with which his name has so long been linked, Dr. Northrop should promptly repudiate the movement and rebuke those who are responsible for it.

Think of It.

Fairmont Sentinel: Think of using a man like Cyrus Northrop as a stalking horse for the interests.

A Preposterous Suggestion.

Mora Times: Cyrus Northrop, 81 years old, is being proposed by Ed Emith and other standpatters as a Minnesota candidate for the presidency, and all other candidates are invited to withdraw and get behind Northrop in the interest of harmony. The suggestion is preposterous, and the surprising thing is that so astute a politician as Ed Smith would propose such a movement. Its purpose is so apparent that no one will fall for it. Northrop has no earthly show to be nominated. He would only be a stalking horse for somebody else, the identity of whom would be kept under cover until the proper time came. The scheme will not work. The people of Minnesota are wise to Ed Smith and his methods.

Afraid of an Open Campaign.

Mankato Review: It is untrue that Dr. Northrop as a candidate "would not represent any one faction." He would represent the smallest and most dishonest faction of the party—a faction that does not dare to go into the primary in its own strength and frankly work for a delegation under the name of the man it intends that delegation to support.

A Sure Sign of Desperation.

Browns Valley Tribune: Prexy Northrop is a fine old gentleman, but he is not presidential timber, and we presume there are none more ready to admit that fact than the prexy himself. It is a mere indication that certain standpat Republicans of Minnesota are in desperate political straits when they seek to induce Prexy Northrop to step out of his peaceful, quiet life and become a candidate for something in order to pull their chestnuts out of the fire.

Michigan Musings

Brief Paragraphs From the Wolverine State Press.

The Public Is Confident.

Marquette Mining Journal: From all directions comes reports of unprecedented trade. The increases over last year in some line and in particular communities were startling, and everywhere gains were recorded. The public had more money to spend, and, what is fully as important, it was in the psychological mood for spending. It has been told over and over again that 1916 is going to be a year of unprecedented prosperity, and it believes it. Thus it is confident of the immediate future, and that confidence makes it optimistic in the present.

Which Is the Wiser Way?

Marquette Chronicle: After Christmas some merchants advertise their surplus stock, turn it into cash, and put in new goods. Others carefully lay the old stuff away until next year, without making any effort to turn it, and then they complain of dull times.

An Ecstasy of Meanness.

Houghton Mining Gazette: There are some men in this world whose meanness makes them objects for commiseration. But the meanest of all is the kind of chap who destroyed the municipal Christmas tree that had been prepared for the amusement and pleasure and happiness of the people of Iron Mountain. A man with a soul so small that he would commit that crime is to be pitied. May the Lord have mercy on him!

Classifying the Population.

Hancock Copper Journal: The only people who are susceptible to pneumonia, says an Eastern doctor, are the city people, the smokers, the heavy eaters, the moderate drinkers, the heavy drinkers and the fat. Those outside this classification should not chortle in glee, however, as there are other serious diseases beside pneumonia.

An Interesting Uncertainty.

Houghton Mining Gazette: Burbank's edible cactus is said to be a success and one never knows whether one has eaten it or not, as many of the mysterious compounds one encounters taste as though they were made of cactus or something like that.

War? Tut, Tut.

Saginaw News: Righto, Mr. President. Good natured America doesn't want war any more than fond mothers want toodlums to have the whooping cough.

To go farther, America isn't even interested in war.

If it's proof you ask, listen.

Only a few days ago we found ourself listening to a conversation on a street car.

"Looks like peace for awhile," chortles fair dame.

"Yep," answers kind gent; "knew all the time the Federal league wouldn't keep up the fight long."

"Oh, no, I didn't mean baseball," retorts fair dame. "I meant that the suffragists have quit their fight during the holidays."

And then we glanced at our newspaper.

"United States and Austria at breaking point," we read across seven columns in war type.

Fair dame was not at all disturbed. She was reading the woman's page.

Kind gent was equally as excited. He was reading sport dope.

War? Tut, tut!

We're interested in more important things.

Twelve Health Rules

Formulated and Copyrighted by the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

1. Good air. Avoid badly ventilated, badly lighted, dusty, dirty, overheated, crowded, or damp rooms.

2. Avoid house dust. Breathing dust, notably house dust, often causes disease. Have no tacked down carpets and mattings. Have loose pieces of rugs, and clean them frequently outdoors. Use a hair broom for your floors and keep lower sashes closed while sweeping or dusting. Open upper sashes if possible. Never sweep rooms with a broom that raises dust.

3. Pure water. Drink pure water. Avoid water from shallow and unprotected wells and from ponds and streams. If in doubt boil the water. Avoid public drinking cups.

4. Safe milk and cream. Tuberculosis, typhoid fever and other diseases are often caused by drinking raw milk and raw cream. Get milk properly pasteurized, or home pasteurize it or simply scald it. All cream, including that used for ice cream and butter, should be properly pasteurized to be safe.

5. Sleep. Get enough sleep. Sleep with windows open, or, better still, outdoors.

6. Keep clean. Take a bath or sponge daily, and a warm bath, followed by a cold splash, plunge or shower, once or twice a week or oftener. Use soap freely. Wash your hands before handling food. Don't put fingers, money, paper or pencils in your mouth. Don't bite your finger nails.

7. Food. Don't eat food that has been exposed to flies or dust or touched by unclean hands. Raw fruit or vegetables so exposed should first be rinsed or washed thoroughly. Chew your food well.

8. Breathing and exercise. Breathe through your nose. Practice deep breathing. Sit and stand erect. Take plenty of outdoor exercise, but avoid excess in athletics; it may cause heart trouble. Don't eat or drink when overheated by exercise.

9. Care of the teeth. Clean your teeth in the morning and at bedtime; use a brush and prepared chalk. Teeth decay principally during the night. A quarter teaspoonful of milk of magnesia taken without water and kept in the mouth just before retiring will help to preserve the teeth. This applies even to young children. Teeth should be frequently inspected by a dentist.

10. Liquor and tobacco. Avoid tobacco and liquors. They are especially injurious to the young.

11. Don't neglect colds. Do not neglect coughs or colds. If you do not get well soon go to a doctor or dispensary for treatment. Never cough, sneeze or breathe into another person's face. Don't spit on floors or sidewalks.

12. Sunshine. Admit plenty of sunshine into your houses and into your lives. Cultivate cheerfulness and kindliness; it will help you to resist disease. Your mind acts on your body.

Hygiene helps the strong to remain strong, the weak to become strong, and, by preventing sickness, lengthens the average span of human life.

Just a Moment

Daily Strength and Cheer.

Compiled by John G. Quinlus, the Sunshine Man.

It was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ.—Luke ii, 26.

Our Father, Who art in heaven, reveal Thyself to us ere we are translated to Thee. We have said, "First death and then revelation." Thou sayest, "First revelation and then death." Let us come to the tomb through the garden, and forget the fading by reason of the flowers. Let us be led by the hand of life through the Valley of the Shadow of Death. Our departure shall be no severance if ere we go we shall meet with Thee.

"There is no want to them that fear Him."—Psa. xxxiv, 9.

Oh! Thou divinely beautiful, create within me the artist's fear. Let me tremble before Thy beauty—tremble with the impossibility of ever being worthy of Thee. I could not feel the meanness of my apparel if I had not seen Thy bright raiment. It is by the breath of Thy Spirit that I have learned with trembling what it is to be dead. My trembling is my triumph; my day of judgment is my year of jubilee, for my cry has come from the taste of Thy glory; there is no want in them that fear Thee.—George Matheson.

Lord of eternal truth and might!
Ruler of Nature's changing scheme!
Who dost bring forth the morning light,
And temper noon's effulgent beam,

Quench Thou the fires of hate and strife,
The wasting fever of the heart,
From perils guard our feeble life,
And to our souls Thy peace impart.

Her Little Joke.

Louisville Courier-Journal: "What's the difference," inquired the landlady, "between a turkey dinner and a mess of stewed prunes?"

"I don't know," said the solemn boarder.

"In that case," she continued, "I might as well save money and serve prunes."

Letters must not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

JINGOISM.

To the Editor of The Herald:

"When William Comes Marching Home" is the heading on the editorial page of a leading Chicago Sunday paper. The cartoonist illustrates and the editorial writer goes on and tells us that 5,000,000 Asiatics led by 100,000 Germans could enter Europe through the Balkans and Constantinople and destroy the so-called civilization in Europe.

Then these jingoes go on and tell us that we should be prepared to defend ourselves against a power that could destroy all the allied armies of Europe.

Fellow-workers, stop and think. How many shares of Bethlehem steel have you?

Have you any interests in Mexico that might need protection against a man that has conquered the country by its own resources?

Also, the members of congress were elected before preparedness became an issue, so the people have not had a chance to express themselves on that question. H. L. JOHNSON.

POEMS ASKED FOR..

The Herald acknowledges with thanks the receipt of the following poems: "The Pardon That Came Too Late" from Mrs. T. C. H. of Duluth, and "There's a Dear Spot in Ireland" from M. F. Underwood of Frazee, Minn.

"There's a Dear Spot in Ireland."

There's a dear spot in Ireland
I long to see,
'Tis the home of my birthplace,
'Tis heaven to me,
Where my poor widowed mother
Lived there all alone
With my brother and sister;
'Twas a bright, happy home,
Till the shadow of poverty
Darkened our door;
It was a shame that I left them,
Because we were poor.

Chorus:

Still my thoughts oft go back
To that dear little spot,
To my brother and sister
And the little thatched cot;
To my poor widowed mother,
I shall never see more;
'Twas a shame that I left them,
Because we were poor.

I'll never forget
On that bright, rosy morn,
When old Ireland I left,
How my poor heart did mourn;
My brother and sister
Took me by the hand
And bade me do right
When I left Ireland,
Then my blessed old mother
Said, "Be of good cheer,
Good-by, Michael, darling,"
"Farewell, mother dear."
And I bid them good-by
At our old cottage door,
Leaving Ireland and mother
Because we were poor.

Since leaving old Ireland
My poor mother's dead,
"God bless and protect him,"
Were the last words she said;
And the ring that my father gave she sent to me,
'Tis a far dearer prize
Than bright gems could ere be.
My brother and sister,
How I wish they were here,
I am longing to see them;
But they will come, never fear;
I've a neat little cot
On American shore,
Where happy we'll live, yes, although we are poor.

"A Pardon Came Too Late."

A fair-haired boy in a foreign land
At sunrise was to die.
In a prison cell he sat alone,
From his heart there came a sigh.
Deserted from the ranks they said,
The reason none could say;
They only knew the orders were
That he should die next day.

Chorus:

The volley was fired at sunrise,
Just after the break of day;
And while the echo lingered
A soul had passed away.
Into the arms of its Maker
And there to hear its fate,
A tear, a sigh, a sad good-by,
A pardon came, but was too late.

Around the campfire at evening,
The story then was told,
How a mother on her dying bed
Called her son so bold.
He hastened to obey her wish,
Was captured on the way;
She never saw her boy so fair,
He died at break of day.
When at last the truth was known,
His innocence was shown
To save him from an unjust fate,
A pardon came, but was too late.

DIVIDEND PASSED.

Street Railway Company Earnings Showed Decrease Until December.

The Duluth-Superior Traction company has passed the semi-annual dividend of 1 per cent on its $3,500,000 common stock, due Jan. 1.

In a statement to stockholders explaining this action, the directors said that it was necessitated through falling off in revenue owing to quiet business conditions during a great part of the year and also as the result of jitney competition. Hopes are now entertained that the ordinances regulating jitneys, which had been hid up through court proceedings, will be declared valid and the competition from that source therefore largely minimized. In the meantime the system's earnings have improved materially, increases over 1914 having been shown during December.

In 1911 and 1912 the Duluth-Superior Traction company paid quarterly dividends of 1¼ per cent on its common stock. These were reduced to 1 per cent quarterly in 1913, and that rate was paid up till April 1, 1915. The rate was then cut to 1 per cent semi-annually.

DULUTH IS LIKE ROSE IN FULL BLOOM BUT WITH WORM CONCEALED IN ITS PETALS

Writer in "What Would You Do for Duluth?" Contest Says City Needs Only an Awakening to Its Opportunities.

The "What Would You Do for Duluth?" contest is already meeting with a good response. Several essays answering this question have been received by The Herald contest editor. It looks as of there would be a large number to seek the three prizes offered. The contest is open to everybody, whether a Herald subscriber or not. Two of the first essays are published herewith.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In response to your invitation for suggestions as to what one would do for Duluth were he able, I would say that were it in my power I would have Duluth do it for herself. Having been a Duluthian for a number of years and still a resident of this city from choice, I have observed a great deal to lead me to believe that your call is timely and very pertinent to civic progress.

Few cities of this country are so favorably situated geographically, with reference to transportation facilities, climatic conditions for residential and manufacturing purposes, recreational sports and exercises, and yet withal, it seems to me that it may be compared to a full blown rose in all its beauty and perfume but with a worm secreted deep in the petals. It is not to knock or criticize the city in which we prefer to live, nor its citizens, but to my mind your call may be likened to the call for a physician in time of illness, to diagnose the trouble and prescribe remedial measures. He does not hesitate to name the trouble, be it small-pox or any virulent disease, but recognizing the seriousness of the case sets about combatting its further progress.

What I would do for Duluth if I could would be to imbue its citizens with a far greater degree of personal interest in all matters of a general public nature, removing as far as possible the self interest and apathy that seems to obtain so largely in everything that should receive the heartiest co-operation of our people. Were it not that "comparisons are odious" one might point to many progressive municipalities where natural conditions are not nearly as favorable as ours, yet by the community of interest and co-operation of the citizens those municipalities are progressing in the commercial and social world much more rapidly than is our own. This ned not and should not be for all that Duluth needs is to wake up, sit up and notice what other cities are doing, then go to it for ourselves. With this spirit manifested on every hand; with the interest and co-operation of our people there is nothing that Duluth may need or want that it cannot or will not have. All it has to do is to go after them.

Yours very truly, DULUTHIAN.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO FOR DULUTH?

What three things, if you had the power, would you do for Duluth, and how would you do them?

Write out your answer, LIMITING IT TO TWO HUNDRED WORDS, put your name and address at the top of the sheet, and send it to the Problem Editor of The Herald before Jan. 20. WRITE ONLY ON ONE SIDE OF THE SHEET.

For the best answer to this question The Herald will give a prize of $10.

For the second best answer The Herald will give a prize of $5.

For the third best answer The Herald will give a prize of $3.

From a Schoolboy.

To the Editor of The Herald:

If I had the money or power I would help provide for the sick and poor and the orphans and provide free bath houses for the poor. I would have swimming pools for the children in our Duluth schools and give the poor children free lunches. And I would see that nobody went hungry and without work so that people from other cities would say that the poor people in Duluth were the best provided for of any city.

BOYCOTT FOR BELLIGERENTS

Business Men of United States Vote to Oppose Wars.

Large Vote in Referendum to Chambers of Commerce.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Voting on the report of a special committee of the national chamber of commerce dealing with economic results of the war and American business, the principal commercial organizations of the country dissented but slightly to the proposition which received the indorsement of forty-four principal nations of the world at The Hague, in favor of the establishment of an international court.

It was the eleventh referendum which has been conducted by the chamber of commerce of the United States with the purpose of ascertaining, for the benefit of congress and the president, the business opinion prevailing throughout the country on questions of immediate importance. Two hundred and eighty-two commercial organizations, chambers of commerce, and boards of trade, located in forty states, the District of Columbia and Hawaii, filed ballots. The American chambers of commerce in Berlin and Milan were among those which voted. Each organization voting was entitled to from one to ten votes according to the size of its membership.

For Council of Conciliation.

There was also a large majority in favor of the special committee's recommendation that, for consideration of questions which arise between nations and which do not depend upon established rules or upon facts which can be determined by an international court, the United States should take the initiative in joining with other nations in establishing a council of conciliation.

Dissenting votes of sufficient number to attach significance to them were found only on the two propositions as to the methods recommended for enforcing peace. The first method, that of bringing economic pressure to bear upon any nations which resort to military measures without submitting their differences to an international court, was carried, however, by considerably more than the two-thirds vote necessary to bind the national chamber. According to the preliminary count, attested to by Elliot H. Goodwin, secretary of the chamber, 556 votes were cast in favor of this method and 157 opposed.

Many Oppose Military Force.

On the use of military force in the event that concerted economic pressure should not be sufficient, the dissenting vote was large enough to prevent the chamber from being committed in favor of this proposition, although the balance necessary was slight and may be obliterated in the official count. The by-laws require two-thirds of the votes cast to be in favor in order to commit the chamber. Seven hundred and one votes were cast on this recommendation, of which 452 were in favor while the two-thirds vote required 468.

Protection of Life on Seas.

The treatment of shipping in the course of the present war went as might have been expected with the largest vote of the country's commercial organizations in favor of stronger and better defined rules for the protection of life and property upon the high seas. Again there was practical unanimity in favor of the United States taking the initiative in establishing the principle of frequent interratical conferences for the progressive amendment of international law.

The Resulting Votes.

Following are the questions submitted:

The committee recommends action to secure conferences among neutral countries, on the initiative of the United States, for the purpose of defining and enunciating rules which will at all times give due protection of life and property upon the high seas: 763 in favor; 29 opposed.

The committee recommends that for the decision of questions which arise between nations and which can be resolved upon the application of established rules or upon a determination of facts the United States should take the initiative in joining with other nations in establishing an international court: 753 in favor; 21 opposed.

The committee recommends that for consideration of questions which arise between nations and which do not depend upon established rules or upon facts which can be determined by an international court the United States should take the initiative in joining with other nations in establishing a council of conciliation: 744 in favor; 28 opposed.

The committee recommends that the United States should take the initiative in joining with other nations in agreeing to bring concerted economic pressure to bear upon any nation or nations which resort to military measures without submitting their differences to an international court or a council of conciliation, and awaiting the decision of the court or the recommendation of the council, as circumstances make the more appropriate: 556 in favor; 157 opposed.

The committee recommends that the United States take the initiative in joining with other nations in agreeing to use concerted military force in the event that concerted economic pressure exercised by the signatory nations is not sufficient to compel nations which have proceeded to war to desist from military operations and submit the questions at issue to an international court or a council of conciliation, as circumstances make the more appropriate: 452 in favor; 249 opposed.

The committee recommends that the United States should take the initiative in establishing the principle of frequent international conferences at expressly stated intervals for the progressive amendment of international law: 769 in favor; 13 opposed.

Theater Manager Accused.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—Benjamin Blotsky, manager of the Starland theater here, was arraigned in the police court Monday, charged with the embezzlement of $200 of the funds of the theater. He entered a plea of not guilty and was released on a bond of $500. His preliminary hearing was set for Feb. 1.

Pioneer Druggist Dies.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—James P. Allen, probably the best known druggist in Minnesota and a resident of St. Paul since 1853, died Jan. 4 at his home at White Bear, 71 years old. His first illness in forty years, an attack of grip, came three weeks ago. Death came from heart disease. Mr. Allen was born in Kentucky. He opened a drug store at Seventh and Jackson streets in 1865 in the old International hotel and was one of the largest retail drug dealers in the state.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.—Advertisement.

WHAT DULUTH IS READING

The Herald's Weekly Review of New Books in the Public Library and the Books That Are Most in Demand.

The European war is bringing out not only a host of "war" poets but fiction writers as well. The medium of these new fiction writers is the war novel, which now promises to eclipse all other forms of literature both from the point of popularity and production. Only a few books of this form have yet been received at the public library, but the magazines are full of serials of this character, and the library readers are feasting daily on them.

Historical Novel Returns.

A few years ago the historical novels so flooded the market, the bookshelves and reading tables that the public taste became cloyed, and this form of literature was held in opprobrium by many. Perhaps this was largely due to the fact that the sources for historical plots had been somewhat overworked, the Civil and Revolutionary wars having furnished material for some odd thousands of these "patriotic" effusions. The old plot with the romantic young hero, the nurse girl, the accidental meeting in the hospital, the nursing of the wounded hero back to health, the overcoming of family prejudice and a few more familiar scenes and characters, gave a good share of these books a striking resemblance. No sooner did a historical novel appear than the plot could be outlined before the covers of the book were opened.

Old Friends Back Again.

The nurse girl and the romantic hero have been given a new lease of life, placed in new surroundings and on different battlefields, and are again making their bow to the reading public. If these characters are not met several thousand times during the next few years, it will doubtless be because the reader of current fiction has overlooked his opportunity.

The new books though are full of interesting characters and scenes. The new warfare is so different from the old and there are so many facts kept back by the censor that may be handled in an imaginative way, that every new story of importance will be welcomed. As soon as the war ends and writers are given more opportunity to travel in Europe, it is expected that a veritable deluge of novels and narratives will appear.

There are a few books on the shelves of the public library that are available to seekers of historical fiction and fact although the bulk of such matter is yet in magazine form. Among these books are "Europe Since 1815" by Hazen; "China Revolutionized" by J. S. Thompson, and others. It is expected that the library will have a number of the latest historical novels and narratives before very long. Many of these books will be published this spring and will be available for librarians. The war correspondents are now just getting their breath, ready to produce war literature in unlimited quantities.

OUTLOOK FOR YEAR GOOD

No Unfavorable Signs in Sight, Says Reserve Bank Report.

Improvements Are Noted in All Lines of Business.

Optimism is the keynote of the December report of John H. Rich, agent of the Ninth district Federal reserve bank at Minneapolis. He notes that improvement is shown in all lines of business, both commercial and industrial. He regards the prospects for the first part of this year at least as most alluring.

Summing the situation up the report says: "There are no unfavorable signs for the early part of 1916. December closed with business at or above normal and with substantial evidences of prosperity throughout every portion of this district. Agriculture has profited largely, upon the whole, from the crop year of 1915, and prices have been favorable. Local business has been quick to reflect the disbursements for the purchase of farm products, and trade and collections during the month were excellent. Holiday business gave evidence of a reasonable conservatism on the part of purchasers. There was little evidence of extravagance and merchandisers report that the disposition of buyers was to purchase economically. Trade as a whole was better than a year ago and the aggregate of holiday buying showed good increases in all lines. There is no evidence that the substantial and conservative characteristics shown by the month's course of trade will not continue. The keenest observers look for caution in investments and extensions, but they predict for at least the first half of the new year a considerable prosperity as the accompaniment of good business and a healthy condition in all lines of activity.

Lumber Trade Picks Up.

"Lumber reflects the underlying conditions better than any single line. The depression of the year has passed, price advances have been made in response to a considerably quickened demand and both at retail yards and at the mills there is a better condition of activity than has existed for a year. The recovery, while encouraging, has not been so notable as in Pacific coast territory, but, upon the other hand, the lumber industry in this district did not suffer the same acute depression. While expert observers still express themselves with caution, they admit that rapid progress is being made over the entire district toward brisk business and healthy conditions.

"Copper production in the district was surprisingly large during 1915, the Northern Michigan mines producing 256,000,000 pounds of copper, or an increase for the year of 30,000,000 pounds. Production for 1916 is estimated at 280,000,000 pounds.

"Montana's copper production adds to these figures 275,000,000 pounds and has increased for the year 42,000,000 pounds.

"Iron ore production on the Northern Minnesota ranges resulted in shipments to the close of navigation of 32,423,154 tons, as against 23,288,301 tons in 1914.

"Duluth-Superior (lake) coal receipts show a decrease of 12 per cent. Shipments totaled 8,843,832 tons, of which 6,656,206 tons were soft coal and the remainder hard coal.

"Building operations in the larger cities follow the Minneapolis figures, which give an increase of $1,124,000 for the year. Construction work of all kinds has made a good recovery and operations during the closing months of 1915 were sufficient to bring the totals up to a point which provided good increases over the preceding year."

WILL CAMPAIGN TO PROMOTE GARDENS

Homecroft Committee to Turn Waste Lots to Use Next Summer.

The homecroft committee of the Duluth Commercial club at a meeting yesterday afternoon determined to try to get every owner of a vacant lot in the city to help beautify the city next summer by putting the lot to use in the way of gardening rather than permitting it to be the receptacle and lodging place of old cans and rubbish. A canvass of these owners will be conducted, and at least an attempt will be made to get their pledges in this regard.

It is hoped by the members of the committee, that even if the owners themselves will not utilize these waste spaces for gardens they will permit others who are so inclined to do so. In this way, it is pointed out, not only will the lots be put to use and the rubbish obections be eliminated, but peope living close to the lots who have no garden space of their own or who wish to increase what they have, may be permitted to use the vacant lots for that purpose where owners do not wish to work the lots themselves.

A general campaign will be conducted in the spring by the members of the committee among owners of gardens, to promote home gardening during the coming summer, and copies of the booklet, "Duluth Garden Primer," by A. H. Crassweller, will be distributed liberally. School pupils will be asked to take them home and use their contents as pointers in gardening. Mr. Crassweller has included in his booklet the fundamental information in the raising of common garden vegetables, flowers and shrubs, and deals with the soil and temperatures effective in Duluth.

STEAMER GEELONG SUNK IN COLLISION

London, Jan. 5.—The Peninsular & Oriental Steamship company issued a statement yesterday that the steamer Geelong was sunk in a collision with the steamer Bonvilston.

Sinking of the Geelong was reported last night without mention being made of the cause of her loss. No lives were lost when she went down.

European war demands have caused a shortage in the world's supply of materials used in the manufacture of White Tread Tires.

Our supply of the required materials assures the greater portion of our 1916 season's output of tires being furnished with White Treads.

SEVERE COLD ON THE WAY

Mercury Will Go to 20 Below Zero, Says Mr. Richardson.

Much Colder on Ranges; Temperature Will Rise Thursday.

Without doubt, today has been the coldest this winter, and it is going to get still colder.

Between 7 and 10 o'clock this morning the thermometer had dropped 11 degrees, and H. W. Richardson said at the latter hour that it is due to drop 10 or more degrees by tonight.

At 7 o'clock this morning the mercury stood at 1 deg. above zero. At 10 o'clock it had slid to 10 deg. below, at 1 p. m. it was 13 deg. below, and was still slipping.

At the former hour the wind was blowing at a velocity of thirty-six miles an hour; at 10 o'clock it was blowing at twenty-eight miles an hour. During the night the wind assumed a gait of forty-two miles an hour. There will be wind all day but no snowfall.

"By tonight," said Mr. Richardson this afternoon, "the temperature here will reach 20 or more deg. below zero, and on the ranges and inland will probably go as low as 30 deg. below. It will stay cold during the night, but tomorrow will begin to diminish, returning to normal conditions."

The coldest weather previously recorded this season was on Dec. 24, when the thermometer registered 9 deg. below zero, and on New Year's day it went to 7 deg. below.

At any rate, with no snow and a diminishing wind, Duluth will be spared a blizzard in connection with the drop in temperature.

Fifteen Below at Brainerd.

Brainerd, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The severest cold of the winter prevails here today. Thermometers registered 15 deg. below this morning and the wind is blowing a gale. So far there has been no tie-ups of the railroads.

Winter Grips Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first touch of real winter came this morning when a north wind blew a gale with the temperature 16 deg. below zero. Lack of loose snow prevented an old-time blizzard. There is no suffering, as the people are all prepared and practically no calls for city aid have been made.

committee of one hundred, asking the government for a provincial referendum sending out word to the liquor interests that the fight against the bars would under no consideration be dropped.

The election was carried on with the most complete system on both sides and the total vote was far beyond expectations. The local optionists received twice the number of votes polled four years ago in the first local option campaign. The liquor vote was just about the same. Great jubilation reigned among them last evening over saving the day. The new council is composed of A. Woodside, Gibbon, Fallis, Wilson, Sid Smith, A. L. Smith, Alexander Blaquier Boldue, Rod Young. Mayor Cowan was elected by acclamation.

Defeat Local Option.

Fort William, Ont., Jan. 5.—The local option by-law was defeated here by 253 straight majority, each of four city wards registering a decisive majority against the measure. The vote stood, for, 1,409; against, 1,662; majority against, 253.

BOMBARDMENT OF CAMP OF ALLIES

Maj. Metaxas and a troop of Greek cavalry returning from exercise.

Population Excited.

"Pieces of spent shells began to drop with frightful velocity, one even piercing two floors of a tram station and burying itself in the ground cellar. The population, not understanding what it was all about, were greatly excited. Toward noon a fourth aeroplane arrived, following exactly the same course as the others, though flying lower. The black maltese crosses were plainly visible on its wings. My wife and I watched its flight from the balcony of our house.

"Riding home along King George street towards tea time I was astounded to see French soldiers and a dense crowd of onlookers surrounding the German consulate. Further along the street other consulates presented the same sight. The consuls were hustled through the crowd, taken to the headquarters of the French commander, Gen. Sarrail, cross-examined and then put aboard the battleship Patrie to the accompaniment throughout of the stares and comments of curious crowds."

Asked whether he would return to Saloniki, the prince replied: "Of course I shall. Why shouldn't I? Despite appearances Saloniki is still Greek."

CHARGES AGAINST ADMINISTRATION

origin "in that ungenerous trait of the human mind which makes it prone to attribute unworthy motives to redoubtable rivals and particularly political antagonists."

Resort to Sophistry.

"The writer," added the report, "whose eminence was naturally calculated to give weight to his utterance, finding himself without any basis, even of a hearsay character, for his slanderous attack upon the highest officer of his government, simply resorted to a palpable sophistry to escape the responsibility for the assertion he had made."

While the committee found no evidence to indicate that the president or secretary harbored any purpose to buy interned ships, the majority held that it was not difficult to conceive of reasons consistent with the most exalted motives that might induce the president to refrain from a public declaration that belligerents' ships would not be bought. "Such an action," said the report, "would rightly be construed as an abandonment of our rights, which our nation has vigorously maintained, to acquire merchant ships by bona fide purchase, though a state of war exists involving the nation under whose flag they previously sailed."

Minority Report.

Senator Sutherland presented the minority report for himself and Senator Penrose. "We do not concur," it said, "insofar as the report defends the bill itself nor insofar as it insists there would be no impropriety in the purchase of the belligerents' idle ships. We believe the bill a thoroughly bad piece of legislation and are certain that to have purchased the boats now seeking security in American harbors would have developed serious trouble for the United States."

The committee's investigation was authorized by a resolution offered by Senator Burton and an amendment by Senator Williams, directing the inquiry as to whether the so-called shipping trust had maintained a lobby against the bill.

With reference to criticism of Col. Roosevelt the minority said: "We find ourselves unable to agree with the strictures with reference to ex-President Roosevelt."

MANY MORE AVAILABLE

the army. Instead of starring being an assistance, it has been a distinct hindrance to the canvass.

"More especially is this so in the rural and semi-rural areas, owing to the fact that it was known before registration day what branch of the agricultural industry would be starred, with the result that many men who had no right to do so claimed to come under these particular headings. The sense of unfairness thus created and the inequality of treatment to farmers has been most detrimental in these areas. The farmer himself is not a starred man, but there are numberless cases of his sons and laborers being starred as cowmen, horsemen, etc., though in many instances it is known they are not really so engaged.

"It is essential that the starred list should be carefully investigated and in cases of misdescription the star removed and the man made available for military service. This applies to starred men in all industries.

Another Obstacle.

"The issue during the process of the canvass of lists of trades which were to be considered 'reserved occupations' has also proven an obstacle. I recognize it was essential that such lists should be issued, but the fact remains that trades other than those mentioned in those lists have been applying to be included and the men engaged in those trades are expecting to be treated in the same way as the starred men and have been deterred from coming forward.

"Many men also who would willingly serve find themselves barred from doing so by domestic, financial and business obligations. This especially applies to professional and commercial men, who find difficulties in meeting such obligations as the payment of rent, insurance premiums, interest on loans connected with their business and provisions for their family, due to the fact that their income is entirely dependent on their individual efforts and ceases when they join the colors, separation and dependence allowances being quite inadequate to meet these obligations. This applies not only to married men, but also to single men in many cases."

GREEK SHIP STILL CALLING FOR HELP

Steamship United States Actively Searching for the Thessaloniki.

New York, Jan. 5.—The Greek steamer Thessaloniki was still afloat early today and sending urgent calls for help. A wireless message received by the Scandinavian-American line from Capt. Geotsche of the steamship United States, brought this information and also denied a belief that the crippled liner had been entirely abandoned and that the captain and crew had been picked up by the United States.

Capt. Goetsche's message said:

"We have searched with full speed all night over vast areas around the five positions eighty miles apart without result, yet at 7 a. m. I will continue the search. Doing my best. The captain of the Thessaloniki sends urgent messages claiming that his engine and boiler rooms and bunkers are flooded with only little provisions left."

The "five positions" spoken of in this message are those given by the Thessaloniki in the various wireless messages she has sent since she was cast adrift by the breaking of the tow line by which the steamship Patris was trying to haul her to port.

COUNTY DOES LESS "LAWING"

Clerk's Report Shows Marked Decrease in Litigation During 1915.

Fewer Civil, Criminal and Compensation Actions Are Filed.

Litigation in the courts of St. Louis county experienced a slight slump in 1915 as compared with the previous year, according to figures obtainable yesterday afternoon at the office of J. P. Johnson, clerk of the district court. Statistics compiled in his office show that fewer cases were filed for record during 1915 than in 1914.

Last year, 4,192 cases of various descriptions and classifications were docketed and indexed by the clerk of the court as compared with 4,728 for the year 1914. A table showing the comparison follows:

	1915.	1914.
Civil actions	1,692	1,844
Compensation cases	1,649	2,086
Criminal actions	238	239
Juvenile court cases	164	166
Torrens registrations	130	119
Coroner's cases	319	304
	4,192	4,728

Up to Jan. 1, 1916, 36,200 civil actions had been docketed by the court, covering a period extending over several years.

Decrease in Fees.

The annual report of the clerk for the work of his office for the year 1915 shows that during the last twelve months the total amount collected in fees was $16,192.96, as against $21,900.41 collected during the previous year, or a decrease of $5,707.45.

The falling off in the receipts of the office is largely attributed to legislation which was passed at the 1915 session reducing filing fees for compensation cases from $2 to 25 cents. There was also a decrease in the amounts received in fines and for marriage licenses. There was a slight gain in the number of marriage licenses taken out in Duluth this year, but this was more than offset by a decrease in the number of wedding permits granted in the range office of the district court clerk.

The report of fees and money collected by the clerk for the year 1915 is as follows:

Certificates	$ 1,552.00
Sundries	230.34
Civil cases	8,196.24
Fines	2,094.53
Criminal cases	91.05
Marriage licenses	3,770.00
Revenue stamps	258.80
	$16,192.96

Work done free of charge for St. Louis county by the clerk's office would have earned the following amounts if charges had been made:

Sundries	$1,162.10
Civil cases	2,909.99
Criminal cases	2,014.35
	$6,086.44

Salaries for the clerk's office for the year amounted to $19,113.28.

SETTLEMENT DUE IN BUTTE-DULUTH

Capt. Wolvin Momentarily Expects Word; Increasing Capacity.

Capt. A. B. Wolvin, who has just returned from Butte, Mont., where he has been on business in connection with the holdings of ore properties in which he is interested, is momentarily expecting word from Butte concerning the disposition in court of a proposal recently made in connection with the Butte-Duluth receivership.

Recently Oscar Roe, a well-known mining man, formerly of this section and now a big holder in Butte properties, made a proposition to the Butte-Duluth people in connection with the receivership of that company, a receivership which was wholly friendly, and the matter was submitted to the court for approval.

Capt. Wolvin said today that the matter was to be taken up with the court Monday or yesterday, and he is expecting word as to the final disposition.

"The stockholders, bondholders and other creditors were almost unanimously in favor of Mr. Roe's proposal," said Capt. Wolvin, "and it does not seem to me that anything will interfere with progress now.

"Two weeks ago, the installation of the necessary machinery to increase the mill capacity on the Butte-Duluth property to 750 tons was begun, and good progress is being made.

"With the improved conditions and increased demand for copper, we expect that the Butte-Duluth stockholders will be much benefited in a very short time."

SILBERSTEIN HAS CHANGED HIS MIND

Firemen Will Not Receive Salary Raises They Expected.

Commissioner Silberstein, head of the safety division, has changed his mind.

Joseph Randall, chief of the fire department for the last eight years, the nine captains and ten lieutenants of the various stations and about twenty-five truckmen and pipemen will not receive any salary raises this year.

Last Thursday Commissioner Silberstein announced that a yearly raise of $300 would be given Fire Chief Randall on Jan. 1, in addition to slight increases for about forty-five other members of the fire department. He said he would present his list to Commissioner Voss, finance head, to be included in the annual salary schedule adopted by the council about this time each year.

This morning the safety head declared that the finances of the fire department are very low, as a result of the expenditure of $19,000 during 1915 for new fire apparatus, and that salary increases for 1916 are impossible. He will not recommend the raises he announced last week, he said this morning.

Regarding the proposed increases for the police department, Commissioner Silberstein said that the patrolmen will all be given a raise, but no definite settlement has yet been made. Within a day or two, he said, he will decide whether the men are to receive an increase of $2.50 a month, beginning Jan. 1, or $5 a month after July 1. About sixty-five patrolmen will be affected by the proposed salary increase.

DRINK HOT TEA FOR A BAD COLD

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Advertisement.

18 POUNDS OF BLOOD

is the average quantity in a healthy adult, but it is the quality of the blood that determines our strength to resist sickness. With weak blood we find cold hands and chilly feet; in children an aversion to study, and in adults rheumatic tendencies.

In changing seasons get abundant fresh air and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals, because Scott's Emulsion is a rich blood-food that will increase both quantity and quality of the blood while it warms the body and helps carry off the impurities.

When multitudes of people are today taking Scott's Emulsion to avert winter sickness, and are giving it to their children, it is careless to neglect its benefits. Look out for substitutes.

FIRST PAYMENT ON CITY HALL SITE

Council and County Board Will Hold Another Meeting.

On Jan. 24 members of the city council and the St. Louis county board will hold a second meeting at the courthouse and make final arrangements for the first payment on the new city hall site and the transfer of the city's share in the work farm, joint partnership in which has been dissolved.

A joint conference of the city and county officials was held yesterday afternoon when the first steps toward the acquisition of the site were taken. A discussion on the site and the work farm lasted for nearly an hour, after which Alex Fraser, chairman of the board, appointed Commissioners O'Neil, Kauppi and Little on a committee to represent the county in all its transactions with the city.

Will Draw Up Contract.

As the next meeting of the county board will be held on Monday afternoon, Jan. 24, Mayor Prince arranged for a second conference at that time, when the final draft of the contract for the city hall site will be drawn up and the proper officials authorized to sign it. In addition, disposition of the city's share in the work farm will also be definitely settled at that time, Mayor Prince announced this morning.

On Feb. 5 the city will receive a check for $12,000 from the Shriners as the first payment on the old armory and this money will be turned over to the county and the contract then signed. Part of the work farm money, which will approximate $25,000, will also be given to the county, the remainder going toward the purchase of a site and for the erection of a municipal garage at Twentieth avenue east and London road.

"We have taken the first step toward the acquisition of our city hall site," said Mayor Prince this morning, "and within a short time will sign up a contract for the property. This means that we are getting nearer to the erection of a new city hall."

Local business men who have investigated the proposition have learned that the Soo railroad officials do not look with favor upon the scheme, because of the cost and fear that insufficient business would be maintained on the line to make it a paying proposition.

GRANDMOTHER SAYS:

For Chest Colds, Sore Throat, Rheumatism and Sprains—

You have taken the old time prescription—goose oil and turpentine that I always used, and mixed them up with your new medicines—menthol, lanoline, amber oil, eucalyptus oil and mustard and now call it

GOOS-OLENE

My old prescription was good—but with the new Goos-olene by rubbing over the throat and chest and covering with a hot cloth you quickly relieve the inflammation of the internal parts. You are also breathing the fumes of the Eucalyptus Oil (the great germ destroyer) which has a soothing effect on the membrane of the nose and throat. Goos-olene is so handy to use—just squeeze out of the tube enough each time—the rest keeps strong and pure in the sealed tube until needed.

BABY GOOS-OLENE

Is made for the congestions and colds of the little ones. By leaving out the mustard it relieves without any smarting or burning—made especially for the delicate skin of the baby or young children. Always use Baby Goos-olene for the younger, and Goos-olene (which is stronger) for the older and adults. At all drug stores in 25c and 50c tubes.

OBJECT TO PLAT DEMAND

Real Estate Exchange Will Oppose Commercial Club Resolution.

Declares Preliminary Grading Impractical; Will Raise Public Affairs Fund.

At its meeting yesterday afternoon, the Duluth Real Estate exchange took steps to oppose the proposed resolution of the street improvements committee of the Duluth Commercial club, as being impractical in the present form. The exchange appointed a committee to prepare a report in opposition, to be submitted at the next meeting of the public affairs committee of the club.

The resolution of the street improvements committee advocates that the city commissioners pass an ordinance making certain demands of plat owners, which the real estate men say cannot well be met. The suggestion is that when a piece of property is platted for sale as building sites, street and sewer grades must at once be established to the satisfaction of the city authorities. At the meeting yesterday, during the discussion of the matter, the real estate men agreed that this would be all right in the case of platting property adjoining other established property, for then the grades of streets and sewers could be adjusted and determined; and they even advocated that in such cases, such provision should be enforced. But they declared that in the platting of property away from other established property, such grading would be impractical and virtually impossible. It was also declared that under the present laws of the city, the officials are empowered to enforce all necessary requirements in platting.

Warm Discussion Expected.

The matter came up at the recent meeting of the public affairs committee, but was put over one month because of the failure of the real estate exchange to take action, the real estate men present at the meeting when the resolution was introduced having asked that they be allowed time for discussion in the exchange meeting. It is likely that a warm fight will develop over this matter at the next meeting of the public affairs committee.

The real estate exchange yesterday appointed a committee to raise funds to aid the work of the public affairs committee of the Commercial club. The exchange has been a liberal contributor ever since the public affairs committee was organized, but the expenses of the committee have increased with its growing importance and wider scope of work, and the exchange, knowing that more money is needed, proposed to increase its contribution to the public affairs fund. The committee appointed yesterday to do this work consists of W. C. Sargent, chairman, F. G. Kreidler and R. M. Hunter.

Plans for a publicity campaign, which the exchange is starting this week, were discussed, following a detailed explanation by A. J. Frey, secretary of the exchange, and received the indorsement of the members. Mr. Frey explained that the plan embraces the purchase of considerable newspaper advertising space, in conjunction with which there will be news stories, special articles and interviews.

The meeting yesterday was well attended, and followed a luncheon at the Commercial club. J. E. Cooley, president of the exchange, was in the chair.

POLISH FUND GROWS SLOWLY

Total of $52 Has Been Subscribed for War Sufferers.

Interest in the fund for Polish war sufferers is still in evidence, and one dollar more was received by The Herald this morning. This brings the amount received at this office up to $52.

A. Grabarklewicz said this morning that he had not heard from all the members of the Polish relief committee and did not know if any further contributions had been received. Although the conditions in the Polish war zone are said to be the most appalling and horrible of any in Europe, details are lacking because of the inability of the Poles to tell their story to the world. Poland has been the battlefield of the Austrians, Germans and Russians and millions of soldiers have overrun that land. People are living in dugouts and deserted trenches, eating roots to sustain life. Every dollar contributed to this fund goes to the Red Cross, which is able to send relief with little cost so that for every dollar spent, almost one hundred cents in relief reaches the war victims.

The fund received by The Herald follows:

NO FAILURES IN WORLD SCHOOL, SAYS THEOSOPHIST

"The Riddle of Destiny" was the title of the first lecture of a series delivered last night in the Little theater by Irving S. Cooper, the national lecturer of the Theosophical society. During the course of his address Mr. Cooper referred several times to reincarnation, and stated that thoughtful people were beginning to realize more and more that this belief was necessary if men are ever to see how the justice of the Divine is at work in the world.

"We measure life by false standards, by pleasure and pain and not by growth," said the lecturer. "If life is pleasant we bless destiny, if unpleasant, we curse it, never considering in either case whether we grow through the experiences which come. Destiny is nature's plan of education; she is not trying to please, to kill time, to furnish a continual round of pleasure; she is endeavoring to teach us. That is why we must work, endure hardships, struggle for what we get. Rugged lessons truly, but wonderfully effective in their results, for such teaching as we receive on earth produces strong men and women, not weaklings. Even though many lives on earth are spent in learning the lessons, they are eventually mastered, for in this world-school there are no failures."

Mr. Cooper lectures tonight at 8 o'clock in the Little theater on "The Living Universe." The lecture is free and the public cordially invited.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT QUEEN DIDO?

Maybe you are "up" on mythology or maybe you aren't. Anyway you probably have heard of the ancient queen and a little of her history. But now is your chance to get a bit of light on her and her character, and without the trouble of hunting up your old Virgil.

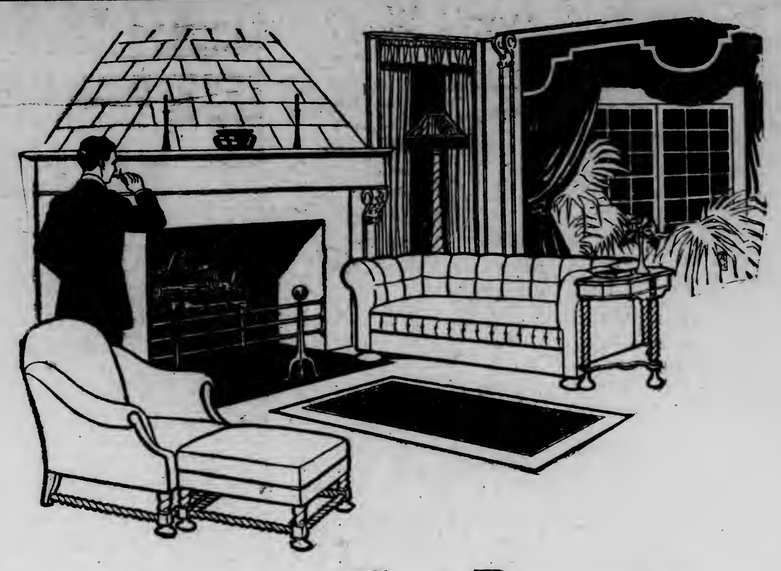

"A Lowbrow on Olympus" will tell you a most interesting story about Dido, and will show you how the lady outwitted a mere man who thought to curb her ambitions and her progress.

Dido wasn't a suffragette in the sense of being militant. When she was told in a polite way that she couldn't have what she wanted, she smiled and said that was all right—and then she took the refuser's own statement and made it all come out just the way she wanted it to.

Don't fail to read "A Lowbrow on Olympus" in The Herald next Saturday. It will be included in a page of matter by Herbert Kaufman, and it will tell the story of Dido's success in an interesting, rythmical and effective fashion.

And when you have read about Dido, go on and read the rest of the page. You'll find it's got "the punch."

DUNNE OF ILLINOIS ON SUPREME BENCH?

Governor's Name Will Be Presented to the President.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Governor Dunne of Illinois has been suggested as the successor to the late Justice Lamar. The governor, who came up from Springfield to inspect state institutions here, and Senator Lewis refused to discuss this possibility of the executive's nomination.

However, it is learned that steps have been taken by some of the governor's friends that are likely to result in the presentation of his name to the president.

Men who were in Washington during the meeting of the Democratic national committee suggested that Governor Dunne's friends could rely on the cooperation of Roger C. Sullivan, if his support were needed in behalf of the governor for the associate justiceship.

As soon as the Dunne talk began to spread through the political ranks, gossip turned as to what would happen should the governor become President Wilson's choice.

Would Settle State Race.

His appointment would eliminate him as a candidate for renomination as governor and leave the Democratic field open, possibly crystallizing the contest to a fight between Former Mayor Harrison and Justice Charles C. Craig of the Illinois supreme court, the former having the backing of the Dunne-Harrison Democrats and Justice Craig carrying the Sullivan colors.

CO-OPERATION URGED.

Chief Theme Discussed at State Gathering of Monument Dealers.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—Greater cooperation in the business of marking graves was advocated today by speakers at the ninth annual convention of the Minnesota Retail Monument Dealers' association. Tombstone dealers from all parts of the state were present to discuss matters ranging from price discrimination to the European war's effect upon the monument business.

At the morning session today the delegates held an open meeting with manufacturers and wholesalers, after which addresses were delivered by John H. Anderson of Austin and E. Heartel of Fairmont. The latter told of the progress of the association in the last few years and declared that it had been a wonderful aid to the retail dealer.

O. B. Holden of Cherokee, Iowa, president of the national organization, was on the program for an address at the afternoon session.

It was expected that John J. Schaaf of St. Paul would be re-elected president of the state association.

FIND WOMAN'S FROZEN BODY; WAS PROBABLY MURDERED

The body of Amanda Maki, aged 40, was found in a small shack on lower Banks avenue, near Third street, frozen stiff, this morning. I. Goldberg, a glass setter, who had been sent to the house to replace a broken light, found the body when entering the room.

Police officials are working on a theory that the woman was murdered. The room was a wreck, indicating that a fight had taken place. One of the objects was a broken chair, which is believed to have been used to hit the woman over the head. A mark on the head is believed to indicate this. Until the body thaws out, enabling the officials to make a thorough examination, the exact cause of death cannot be determined.

The woman was well known to the police, having on several occasions figured in police court cases. A man with whom she is said to have been living, is beign sought by the police.

Fewer Arrests in 1915.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF POLICE COURT

AFFAIR WAS "NOOTRAL."

Irishmen Unable to Account for Seaman's Loss of $11.

Three Irishmen and a German had a convivial little party in a Superior cafe yesterday, and during the evening one of the four lost $11.

Police at once began looking for the three Hibernians, and later in the evening Patrolman W. Monahan picked up Charles McEchran, 37, and Randall McEchran, 40, his brother. The third Irishman has disappeared.

Superior detectives arrived here this morning and returned to the city across the bay with their two prisoners, both of whom vigorously protested that they were innocent.

"'Twas a strictly nootral affair," said one of them. "I don't know where Dutchy's $11 went to."

SEVEN DAYS TO SOBER UP.

Sailor Loses "Roll" and Is Arrested for Drunkenness.

Conrad Niemi, 3, a sailor, was asleep in his room at the Saratoga hotel, 212 West Superior street, last night, when Jack Brant, 24, a bartender, entered.

Jack entertained himself awhile, and finally Conrad awoke. The hotel clerk smelled a rat when he saw the bartender prowling about the hall, and called Sergt. A. V. Youngberg.

"How much money have you?" Youngberg asked Niemi when he reached the room.

"Twenty-five dollars,' was the sailor's reply.

A search revealed $1.39, and the sergeant took both men to headquarters.

Brant was a stranger around the hotel, and so he was held as a petit larceny suspect. Niemi was fined $7, in default of which he will spend seven days at the work farm for drunkenness.

COUNTRY GIRLS ARE LURED BY CITY LIFE

The quiet home life in the country or village and the lure of the city lights bring many a girl to grief, according to Mrs. Agnes L. Atwood, head of the woman's department of the Minnesota State Free Employment agency.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Atwood was confronted with a pitiable case of a girl who had found home life unpleasant and had become destitute in Duluth after running away from home.

"I am without money and don't know where to go, but I can do housework," she told Mrs. Atwood.

Such cases are common, Mrs. Atwood says, but her department has no funds to care for them. In most cases all she can do is to send them to the matron of the police department or to Frank Hicks, superintendent of the public welfare department. The latter is often able to furnish transportation to the girls to return home.

BALL MAY BE REINSTATED.

Park Pointers Want Protection of Fire Car Restored.

George A. Ball, who was in charge of the fire car at Park Point up to Jan. 1, may be reinstated.

This morning a delegation of Park Point residents appealed to Commissioner Silberstein to reinstate Mr. Ball, claiming that the services of a person in charge of the fire car are necessary for the protection of dwellings along the Point. The safety head arranged with Fire Chief Randall to answer all calls across the bridge in the future, as the new pavement now permits traffic. It was decided to do away with the fire car altogether, but the residents there say that it is needed, especially when the fire department is unable to get across the bridge in time.

Commissioner Silberstein promised to take the matter up with Fire Chief Randall. The city paid Mr. Ball $25 a month for his services.

MUST OPERATE UNDER NEW PENSION LAW

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5.—Counties must operate under the mothers' pension law even though no specific appropriation was made for carrying the law into effect, according to the opinion of Attorney General W. C. Owen to the state board of control today. The board called the attention of the attorney general's office to the fact that a number of counties failed to make appropriations for this matter at their annual meeting.

"If the money needed to furnish this relief is not provided in advance the county simply goes into debt therefor to those who furnish such relief," says the opinion.

FIREMEN STALLED IN SNOW; FLAMES CONSUME HOUSE

Snowbound in drifts on Winona street, firemen fought desperately this morning in an attempt to reach the residence of H. C. Foster at 436 Red Wing street, but were delayed so long that the place was a total loss.

Assistant Fire Chief Wilson estimated the loss at $2,500 on the house and about $700 on its contents. Members of the family escaped to homes of the neighbors and suffered but little from exposure.

The blaze started near the base of the chimney, which was defective, according to Mr. Foster. Firemen were unable to assign any other cause for the fire, stating that the furnace probably became overheated.

An alarm was answered by a triple combination truck from Engine Company No. 4. The Foster home is some distance from Woodland avenue, and the firemen were compelled to make a detour of several blocks, as Red Wing street is not cut through to the main avenue.

Deep drifts were encountered on Winona street, where traffic is light, and the heavy truck was unable to make much progress, although much better time was made than possible with horse-drawn apparatus.

This is the first case of total loss from a blaze in several months.

WILL ENCOURAGE MANUAL TRAINING

County Will Help Rural Schools in Buying Equipment.

Willingness to co-operate with the boys' and girls' clubs in the rural schools that wish to secure a modest equipment for manual training has been assured by the county board of education, according to an announcement made by N. A. Young, county superintendent of schools and clerk of the county board.

A list of tools of excellent quality has been arranged. These, with a cabinet and bench, will be furnished to any school of the unorganized or county district that shows enough interest to raise $10 towards the cost. The cost to the county is $25.50 for each set. The county board of education will pay the remainder.

DISCONTINUE WORK ON FILLS

Removal of Bridges Will Be Undertaken in Spring.

Because of the cold and deep frost in the ground work on making fills underneath the wooden bridges will be discontinued for the winter, according to an announcement made today by Commissioner Farrell, head of the works division.

"It is too expensive to go ahead with this work, as the frost is too deep in the ground," he said this morning, "and work has been ordered stopped until next spring.

"During the winter men collecting ashes will dump them underneath the bridges, thus saving the long haul to the dump and at the same time help complete the fills. Only clean ashes will be permitted under the bridges."

Three weeks ago the council authorized Commissioner Farrell to purchase a locomotive and eight dump cars for making the fills, but the equipment has been put away for the winter. It will be used early in the spring in filling underneath the bridge at Fifth avenue east and Tenth street, after which work will begin on the Oneota bridge at Fortieth avenue west. It is the commissioner's plan to remove about ten wooden bridges next year.

The fill underneath the Lincoln park bridge has been completed and early in the spring work will begin on an artistic concrete culvert that is to be built over Miller's creek. This bridge will cost approximately $5,000.

An ordinance appropriating $20,000 for this bridge work will come up for passage at the council meeting next Monday.

COMMISSION WILL INVESTIGATE PRICES

Washington, Jan. 5.—Investigation of the rise in the price of gasoline will be left to the Federal trade commission and not undertaken at the present time by the department of justice. Officials pointed out today that the department of justice has no power to examine witnesses under oath unless it has brought suit.

The trade commission has such power and already has an investigation under way. If the commission develops violation of law, the prosecution would be undertaken by the department of justice.

Carranza Reorganization.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Reorganization of Gen. Carranza's official family is the object of a conference at Queretaro to which the general has invited Gens. Obregon and Gonzales, his chief military commanders, several civil officials and Juan Sarches Azcona, formerly private secretary to President Madero. It is regarded as possible that the portfolio of foreign affairs may be offered to Sanchez Azcona.

FIRST VACATION IN TWO YEARS

With Court Controversy Settled, Judge Cutting Takes Rest.

Judge Franklin H. Cutting of Duluth's municipal court started on his first vacation in two years today, accompanied by Mrs. Cutting. He will go south from Chicago, stopping off at Chattanooga, Tenn., and then going on to Tampa, Fla., Key West, Havana and other points. They will be gone a month or more.

With the exception of four days last month, when the judge attended the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of the Northwest at St. Paul, this will be his first outing in a long time.

Every day of the year excepting Sundays, and including Christmas, New Years, Fourth of July and Thanksgiving, the judge has presided over the police "grist" and administered justice so that prisoners would not have to stay in jail over the holidays, unless they were found guilty.

It is customary for senior judges of municipal court to take the month of August. In the civil room there also is no court on Saturdays. This allows the senior magistrate about two months and a half out of each year.

Friends of Judge Cutting tried to prevail upon him to take a vacation earlier in the year, as they were afraid he would overwork, but during the Windom-Smallwood controversy he remained in municipal court, doing the work of both judges on many occasions.

During his absence Judge Harry Lanners of the West Duluth court will assist Judge Smallwood at the downtown court.

OBITUARY

Maj.-Gen. Henry Bascom Smith, who helped organize the Federal secret service department in the Civil war, died in New York Jan. 3. He was chief of the service under Gen. Lew Wallace from 1862 to 1865. He was 74 years old. When the attempt was made upon the life of Secretary Seward, Mr. Smith was assigned to the case and found and arrested Louis Paine, who was alleged to have committed the crime. In 1864 Smith was also one of those who discovered the conspiracy against President Lincoln and uncovered the election frauds in the army at Baltimore. After the war, Maj. Smith resigned from the secret service and entered the paper manufacturing business in New York.

Rt. Rev. James Stariha, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church in Red Wing in the early days and later vicar general of St. Paul, died on Nov. 28 at Liebach, Austria, according to information which reached Red Wing Jan. 4. The bishop's death resulted from apoplexy. He was 73 years old.

Charles C. Christie, widely known throughout the Southwest as an independent grain and stock broker, died at Kansas City Jan. 4 after a long illness. He was 56 years old.

MANY SEALS SOLD IN THE TWIN CITIES

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. I. J. Murphy, secretary of the Minnesota Public Health association and general campaign manager of the Red Cross seal sales, reported today that the sale of seals in Minnesota would be in excess of $26,000. The sales in St. Paul, he says, have passed the $5,000 mark, and Minneapolis will increase its record of last Christmas by about $500. The gross sales in Minneapolis will be about $9,000.

NO SALARY RAISES FOR COUNTY EMPLOYES

County attaches will receive no raises in salary for 1916.

This was the decision of county commissioners, who met in annual session at the court house yesterday afternoon.

Increased salaries for deputies in the office of the clerk of the district court and register of deeds were asked for but the board declined to grant the requests. The salary schedule of 1915 will be followed.

Silk Shirts

WE CAN only say that the early buyer will profit by purchasing now. The demand is greater than ever before. The quality will not be as good at the prices later, neither will there be as many attractive patterns on account of the dye situation. The same is true of fine madras shirts. We are placing orders now for next December delivery on silk goods to insure reasonable prices.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

NEW BLOOD IS SOUGHT

North Dakotans Generally Favor Scheme for Getting More Settlers.

Litigation Over Immigration Law Puts Matter Up to Communities.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The heartiest co-operation of the residents of the western part of the state can be counted on for any state-wide movement to secure additional settlers, especially practical farmers for North Dakota. It has been suggested that a mass meeting be held either in Bismarck or Fargo at which representatives of all the commercial bodies of the state be present. It is thought some plans could be worked out that would be practical. If such a meeting could be held this month actual results could be attained next spring.

It is useless to depend upon the immigration measure passed by the last legislative session. It is now being held up in the district court and no matter which way the case is decided it is a foregone conclusion that an appeal will be taken which will still further delay matters. This rather makes it imperative that an independent organization be formed and the general opinion is that it should be done as quickly as possible so that some results might be secured for the present year.

All Sections Would Help.

The commercial bodies of both Fargo and Grand Forks are already on record as strongly favoring a movement of this character. It is supposed that practically every section of the state would co-operate. There is general unanimity of opinion that North Dakota's most crying material need today is additional settlers that the fertile soil of this state can be made to produce more crops.

Naturally, if there is a movement of this character, the slope counties expect to derive their share of the benefit. The excellence of the crops in the western half of the state last year, the splendid prices that the grain is bringing and many other local advantages will be presented to prospective settlers in the interests of this section. It is conceded that conditions in this part of the state were never so favorable and that the slope country never had such an excellent opportunity as at present. The residents feel they have a talking argument that must win the newcomers if any are headed this way.

ERMINE JOBS WILL NOT GO BEGGING

Several Expected to Seek North Dakota Supreme Court Honors.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—With about one hundred and fifty cases on the supreme court calendar and the large number of appeals coming up almost daily from the twelve judicial districts, the five members of the supreme court find it difficult to catch up. Last fall, following the summer vacations, the members of the court became very busy and ground out a lot of important decisions and made quite a little inroad on the accumulated cases, but when the district courts began to grind in the fall the new cases came on so rapidly that it seems practically impossible to get even with the board.

Three of the present quintet on the supreme bench seek re-election and naturally they are especially anxious to get caught up. They would like to get somewhere near even for it would sound good to be able to tell the voters there was practically a clear calendar, and it would be conclusive evidence that they had been doing things. Later on the trio seeking re-election will want to devote some time to their primary campaigns and will feel less like getting out if they have a large accumulation of cases undisposed of.

How Primary Law Works.

Under the non-partisan judiciary law of this state if more than two candidates seek a judiciary nomination at the primaries in June, the two receiving the highest number of votes are declared nominees and they fight it out at the fall election. If there are just two candidates both are declared nominees and there is no fight at the primaries.

In the case of the supreme court, if seven or more candidates file before the primaries there will be a fight for the six highest places, and these six, for the three positions, will then be on the official ballot in the fall.

There will be six or more candidates for the supreme court positions at the primaries. That seems a foregone conclusion. Naturally the three present judges seeking re-election will have some advantages over the new candidates in matter of acquaintances and this will be beneficial under the primary law.

WILL MAKE STUDY OF WORKING CONDITIONS

Boston Woman to Conduct Work for Badger Industrial Commission.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 5.—Mary C. Wiggins of Boston has been chosen by the Wisconsin Industrial commission to organize its women's department. She will investigate the effects of work days of varying length and of various employments upon the health of women.

"She will spend four months in this organization and foundation work," said J. D. Beck, chairman of the commission. "Her work ought to put Wisconsin in the way of doing real service to working women and children and to their employers."

PITIFUL KELSEY CASE.

Home Burns, Father Dies and Bride Is Bereaved.

Kelsey, Minn., Jan. 5.—Ill-luck laid a heavy hand on the family of Louis Jacobson, a Belgian, with the new year. Their home, a log house near here, was burned on the night of Jan. 1 and the family, consisting of Jacobson, his wife and six children, went to live in a barn with little of the usual home equipment. Mr. Jacobson has been suffering from tuberculosis for several years and the shock of the fire is supposed to have hastened his death the next day after the fire. The body will not be buried until a doctor's certificate can be secured. On Dec. 28, the oldest Jacobson girl, Jenny, was married by Dr. Hoffman to Hans Bodine of Cotton and invitations for the celebration of the wedding had been set for Jan. 2, but her father's death occurring in the meantime the affair has been called off. The case of the Jacobson family is made still more pitiful as it is said the widow is about to become a mother. An effort is to be made to secure aid for the Jacobson family.

"PREACHERS ARE NOT UNDERTAKERS"

Lutheran Minister Against Giving Non-Christians Christian Burial.

Sheboygan, Wis., Jan. 5.—Christian burial for non-Christians in the opinion of Rev. O. C. Kremseder of St. Paul, is hypocritical.

Mr. Kremseder made this statement here yesterday in an address at the opening session of the conference of the Northwest English Lutheran church.

"The Christian pastor who performs the rites of the Christian church over the body of an unbeliever, is guilty of hypocrisy," said the speaker. "He does an injustice to all Christians and he harms the cause for which he is called upon to work.

"Military funerals are for soldiers; lodge funerals are for members, and Christian burial rites are for Christians. A minister of the gospel is not an undertaker."

HAD EIGHT WIVES.

Not in Legal Manner, So Milwaukee Judge Gives Man Four Years.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 5.—Charles Oryel Pitcher was sentenced Tuesday to four years in the state prison after having admitted to Judge Backus in the municipal court that he had been married to eight different women.

Pitcher was convicted of having been married to Mrs. Anna Poppert, Milwaukee, who was referred to by District Attorney Zabel as wife No. 6, and to Mrs. Bertha Rasmussen of Sioux City, Iowa, without being divorced from either woman. He married Mrs. Rasmussel April 9, 1908, and Mrs. Poppert on June 15, 1913.

After deserting Mrs. Poppert, Pitcher went to Manitowoc, where he was married on Sept. 9 of last year to Miss Josephine Tadych, 17 years old. The two went to Winnipeg, Can., where Pitcher enlisted in the Canadian army and was about to be shipped to the battlefield in Europe when arrested.

BUY SALTING STATIONS.

Local Capital Has Acquired Pickle Plants Adjacent to Hayward.

Hayward, Wis., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The line of salting stations in this district located at Hayward, Birchwood, Minong, Springbrook, Spooner, and the shipping point at Earl, has been purchased by local capital from the E. J. Balza company of Green Bay. The new company will be known as the Wisconsin Pickle company and is capitalized at $25,000, with the following officers: President, J. E. Moreland; vice president, C. E. Wise; secretary-treasurer and general manager, C. A. Arden. Robert Harness has been appointed district manager and chemist.

The new company will continue the pickle salting business as heretofore conducted by the retiring concern. The entire output will be shipped here and assorted and repacked for the trade. Several new branches will be opened in nearby cities.

The general office of the company will be located here, Hayward being the most advantageous point.

Several hundred acres of cucumbers have already been contracted for and the company is intent on making this the leading pickle manufacturing point in the state.

EVEN CROSS, SICK CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

Look at Tongue! If Feverish, Bilious, Constipated, Take No Chances.

"California Syrup of Figs" Can't Harm Tender Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.—Advertisement.

MILL CITY BURGLAR ACCUSES POLICEMEN

Claims Force Protects Saloon Man Who Acted as "Fence."

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 5.—George Kline, sentenced yesterday by District Judge W. E. Hale to an indeterminate term in the penitentiary for robbery in the first degree in connection with the burglary of the John S. Allen jewelry store, declared in court that Mike Weisman, a saloon keeper, Barnum, was the fence who planned the robbery, pointed out the store, took the jewels and paid him in cash for his services.

Kline's statement was made a part of the court records.

In addition to Kline, Frank Gordon and George Nolan, who helped in the robbery were sentenced yesterday to the penitentiary.

Kline declared under oath that he believed Weisman was under police protection.

NORTH DAKOTAN DIES IN MILL CITY CAFE

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 5.—Andrew Treseng, 55 years old, of Hatton, N. D., was stricken with heart disease in a cafe at 128 Second street south late Monday and died instantly. A daughter, Mrs. Hilda Thompson of Hatton, was located. The body is at the morgue.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 5.—John Lind, former governor, one of the honorary pallbearers at the funeral of the late Governor Hammond, fell on the icy steps of the capitol in St. Paul Monday morning and sustained serious injuries. Examination showed that Mr. Lind was suffering from two fractured ribs.

IS SOME WOLF HUNTER.

Pierce County Man Claims to Be Champion N. D., Nimrod.

Rugby, N. D., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Adam Lesmeister, residing north of Rugby, claims to be the most successful wolf hunter in North Dakota, as evidenced by his claim for the bounty on eighty-two wolf scalps just allowed by Pierce county. Lesmeister collected about $900 from Pierce county during the past year for slaying wolves, while he also has collected bounties in adjoining counties.

Lesmeister goes about wolf hunting in a systematic manner, being the possessor of a remarkably well trained pack of wolfhounds, which make short work of the pests when they get on the trail.

Lesmeister does not depend upon wolf hunting to provide him with revenue, as he is the owner of a very finely-developed farm in the north end of this county.

LOSES COMMISSION AS DEPUTY SHERIFF

Iron River, Mich., Jan. 5.—Sheriff Sensiba revoked the deputy sheriff commission of Frank C. Smart, village clerk of Iron River, for refusing to accompany him on a blind pig raid. "When I demanded his star," said Sheriff Sensiba, "Smart said he didn't know what I wanted with him. I told him it was not necessary for me to tell any deputy what I want with him when I ask him to accompany me in the discharge of my duty. Nor is it necessary." This makes two deputy sheriff commissions the sheriff has revoked within the last month or so, in addition to the removal of the under-sheriff.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well. —Advertisement.

PARAGRAPHIC COMMENT OF THE SPORTING WORLD

BY BRUCE.

It is reported that the regents of the University of Wisconsin may drop football. Some thought Juneau had, several years ago.

More than 1,700 Yale students participated in athletics during the past year. However, it is not believed that any of them played football.

Harvard students have contributed $10,000 toward the construction of a new gymnasium. According to ratio of efficiency, Yale undergraduates should raise a $1,000,000 fund.

Charles Taft is playing guard on the Yale basket ball team. According to the team's record he has little to stand pat on.

Corporal J. Halton of the English army won a recent cross country run. This leads some to believe that the captain believes in preparedness.

Jess Willard and Charley Weinert may meet in a boxing contest to celebrate the 250th anniversary of Newark. Either that or let the anarchists give a barn dance.

The 1917 Bowling congress is to be held in Michigan. Michigan was not among those states that went dry the first of the year.

Maurice E. McLoughlin, former lawn tennis champion, has taken to golf playing. Once a gentleman, always a gent.

"Pug" McDonough is the name of a first class player. Lester Darcy is the name of a great prize fighter. It must have been propinquity.

While it is early as yet to make football predictions for 1916, it seems rather certain that Frank Hinkey will not coach Yale.

* * *

English boxers are noted for their great foot work. Most of them came to this country when the war broke out.

Monday night's curling scores plainly showed that The Herald rink is back in last season's form.

While John L. Sullivan is getting big money for lecturing on temperance, it is believed that he is still behind the game.

It has often been argued against Garry Herrmann that as a baseball magnate he should not be allowed to act as chairman of the national commission. Those favoring Mr. Herrmann have pointed out that he is not a regular baseball magnate, being only the head of the Cincinnati team.

Northwestern football players attended a banquet to talk over last season. Why a banquet? Why not a wake?

If we didn't mention Northwestern, who would? Elmer Blu? Not unless you assume the offensive.

CHANGES DUE IN NORTHERN

Copper Country Towns May Be Awarded Franchises in 1916 Circuit.

Not at All Certain That Superior Will Adjust Differences With League.

Charles Moll, former president of the W-I league and last season the head of the St. Boniface club of the Northern league, is in the Copper Country today endeavoring to interest Calumet, Houghton and Hancock business men in Northern league baseball.

If Mr. Moll is successful in his mission it will probably mean that the Copper Country will be represented in the Northern league the coming season by two towns, Hancock and Houghton being the joint holders of one franchise, with Calumet holding the other one.

It is not at all certain right now that Superior will be a member of the Burmeister circuit during the 1916 season. It will not be definitely decided before the Minneapolis Northern league, scheduled for Jan. 20.

Superior owes the Northern league $1,500, according to the statement of the league officials. Those inclined to be interested in baseball across the way seem indisposed to view the matter of Superior's baseball indebtedness in the same light as the magnates. Hence the hiatus.

South Dakota Towns, Too.

In addition to Calumet and the Hancock and Houghton proposition, there are Aberdeen and Sioux Falls, both in South Dakota. If Superior does not come in both of these towns may be awarded franchises.

Moll has expressed himself as thinking well of the Copper Country towns. If the yellow metal district towns are awarded franchises in the 1916 circuit, the Northern league of the coming season will revert back to old time conditions, when the Copper Country was considered quite a baseball center.

It is not unlikely that Moll will pay a diplomatic visit to Superior on his way down from the Copper Country. It's possible, too, that Burmeister may come up and join forces with Moll and hold a heart-to-heart talk with those across the way who have shown some slight interest in desiring to see Superior rehabilitated as a thriving center of organized baseball.

Batchelor in the council chambers at the city hall and after organizing the two leagues, they selected officers for the hockey season, which will open

JOE STECKER GIVES ST. PAUL FANS GLIMPSE OF HIS ABILITY

Nebraska Plowboy Shows Himself Marvel in Apostle City Contest, Beating Four Men in Jig Time—Conqueror of Cutler Is in Duluth Ready for Contest.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Joe Stecker, the farmer boy, made his appearance here last night and created a positive sensation. Fans who saw the youngster in action declared him a marvel, and left the Auditorium wondering where he got it all.

Stecker beat Otto Johnson, George O'Brosky, Otto Selin and Ben Morgan in quick time, the rather slender young fellow showing a speed so remarkable and a strength so great as to put him in a class by himself.

A capacity house was on hand to greet the newest and greatest sensation of the American mat. Stecker looks like a mere boy in many ways, but when he gets going and unwarps those wonderful legs of his, it is not difficult to understand why he is considered the greatest wrestler in the world. What Stecker did to his four opponents was about everything a wrestler can do to another one.

The Nebraska boy moved like a flash, and would switch from one hold to another with lightning-like rapidity. When the plowboy got his scissors on it was like clamping a vice, Stecker punishing one opponent so severely that he was helped from the mat.

Tonight at the Auditorium Joe Stecker will make his debut in Duluth by tackling two real opponents and agreeing to throw each of his opponents twice.

Big Bobs Clemens, the South African champion, one of the roughest and strongest men in the wrestling game, will oppose the famous plowboy from Nebraska in a contest that should bring out all of the ability that has been shown by Stecker in the series of sensational matches that have shown the youthful grappler one of the greatest in the world, if not the very greatest.

After Clemens will come Ernest Kartje, the light heavyweight champion of the world, a clever and speedy wrestler who has never lost a fall at catch weights. The match between Stecker and Kartje should be one of the fastest and cleverest ever seen in Duluth.

Battle Royal Carded.

Seven wrestlers will appear in the battle royal, which is expected to prove a contest that will convulse the spectators. The match will be fought out on go as you please lines. The wrestlers can bunch and attack in squads, the survivor of the contest being declared the winner.

Seven of the best boys in the city have been secured. Sailor Jack is among the contenders and it is expected that there will be some rough going for the tar.

A great semi-windup card has been secured in Olaf Johnson, the holder of the Olympic championship of Norway and Zorbas. This is expected to prove one of the best matches that has been put on here in many seasons outside of a big contest.

Johnson is highly touted. The husky Norwegian has thrown all the contenders on the other side of the ocean and is expected to show real class against about the best little wrestler that Duluth has ever turned out.

Stecker in Duluth.

Stecker came in to Duluth early today. The famous farmer boy looks every inch the athlete, though he is not filled ut to the extent of Gotch, Zbyszko or the big foreign wrestlers who have won because of their immense bulk and strength.

Stecker is straight as a sapling, has the ruddy skin of a real farmer and is quiet and unassuming.

Speaking of a match with Gotch, J. F. Hetmanek, manager of the plowboy, declared that Joe was ready at any time to meet the champion and that no wrestler in the world was on Joe's ineligible list.

"Joe is the youngest wrestler in the world to ever make so great a name for himself," said Hetmanek. "If he is the greatest in the world right now, how good will he be in a year or two? Joe is getting better all the time.

"Who will we wrestle next? That's hard to say. We've beaten most of them. Some of the big foreigners will probably want some of Joe's game, but the scissors hold has never failed to work yet, and we think it will get them all. Joe has the greatest confidence in the world and the people down in Nebraska think he is by far the greatest wrestler that has ever lived."

SETTTLEMENT OF BALL WAR SEEMS CERTAIN

Browns Are Sold to St. Louis Federal Owner and Deal for Transfer of Cubs to Weeghman All But Closed.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 5.—According to both parties in the transaction there is no hitch that appears serious enough to prevent the sale of the Chicago National league club by Charles P. Taft, owner of the majority of the stock, to Charles Weeghman, former president of the Chicago Federals, and Harry F. Sinclair, the Oakland oil magnate.

Sinclair and Taft were closeted for an hour yesterday, and at the conclusion of the conference, both announced that further negotiations would take place today on the arrival of Mr. Weeghman from Chicago, and that as far as either could now determine, there were no serious obstacles in the way of the completion of the sale.

While this conference was in progress, the national baseball commission marked time, and finally decided to hold no formal meeting until this morning. The members of the commission met, however, and discussed various matters that will come up today at the meeting of the joint committee appointed to settle the dispute between the Federal and International leagues relative to the peace agreement recently signed here.

This committee will meet at noon, and besides the Federal and International league tangle, it is expected to take up every one of the loose ends that were found dangling after the peace agreement had been signed.

In case the sale of the Chicago Cubs is completed today and the joint committee on the Federal and International leagues makes reasonable headway, a meeting of the National league will be called for this city some time later in the week, according to President Tener. However, if the deal for the Cubs hangs fire longer than the meeting of the joint committee, no National league meeting will be called.

Word was received here that President Gilmore of the Federal league, who announced Monday night that it was not convenient for him to attend the meeting here today, had made arrangements to be present, and from the announcement of this information, Chairman Herrmann of the National commission stated that he expected a full attendance of the committee.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Charles Weeghman left last night for Cincinnati after a telephone conversation with someone in that city. Mr. Weeghman did not announce the name of the individual or the nature of the communication.

Phil Ball Buys Browns.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 5.—The sale of the St. Louis Americans (Browns) to Phil Ball and other stockholders of the St. Louis Federal league club was completed last night, it was announced by attorneys for Mr. Ball. The consummation of this deal was provided for in the peace agreement between representatives of organized ball and of the Federal league, which was signed at Cincinnati about two weeks ago.

The price for the Browns was $525,000. This sum was paid by Phil Ball, James W. Garneau and Otto Stifel for 800 shares of stock in the ball club, and the Dodier Realty company, the owner of the local American league park.

Ball will be the president of the new Browns, Stifel and Garneau first and second vice presidents respectively, L. D. von Weise, secretary, and S. L. Swarts, counsel. These five men also comprise the new board of directors.

Fielder Jones, manager of the local Federals, becomes manager of the new Browns. Branch Rickey, former manager of the Browns, will be retained, probably as scout or in the business department.

When the St. Louis Americans' franchise, players, contracts and deeds to the real estate had been transferred to the new owners, President Hedges of the old Browns said:

"I believe that organized baseball acquires valuable assets in Mr. Ball, Mr. Stifel and Harry Sinclair. With the merging of the Browns and St. Louis Federals, St. Louis should see the best baseball it has seen in years.

"As for myself—I have retired from baseball, and I am glad of it. I received my price and I will get no stiff neck next summer trying to see whether it will rain on Sunday."

Will Give All a Chance.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Joe Tinker, new manager of the Chicago National baseball team and old manager of the local Federal team, has announced that he would take all the first-class men of each team—thirty players in all—to the spring training camp with him. Every man will be given a chance to prove his worth, Tinker said, and earn a berth on the regular staff.

"It is necessary to carry that many players," Tinker said, "so that I will have two teams for practice games. The only way a manager can judge the ability of his men is to see them in action."

Chicago, Jan. 5.—George Moriarity, formerly of the Detroit baseball club, was signed yesterday by President Comiskey of the White Sox.

New Zealand has only one town with a population of more than 100,000.

Major League Pin Men Hang Up Good Scores on Grand Alleys.

The Major league resumed bowling last night with a new team in the league, the Empress team, making its initial appearance of the season. The Empress men took the place of the Columbia team and got away to a good start by taking two games out of three from the Oak Halls.

Jenswold was the high man on his team, getting 244 in his last game.

Another winner of the evening was the Fitzgerald and Winchester team, the Sharkcrafts going down the line to a two-out-of-three-game defeat. Foster of the Sharkcrafts got the high three-game total of the evening with a score of 502.

The Elcoras won two out of three from the Big Duluths and Server of the Elcora team got the high individual score of the evening with a mark of 255.

R. C. Berini of the Oak Hall team, who rolled a perfect score of 300 last year, was presented with a gold medal last evening by the management of the Grand alleys.

All bowlers of the Major, Grand and Commercial leagues are requested to meet at the Grand alleys Thursday evening and elect officers to serve the Northern Bowling association.

Frank Gogins was elected captain of the Central high school basket ball team at a meeting held yesterday. He succeeds Sherman O'Brien, who was ruled out because of the study rule. Gogins is not only a first-class basket ball player, but an all-around athlete as well.

SKIPS ASKED TO RUSH CURLING

Many Games Will Be Played Off This Week and Next.

Get Rid of a Racking La Grippe Cough—It Weakens.

For the severe racking cough that comes with la grippe, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is wonderfully healing and soothing. It eases the tightness of the chest, raises the phlegm easily and helps the racking, tearing cough that is so exhausting and weakening. R. G. Collins, ex-postmaster, Barnegat, N. J., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar Compound soon stopped the severe la grippe cough that completely exhausted me. It can't be beat." sold everywhere.

SOME WINTER SPORTS

Written for The Herald By J. R. Batchelor, City Recreational Director—No. 10—Relay Races.

Relay races are very popular and exciting. There are countless formations and modifications and one could very easily outline 100. The value of these events for winter sports is the almost constant action. In No. 1 pieces of ice are placed on lines or rings about ten feet apart and the first man on the team takes them one at a time and places them in the big circle at the other end of the rink and skates back and touches No. 2 of his own team, when he immediately skates to the big circle and brings them back to the smaller circles one at a time and so on until all have had their turn. The first team using all their men in turn and finishing across the starting line wins the contest.

NAVAL MILITIA TEAM WINS FROM PATRICKS

By the score of 17 to 7 the second naval militia indoor baseball team last evening defeated the F. A. Patrick team on the new armory floor. Brian and Blanchard worked in the battery points for the seamen, while Berni and Bondy formed the battery for the wholesalers.

On Friday evening the sailors will take on the Board of Trade team. As the armory floor provides for one of the best indoor diamonds in the Northwest, the public is assured of seeing some very good sport.

BASKET BALL OPENING HAS BEEN PUT OVER

A meeting of the directors of the Commercial basket ball league was held last evening, when it was decided to postpone the opening of the regular schedule of the league until next Tuesday.

The Intermediate basket ball league teams will hold the boards at the association gymnasium this evening.

MORE CHILDREN SENT TO OWATONNA

Fifty-Two From Duluth Received at State Home in 1915.

Duluth sent more homeless children to the state school at Owatonna in 1915 than during the previous year, according to the figures which have been given out by G. A. Merrill, superintendent.

Last year twenty-seven boys and twenty-five girls were received at the state institution from this city, while in 1914 there were twenty-one girls and twenty-seven boys.

Duluthians last year adopted thirty-one children from the home, of which seventeen were boys and fourteen girls. This is five less than the number adopted by Duluth people during 1914.

CHILDREN ARE EASY VICTIMS

Few in Consumptive Families Escape Disease, Says Dr. Laird.

Children are more easily infected with tuberculosis than are adults and every precaution should be taken to protect them from attack by the tubercle bacilli in early childhood, according to Dr. A. T. Laird, director of the Minnesota Public Health association and supeintendent of the St. Louis county sanatorium at Nopeming.

"Practically no child in a family where there is open tuberculosis escapes," declares Dr. Laird. "Adults probably rarely contract the disease but develop it from foci within themselves acquired in babyhood or early childhood. Consequently, excessive fear of consumption, as it is usually called, is foolish, and reckless living is more dangerous to adults than casual contacts with consumptives.

"Children, especially, should have a long period in which to grow up strong and well under open-air conditions and accordingly should not be returned to unfavorable surroundings after a brief stay at the sanatorium. It is the children that are in the most danger, and every effort should be made to protect them; the babies, especially."

MINNEAPOLIS LOSES CONVENTION TO ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—The national Prohibition convention will be held at the Auditorium here June 19 next instead of at Minneapolis, the place originally selected by the national executive committee at Chicago.

This was announced last night by W. G. Calderwood, member of the committee who said the change was made because of the lack of a suitable convention hall in Minneapolis.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Treating a Baby's "Cold"

My baby, aged 3 years, writes a professional woman, had another of her frequent attacks of croup a few nights ago, and still is wearing a piece of flannel on her chest. Shall I take it off. What can I do to make her "take cold" less frequently? She is a splendid baby and won the prize in a Better Baby contest. When a child has croup must she sleep in a warm room? Would she be less liable to "colds" if she wore cotton instead of wool silk-lined undershirts? Do you believe in rubbing the chest with any grease for a cough? When a child has croup in the night and is apparently all right next day, should she go outdoors to play?

Answering these queries in order, we depose and testify as follows:

Why put the flannel on in the first place—to shut out the "cold"? Would you close the door after the colt has scampered away? The sooner you take it off the better for the child.

To prevent respiratory infections of all kinds, call them "colds" if you will, the first essential is DON'T CODDLE—don't discriminate in favor of, or against any particular area of the skin of the body. Dress comfortably, neither too much here, nor too little there.

A warm room is necessarily one with inadequate ventilation. No heating contraption yet devised will heat all outdoors. No bedroom not open to the free passage of open air is hygienic. We have never yet met a case of croup in a child sleeping in a well-ventilated bedroom—one in which the air is cool or cold as the outside air, but the child as warm as toast. Cold air is nature's preventive of croup. Let the child have plenty of it to breathe, and yet keep the child comfortably warm by means of special sleeping garments made for those who have the porch-sleeping habit.

We personally favor wool or silk and wool knitted underwear, light weight, for everyone—but it must be a complete suit, not the shirt alone, and wool or silk stockings, too.

The only "grease" suited for rubbing the chest, we think, is camphorated oil (that is, for children). Dissolve all the powdered camphor very hot olive oil or sweet oil will take up, and keep tightly corked, for camphor is volatile. Rub it all over the chest, front and back, over throat and bridge of nose, once or twice a day. But no flannel "coddling" afterward.

No matter what a child has in the night, outdoors is the place for the child next day. Particularly is this true if the child has any kind of respiratory disease—outdoors is the place to fight the indoor plagues.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Bright's Disease Without Albumin.

Is it possible for one to have chronic Bright's disease without having albumin in the urine? How long can a patient with chronic Bright's disease live if he is careful? Would a cold or warm climate be preferable for such a patient?

Answer—Chronic interstitial Bright's disease is often seen without albumin in the urine. A patient with chronic Bright's disease should live twenty years. A moderately warm climate is preferable as a rule.

What Cyanosis Means.

Please explain in the paper what cyanosis means, and what disease it indicates.

Answer—Cyanosis is the medical term given to the bluish tint of the skin when the circulation is greatly embarrassed. It is a symptom of heart disease, advanced lung disease, and of poisoning by any of the heart-weakening coal-tar remedies.

Salt Water for Sore Eyes.

How strong salt water would you advise for bathing eyes?

Answer—Never stronger than a level tablespoonful of salt in a pint of boiled water. This is about the saline strength of the tears.

WILL TAKE OVER BONDS.

Duluth Road Will Be Given Five-Year Extension on Mortgage.

The New York brokerage firm of F. J. Lisman & Co. has formed a syndicate to acquire the $2,000,000 issue of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg railroad's first mortgage bonds, due Jan. 1.

It is announced that the bonds will be extended for five years at 5 per cent with a guarantee as to principal and interest by the Canadian Northern railroad. These bonds are also guaranteed by the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific railroad.

This action is said to have obviated any uncertainty that might have been brought about had default in the bonds been permitted. Earnings of the Canadian Northern railroad have shown marked improvement during the last few months, and towards that development the Duluth extension is averred to have contributed its full quota.

"STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN!"

Duluth Will Have "Safety First" Rally This Month.

All Roads at Head of Lakes Combine in Movement.

Duluth is to have a "safety first" rally this month. Arrangements for it were made during the noon hour today at a luncheon held at the Commercial club, which was attended by Safety Commissioner Silberstein and representatives of the various roads entering the cities at the Head of the Lakes.

The rally will be held on Friday and Saturday, Jan. 14 and 15 at the armory, which the city will furnish free of charge; and a lecturer, H. L. Brownell, of the Chicago surface lines, will come to Duluth, donating his services, and showing three reels of motion pictures to illustrate his subject of "Safety First."

An attempt will be made to have the churches of the city enlist their interest and to obtain the use of a large one for Sunday afternoon, Jan. 16, when a lecture will be given.

The rally is to bring to the attention of the public in general and of the children in particular, the measures that traffic concerns are taking to ensure the safety of the public, and to try to instill in the minds of both juveniles and adults the "safety first" idea, that they may avoid taking chances in crossing streets and tracks, and doing other rash things which too frequently result in loss of life or damage to bodies.

All Roads Represented.

Those present at the meeting today and who will act as a committee on arrangements for the rally are: Commissioner Silberstein, George L. Wright of the Omaha road, G. S. Locker of the Duluth & Iron Range road, George D. McCarthy of the Commercial club, J. W. Bayly of the Alger-Smith road, W. S. Byers of the Duluth-Superior Traction company, Frank Hopper of the Canadian Northern road, J. N. Rooney of the Great Northern, D. H. Williams of the Soo, W. H. Strachan of the Northern Pacific and W. W. Walker of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road.

The street railway company will make arrangements to transport, free of charge, children from outlying districts to and from the lectures to be given for juveniles, which will be on Friday afternoon and Saturday morning and afternoon. The committee named this morning will try to enlist the help of the schools in the work, and will ask that the children be urged to attend the meetings in order that they may be instructed in the matter of safety.

The meetings on Friday and Saturday night will be for adults. All of the meetings will be free of charge.

Movement Fostered Here.

The safety-first movement, which is becoming nation-wide, has been fostered in Duluth by the street railway company principally, for that company has been conducting a publicity campaign in the work for some time. The railroads are also pushing the propaganda of safety first.

The movement is a result of the growing number of accidents resulting from carelessness of employes and the public. The work of the road was, for a long time, confined to its employes, with whom safety first measures have been insisted upon, prizes awarded for the greatest care shown in the various operating departments, and other things done to reduce the risk to life or property. Now the work is being extended to the public, for it is declared that the carelessness of people outside of the transportation business, and their proneness to take chances, is doing more than anything else to keep up the number of accidents.

This rally is for the purpose of bringing home to the public the risks many people take, and the ease with which precautions may be taken.

WILL DISCOURAGE PUBLIC ADDRESSES

Demand for Speeches By Governor Becoming Too Burdensome.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Numerous public addresses which tend to tax the strength and occupy much of the time of the state executive will likely be discouraged by Governor Burnquist. The governor intimated as much today and was backed by Secretary Andrist, who said that the demand for such was becoming burdensome.

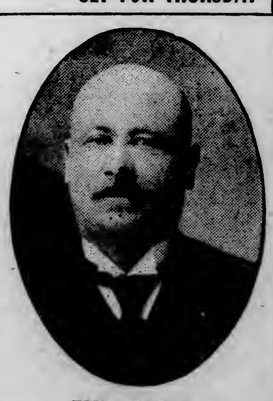

The late Governor Johnson started the pace and Former Governor Eberhart kept it up to such an extent that now practically every mail brings a request for the governor's appearance at some function or gathering.

Constant speaking, it was said, aided materially in weakening Governor Johnson, and Mr. Andrist is of the opinion that it did not help Governor Hammond physically.

Governor Burnquist in his statement today said that for the present at least he would be compelled to discourage public speaking on his part, as he believed such was not proper at this time. In arranging for the dedication of the New Ulm and Rochester armories, he delegated Mr. Andrist to represent the state, but insisted that the dedication not to take place until after the present month.

Secretary Andrist said today that both he and the governor would have something to say on the question of public speaking by the governor at the proper time. He regarded present-day demands as far beyond the capacity of the executive, not to speak of its interference with executive work and its tax on the governor physically.

ENGLE FUNERAL IS SET FOR THURSDAY

EMIL ENGLE.

Funeral services for Emil Engle, 55 years old, who died at a local hospital yesterday morning, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Crawford undertaking rooms. Rev. T. J. Austad will officiate, and interment will be in the London road cemetery.

CARLTON'S NEW SCHOOL BUILDING IS BEING USED

NEW CONSOLIDATED HIGH SCHOOL.

Carlton, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Carlton's new consolidated high school built last year to take the place of the one burned Feb. 9 last, is now being used, school opening in it for the first time Monday. Including equipment, books, etc., it represents an expenditure of $47,000.

The building is of brick, was designed by E. F. Broomhall of Duluth and built by the National Contracting company of Alexandria, Minn. It is complete in every detail and meets with highest approval of state school authorities. The class rooms are large and well ventilated; heated and lighted in accordance with modern ideas. There are a large and well equipped gymnasium, with locker rooms and shower baths; domestic science and manual training and agricultural departments complete in every detail, surpassing any in the county; hot and cold water in every part of the building and hot water heat; blau-gas system of heating for domestic science, manual training and laboratory departments. Semi-indirect electric lighting system throughout the building.

The school is making progress under supervision of Supt. Chas. W. Colovin, has twelve teachers, and draws the largest amount of state aid of any high school in Carlton county. Four wagons bring the pupils from surrounding country.

ORGANIZED PLAY FOR SCHOOL PUPILS AT RECESS

Recess and after-school play for Duluth boys and girls was assured today when members of the board of education committee on schools formally approved J. R. Batchelor's schedule for 1916.

The recreational director's plan will be presented to the board of education at Friday night's meeting, with a favorable recommendation, by Mrs. T. J. Davis, chairman of the school committee.

Organized play during the recess periods, or from 10:45 to 11 a. m. and from 2:30 to 2:45 p. m. daily, will be the rule, starting as soon as instructors can be provided at the various buildings. Provision also is made for play after school and during the summer vacation period.

"Games will be played as the main feature of the new plan," said Mr. Batchelor, "and in working out our ideas we have made the schedule as flexible as possible in the hope that the work would nearly be carried along of its own impetus.

"I expect that it will not be necessary to hire teachers at each building to supervise the play. 'Leaders,' in the persons of children from the higher grades, will care for the youngsters. It will be a simple matter to instruct an older child so that he or she can manage a group of little ones."

The plan probably will be put into operation as soon as it is approved by the board.

HORSE DROWNS IN ST. LOUIS RIVER

A horse belonging to the Colvin-Robb Lumber company of New Duluth was drowned in the St. Louis river just below the steel company's interstate bridge at 10 o'clock this morning. The team with a load of coal to be delivered at the townsite of Oliver was crossing the ice. When about at a point in the middle of the channel the horses broke through. One of the horses was saved.

Jack Lockhart, driver of the team, was thrown out of the rig and by hard work managed to save the other horse. The drowned animal went under the ice and the harness had to be cut in order to save his mate. The animal was valued at about $300.

FEET ON TABLE, SHE LIGHTED CIGARETTE

Judge Grants Husband Divorce on Grounds of Cruelty.

Judge Fesler in district court late yesterday granted Charles Foster, 38, a decree of divorce from his wife, Cora Foster, 32, on the grounds of cruelty.

Foster was defendant in an action brought by his wife, and he secured the decree on a cross bill.

She charged that her husband had struck her. He admitted that he had on one occasion. That was when she came home in an intoxicated condition one night, perched her feet on the kitchen table and proceeded to light a cigaret, he claimed.

Foster is a conductor in the employ of the Northern Pacific Railway company.

VIRGINIA BOYS MUST BE GOOD

Juvenile Court Officer Will Be Named for Range City.

Virginia will have a juvenile court officer.

This was assured this afternoon when the county board passed a resolution authorizing payment of one-half of the expenses of the office, the police and fire commission of Virginia to pay the other half.

It is expected that the plan will eliminate the necessity of bringing children, especially young girls, into the police station and justice courts.

The plan was worked out by Probation Officer C. E. Everett with the cooperation of District Judge Martin Hughes and the Virginia police.

CONGRESS SETTLES DOWN TO REAL WORK

In the house the farm loan bill was up for debate.

BOYS' WAR TIME WORK IN THE ENGLISH HOME.

London Chronicle: There were four boys—all delightful, interesting young people in their way, but too young to put on khaki and fight for the chummy mother they adored. The youngest child, a lovable little fellow of 5, with corn colored hair and sea blue eyes, unconsciously did the finest possible war work in keeping the family merry and amused with his quaint sayings and solemnly delivered criticisms of the kaiser and all things German. But the three elder boys set to work to do war service of a more practical description.

When I called at the house I found that it was servantless. Owing to industrial prosperity it was impossible even to get a good "char." The father of the family was a professional man, whose work was done largely in his own home, and slackness in house care would have injured his reputation. These things count so much with the many people who are apt to judge doctors and clergymen and teachers by the look of the front doorsteps.

Ivan, the second boy, was busy brushing the stairs. He is a fine, manly boy of 14, who can drive a car and play football like a professional. There is nothing in the least girlish about him. "I'd join the army tomorrow if mother would let me," he sighed. "I could easily pass for 18."

Too young for the army, he is not ashamed to help his mother in tasks of housework that would have fallen to the girls if he had been blessed with sisters. He was a little clumsy, perhaps, in his method of working, but it was a joy to see this strong lad doing housework with enthusiasm and smiles on his face.

I asked where the eldest boy was.

"Allan? Oh, he's gone to the registry office for me," said his mother. "There is so much to do at home that I can't get out, and poor old Al has been living in registry offices all the week. The only chance of getting a maid is to live there and pounce on her when she comes. Mind, I don't suppose he likes it any more than I do, but he wouldn't let me go. And of course I'm glad."

Allan came in with vivid accounts of the ways of the domestic servant. He hadn't succeeded in getting one; but he simply laughed over his experiences, and added that the time had flown because all the women who were waiting there on the same mission made friends with him and wanted to know how he liked maid hunting.

The third boy, Gerald, made the tea and set the table beautifully. It was evident that in this house war work was being done in a way that would have shamed many boys who think it unmanly to do household tasks. All these particular lads were full of high spirits and mischief, but they had been brought up by their mother to be pally and sensible and thoughtful. They looked on their mother as a chum.

"We can't see her stranded," they would argue. "It's rotten being without a maid, because it makes mother so tired. But we don't mind. If we hadn't to go to school we could polish off the work in no time."

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.—Advertisement.

SUITABLY EXPRESSED.

Philadelphia Record: As the subject for the weekly essay the schoolmaster asked his pupils to say what they could do if they had $5,000,000.

At once all heads were bent, save one, and pens scratched busily. The one exception was little Willie. He calmly sat doing nothing, twiddling his fingers and watching the flies on the ceiling.

At the end of the time the master collected the papers, and Willie handed over a blank sheet.

"How's this, Willie?" asked the master. "Is this your essay? Why, all the others have written at least two sheets, while you do nothing."

"Well," replied Willie, "that's what I would do if I were a millionaire."

FEW CHANGES IN OFFICERS

New Eveleth Council Quite Generally Retains Former Appointees.

New Health Commissioner and Assessor Only Changes Made.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The old city council held its final meeting last night and the new council held its first meeting. Sam H. Owens and George Mesberg relinquished their seats to J. M. Trevarrow and D. S. Murray. The old council wound up all business and left a clean slate for the new council which organized immediately and proceeded to the appointing of officers.

The removal of Dr. N. C. Bulkley as health commissioner and the appointing of John Trezona as assessor in the place of F. C. Cerveny and Judge J. C. McGilvery as city attorney in the place of Abe Feldman were the only changes made in filling offices, other appointees holding their positions.

The council approved the police appointments of Mayor Saari. The only change made in the force was the dropping of Sergeant R. S. Pincus from the roll.

In organizing the council Mayor Saari by virtue of his office as mayor became the president of the body and the commissioner of health and public safety. J. M. Trevarrow was made vice president and commissioner of streets and alleys. Joseph S. Wilson retained his position as superintendent of parks and public buildings. Mike Langdon, commissioner of streets and alleys on the old council, was made commissioner of finances, succeeding George Mesberg, one of the retiring councilmen. D. A. Murray was named as commissioner of water works and sewers, the position held by S. H. Owens.

Appointments Made.

The following appointments were made: C. H. Williams, city clerk; A. J. Van Buskirk, deputy clerk; John A. Trezona, city assessor; J. C. McGilvery, city attorney; W. J. Davey, treasurer; John Bakka, market master; John Warm, street commissioner; Andrew Jola, assistant street commissioner; C. M. Dorway, city engineer and superintendent of water works; John Hauma, assistant superintendent of water works; P. J. Boyle, assistant city engineer; J. C. Bradford, collector of water rents and cemetery accountant; Matt Jarvinen, dump boss; Anton Lessner, city hall janitor; J. A. Spurrier, superintendent of parks; Charles Wahlman, auditorium janitor; William Neilon, chief of fire department.

In making the appointments Abe Feldman received the vote of Mike Langdon, and John E. Manthey received the vote of J. M. Trevarrow for city attorney; Charles Anderson received the votes of Mike Langdon and Mayor Saari for city hall janitor; otherwise the appointments were made without dissenting votes. Appointments in the fire hall will be made later.

Dr. N. C. Buckley failed to receive reappointment as health commissioner, with the votes of Murray, Trevarrow and Saari opposed to him. Dr. Buckley has held office as school physician and health commissioner and was paid a salary by the city and by the school district.

The salaries of all appointive officers were fixed by resolution.

The council instructed the clerk to have bids called for the official printing and for an official depository.

Mayor J. S. Saari addressed the new council, giving a summary of the work done by the council the past year, a statement of the condition of the city's finances, pledged continued efforts for law enforcement and made several recommendations, chief among which were that a juvenile court officer be appointed, the sewage disposal plant completed, land surrounding St. Mary's lake purchased and a fire truck purchased.

Old Council's Final Act.

The old council, before quitting, heard a recommendation from C. E. Everett, range probation officer, that Eveleth have a probation officer appointed, approved the reappointment of Mrs. G. A. Whitman and Solomon Sax on the library board and made assessments for improvements on Adams avenue and other streets.

The new council authorized the mayor to employ an auditor to make the annual audit of the city's accounts.

When the business of the council was completed talks were heard from the councilmen, the retiring councilmen and the men appointed at the head of the various departments. The retiring councilmen wished the new council success in its administration of city affairs and left with the thanks of the remaining members of the old council for their work in the last two years.

Eveleth Police Records.

Eveleth, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The records of the police department show 142 arrests during 1915, the collection of $577.79 in fines and the imposing of several jail sentences. The jail was used by 996 sleepers during the year, the number of free lodgers lacking only 4 of reaching 1,000. The amount of fines was considerably below the 1914 record. The month of May, 1914, almost equaled the year 1915, one day alone, when a cutting affray was being delved into, netting the city almost as much in fines as the year 1915.

SOIL'S RICHNESS IS AMPLY PROVED

North Central Experiment Farm's Record of What Can Be Raised.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Jan. 5.—No better proof of the richness of the soil of Northern Minnesota could be asked than the records made public by the local North Central state experiment farm here, giving the results attained through the varied experiments carried on in connection with the problems of agriculture and demonstrates the wisdom of further development of lands here.

The experiment station is in the heart of the vast undeveloped region of Northern Minnesota, on land that was but a few years ago pine forest. The crop records, the correctness of which cannot be questioned, show that the average yields for five years ending with the crops of 1914 were as follows: Oats, 52 bushels an acre; barley, 38.6; wheat, 17.1; potatoes, 289. Sixteen tons of rutabagas were produced to the acre on an average during the period cited; fodder corn, 10 tons, and clover and timothy, 2.6 an acre in one cutting.

Yields for 1915.

The yields for 1915, as announced by Otto I. Bergh, the station's superintendent, were above the average of the last five years, with but two exceptions, corn and potatoes. During 1915 the records were as follows: Wheat, average for thirteen varieties, 26.8 bushels an acre; oats, average for twelve varieties, 92.5 bushels an acre; barley, average for ten varieties, 54.6 bushels an acre; rutabagas, 28.4 tons an acre, and timothy and clover hay, 2.6 tons an acre in one cutting.

From a stump land pasture of 115 acres the experiment farm dairy herd produced a gross income of more than $2,500 from butter and milk. This surely indicates that stump land pastures, when properly prepared and cared for, are wonderfully productive and comparatively inexpensive.

FAVORS GIVING $5,000 TO BAND

Hibbing Council Also to Urge Park Board to Allow More.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The village council last evening favored the appropriation of $5,000 for the use of the Hibbing concert band and stated to a delegation of bandmen that the council men would try to use their influence with the members of the park board to guarantee an increased appropriation so the band could engage the services of a paid leader.

The council passed a resolution favoring the remittance of the saloon license fund to H. Austin, F. C. Whyment and Santana & Bizall, three Hibbing saloon keepers.

The sum of $1,428 was allowed the Great Northern company for the building of a bridge over sewers owned by the village.

The report of the clerk of the municipal court was referred to the finance committee and the report of the treasurer of the village was allowed by the city dads.

The estimate of the E. W. Coons company in the neighborhood of $35,000 for the Alice pavement was paid by the council.

The estimate of Burns & McDonald for the building of the Alice sewers was also allowed.

Heat Question Not Settled.

The water and light commission after discussing informally the question of heat as furnished to consumers, and the recent protest decided to send out notices to the protesting consumers to be present at the next meeting, when they could talk the matter over with the commissioners.

None of the heat consumers appeared last evening and the one that did did not make his presence known until late into the evening.

Bills for the current month were allowed.

"Brigands" After Him.

Hibbing, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Herman Burrows, a woodsman claiming to hail from near Darlington, Wis., is being held in jail until an investigation is made of his sanity. Burrows was picked up by the police yesterday while laboring under the strange delusion that he was being pursued by "brigands," who were attempting to shoot him for putting the lid in effect in Hibbing.

AMENDMENTS TO BE SUBMITTED

Three Additions to Virginia Charter Put Up to Voters.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city council last night decided to submit three charter amendments to the people at the election Feb. 8. These provide a sum of not more than $5,000 for the support of the Commercial club; call for a primary election, and require all city departments to make annual reports, giving itemized statements of expenditures.

The primary election, according to the amendment, is to be held the second Tuesday preceding the general election. One registration day is to be held before the registration day. In case of a recall election, the incumbent is not required to participate in the primary election.

Alderman H. H. Allen opposed the Commercial club amendment, but it was explained to him that the council would have the power of appropriating funds for the support of the club.

Appointed Caretaker.

The appointment of Robert Fawcett as caretaker at the new sewage disposal plant at $3 a day was confirmed.

The bill of the water and light department against the Eveleth Construction company for $311.27 was referred to the city attorney. The bill of Mrs. F. Ender of Marble for $21.44 against John McKusick, a contractor, who did work for the city, was referred to the city attorney.

The transfers of the liquor licenses of McNabb & Co. to J. C. Doprell and O. A. Rud to J. Markich were granted.

Street Commissioner Christopherson was instructed to erect a warming shed at the new skating rink in the Second ward.

WINNIPEG WOMAN SUING ON NOTE

Seeks $500 for Piece of Paper Given Her Late Husband.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The case of Mrs. Lantry of Winnipeg vs. Nels Anderson to recover $500 on a promissory note the defendant gave her deceased husband, is on trial in district court today.

This morning another jury retired to consider the case of Judge W. G. Bonham of Duluth vs. Dr. Darrow, former mayor of Duluth, to recover $300 claimed for legal advice, the case having commenced yesterday afternoon and being concluded about 10 a. m. today. The jury late yesterday allowed Paul Risberg $140 in his suit for $500 vs. Mrs. Mary Pakkala for injuries alleged to have been sustained when an auto, driven by her son, ran into Risberg, who was riding a motorcycle on the Gilbert road.

Judge Hughes announced today there would be no grand jury at the coming term of court at Ely.

WHISKY TOTER IS CAUGHT IN HIBBING

Virginian Nabbed as He Steps Off Car Carrying Contraband.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mike Urisich of Virginia went to Hibbing this morning on an interurban car to join in the celebration of the Greek Christmas and took along three bottles of whisky to enliven the celebration.

An Indian agent suspected him as he left the car at Hibbing and asked if he brought any whisky. Denials were followed by admissions and the contraband was seized while Urisich was brought back here and is having a hearing this afternoon before U. S. Commissioner Poirier on the charge of introducing liquor into a dry territory. This is the second case since the lid hit Hibbing.

IN VIRGINIA JAIL.

Comparatively Few Prisoners in County Bastile Last Year.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—During 1915, 617 prisoners were held in the local county jail. July was the record month, 107 prisoners being cared for in the county bastile during it.

In the last month of 1915, only nineteen prisoners were in the county jail. The number of prisoners in the other months were: January, 32; February, 45; March, 46; April, 62; May, 58; June, 48; August, 54; September, 53; October, 56; November, 26.

During 1915 there was only one escape. In December when Deputy Sheriff Arthur O'Dea was taking a vagrant to the county jail at Duluth the prisoner jumped from a Missabe train near Alborn and was not overtaken by the deputy.

The majority of the prisoners held in the local county jail were charged with drunkenness and vagrancy.

HOT WATER THE BEST LIVER AND BOWEL MEDICINE

Says Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast Washes Poisons From System.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance. — Advertisement.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—George P. Smith of Plaza, N. D., is in the race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination "till the polls close," he declares in a formal announcement of his candidacy.

Smith, in his announcement, sets forth the cause of the farmers as the cause he hopes to represent. He maintains that farmers, while in the majority in the state, do not rule—and it is his contention that they are entitled to the ruling power as well as the privilege of being ruled.

George Smith has always been prominent in the American Society of Equity movement in the state, and he no doubt anticipates being able to poll much of the strength of that organization.

Office of Register of Deeds Showed Profit for Year.

Leaving out of consideration expenses such as rent, heat, light and office supplies, which are furnished free at the expense of the taxpayers, the office of the register of deeds demonstrated last year that it was better than self-sustaining.

OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER

COLD WAVE

Well, it came—the cold wave. For the first time this season, people are hustling about the streets holding their ears and breathing hard. Many thought because Mr. Richardson had predicted a cold wave yesterday and it did not arrive last night, that it was all off; but after getting to work this morning in a delightful, but somewhat nippy, temperature, and congratulating themselves that the weather man was fooled, they found who the joke was really on when they started out again. The thermometer dropped 12 degs. between 7 and 10 o'clock and is still going down. Twenty degs. is the objective point of the mercury. The wind is also rather stiff, which makes the conditions more disagreeable.

A year ago today was cloudy with slushy conditions underfoot. The sun rose this morning at 7:54 and will set this evening at 4:33, giving eight hours and thirty-nine minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Temperatures ranging from zero to 30 degs. or more below zero cover Northern Minnesota, the Dakotas, Northern Wyoming, Montana, Eastern Washington and all of Western Canada, the lowest reported being 38 degs. below at both Prince Albert and Swift Current, from Iowa, Kansas and Colorado northward the temperature has fallen 20 to 30 degs. during the last twenty-four hours. The highest wind at Duluth last night was at the rate of forty-two miles per hour from the west. Snow or rain fell during Tuesday or last night over Eastern Canada, the lake region, Ohio valley and Pacific coast districts."

LOCAL FORECAST.

Duluth, Superior and vicinity, including the Mesaba and Vermilion iron ranges: Fair weather tonight and Thursday. Severe cold wave tonight with lowest temperature about 20 deg. below zero at Duluth-Superior and along the north shore, and 20 to about 30 deg. below zero inland and on the iron ranges. Moderate to northwest gale, diminishing Thursday.

HEAVY EXPORT DEMAND BULGES WHEAT PRICES

Market Advances Sharply on Reported Liberal Sales for Export.

Flaxseed Bulges With Urgent Bidding By Crushers—Stocks Are Light.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 5.—The market was easy at the close with considerable profit-taking in evidence. A report of the kaiser's death started a break around the close.

May wheat closed 1¾@1¼c up and July 1⅝c up.

May durum closed 1⅞c up.

Oats closed ⅛c up at 43c for on the track; rye unchanged at 93c, and barley unchanged at from 64c to 70c for on the track.

At Winnipeg, May oats closed 1½c up at 45⅜c.

At St. Louis, May wheat closed at $1.22⅞, and July at $1.16¼.

At Kansas City, May wheat closed at $1.17⅝@1.17¾, and July at $1.11⅜.

Puts on Minneapolis May wheat closed at $1.21⅛, and calls at $1.26⅜.

Holders of wheat were able to pull down substantial profits in the wheat market today. Quotations were advanced 3⅛c during the first three hours trading and underlying market conditions were regarded as more bullish than in some time back.

The feature of the local market was the receipt of bids for all-rail shipment and some No. 1 northern wheat is understood to have been bought up here at 1c under May. It is said that this mounted up into good proportions, and that the grain will go forward almost immediately.

Export trade was reported on all the markets. Advices were to the effect that two cargoes had been chartered at Baltimore and foreign trade at the seaboard was estimated to have reached a large aggregate. That feature furnished the impetus for the bulges on the various American markets. Shipments from Argentina are regarded as out of the question for some time to come in view of the high freight rates, and it is thought that only a comparatively limited quantity of Canadian grain can be shipped through their own channels owing to congestion at the seaports. Further cause for the bullish situation was furnished in the opinion of an expert that only 40,000,000 bu surplus of spring wheat above seed and consumptive requirements remains in the Northwest to be marketed during the next six months. That statement tended to confirm holders in their optimistic views.

Receipts of wheat showed a falling off in all quarters. Duluth received just 144 cars today. Minneapolis 316 cars, and Winnipeg was down to 497 cars, whereas they had been running around the 1,000 cars daily mark.

May wheat opened ⅝c up at $1.24, advanced to $1.26⅜, and then eased off 1c around the noon hour. July opened ⅝c up at $1.23 and gained 1½c more.

Good trading was reported in durum. May durum opened ⅝c up at $1.21¼, and gained 2½c more.

Bulge in Flaxseed.

Advances extending up to 5½c were scored in flaxseed. Urgent crushers' inquiry appeared and bullish sentiment was increasingly evident. It was prompted through a realization of the light supplies available and the comparatively small stores remaining in the country, while consumptive requirements for linseed oil manufacture are regarded as certain to be heavy in the spring.

May flax opened ½c up at $2.25 and closed 4c up at $2.28½ asked.

At Winnipeg, May flax closed 4⅛c up at $2.07½.

At Buenos Aires, flax closed 2⅝c up at $1.30⅜ and London unchanged at $2.74⅜.

Broomhall's linseed cable: "Argentine weather is fine and harvesting is progressing with good yields of excellent quality.

"Buenos Aires: Closed strong with exporters buying freely. London opened strong and oil is in urgent demand, being a shilling three pence to arrive."

Foreign crop summary:

United Kingdom—Weather is fine following rain and snow and severe cold. Native offers are light and movement is greatly impeded by weather and reduced railway facilities.

India—Crops are looking well. The weather is generally mild after the snow, and growers express satisfaction with crop prospects on a reduced area.

Argentina—Weather favors harvest.

Australia—Prospects for a large surplus are still maintained.

Italy—Crop outlook is considered generally slightly under normal.

Balkan States—Crop and weather reports are favorable.

Russia—Considerable grain is being purchased by Roumania for reshipment as reported from Odessa.

Germany—Weather is mild with plenty of snow.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Market opened strong with light offers and it further advanced with strength in America and urgent spot demand, with export offers lighter other than American. Spot market was strong, 1d to 2d higher, with urgent demand for Manitobas and winters.

"Cargo market strong, Australian unchanged, Plates 6d to 9d higher with winters and Manitobas 9d higher, and later Manitobas advanced to 1s higher than yesterday.

"Plate offers light and strong; freights render their shipping very uncertain. Millers here anxious as native offers remain light."

The Price Current says: "Trade interest is now centered in the distribution of the crops. The period for a large movement of wheat has passed, and diminution should develop from now on. Estimates of the spring wheat crop suggest from 70,000,000 to 90,000,000 bushels for use between now and next July. Deducting average farm reserves at the July period and interior milling demand, there is about 40,000,000 bushels more spring wheat to come to primary markets within the next six months. Those who have been basing exportable surplus upon the large crops are reducing their estimates and as the season advances, the wheat market will be an interesting one to the trade. Last year there was an unusually large amount of wheat appearing over and above the estimated crop carry-over and consumption. This year the reverse will develop."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Prospects of Diminishing Crop Movement Give Strength to Wheat.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Prospects of a diminishing crop movement from first hands helped today to make the wheat market strong, and so also did reduced estimates of the exportable surplus. Besides, Kansas advices told of an outlook for cold weather and no snow covering in fall-sown fields. Bears were handicapped in addition by reports of green bugs damage in Texas and by continued difficulty of shipping from Argentina and Australia. Opening prices, which ranged from ⅛@¼c to ⅞@1c higher, with May at $1.26@1.26¾ and July at $1.18⅞@1.19, were followed by decided further gains.

May wheat touched the highest price yet on the 1915 crop. The seaboard purchased futures freely and Eastern exporters were active bidders for cash wheat in Chicago to be shipped as soon as possible. Later, however, Minneapolis reports that Canadian wheat was on an import basis counted against the bulls, and so did rumors of the kaiser's death. The close was unsettled at ¾c to 1¼@1⅜c net advance, with May at $1.27⅛ and July at $1.19⅛.

Corn rose as a result of a government report confirming huge crop losses in both quantity and quality. In ten leading states the damage to quality was given as 35 per cent more than usual. After opening ¼c to ¾@⅞c higher, the market continued to ascend.

Buying assumed large proportions, with commission houses especially active, but the market late in the session underwent a setback with wheat. The close was nervous at a net gain of ½c to ⅝@⅞c.

Oats sympathized with the strength of other grain. Trade, though, was light.

Higher prices on hogs and cereals gave a lift to provisions. Offerings were not pressing at the advance.

BULL MOVE IS RESUMED

Climb in Wheat Only Slightly Interrupted—Boats the Key.

Contracts for All-Rail Shipments—Flax Operators See Further Advance.

After a brief pause in the bull movement around the year-end, the wheat market resumed its upward trend during the last two days. As compared with a week ago, cash wheat yesterday at $1.21⅛ is nearly 3c higher.

Duluth operators, generally, feel bullish on the situation, believing that underlying conditions warrant expectations of an active and strong market for several weeks yet. Experts base their faith upon the probability of a heavy demand from Europe for American wheat materializing during the next three months. It is conceded that in view of the present scarcity of steamers to move the Argentine wheat to the British and French markets, and the high freight rates from there prevailing (reported yesterday at 86c a bushel), grain from the South American republic is practically placed out of the competition for the present at least. Foreigners are consequently said to be concentrating their attention upon this country and Canada in the way of obtaining food supplies.

Boat Shortage Main Factor.

The crux of the situation now lies in the ability of the allies to obtain sufficient boats to relieve the long, drawn-out congestion at the seaboard. In view of the immense quantities of merchandise of all kinds awaiting shipment at all the American ports, it is feared that even with the best intentions in the world, the steamship interests may find the task of bringing conditions at the ocean terminals back to anything like a normal state, one of herculean proportions.

A Duluth railroad official said today that he had entered into some large contracts with local grain men covering all-rail shipments to the East, but that at the present he could not set any definite date as to when they are likely to be started. His information from the seaboard, however, leads him to think that emergency measures will be adopted by the British government, which may be productive of results. That export inquiry was renewed yesterday, and received, according to all accounts, in the working of a substantial tonnage, he regards as evidence that definite action may be taken shortly.

Canadian Grain for Duluth.

The receipts of Canadian bonded grain at Duluth are likely to mount up into heavy figures before the present month is over, is predicted by some Winnipeg operators. As a basis for that story it is mentioned that the elevators at Port Arthur and Fort William are rapidly filling up and with grain still flowing in heavily from the three Western provinces, the finish, insofar as the Canadian lake terminals are concerned, is in sight. The Canadian seaports, with their smaller handling facilities, are in even worse position than the American ports, so consequently an almost strict taboo has been effective for some time against the routing of grain to them. In view of that development, the Canadian Northern railroad has already placed an embargo against shipments of grain from the West to its lake elevators, and it is expected that the Canadian Pacific will take similar action shortly.

However, as farmers over the West do not look with favor upon the possibility of their being debarred indefinitely from the privilege of making shipments and in view of the fact that many of them are in need of money, the routing of a considerable tonnage of grain to Duluth is foreshadowed. As a matter of fact, several cars of Canadian wheat have been received here daily during the past month, and much of it has been sold to millers. It is predicted that the handling of bonded grain will become a factor with elevator men between now and the spring months.

Linseed Operations Bullish.

Though under anything like normal crop and merchandising conditions, the present market in flaxseed would be regarded as high, the rank and file of flaxseed specialists are still partial to the long side of the market. As a basis for their views they point to the short crop in this country and Canada. The London figure furthermore has moved up from around $1.80 last summer to $2.74 at the present. That has been prompted by the scarcity of seed supplies and the increasing consumption of linseed oil.

As an additional bull argument it is mentioned that the Argentine exportable surplus of seed for the new crop is estimated at 35,000,000 bushels, or about 8,000,000 bushels short of last year's figures.

Cash flax on the Duluth market at $2.20½, as at its close yesterday showed an advance of 5½c in the week, and is over 14c higher than a month ago.

Greene Cananea Copper Company,

42 Broadway.

The board of directors of the Greene-Cananea Copper company has declared a dividend of $1.00 per share upon its capital stock of the par value of $100.00 per share, payable on Jan. 17 1916, to the holder of such shares of record at the close of business at 12:00 o'clock noon on Saturday, Jan. 8, 1916. The dividend is payable only upon the $100.00 shares into which the capital stock is now divided. All stockholders who have not converted their holdings into shares of $100.00 par value should do so without delay in order that they may receive their dividend promptly.

The transfer books will not be closed.

New York, Dec. 29, 1915.

HEAVINESS IN CLOSING HOUR

Higher Prices at Opening of Stock Market Followed By Decline.

Most Gains of Day Wiped Out Before Session Closes.

New York, Jan. 5.—Higher prices prevailed at today's opening, standard shares, specialties and coppers scoring general gains, with a few unimportant exceptions. Lackawanna Steel was the chief feature, soon advancing 5½ points to 82½, and Tennessee Copper rose a full point. New York Central again led the railway division, opening at a slight decline, but soon advancing sufficiently to recover its quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. The Pacifics and some of the Eastern lines also showed fractional advances. United States Steel was in demand, rising well above yesterday's final quotation. New York Airbrake led the specialties, advancing 3½ to 149, later increasing this gain.

The market developed a feverish tendency soon after the opening, with abrupt declines in various specialties, particularly the war group. Bethlehem Steel fell 15 to 445, Crucible Steel 5 to 65, and oil and motor issues were 2 to 4 points under. United States Steel fell from 88⅛ to 87¼ and rails were similarly affected. The only news to account for the break other than the so-called international situation was a rumor that financial institutions were exercising greater discrimination in their acceptance of industrial collateral. Trading was active on the setback but by midday most losses showed full recovery. Bonds were irregular.

The midday rally carried most shares above their best of the morning, but activity and strength was largely limited to specialties and coppers. Prices fell away on recurrent liquidation.

Liquidation of specialties and bearish activity among investment issues constituted the main features of today's trading.

Most gains were wiped out in the final hour when Steel and specialties registered lowest prices of the day. The closing was heavy.

YOUNGEST OF TRAVELING SALESMEN "MAKES" DULUTH

"Mister" Henry C. Levin, the youngest traveling salesman on the road, is in Duluth today.

"Mister" Levin is 16 years of age. His cheeks have the first fuzzy down of an unshaved boy and a voice that is just changing from a boyish treble to a deeper baritone. He wears knickers and a sweater, but he is a real traveling salesman, has a salary of $15 a week and an expense account of his own. He is traveling for the "Curtis people," otherwise the Curtis Publishing company, and his job is to interest boys in selling the Saturday Evening Post, the Ladies' Home Journal and the Country Gentleman.

Henry's territory is Minnesota and Wisconsin. Arrived in a town, he seeks out the local newspaper and advertises for boys to sell the publications he represents. When the boys respond, Henry outlines his proposition to them. There are three grades of salesmen. The boy first becomes a member of the League of Curtis Salesmen. If he proves his merit he becomes an expert salesman and then a master salesman. When he becomes a master salesman the company guarantees him a position in his chosen line of work after he leaves school. A master salesman must have had three years' experience, during which time he must have kept up his school work to a high standard, for the company keeps in touch with its boys through their teachers and local agents.

After Henry has outlined his proposition, he goes out with the boys and shows them how to get customers. He is an ingratiating little chap, modest in manner, but very businesslike and with a quiet confidence in himself and his "goods." He is an orphan and began life as a Boston newsboy, but graduated to his present position. He makes his home with his brother in Chippewa Falls, but virtually all of his time is now spent "on the road."

"MISTER" HENRY C. LEVIN.

DETAILS OF DEFENSE PLAN PLACED BEFORE COMMITTEE OF HOUSE

Secretary Garrison Presents Formal Argument for Military Policy.

Proposes Creation of Mobile Federal Army Force of 1,000,000.

Says Very Existence of Nation May Depend on Action Taken.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Secretary Garrison laid before the house military affairs committee today his formal argument in behalf of the administration's army plan, which is designed to give the country a definite military policy. It proposes the creation of a mobile Federal force of more than 1,000,000 men in six years, accumulation of a huge reserve of ammunition and equipment and elaborated extension of the coast defenses, the whole project involving an increased expense of $600,000,000 and an annual war department budget thereafter of more than $200,000,000, as compared with an average of $100,000,000 for the last few years.

"The integrity of the nation and its very existence," the secretary said, reading from a lengthy document he had prepared, "may depend upon what is done in this matter at this time. This great opportunity will be lost unless a wise, sensible and practical policy is the result of the consideration and action of this congress."

For Spreading Responsibilities.

Referring to the far spread military responsibilities of the nation, reaching into the insular possessions, China, Alaska and the Panama canal zone, Mr. Garrison added:

"We have determined and announced that the sovereignty of the other republics on this hemisphere shall remain inviolable, and must therefore at all times stand ready to make good our position in this connection.'

"There is a disposition on the part of some," he continued, "to assume that we are facing a crisis. The only way to meet an emergency is by adopting emergency measures. The personnel and material needed for military purposes should be immediately mobilized. Every nerve should be strained, and every resource drawn

NEW PERIL TO U. S. TRADE

England Calls in Ships and May Extend Action.

Virtual Paralysis of Pan-American Traffic Is Possible.

London, Jan. 6.—The government is taking stringent measures to see that the prevailing shortage in ships shall not interfere with the shipment of food and other necessities to ports in the United Kingdom.

Vessels are being requisitioned right and left for the shipment of wheat from the Americas, and in shipping circles it is reported that the admiralty intends to call in the British ships that are now trading between foreign ports.

The latter measure is expected to affect particularly British ships trading between South America and the United States. Shippers here predict that such action would have a disastrous effect on this trade.

May Show British Sea Power.

In the announcement notifying vessel owners that their ships may be requisitioned, the admiralty says:

"The committee rely confidently upon the good will of ship owners generally and their co-operation in arranging for the supply of such additional tonnage as the national requirements may ne-

PAN-AMERICANS VISIT TOMB OF WASHINGTON

Every Delegate to Scientific Congress Makes Trip to Mount Vernon.

Washington, Jan. 6.—This was Pan-America day at Mount Vernon. Practically every delegate to the Pan-American Scientific congress accepted the invitation to visit the home and tomb of Washington.

The attendance at different sectional meetings of the congress in the forenoon was almost up to the average, but the greatest interest shown was in the excursion to Mount Vernon.

The chief point of interest today, however, was the address of President Wilson on the program for tonight. The demand for seats has been so great that instead of in the Pan-American building the president will speak in the larger hall of the Daughters of the American Revolution building.

Urges Broader Field.

Dr. Jose Matos, professor of international law in the faculty of law and notarial practice of Guatemala, urged at the section of international law a broader field for teaching. He advocated a partial codification of international law and warned against the "dangerous doctrine that extreme necessity may determine the just or unjust character of an act and may originate the law."

He said the rudiments of international law should be taught in connection with civic study in the elementary and secondary schools and also in military academies, army quarters and labor circles, supplementing this with a study of the various conventions which regulate the laws and ages of warfare.

NATIONAL BANKS OF CITY SET NEW RECORD FOR TOTAL DEPOSITS

Call of Comptroller of Currency Discloses Nearly $30.000,000.

Gain Over the Last Report on Nov. 10 Is $1,370,829.

Big Increase in Loans Also, Reflecting Business Activity.

With deposits aggregating $29,646,262 as on Dec. 31, Duluth national banks set a new high record in their statements of conditions issued today at the call of the comptroller of the currency. This is a gain of $1,370,829 over the figures of the previous report of Nov. 10 last. These figures are regarded by bankers as gratifying in view of the large disbursements made by the business interests over the year's end.

Activity was reflected in the statements of loans and discounts, which were reported at $22,616,819, an increase of $2,588,612 over the preceding report.

As a result of the banks being better loaned up, cash reserves were reduced to the extent of $1,035,070. Taking everything into consideration, local bankers are looking forward to a fur-

SHIP A MENACE TO NAVIGATION

Thessaloniki Abandoned at Sea After Crew Is Taken Off.

New York, Jan. 6.—The disabled Greek steamer Thessaloniki, which was abandoned at sea by 300 passengers and 120 officers and crew, is still afloat and a menace to navigation, according to a radio message received today by the Anchor line from its steamship Perugia. The message said the Perugia had rescued ninety of the crew and all of the mail from the Thessaloniki, and expected to arrive here tomorrow night.

The passengers and remainder of the crew are aboard the Greek steamer Patris, and, according to previous radio messages, are expected here either late tonight or tomorrow morning.

The message from the Perugia read: "Rescued crew Thessaloniki ninety men and mail, latitude 37.30 north, 66.20 west. Thessaloniki captain reports seacocks open, but ship still afloat. Unless ship sinks, is great menace to navigation. Warned all vessels. Expect to arrive in New York Friday night, weather permitting."

INCREASE IN WAGES OF UNSKILLED EMPLOYES OF STEEL CORPORATION.

New York, Jan. 6.—The United States Steel corporation decided today to increase the wages of virtually all of its unskilled employes about 10 per cent.

NICE NEW AUTO GETS LADY INTO TROUBLE

New York, Jan. 6.—Mrs. Harry E. Klein and her beautiful $5,000 automobile, Christmas present from her husband, sent thousands in Times square fleeing for safety yesterday afternoon as if from an escaped lion.

Chauffeuring was as new to Mrs. Klein as was the car.

She drove upon the sidewalk, pursued matinee crowds at a twenty-mile an hour clip, and finally smashed through the plate glass window of Peter Ferriere's Broadway perfume shop.

TWO MILWAUKEEANS KILLED IN AUTO WRECK

Charles L. Jones and Son Thrown Over Bridge to Tracks Below.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 6.—Charles L. Jones, vice president of the Falk company, and his son Cary, 15, were killed this forenoon, the result of an automobile going through the railing of La Fayette bridge, near McKinley beach, above the Chicago & Northwestern railway tracks, the machine dropping forty feet.

It is thought the accident was caused when Mr. Jones tried to avoid a collision with another vehicle.

Mr. Jones was the principal heir of the will of the late Mrs. Henry C. Payne, recently filed for probate, in which he was made the recipient of $100,000.

Allied artillery has been uninterruptedly shelling the important town of Lens, northeast of Arras.

After prolonged artillery fire the Russians attacked again along the front in Galicia and Bukowina but were nowhere able to break the Austrian lines, according to the statement by the Austro-Hungarian war office received here today from Vienna.

ITALIAN LINER CARRIES GUNS

Giuseppe Verdi Arrives in New York With Two Mounted on Stern.

May Be Requested to Remove Them Before Leaving Port.

New York, Jan. 6.—The Italian liner Giuseppe Verdi arrived here today from Genoa, Naples and Palermo, carrying two four-inch naval guns mounted in the stern. Passengers said they understood the Italian government had been responsible for the mounting of these guns, which were intended to repel any submarine that might have attacked the steamship in the Mediterranean.

After leaving Palermo on Dec. 24 all lights on the Giuseppe Verdi were carefully concealed, and during the day time the steamer covered a roundabout course for the purpose of avoiding hostile submarines.

May Be Dismounted.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The state department probably will take up with the Italian government the question of guns mounted on the liner Giuseppe

SENTENCED FOR LIFE FOR KILLING FATHER

Wausau, Wis., Jan. 6.—Alfred Worley was sentenced in the circuit court today to life imprisonment in state prison for the killing of his father, Peter Worley, about three months ago. He confessed that he entered the house in the evening, hid himself under his father's bed and shot him after he was asleep. He had previously entered a plea of not guilty.

NO PROOF THAT STEAMER WAS TORPEDOED

If Work of Submarine, Nationality of Same Remains Unknown.

Consul at Alexandria Unable to Get Any Further Information.

One Officer Says He Thinks He Saw Wake of Missile.

Washington, Jan. 6.—American Consul Garrels at Alexandria has reported that the affidavits he has gathered from the Persia survivors gave no more proofs that a submarine torpedoed the liner, or regarding its nationality than were contained in his first dispatches.

Ambassador Penfield cabled today he had presented informally to the Vienna foreign office the American government's request for any information on the destruction of the British liner Persia, and at the time of filing his dispatch had received no reply.

Ambassador Penfield was instructed to ask the Austrian government informally for any information it might have on the Persia which would help the American government decide how the liner was destroyed. Consul Garrels was instructed to get affidavits for the same purpose.

Thought He Saw Wake.

ANOTHER AMERICAN LOST ON THE PERSIA

Rev. Homer R. Salisbury, Born at Battle Creek, Mich., a Passenger.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The Rev. Homer R. Salisbury of this city, the Seventh Day Adventist missionary superintendent for India, who sailed on the liner Persia from Marseilles, is given up for lost, in a report which the Peninsular & Oriental line has transmitted to the American embassy in London. The report was transmitted today to the state department. Dr. Salisbury was born at Battle Creek, Mich., in 1870.

Senators Simmons and Overman of North Carolina asked President Wilson today if any further information about the death of Consul McNeely had been received. McNeely was from North Carolina. The president told them that no new facts had come to the government within the last two days, but that every effort was being made to obtain additional information.

SNOW FIFTY FEET DEEP IN COLORADO

Efforts Made to Secure Communication With Gateway Mining Camp.

Grand Junction, Colo., Jan. 6—Efforts to restore communication with Gateway, a mining camp in Southwestern Mesa county, which has been snowbound for nearly a week, were further hampered by a four-inch fall of snow last night which drifted badly in a 50-mile gale. Food supplies, it is feared here, are running low in the town and at isolated ranch homes in the district.

Cattlemen near here planned today to resume efforts to break a trail into Gateway.

In places on the Uncompahgre plateau snow has drifted over 50-foot pines, according to forest rangers.

BRITISH AUTHORITIES SEIZE PAPERS OF CAPT. VON PAPEN

German Attache Makes Protest to American Embassy at London.

British Officials Say Safe Conduct Applied to Person Only.

London, Jan. 6.—Capt. Franz von Papen, the recalled German military attache at Washington, telegraphed yesterday from Falmouth, where he arrived on the Noordam, to the American embassy here, asking it to communicate with the German ambassador in Washington to protest to the state department because the British authorities, he declared, opened his private papers at Falmouth.

Capt. von Papen, in his message, claimed that personal letters and bank books of his were opened and that some of these were retained by the authorities.

Not Worried by Protest.

The British authorities who seized Capt. von Papen's correspondence at Falmouth, are not worried by possible protests, as his safe conduct embraced only the person of the German military attache. Capt. von Papen did not carry any papers or correspondence from the German embassy at Washington, but he had a large number of letters from individuals for delivery in Germany. Thus far nothing comparable with the document found in the possession of James F. J. Archibald on his arrival at Falmouth in the latter part of August, has been found among the seized papers.

Sails for Rotterdam.

Capt. von Papen has sailed for Rotterdam on board the Noordam, leaving some of his papers with the authorities who will decide later on their final disposition. It is explained here that if a safe conduct were allowed to cover the personal papers and effects of the bearer, the belligerents might maintain an excellent messenger service by using expelled officials for that purpose.

SUMMARY OF THE WAR NEWS

The great labor congress in London, that is to decide upon the position of British labor regarding compulsion, defeated by an overwhelming vote today a proposition that the congress should support a measure of compulsion by forcing single men to attest. The vote was 2,121,000 to 541,000.

Lens, the important town in Northern France, which was one of the objectives of the Entente forces in their September offensive, is being uninterruptedly shelled by allied artillery, Berlin announced today.

The Germans report the repulse of a hand grenade attack on their lines northeast of Lemesnil, and the failure of an attack by allied aviators on Douai. Two British aeroplanes were shot down.

On the eastern front a superior Russian force drove back a German reconnoitering detachment south of Jacobstadt, while in Volhynia the Germans dislodged the Russians from one of their advanced positions.

Russian pressure on the Austrian lines from Volhynia southward to Bukowina continues heavy and official reports from both sides indicate that the fighting is of a desperate and sanguinary character.

Reports of the evacuation of Czernowitz by the Austrians have not been confirmed, Petrograd unofficial advices today only claiming that the Russians have compelled the city's defenders to fall back to their secondary line.

The French are pounding heavily on the German trenches in the Champagne and between Soissons and Reims and claim to have inflicted notable damage by the bombardments.

Bulgaria has appropriated $100,000,000 for war purposes, a Saloniki dispatch states.

At Washington the senate committee on foreign relations will meet tomorrow to consider the international situation.

At a conference to be held in London today British laboring men will determine upon the attitude of their organizations toward compulsion.

NO BANKRUPTCY CASES IN FOUR COUNTIES

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 6.—Referee P. T. Looney of the bankruptcy division of the United States court in the Upper Peninsula, makes the informal statement that the number of failures in the peninsula during 1915 was about equal to that of 1914.

He credits four counties out of the fifteen in Cloverland with no bankrupts in the past year, these being Houghton, Baraga, Alger and Ontonagon counties. In all of the other counties there were failures of greater or less moment so that the loss to creditors in the Upper Peninsula during the year was about at the normal level.

Town Character Found Dead.

Lisbon, N. D., Jan. 6.—Mike Boland, known for years as a local character, was found dead in his shack on the East side. Indications are he had been dead two or three days before discovered. Asphyxiation is thought to have been the cause.

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Easily and Cheaply Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex and make it into a pint of cough syrup, and watch that cough vanish.

Pour the 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effective remedy, at a saving of $2. A day's use will usually overcome a hard cough. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste. Children like it.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

STORY OF THE OPENING OPERA OF THE DULUTH ENGAGEMENT

SIGNOR ANGELO ANTOLA,
Baritone in Role of Henry Ashton.

"Lucia di Lammermoor" is a grand opera in three acts, by Donizetti. The action takes place in Scotland, part in Ravenswood castle, part in the ruined tower of Wolfscrag. The time is the close of the sixteenth century.

The story: Sir Henry Ashton, brother of Lucy, has arranged a marriage between her and Lord Bucklaw in order to recover the fortune he has dissipated. Sir Edgar of Ravenswood, his enemy, is deeply attached to Lucy, who reciprocates his love, and upon the eve of his departure for France, pledges herself to him.

During his absence Edgar's letters are intercepted by Sir Henry, who finally persuades Lucy that Edgar is untrue to her. Overcome with grief she at last consents to become the bride of Bucklaw.

Just as she has placed her name to the fatal paper, Edgar returns. He tramples the marriage contract under foot, curses the house of Lammermoor and departs in a terrible rage. Sir Henry follows and a duel is arranged.

Meanwhile, at night, after the newly wedded pair have retired from the scene of the festivities, a noise is heard in their apartments. Attendants rush in to find Lord Bucklaw dying from wounds inflicted by Lucy, whose grief has made her insane. Returning to reason, the horror of the situation overcomes her and death puts an end to her wretchedness. Ignorant of her fate, however, Edgar goes to the church yard of Ravenswood where his duel with Sir Henry is to be fought. As he waits the bell of the castle tolls, and attendants tell him the news of Lucy's death. The despairing lover kills himself and the somber story ends.

FRENCH OFFICIAL WAR PICTURES WILL BE SHOWN IN DULUTH

Beginning Sunday, Jan. 9, and continuing for four days the Lyceum will present the New York World's official French government motion pictures of the war. These remarkable pictures were taken under the orders of the general staff of the French army for the national archives, and were secured for exhibition in the United States and Canada, for the World by its correspondent, E. Alexander Powell, who spent several weeks in securing the official consent of the government officials. They were presented in New York city a few weeks ago and so great was the demand to see them that it was necessary to secure no less than five theaters all of which presented them at the same time.

One of the many interesting pictures shown is what is called "The Steel Walls of France." Infantry in columns of division come down the field, their ranks stretching as far as the eye can see. Then come the batteries, horses galloping, the great guns lumbering along in a cloud of dust. A dog—probably the pet of the battery—trails in the wake of the "seventy-fives." Another turn and the cavalry rides onto the scene, the hoofs of the thousands of horses pounding the turf. This is only one of the many thrilling scenes shown in these pictures which were taken by the official corps of camera men of the French government.

One has only to follow these camera men into the battlefields of Champagne and Metzeral, and to swing along the battle front from the dunes of Flanders to the forests of Alsace, and he will feel that he is an eyewitness of all the spectacular phases of the great conflict.

Although these pictures show the allies' side of the war they are sure to be interesting to everybody no matter on which side their personal sympathies may be. During the engagement at the Lyceum they will be shown continuously from 1 p. m. until 11 p. m.

AT LEAST THREE WAYS OF PLAYING HAMLET

There are at least three ways of playing Hamlet which Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson will present at the Lyceum next week.

The first way is to be a monkey. It is quite possible for a player to present Hamlet without in the least understanding the character as a whole or having formed the smallest idea of the intention of the play. All that is required for a monkey's Hamlet is that the player should repeat in turn speeches of wrath, surprise, terror, doubt, melancholy or mirth as they are set down in the text and such a player often succeeds in conveying emotions of great tragedy and imposing himself upon simple bodies as an interpreter of Shakespeare. As an actor once said—it is impossible to fail altogether as Hamlet.

The second way of playing Hamlet is to be a clever person. A clever person reads Hamlet through and invents a theory. Hamlet was mad; or he was not mad. He was irresolute; or he was a man of action. A clever person, having made up his mind upon this point or that, proceeds to fit every passage of the play into his theory, and to build up a Hamlet which is clean and water tight.

The third way of playing Hamlet is to be a great actor. The great actor has come to know Hamlet—to be Hamlet. The perfect technical equipment which Forbes-Robertson brings to the interpretation of Hamlet, is generally conceded. The thing that really matters is not so much that he has this remarkable technical equipment but how he employs it. Forbes-Robertson's Hamlet gives one in a heightened degree the same sure exultation to be had in reading the tragedy with no clever person at one's elbow with infamous suggestions.

Theater Gossip.

The program laid out for the remainder of the week at the popular New Grand consists of a diversity of vaudeville offerings and photoplays.

SNAPPY NEW SHOW AT GRAND.

In the spotlight position are "The Komical Kops," described as twenty minutes of song and laughter. Miss Ethel Underwood is featured among the singers and the well known comedian, Sammy Wright among the funmakers. There is plenty of life and spirit throughout the routine.

A pot pourri of novel eccentricities make up the offering of the Australian Creightons, who do a little bit of everything in the way of entertainment. Chabot and Dixon are singers and instrumentalists.

Howard and De Lares have a repertoire of clever songs and some snappy patter.

"Her Lesson," a two-reel photodrama featuring G. M. Anderson and telling a beautiful story of love and devotion, heads the photoplays. "From Blackstone to Stone," a comedy; "The Inevitable," a drama, and the Hearst-Selig News make up the rest of the program.

Here is another "Eternal Triangle," a brand new kind of a "Vampire" story that leaves one wondering if the "Woman" did the right thing under the circumstances. The feature now at the Rex stars Katherine Kaelred and is called "The Winged Idol." In brief the story tells of Jack Leonard, who is fast going to the "bad" by the drink route. In a drunken daze he staggers into the apartment of the Countess Iva Ivanoff, a Russian seeress. She sees in the millionaire derelict the ideal man she has dreamed about, despite his demoralized appearance. The fiery countess has her big Cossack servant whip him with a knout. He faints under the blows of the whip but on his recovery a change has been wrought and the result of this awakening leads to a climax that is startling and unlooked for, leaving one to question in his heart, "What was the right thing to do?"

KELLIHER CASE IS BEING CONSIDERED

Issuance of License in Dry Territory Arouses Indian Agent.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 6.—Henry A. Larson, special agent of the Indian department in charge of law enforcement in the Indian country of Northern Minnesota, conferred yesterday with Governor J. A. A. Burnquist and Attorney General Lyndon A. Smith about co-operation of state officials with the Federal service.

The village council at Kelliher, which is in the Indian country, issued a license Tuesday night to J. O. Harris to open a saloon. Governor W. S. Hammond had some time ago ordered county attorneys in that district to prosecute all illegal sellers of liquor, and the attorney general has taken the position that the state can prosecute.

Mr. Larson went to Kelliher last night to see what can be done, and expects to be at the capitol for a further conference with the state authorities on Monday.

DEBTS PAID; MONEY LEFT

Western Canadian Farmers Taking Southern Trips, Says Former Duluthian.

Never So Prosperous; Best of Young Men Are Enlisting.

That business is resuming normal proportions in Western Canada, after the slump caused by the outbreak of the war, is the news that is brought from Saskatchewan by John Shea, formerly in the shoe business in Duluth, and now hotel keeper in the western part of that Canadian province.

Mr. Shea left Duluth for Western Canada about five years ago, and returned last evening on his first visit. He will spend some weeks here and in other points of the American Northwest. He will return to Saskatchewan in the spring, for he says that business is good and there is no reason for business men there to complain.

Mr. Shea said last night that Canadian farmers are rich this year.

"Men on farms in Western Canada," he said, "reaped a harvest of dollars as well as a harvest of grain last fall. The crop was enormous—far greater than many people suppose. Men who had land there, and who had started farming with but little and got along for a few years, paying their way, but with not much over, owing to the fact that they had to meet back obligations, found themselves last fall in an independent position. I don't know of one in our part of the country, who was paying off back debts incidental to getting started, who did not clear off his list and find himself with a surplus. Hundreds of farmers fared so well through the immense crop and big prices that this winter they have gone to their old homes, and some of them to the Southern climates to spend the winter. They have left their farms and stocks in the hands of employes and are taking a rest. And they can well afford to.

Enlistment General.

Asked about the war, and Canada's enlistment, Mr. Shea declared that the enlisting of the better class of men in Canada amounts to an epidemic.

"It is the better class of young men who are going," he declared. "We are losing the men we can least afford. The worthless, never-do-wells, who hang around idle or with never more than a temporary job, the kind that would not be missed much, are the ones who are shirking enlistment. With the better class of men, there seems to have been and still exists, a madness to do something to help save the empire. Storekeepers have left their business in the hands of their families and employes and have gone to the front; bankers have deserted their desks and answered the call of the king, and farmers have left their land to be worked the best that those who remain can do it, and have joined the colors. It seems to be a shame, in a way. And an awful lot of those who have gone have already been killed, and many more of our good men will never come back.

"The case of one young man in our town is a fair example of the fever that has spread. He was from 'the Old Country' and was employed in a bank in another town, and was supposed to look after the interests of his family in Canada. The manager of the bank in our place enlisted and this young man was sent there to take his place. The latter's two brothers were already at the front, but he had been asked by his family not to enlist as somebody was expected to stay to look after affairs. He was on needles and pins all of the time, and could talk scarcely anything but the duty of men to go to the front. Finally he could stand it no longer, and one day simply 'beat it.' The last I heard of him he was in a school for military instruction in Winnipeg to qualify for a commission. The call was too strong for him.

"It is the same with the French up in that country. Young and old, they have quit their businesses and either have gone or tried to go back to France to fight.

"Canada is meeting the demands of the empire for men to protect her far better than most of the colonies, it seems to me, and one cannot help feeling sorry that the best the dominion possesses are the ones who are being sacrificed."

FORMER GUARDSMAN NOW WAR LECTURER

It is a far cry from "covering" the annual Minnesota militia maneuvers at Camp Lakeview for the newspapers, to being a regular war correspondent in the European battling.

This is the step effected by E. J. D. Larson of the Minneapolis Tribune, who has just returned after being to the front for his paper. Mr. Larson has been engaged by Col. F. E. Resche on behalf of Companies C and E and the Duluth naval reserves to give a "war-ologue" here at an early date.

Mr. Larson has had considerable National Guard experience, first enlisting in the old Fifth Provisionary Wisconsin regiment, then in their order was connected with Company M, First Wisconsin; Company D, First Minnesota, and Thurston Rifles, First Nebraska regiments.

BUYS 1,400 ACRES OF FARM LANDS

Part of Big Tract Will Be Reclaimed By Purchaser.

A heavy deal in farm lands was put through yesterday in the purchase by John G. Williams from the Boston & Duluth Farm Land company, of 1,400 acres on the Rice and Swan Lake roads. Reclamation of the portion of the tract that is swamp land is proposed by Mr. Williams, and other extensive improvements will be made. This transaction is regarded by real estate operators as interesting in showing the increasing call for farm lands tributary to this city. It is conceded that considerable developing of presently occupied tracts and increasing settlement is foreshadowed.

PAPERS WERE SOAKED.

Hope Felt That Documents in Pilgrim Corner Stone May Be Deciphered.

Oscar Mitchell, who has charge of the box that was taken out of the cornerstone of the old Pilgrim Congregational church, recently razed at the corner of Lake avenue and Second street, is still in doubt as to whether or not the contents will be decipherable. He said today that he has hopes that some of the documents in the box will prove well enough preserved to read them at the meeting which the trustees will hold this month.

The box was put in the cornerstone many years ago, and it was left unsealed through an oversight. In 1887 the church passed through a fire and in rebuilding, the same cornerstone was used. It is thought that at that time water used on the fire penetrated the box, for when it was opened after the building was torn down recently, the contents were found to be soaked. Since then the box has been in Mr. Mitchell's office, and the papers in it have dried out enough so that the characters on them are plainer. It is hoped that by the time the meeting is held, it will prove possible to read the papers.

PRESIDENT WRITES TO HEAD OF TUSKEGEE

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 6.—Maj. Robert Moton, recently chosen principal of the Tuskegee normal and industrial institute for negroes, in succession to Booker T. Washington, yesterday received the following letter of congratulation from President Wilson.

"My Dear Principal Moton—I am sure I am giving voice to the feeling of the vast majority of those interested in education in this country and particularly in the education of the negro, when I express my gratification of your election as principal of Tuskegee Institute. I have known something of the special work you have been trying to do for the people of your race, and of the spirit in which you have undertaken it, and I believe that your selection as the head of Tuskegee institute means the promotion there of the best, most practical and most hopeful ideas for the development of the negro people. I take pleasure in extending to you my sincere congratulations. Very truly yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

JOBBERS ARE OPTIMISTIC

Business More Active Now Than in Several Years.

Some Sensational Changes in Price Lists Have Taken Place.

Optimism is the keynote in Duluth wholesale trade circles.

That business is the most active in several years at this season is the consensus of opinion, and in all quarters it is considered that conditions were never more promising at the opening of a year than at present. Extended selling campaigns have been mapped out by the sales departments of the several houses, and in carrying them through hearty co-operation on the part of salesmen was promised at their conventions held here during the holiday season.

"When we entered 1915 in fear, and trembling as to what it might bring forth, we are beginning the present year with the most sanguine expectations possible," said a salesman today. That is about typical of the sentiment all along the street.

Big Hardware Advances.

The changed commercial conditions are considered to be reflected in the hardware trade in a more marked degree than perhaps in any other line. It is pointed out by the Kelly-How-Thomson company, and the Marshall-Wells Hardware company, that sensational changes have materialized in price lists and that the demand for all lines of goods the country over is exceeding the most sanguine expectations.

In going over the list for examples, it was mentioned that iron bars have gone up from $1.10 a year ago to $1.90 per 100 pounds. Copper products have advanced 50 per cent and rubber is quoted at $1 a pound, as compared with 51 cents last January.

During the past few days iron pipe and shovels quotations have each been advanced 5 per cent. Wire nails have gone up $2 a ton and wire screws 30 per cent.

Drygoods Trade Brisk.

"The new year opens up very favorably," remarked an official of F. A. Patrick & Co., wholesale drygoods, this morning. "Our advance business for spring delivery booked during the last three months of the old year largely exceeded on Jan. 1 the amount of business booked during the corresponding period of the year previous. Our salesmen report low retail stocks, which together with a much larger business at retail throughout the country, means good business for the wholesaler. Our wool products salesmen left for their territories yesterday and from the manner in which this business is keeping up right up to date it indicates a big demand for the Patrick-Duluth merchandise for 1916.

"Our New York office, under the charge of Alfred Hanchett, has already organized its corp of salesmen who are now actively engaged working the Atlantic border states. The balance of the country is being handled direct from the Duluth office.

"Of course, as at present, most unusual conditions will continue to present themselves from time to time so long as the war continues. Certain merchandise will become very scarce, some perhaps entirely unobtainable, but we shall have to adapt ourselves to such conditions. There will undoubtedly be a strong tendency to advances in prices of most commodities so long as money continues to be cheap and plentiful, but as it becomes more actively employed, this tendency will probably slacken."

Paper Quotations Up.

The Duluth Paper & Stationery company averred that 1915 had been a satisfactory one all round with it, and a substantial increase in volume of sales is counted upon during the next twelve months. An additional traveler has been engaged by the house to cover the Copper country, and the inside force at the company's warehouse has also been increased.

Paper prices were reported to figure out as the highest in years, due to the scarcity of pulp, bleaching powders and sulphides. The outlook is for still higher prices on some lines. The market in building papers is strong and considerable future orders are being placed, as dealers expect further advances.

Shoe Factory Busy.

Salesmen of the Northern Shoe company were at headquarters in force during the holidays. They will start out next week with their samples of rubbers and felt goods for next fall's delivery. Advances in these lines are forecasted as the prices of raw materials are on the upward trend.

The local shoe factory is said to have been busier during the last three months than in any previous period in its history. Contrary to the rule in past years, operations were resumed immediately after a brief closing down for stocktaking.

Heavy Trade Gains.

"December was a remarkable business month with us, said C. E. De Witt, president of the De Witt-Sietz company. "Our volume of furniture bookings showed an increase of 98 per cent compared with the corresponding period in the preceding year. The business appeared to come well distributed from over the territory. The Copper country, North Dakota and Montana were especially prominent. H. F. Sietz, vice president of the company, is at present attending the furniture markets at Milwaukee, Cheboygan, Mich., Chicago, and Grand Rapids, Mich.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK CONTINUES GOOD

Continued Improvement Reported in Monthly Statements of Reserve Banks.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Continued business improvement over the country generally is reflected in the monthly reports from the twelve Federal reserve districts, made public last night by the Federal reserve board.

The outlook for 1916 in the Minneapolis district was reported as excellent, with all lines of business optimistic. The lumber trade continues to revive and again is approaching normal.

Chicago reported general improvement in business and manufacturing with manufacturers, retailers and wholesalers doing business on an "even more than normal basis."

Holiday trade exceeded expectations with high-priced articles more in demand.

Improvement in the Boston district has continued with "renewed vigor," says the report from that district.

Trade in the New York district is reported as unusually active and still expanding with retail and department stores doing a large holiday business, and wholesalers receiving heavy buying orders. Loans of banks in the New York clearing house increased $146,041,000 between Nov. 1 and Jan. 1, deposits increased $124,234,000 and excess reserves decreased $37,357,000.

Outlook Promising.

Philadelphia reported general business conditions in its district still improving with banks declaring the outlook most promising. Factories are running full time, pay rolls are large, and in the iron and steel industry, the unusual demand has led to the repairing and putting into operation of iron furnaces that have been idle for years. Railroads have given large orders for cars, locomotives and other supplies that "were unlooked for a few months ago."

Requirements of steel buyers in the Cleveland district were reported as great enough to insure that the entire year's output would be taken care of.

Prospects throughout the St. Louis district are excellent in all industries.

Kansas City reported that probably at no time in the history of the district had wholesale trade been so satisfactory.

Lumber and oil industries are unusually active in the Dallas district with increased prices that give promise of permanency.

Leading railroads in the San Francisco district report record earnings and are buying ties freely with a good effect on the lumber business. The need of ships at ports of the district has been aggravated by the closing of the Panama canal.

General activity and expansion in all lines was reported from the Atlanta district and sound and permanent prosperity predicted for 1916.

ST. CLOUD PIONEER IS CALLED AT 77

St. Cloud, Minn., Jan. 6.—George Hansen, a pioneer resident of St. Cloud, died yesterday afternoon at the hospital. He was 77 years of age and had been a resident of the East side for the last thirty-two years, being at one time owner of the hotel. For many years he was justice of the peace. Mr. Hansen served in the Civil war. He leaves his widow and four children, Mrs. Frank Beaudreau, St. Cloud; Mrs. John Hagberg, St. Cloud; Mrs. J. J. Pontius, St. Cloud, and Mrs. George Black, Mankato.

NO QUARTER, SAYS TAFT

He Holds G. O. P. Should Concede Nothing to Bull Moose.

Accuses Progressive Leaders of Seeking Self-Aggrandizement.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 6.—The Cincinnati Times-Star, owned by C. P. Taft, brother of the ex-president, publishes a letter from its Washington correspondent, Gus J. Karger, giving an outline of the ex-president's views with regard to the suggestion that Theodore Roosevelt may be the Republican presidential nominee in 1916, or dictate the choice of the Republican national convention, if Col. Roosevelt's personal ambition shall not be realized.

Karger was closely identified with the cause of Mr. Taft in 1908 and 1812, acting as his press representative. What he says with reference to Mr. Taft's opinion is accepted as authoritative by his Washington colleagues.

Seek Personal Glory.

Karger quotes Mr. Taft as follows, explaining that the interview presents the ex-president's views without committing him to the language:

"Regular Republicans have shown no disposition to make themselves conspicuous in the political discussions of the day. Assured of the survival of their party, of its rehabilitation and restoration to a position of aggressiveness and militancy, they have been careful to throw no difficulty into the path of the returning brethren. Their silence seems to have been misinterpreted. Leaders of the old progressive movement have taken advantage of it for purposes of self-aggrandizement.

"And some of the leading men of congress, although not identified with the progressive defection, anxious to remain in the good graces of both factional elements, have been playing a game of 'good Lord and good devil'—a game that can't be played successfully at this or any other time. It is this attitude on their part which has encouraged the Democrat-Progressive propaganda looking to the nomination of Col. Roosevelt or to that of some candidate of his choice and selection.

Not Dependent on Bull Moose.

"But the Republican party will be maintained as a Republican party. It will not become a Progressive party, with the fads and isms contemplated by the change. The returning Progressive will have standing in the Republican party; but that of the regular Republican who did not stray cannot be impaired. The Republican party is not dependent on the Progressive leaders for success in the next campaign. The Progressive voters who have come back attached no conditions to their coming.

"The leaders who are left without support are using their genius for publicity to the greatest advantage in order that they may create the impression that they are really leading a large force which they will throw one way or the other as the nomination of the Republican party shall happen to please or displease them; and the most radical mistake the Republican party can make is to sacrifice its principles either in its platform or in the character of its nominee for the purpose of securing their support.

How the G. O. P. "Can Win."

"If the Republican party will nominate a regular Republican, it can win; and if it cannot win with a regular Republican, it ought not to win in any event. The backbone of the Republican party is in the business men of the country, and they want a true note struck as to business conservatism and a medium course prescribed in the matter of peace and war preparedness. If the plan should be to conciliate the Progressive leaders, at whatever cost, it will be at a cost merited by such a course. Even though victory could be secured by a flabby promise, it would avail nothing, for the party would divide again as it did before.

"Real Republicans will protest against the adoption of any colorless, opportunist policy in dealing with men with whose views the delegates to the convention are not in real sympathy; they will protest against any attempt to induce them to support the Republican party by making allowances in advance for their feelings, in the hope and possible expectations of pursuing a subsequent course which shall not gratify those feelings. It is the timidity shown by certain Republican leaders in asserting the principles of the Republican party which gives color to the absurd suggestion, the ridiculous proposal, that any other than a real Republican shall be the Republican nominee or take part in determining the choice of the Republican national convention."

DEAL IS HELD UP.

Injunction Prevents Purchase of Bagley Schoolhouse.

Bagley, Minn., Jan. 6.—At the request of residents of Clearbrook, Judge C. W. Stanton in district court issued an order restraining the Clearwater county commissioners from buying the school building at Bagley to be used as a courthouse. Clearbrook residents ask for a permanent injunction, and the case is set for hearing Jan. 13.

The present courthouse here is very inadequate. Many offices are in other buildings, there is no vault space and the place is a fire hazard. Independent School District No. 2 at Bagley has a modern school building, but it is too small, and a new one is desired. The commissioners offered the school district $10,000 and a site for its school property. At a special election last week the offer was accepted by the school district. The restraining order now is brought to stop the exchange.

It is believed to be the beginning of a fight by Clearbrook citizens to get the county seat.

HAMMOND MEMORIAL.

Governor Burnquist to Name Committee to Receive Funds.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 6.—The resolution adopted at a meeting held Tuesday of intimate friends of the late Governor Hammond asking Governor Burnquist to appoint a memorial committee to receive funds for the proposed monument to the late governor was presented to Governor Burnquist Tuesday night.

Governor Burnquist stated that he is in favor of the movement and will appoint the committee within a few days.

It was suggested in the resolution that the committee consist of twenty-five members each from Ramsey and Hennepin counties, fifteen from St. Louis and five each from the remaining counties of the state. The appointment of George H. Prince, chairman of the board of directors of the Merchants' National bank, as treasurer of the committee, also was urged.

The governor was asked to name later a monument committee of not less than seven nor more than eleven members to complete the memorial after the funds have been pledged.

Two Men and Two Plans

Both are savings depositors at the First National Bank. Both had saved $500. One, thinking he would "get rich quick," drew out all his savings, "invested" on margin through a stock broker, and lost everything. Now he must start saving all over again.

The other asked our advice and then invested his $500 in a good bond yielding 5½%. He still has all his money, gets $27.50 a year income on it and is saving to buy another bond. The compound interest on his savings and the income from his first bond will shorten the time it takes him to get the second one.

Which, do you think, is the better plan?

MORE DETAILS ASKED OF BANKS

Call for Condition Goes Further Than Any Previous One.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The comptroller of the currency today issued a call to all national banks requiring them to report to him their condition at the close of business on Friday, Dec. 31.

In today's call the comptroller goes further than at any previous time to learn if money is being loaned by national banks in violation of state usury laws. He asks for a list of loans by all banks during 1915, "upon which interest was charged or collected, either in the shape of interest, discount or commission, at rates which would amount to more than the equivalent of 6 per cent per annum."

Banks Cautioned.

"Banks are cautioned," says the call, "to prepare this statement with care. When this report is received national bank examiners will be instructed to verify the reports submitted by some banks, and if discrepancies should be discovered the examiners will be given instructions accordingly."

The call also asks banks to state whether it is their custom to require borrowers to carry deposits when loans are granted, how much they are now loaning to non-depositors and how much is loaned and not secured by collateral.

The aggregate of amounts which borrowers have refused to pay banks because of alleged usury is asked, and also the total payments made by banks as penalties for usury. The call asks for complete information as to the connections of officers and directors of any bank in other banks or trust companies, their salaries, liabilities as payers or endorsers and guarantors of paper, and the amount of over-draws against them.

ABOUT 300,000 BABIES DIE BEFORE ONE YEAR

The Census Bureau estimates that 300,000 babies died in this country last year before the age of one year, and it is stated that one-half of these deaths were needless if all mothers were strong and infants were breast-fed.

Expectant mothers should strive to increase their strength with the strength-building fats in Scott's Emulsion which improves the blood, suppresses nervousness, aids the quality of milk, and feeds the very life cells.

Physicians prescribe Scott's Emulsion; it is doubly important during nursing. No alcohol. Every druggist has it. Insist on Scott's—the white-food medicine. No advanced prices.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOL FOR GRAND FORKS

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 6.—Plans and specifications for a new Catholic parochial school in Grand Forks were accepted at a meeting here of a committee composed of the leading members of the church and Rt. Rev. James O'Reilly of Fargo.

The new school will be located at the corner of Fifth street and Dakota avenue, between the city auditorium and the pro-cathedral. It is estimated that the expense of constructing the building will be between $30,000 and $35,000.

The committee has decided to ask for bids on Jan. 24 and the construction of the parochial school will be commenced as soon as the contract has been let. It is hoped by those who are behind the project that the school will be completed by next fall.

The order of sisters to take charge of the school has not been considered by the committee, that matter being left entirely to the clergy.

The ground for the school was purchased recently.

GRAND FORKS BANK CLEARINGS SHOW GAIN

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 6.—Bank clearings for the year 1915 in Grand Forks exceed those of 1914 by more than $2,500,000, according to information received from the local clearing house.

The clearings for 1915 amounted to $22,606,600, while in 1914 the total was $20,005,700, another striking indication of improving business conditions in this city.

GRIP IS A SILK STOCKING DISEASE

SAYS DR. KLEIN—

FEW STATION LODGERS TROUBLED

Grip is a silk stocking disease, if you take Police Surgeon Harry Klein's word for it.

When police told him that coughs, colds and sneezes were rare among the scores of tramps who nightly seek lodging on a basement floor at headquarters, that was his answer.

"Men used to exposure seldom are victims of pneumonia," he said. "It attacks those who live in warm houses and who bundle up so carefully every morning before they start out."

Grip is waning under the persuasion of sub-zero temperatures, and the 1915-1916 epidemic soon will be over, doctors say.

It has been a success as an epidemic for various reasons. One of the principal ones is that it has inspired the following ode to the most miserable of all human beings—a lover with a bad cold.

The ode is entitled "To Bary Jade," and here it is in all its pathos, with all its throbs:

"The bood is beabig brighdly, love;
The sdars are shidig, too,
While I ab gazig dreabily
Add thigig, love, of you.
You caddot, oh! you caddot kdow,
By darling, how I biss you,
(Oh, what a fearful cold I've got)
Bk-tish-u! Bk-ck-tich-u!

"I'm siddig id the arbor, love,
Where you sat by by side
Whed ad that card, autubal dight
You said you'd be by bride.
Oh! for wud losed to caress
Add tederly to diss you;
Bud t' do! We're biles apart
Ybo-rash-o! Bk-ck-tush-u!

"This charbig evedig brigs to bide
The tibe whed first we bet;
It seebs but ody yesterday,
I thigk I see you yet.
Oh! Tell be, ab I sdill your owd?
By hopes, Oh, do dot dash theb'.
(Bodfoud by cold, 'tis gettig worse).
Bk-tish-u! Bk-ck-thrash eb!

"Good-by, by darling Bary Jade!

RAILROADS

RATE WAR ON IN CANADA

C. N. and C. P. R. Fighting Each Other in Western Provinces.

The Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern railroads are now engaged in a bitter rate war in the West.

With the entry of the Canadian Northern into the field as a transcontinental road a few weeks ago, reductions in rates to and from Edmonton and many other points in the West went into effect. The Canadian Pacific immediately retaliated by clapping on a charge of $20 a car for switching Canadian Northern freight over its Vancouver terminals. The Mackenzie & Mann interests threaten to appeal to the railway commission, but the Canadian Pacific sets up the claim that its rival has no standing before that body in the Far West for the reason that several years ago it agreed to give the British Columbia government absolute control over its rates in that province. The Canadian Pacific furthermore sets out that the provincial government cannot enter the fight because it has no jurisdiction over it.

Cripples Canadian Northern.

The point involved is considered to be a very big one and as likely to lead to a long dispute. Canadian Northern tracks at present end at Port Mann, sixteen miles from Vancouver. To connect up with Vancouver and the lower mainland industries and warehouses will take several years. It is claimed that in the event of the Canadian Pacific sustaining its claims, it may be able to collect most of the profits on Canadian Northern freight shipments to British Columbia for some time through the charges it may impose for the use of its terminal facilities.

RAIL EARNINGS NOW ABNORMAL

Western Roads Net Big Profits; Eastern Roads Also Prosperous.

According to reports coming out railroad traffic is in abnormal volume in all sections of the country. That is particularly the case in the West.

For November the Milwaukee road reported net earnings of $3,722,540, as compared with $1,646,072 last year. Without considering other income, it is estimated that the Milwaukee's surplus for its common stock in the five months ended Nov. 30 was upwards of $7,900,000, equal to 6.7 per cent on its $117,406,000 common stock. The inclusion of its outside income would bring its earnings up to 7 per cent.

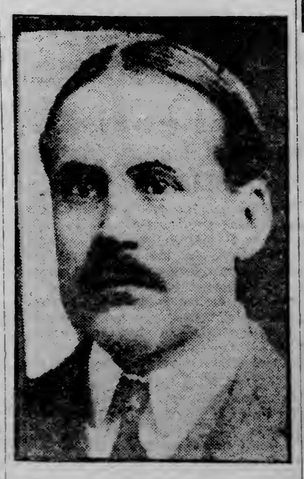

During November $2,000,000 of the road's $2,500,000 gross gain in income was saved for net and in the five months the net increase was larger than the gross.

The railroad position in the East is also favorable. The New York Central line's gross increase for November was reported at $7,400,000 over the same month in 1914. Its net revenue after taxes gained $6,546,211. For eleven months its gain was $28,669,017.

UNCLE SAM WINS ACTION AT FARGO

Gets Judgment for Extra Amount Paid for Building Site.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the United States district court here Judge C. F. Amidon returned judgment of $867.28 for the government in its case against the Hodgson Realty company, which grew out of the purchase of a considerable amount of property on Eighth street north as a site for the proposed new government building.

The government entered into a contract with the Hodgson Realty company to act as the government agent in the purchase of property for the proposed new Federal building. Among property on which options were secured was that of Taylor Crum, but this option was allowed to lapse and when the time came for closing the deal, Crum asked considerably more for it. In order to secure it the government was compelled to resort to condemnation proceedings. The court costs of these proceedings amounted to $867.28, and the government, through District Attorney Col. M. A. Hildreth, brought action for the recovery of the amount from the Hodgson company.

Both the government and the defendant company agreed to waive hearing by jury and the case was heard before Judge Amidon, who returned a verdict for the government in the amount with interest at 6 per cent from Aug. 4, 1914.

No appropriation has been made for the proposed new building here and it is not believed that the matter will be brought up at this session of congress.

Masons Trying to Locate W. H. White Who Dropped From Sight.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Masons here are exerting every effort to locate W. H. White, leading member of the various bodies here, who until the last election was master of Shiloh lodge, No. 1, A. F. & A. M. Not since last Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock has Mr. White been seen.

The only clew available so far is that when seen last he was in Moorhead and stated that he was going to Minneapolis. It was noticed that he was acting in a rather peculiar manner and the party to whom he made the statement believed that he was just joking. However, not the least trace can be found of him in the Twin Cities, although prominent Shriners there have employed private detectives to assist in the search.

Mr. White is secretary of the Stone Piano company of this city and has always been held in the highest esteem. The missing man is approximately 38 years of age, is 5 feet 4 inches tall, is portly, round face, dark brown hair, large blue eyes, and when last seen was wearing a dark suit, soft hat, black overcoat. He wears a Masonic ring and pin. He is also an Elk.

MAIL CARRIER IS ACCUSED OF THEFT

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 6.—Albert Rockstad, formerly a rural mail carrier on Rural Route No. 3 out of Wyndmere, is being tried in the United States district court here on a charge of opening a letter, removing and cashing a check for $7 which was made payable to Willie Rath.

One of the principal witnesses for the government was J. McCann, formerly cashier of the Wyndmere bank, now living in South Dakota, who positively identified the defendant as the young man who appeared at the bank, presented the check for payment, claiming to be Rath, and indorsing the check in that name. This, he said, happened during the holidays of 1912.

JUDGES HEAR TALES OF BROKEN WEDDING VOWS

Eighteen Applications for Freedom From Wedding Yoke Already Granted.

Cruelty, Desertion, Drunkenness, Are the Chief Causes Cited.

Stories of deserted wives, broken pledges and forgotten wedding vows are being poured into the ears of district judges while the divorce mill is grinding this week. Since yesterday noon no less than twenty-one applications for relief from matrimonial yokes have been received and considered by the court, and in all but three instances decrees have been granted.

Judge Ensign this morning held open for further testimony the case of Anna Lipinski, 35, against August Lipinski, 35. They were married in this city on Nov. 20, 1904, and are parents of four children. She testified that he had been guilty of cruelty of almost every conceivable sort. While they were living in Fort William, he subjected her to a severe beating and for this he was arrested and sent to the Toronto penitentiary for one year. On June 24 last, she claimed, he deserted her.

Adolph Lundberg, 26, painter by trade, imbibed too freely from the cup that cheered, according to the story which Eva Dorothy Lundberg, 21, his wife, told Judge Fesler this morning. The consequence was that he often struck her and cursed her. Last June, she said, she was obliged to have him arrested for failing to contribute to the support of the family. They were married in this city July 13, 1912, and are parents of one child, a daughter, aged 3. The court granted the decree.

* * *

When Dmitar Zdjilar, 24, tried to imitate the prehistoric cave man and rushed after his wife with a weapon in his hands, neighbors interfered and restrained him. Then he had to be content with simply calling his spouse vile names and abusing her in other ways. In Judge Dancer's court this morning, Ljuba Zdjilar, 21, told the story of their married life. It was one long nightmare until February of 1914, when he deserted, she says. Mrs. Zdjilar was granted an absolute divorce. They were married in Croatia on Sept. 15 1910.

Assaults, both physical and verbal, were made upon Myrtle R. Walker, 26, by her husband, Charles T. Walker, 27, according to the former's testimony before Judge Ensign this morning. After listening to the story, the court granted a decree. She stated that they were married Feb. 16, 1909, in New Lisbon, Wis., and are parents of one child, a boy of 6. When his conduct became unbearable, she said, she left him.

Matrimonial freedom was granted Margaret Giberson, 39, who married Grafton Giberson, 54, at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., in May 1897. She claimed that he abandoned her during the month of June 1911. The family consists of five children, the custody of whom was given to the mother. The children range in age from 16 to 14 years.

* * *

Gertrude Mitchell, 27, drew a decree from Clifford J. Mitchell, 30, this morning in Judge Fesler's courtroom. Gertrude and Clifford were married the day before Independence day in 1909 and lived together for a time. In October of 1912, she said, while they were living in Ishpeming, Mich., he deserted. She claims to know nothing of his present whereabouts.

* * *

Two years after Mary E. Oven, 38, married Fred Oven, 43, she regretted her mistake. But the wedding was back in 1896 and now Mrs. Oven is the mother of six children. Since 1898, she claims, her husband's cruelty has continued with few interruptions. Judge Fesler granted a divorce to her yesterday afternoon.

* * *

James W. Parker, 46, is seeking a legal separation from his wife, Clara R. Parker, 36, to whom he was united in marriage at St. Paul during the month of brides in 1908. She lived with him just one year and then she left him, he told Judge Cant this morning. The Parkers have one child. Judge Cant has held the case open for further testimony.

* * *

Judge Fesler this morning took under advisement the application of Mary Joleaud, 43, for a divorce from Oliver Joleaud, 39, whom she married in this city on Jan. 18, 1910. Mrs. Joleaud testified that her husband had deserted her on June 9, 1914.

* * *

Rose M. Gosselin, 51, is no longer the wife of Joseph A. Gosselin, 51. Yesterday afternoon, Judge Fesler granted her a decree of divorce. Mrs. Gosselin told the court that they were married in Limestone, N. Y., on March 26, 1894, and that they lived together until April 3, 1911, when Gosselin deserted.

On the grounds of desertions, decrees were granted today to Caroline M. Drake from Ferris S. Drake; Janie Witt from Albert Witt, and Dorothy E. Tupper from John A. Tupper. The Drakes were married Dec. 26, 1883, and parents of one child. She is 49 and he is 60.

Three weeks after Frank J. and Elizabeth D. Keenan were married at Breckenridge, Minn., in February of 1914, Elizabeth, then a girl of 16, returned to her mother's home in St. Paul and refused to live with her newly acquired life mate. Keenan was then a traveling salesman employed by the Marshall-Wells Hardware company out of Wahpeton, N. D. Later a child was born, but the wife and mother again refused to live with him.

Keenan returned to Duluth. He is now employed as night clerk at the Lenox hotel. The child, now aged 18 months, is with the girl's mother in St. Paul. Judge Dancer granted Keenan a divorce decree yesterday afternoon. Keenan is 26.

Judge Ensign late yesterday granted a decree of divorce to William C. Manke, 50, from Irene Manke, 40, on the grounds of desertion. Mrs. Manke contested the case, claiming that she was driven from the home because of Manke's cruelty. She left him in January of 1914. Mrs. Manke's charge of cruelty was not substantiated. They were married on July 9, 1907, and are parents of one son, aged 3. The court ordered Manke to pay his wife $15 a month for her support and $15 a month for the support of the child. He was also ordered to pay $30 attorney's fees to his wife's counsel.

Failure to establish the fact that the required year had elapsed from the time that his wife deserted him until he filed suit for divorce against her prevented Matt Palo, 37, from securing a legal separation yesterday from Maybelle Palo, 26, whom he married on Aug. 1, 1912. Palo alleged that she departed from his household on Sept. 15, 1914, but when the evidence disclosed that the time that had elapsed fell short of the requirement, Judge Dancer dismissed the case.

* * *

Lillian C. Maher came into court yesterday afternoon with the expectation of securing a decree of divorce from her husband, Cornelius A. Maher, a dock worker. Maher was in default, having been notified of the suit and not having filed an answer. Just before the case was called, he engaged Attorney T. J. McKeon to appear for him. Judge Dancer granted a postponement until Friday and permitted Maher to file an answer in the case denying his wife's charges.

Judge Bert Fesler yesterday granted Carl August Nordstrom, 54, a divorce from Rusina Levisa Nordstrom, 47, on the grounds of desertion. They were married in Finland on April 23, 1888, and are parents of five children. Nordstrom alleges that his wife left him on April 1, 1911.

* * *

On the grounds of desertion, Mrs. Edith McLaren was granted a divorce from Marvin Clark McLaren and awarded $50 monthly alimony for a period of thirteen months, at the end of which time other arrangements as to alimony will be made. They were married at Jackson, Mich., on Oct. 14, 1903, and she alleges that he deserted her on May 30, 1914. The decree was granted by Judge Fesler.

* * *

Judge Ensign severed the matrimonial ties between Martin Otis Springer, 33, and Anna Elizabeth Springer, 27, who were married in this city on Nov. 9, 1910. Springer testified that his wife left him on Oct. 12, 1912. There are no children.

Helga C. Wallace, 20, and Frank Wallace, 22, married at Virginia on April 1, 1912, but their wedded bliss was short. On Aug. 15, 1912, or thereabouts, Frank took French leave. Once after that she heard he was in Canada, but she never knew. There is a child, aged 2, the custody of whom Judge Ensign granted to the mother. She was also given an absolute divorce.

MILK BOTTLE GETS TWO MEN ARRESTED

All It Did Was to Hit One Man in Eye.

In a West end restaurant there is an empty milk bottle with a history. Here is its tale of adventure:

On Christmas night Lloyd Warner had some words with H. W. Johnson, proprietor of the restaurant, which is at 2531 West Superior street.

Johnson hurled the milk bottle. It struck Warner's eye, blackening it, and Warner, growing excited, backed out through a plate glass in the front door.

Johnson had Warner arrested for malicious destruction of property, and Judge Smallwood fined him $10 and costs.

Today Warner swore out a warrant for Johnson, charging assault "with a milk bottle," and Johnson was arrested in due time.

He pleaded not guilty and will be arraigned Monday afternoon.

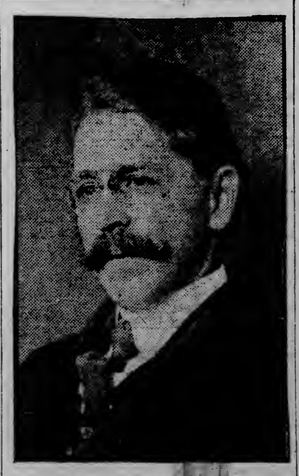

The bottle never wants to work at its plebian trade of carrying milk again, for it has had a touch of high life.

CLEARINGS ALMOST DOUBLE THOSE OF 1915

Activity in general business in Duluth is being reflected to a marked degree in the record of weekly clearings. For the week ended today clearings were reported at $6,362,360, as compared with $8,849,742.54 for the corresponding period last year, showing a gain of $2,512,617.46.

Sensational gains in bank clearings have been the rule at this point during the last two months.

Don't Forget the January

WHITE SALE!

COPS MAY GET SALARY RAISE

Commissioner Silberstein Is Trying to Figure $5 Monthly Boost.

Indications are that the patrolmen will be granted a monthly salary increase of $5, beginning July 1, next.

Commissioner Silberstein, head of the safety division, said this morning that he and Police Chief McKercher have agreed to this salary program and that he will take it up with the other commissioners before formally recommending it. As the members of the commission have favored a raise for the patrolmen, it is generally believed that this plan will go through.

Last summer the patrolmen petitioned Commissioner Silberstein for a blanket raise of $10 a month for each member of the force and since that time the safety head has had the matter under consideration. His plan at first was to give the men an advance of $2.50 a month, beginning Jan. 1, but the patrolmen suggested that the raise be $5 and that the new schedule start on July 1.

Commissioner Silberstein has been working on the condition of the finances and is of the opinion that he can work out the $5 increase within the budget authorized last October.

As soon as Commissioner Silberstein has definitely decided on the number of men to receive the raise, he will place the matter before the other commissioners. If it is acceptable to them he will make the recommendation when the council considers the 1916 salary schedule to be authorized next week.

Roberts, Wis., Burglary.

Roberts, Wis., Jan. 6.—The general store of Postmaster A. E. Hafer was again robbed. Nitro-glycerin was used on the safe and $300 in stamps and money secured. Considerable damage was done to the fixtures, store and merchandise. It was evidently the work of amateurs, as much more than the required amount of explosive was evidently used.

VETERAN PASSENGER AGENT IS PROMOTED

R. C. Haase Bids Farewell to Railroad "Boys" in Duluth.

R. C. Haase, formerly Northwestern passenger agent of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad for the territory comprising the Twin Cities and Duluth, is here today on the last trip he will make to the Head of the Lakes for some time. Mr. Haase will leave tonight for Philadelphia, where he will assume the duties of district passenger agent of Philadelphia, Jersey City, Atlantic City, and all the territory adjacent to the big Quaker burg.

Harvey C. Strohm has succeeded Mr. Haase and is in the city today, making the passenger rounds and getting acquainted with the Head of the Lake railroad men.

Mr. Strohm was formerly employed as traveling passenger agent of the B. & O. at Omaha, Neb., receiving the promotion as Northwestern passenger agent as the reward of efficient service.

Mr. Haase was tendered a dinner in St. Paul last evening and will be the host at a gathering of railroad men in St. Paul this evening.

Duluth railroad men express real regret because of the going of Mr. Haase, though they are pleased at the promotion he has received.

"Sir—For Duluth and Duluthians the new year is ushered in under auspicious conditions and circumstances of heretofore unknown promise. Commercial and industrial activity prevails and in ever-increasing measure. Building is active, labor is well employed and remuneratively so. A new and highly significant era in the development of manufacturing in the Northwest has arrived through the opening in this city of a new $20,000,000 plant of the Minnesota Steel company. Social and industrial peace prevails. A spirit of altruism and cooperation is dominant.

TO STOP BAD COUGH

SOOTH DRY, IRRITATED THROAT WITH PARMINT SYRUP—SAYS THIS OLD-FASHIONED COUGH REMEDY IS BEST.

We are told that the old-time remedies are best and invariably contain less harmful yet better medicine than those which are in use today. This being so, undoubtedly the following old-fashioned recipe which is quick acting will be welcomed by many, as there seems to be a regular epidemic of coughs at the present time. Secure from your druggist 1 ounce Parmint (double strength), take this home and add to it a quarter pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granuated sugar, stir until dissolved. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day. No more racking your whole body with a cough. Clogged nostrils should open, air passages of your head should clear and your breathing become easy. Parmint syrup is pleasant to take, easy to prepare and costs little. Every person who has a stubborn cough, hard cold or catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

NEW VOTING SYSTEM FOR DULUTH IS PREPARED

Non-Partisan Primary on State Plan Is Favored.

Re-Establishment of Old Non-Salaried Boards Is Discussed.

Duluth's new voting system was decided upon by the sub-committee of the city charter commission at a special meeting held at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the offices of T. T. Hudson, chairman of the commission and the committee. In addition, the members took under consideration an amendment providing for the re-establishment of the old non-salaried water and light, library and park boards.

Phelps Submits Outline.

At the opening of the meeting H. H. Phelps, a member of the committee, submitted an outline of an election system for the city of Duluth, providing for one registration day, a combined registration day and primary, and a regular election day. It is a revision of Chapter VI of the charter, with the non-partisan primary plan following out as much as possible the system now in force in state elections. Several features of the amendment have to be changed and, as a result, another meeting of the committee will be held within a few days to take final action. In the meantime, Mr. Phelps will prepare new drafts of the amendment, Mr. Hudson announced this morning.

The members of the committee favor a revision of the entire chapter and it has been agreed to submit this election system to the general charter commission. That body will also vote on it and, if it receives the approval of a majority of the members, then the amendment will be presented to the city council with a request that a special election be called for a vote on the measure.

The members of the committee present yesterday were: Chairman Hudson, H. H. Phelps, John G. Williams and City Attorney Samuelson, who was last week appointed a member of the commission by the district court judges. Because of his position he has been selected by Chairman Hudson as a member of the sub-committee. Chester A. Congdon, the fifth member of the committee, was unable to attend the special meeting yesterday.

Want Old Boards Back.

During the discussion yesterday, Chairman Hudson announced that he has received a large number of requests from Duluthians to re-establish the old water and light, library and park boards. Provision for the establishment of all of the old boards is made in the charter, but the commissioners have not acted on it, and it is probable that an amendment ordering the boards will be prepared. The members of the charter body feel that if the voters of Duluth want these boards in operation then it is up to the council to re-establish them. In order to learn the exact public sentiment the amendment may be prepared.

According to the tentative plan, the council will select four citizens for each board, the commissioner at the head of that particular department serving as chairman of the body. For instance, the mayor would be chairman of the library and park boards, as these two divisions are under his jurisdiction.

Those favoring the re-establishment of the old boards say that the charter commission in framing the present charter provided for the continuance of the bodies, but that the council members have not seen fit to continue them. That there would be more harmony and a greater saving of time and money by the appointment of non-salaried boards is the belief of many, according to Chairman Hudson. He brought the matter before the members of the committee and it was decided to make a more careful study and submit the proposition to a vote at the next meeting.

Changes Favored.

Mr. Phelps' amendment, including a revision of chapter VI, from sections 37 to 50, provides for a regular election on the first Tuesday of April, 1917, registration days on the second Tuesday in March and the Saturday following, both days preceding every regular election, which shall come each second year after 1917. The primary day shall come on the second registration day for the choice of nominees to be placed on the ballot for the regular election. Applicants for office must file their candidacies, together with a fee of $10, with the city clerk at least thirty days before any primary.

The primary ballot will be made out at least ten days before the election and there will be two choices for each office to be filled. No political designation is to be indicated on the ballot, the primary being absolutely non-partisan.

The two highest candidates for each office to be filled will have their names placed on the ballot for the regular election. All official ballots are to be in the form of the Australian ballot used throughout the state. The maximum expenditure of $500 is included in the amendment, as are the other detailed features of carrying on the election, canvassing and counting of votes, now embodied in the city charter.

COAL OFFICIALS INSPECT DOCKS

T. B. Davis, president of the Island Creek Coal company; R. S. McVeigh, E. P. Merrill and W. H. Groverman, officials of the same company, are in the city today inspecting the property of the company here.

At the Kitchi Gammi club today President Davis declared that business conditions were undergoing a remarkable improvement, and that speaking from every standpoint, the present year looked promising.

HAD NO USE FOR SOAP.

Truckman Scoffs at Idea of His Stealing Cleanser.

Paul Trudeau's specialty is furnishing alibis.

On various occasions he has come within the range of police vision and each time he has a brand new excuse to prove that he did not commit the crime of which he is accused.

Now he is "in" for stealing a box of iron bolts (value $5) and a box of soap (value $5) from the Omaha railway.

"I had been drinking too much. I've been working down at the freight house and we were trucking stuff into the house from the box cars.

"The iron plank slipped and those two boxes fell down between the car rails and the shed. I was too tired to go after 'em, so I let 'em lay on the ground. Then they accused me of trying to steal the stuff.

"Can you imagine me stealing soap? What'n h—— would I do with soap?"

He will be given a hearing tomorrow afternoon. Trudeau was arrested last night by Detective Bradley.

TWO MENTIONED FOR PRIVATE SECRETARY

Charles S. Mitchell of Duluth May Be Selected By Governor Burnquist.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—State capitol gossip today was to the effect that Charles S. Mitchell of the Duluth News Tribune was under consideration for the position as private secretary to Governor Burnquist. Mr. Mitchell is a Republican and formerly published a paper at Alexandria. He was considered for the secretaryship when R. C. Dunn was a candidate for governor and when Governor Eberhart entered office.

The name of Ernest Lundeen of Minneapolis is also being mentioned. Governor Burnquist refused to discuss any of the rumors going the rounds of the building. He said he had taken no action in the matter of his personal appointments and would not do so for some time.

The executive department was thronged yesterday with visitors, many of whom called to say a good word in behalf of a friend, but today the chamber was practically deserted. The governor's statement of yesterday that he would not disturb the employes in his office, for the present at least, evidently had its effect.

MOORE QUITS TRACTION CO.

Superintendent Resigns Job After Seventeen Years—May Raise Chickens.

Will Rest After Continuous Hard Service—Brown Succeeds.

Tired, after seventeen years of adjusting the traction company's service problems, keeping together an efficient corps of motormen and conductors, watching for any public gathering and having street cars on the scene to handle the crowds, and being the recipient of any kicks that may be registered by the street car patron who "stood on the corner for ten minutes," Douglas C. Moore has quit.

Mr Moore has been superintendent of the Duluth division of the Duluth-Superior Traction company, and he wants a rest.

He is a chicken fancier, and is president of the Duluth Poultry association. While he has no definite plans for the future aside from taking a rest, he may change his occupation from "goat" to chicken farmer. He has often talked about it, and poultry is his hobby.

Still a young man, Mr. Moore has worked for twenty-five years and feels that he has earned a rest. So this winter he will "loaf"—if he can.

Capable Successor.

He has been succeeded as superintendent by Harry H. Brown, who has been with the company for four years. It was Mr. Moore's plan to retire on Jan. 1, but at the request of General Manager Warren, he has continued on for a few days to acquaint his successor with the duties more fully.

Mr. Brown, the new superintendent, has had experience in every department of the company during the four years he has been here, and is believed to be well fitted to succeed Mr. Moore. Some years ago he was superintendent of a small road near Waterville, Me., and during that time took a night course in electrical engineering at Colby college. On leaving that institution, he came west, and four years ago came to Duluth.

upon and nothing overlooked necessary to preserve and defend us, regardless of cost and of other considerations.

"There is common agreement among those who have studied the subject intelligently that we should have a force in the continental United States of 500,000 men subject to call.

Immediate Problem.

"Our immediate problem, therefore, seems to be how shall we meet these requirements.

"The adjutant general reaches the conclusion that he cannot expect under present conditions, to recruit more than 50,000 men per year for the army. It would therefore seem impracticable in the last degree to consider that the problem can be solved by providing for a standing army of the size necessary for this solution."

Turning to the national guard, Mr. Garrison said:

"At this time this force consists of approximately 129,000 men and officers, and it would therefore be necessary if it is to be expanded to 400,000 to add 271,000 men and officers.

"I, therefore propose a large addition to the Federal aid extended to the national guard, so that the system may be operated to its maximum capacity and be available for the Federal purposes specified in its most effective condition.

Continental Army Plan.

The secretary then outlined the continental army plan which proposes to raise 400,000 men in annual increments of 133,000 each from districts approximately the 400 congressional districts, each to supply 333 men annually. The men would enlist for three years with the colors and three years on furlough, and be armed, equipped and officered. Their training would be done by the officers and men of the regular army organization and they would be paid during the time of their service on the same basis as the regular army.

Turning to the question of the size of the regular army necessary to train the continentals and carry on the various military activities of the war department in normal times, Mr. Garrison said it had been demonstrated to him that a mobile force of 50,000 and 20,000 coast artillery troops would serve all needs. Such a force, an increase of nearly 40,000 over the present army, he said, would be comparatively inexpensive, would require no additional quarters and could be recruited.

Addition Recommended.

For these reasons he recommended the addition of ten regiments of infantry, four regiments of field artillery, fifty-two companies of coast artillery, fifteen companies of engineers and four aero squadrons to the present force, bringing the enlisted strength in two years up to 134,707 and the number of officers to 7,986.

"The officers and men of the new organizations are absolutely essential if the war department plan is to be fairly tried out," he added. "In the plan of the war college division of the general staff, an army of about 250,000 is so distributed that in continental United States, there would be left 121,000 mobile army troops. In the war department plan, these divisions are at peace strength, so that they are capable of expansion. The war college division plan proposes a two-year enlistment, with six years in reserve, and, eventually, at the end of eight years, makes up a line of 500,000 men of the regular army, of whom 121,000 would be with the colors and 379,000 in reserve."

NEW PERIL TO TRADE OF THE UNITED STATES

cessitate from time to time in the trade now in question, or in any other for which similar action may be required."

The last sentence is considered as significant corroboration of news already received by charterers that the government intends to make full use of its undoubted power to control completely the british mercantile marine.

The assertion of such power means the inevitable injury of foreign traders who depend largely on British ships for the carrying of goods.

Coffee Trade Menaced.

For example, it is reported on the Baltic shipping exchange that the American coffee trade, which is largely dependent on British ships, will be vitally injured by any considerable withdrawal of these vessels, for sufficient neutral ships to take their place do not exist.

Other trade with South and Central American ports will suffer great damage if the requisitioning plan is extended to British ships trading between foreign ports.

Italy Seizes Ships For War.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 6.—Advices to shipping interests here said the Italian government had commandeered for transport purposes twenty-seven steamships of the Pearce-Cottoneira and Creole lines, which maintain regular sailings between Italy, New Orleans, Galveston, and other gulf ports.

RUSSIANS PERSISTENTLY BOMBARDING AT LENS

for this reason the Austro-Germans are trying with the utmost tenacity to hold their positions.

The following official communication was issued today:

"Western Russia front—South of the Pripet in the district of Kouksoutzkavolia, we repulsed the Germans.

"In the region of the middle Stripa, we have consolidated the positions won. Attempts by the enemy to retake the works he previously lost, were repulsed with great enemy losses.

"Northeast of Czernowitz sharp fighting continues. We have taken further hostile positions. The enemy's counter attacks were repulsed by fire which inflicted huge losses.

"One of our units in this region captured eighteen officers and 1,043 men and four machine guns.

"Caucasus front—In the River Rika district we repulsed the Turks and demolished their blockhouses in make sections."

tending to prove that the ship was torpedoed came from one of the officers of the ship. He said he saw what he thought was the wake of a torpedo. No submarine was seen at any time.

The absence of further definite advices is holding the situation, so far as any action by the United States is concerned, at a standstill.

Chairman Stone of the foreign relations committee discussed the international situation with the president again today.

The president told Senator Stone no additional information of importance had been received on the Persia incident and expressed the hope that until the government had formulated its policy there be as little discussion as possible in the senate.

Story of Lord Montague.

London, Jan. 6.—Lord Montague has cabled from Malta to the News the following details of the sinking of the Persia:

"Our ship was struck without any warning at about 1:10 p. m. and sank in a few minutes. All our passengers were enjoying lunch when a big explosion occurred on our port side abreast of the forward engine room.

"Boats were lowered rapidly and the passengers rushed to get lifebelts, but three boats were smashed while they were being lowered. Many persons were thrown into the sea.

"The Persia then heeled over so much to the port side that it was impossible to stand. She then turned over and sank, stern first, many severe explosions taking place when the water reached the fires.

Swept Off Deck.

"I was swept off the deck and sucked down. When I came to the surface I found myself surrounded by human beings battling for life. We saw three boats, bottom upwards and each struggled to get hold of any wreckage floating about.

"After we had been in the water several hours, many having died in the meantime, we were finally rescued after great difficulty by the Alfred Holt liner Ning Chow and proceeded to Malta soon after daylight.

"There were several Americans on board, very nice fellows they seemed.

Lucky to Be Saved.

"I am extremely lucky to have been saved. Our chances of being picked up on a dark night from a piece of wreckage appeared extremely doubtful. There appears to have been very little panic and the Lascars acted very well.

"I think it was due to the third officer in charge, Donald MacLean, the vigilance of the lookout and the excellent seamanship of the captain of the Ning Chow in maneuvering his vessel alongside the broken boat that we were rescued.

"All the officers of the Persia appear to have been lost. Robert McNeely, American consul at Aden, is known to have been drowned."

Verdi with a view of having the pieces dismounted before the ship leaves American waters.

The guns on the Verdi promise to bring up again a point which has been disputed on since the war began. At the outset of hostilities the United States took the position that ships entering American ports with guns of not more than six inches in caliber, mounted well aft for purposes of defense, would not be considered armed, but reserved the right to change its position in the light of changing conditions.

The state department later had informal negotiations with Great Britain and France and asked that any guns whatever be removed from the big passenger liners coming into American ports. The two foreign governments complied.

State department officials expressed the view today that the Italian government would probably be asked informally to dismount the guns on the Verdi before she sails from the United States.

MERCURY AT LOW MARK OF WINTER

means higher temperature—the "above zero" kind.

It has been extremely cold throughout the Northwest during the last twenty-four hours, the lowest temperature reported being from Manitoba, where the mercury dropped to 34 degs. below zero.

South and southwest of this section the country has suffered severely, drops in temperature in the last twenty-four hours being from 10 to 50 degs. At Springfield, Ill., for instance, the temperature at 7 o'clock yesterday morning was 54 degs. above zero, at 7 o'clock this morning it was only 6 degs. above.

It is claimed today that the coldest job that one could have was that of milkman. The members of that "profession" get up with the birds in summer and in winter make the birds look like loafers for the birds rise with the sun while the milkmen rise with the demand for milk. The preparation to meet the demand started about 3 o'clock in the morning, and at that hour today the mercury was registering 25 degs. below zero.

To make it still worse for the milkmen, that temperature held on until sun-up, and at 7 o'clock, just in the middle of the peddling period, the temperature was still as low as 22 degs. below zero. At 10:30 o'clock, by the time the milkmen were getting pretty well finished up on their routes, the thermometer was still down to 10 degs. below, and their whole career today has been in a frost that was trying.

Drivers of all kinds of vehicles in business caught it strongly. No delays to traffic were caused so far as known, and no accidents are reported. The best jobs in the city were those alongside a furnace, according to men who had to be outside.

The thermometer had gotten no nearer zero today, up to the time of going to press than 3 degs. below.

Cold in Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—The coldest weather of the winter thus far was recorded in Chicago last night, when the thermometer registered 7 deg. above zero. The municipal lodging house took care of the largest crowd of men it has sheltered this winter, and all of the cheap hotels were filled to overflowing.

Heretofore this winter the municipal lodging house has been deserted; as compared with former years. The reason has been the new order that "if you sleep here you saw wood," meaning that those who are given free beds must work on the municipal wood pile in payment for their lodging.

The influence of the wood pile was illustrated by these figures, made public today: In December, 1911, 103,441 men were given free beds at the city's expense; last month the total was only 8,719.

Seven Below at La Crosse.

La Crosse, Wis., Jan. 6.—The temperature fell to 7 deg. below zero here today, the coldest of the winter. Mail services are demoralized, trains running from three to five hours late. Considerable suffering was caused to poor families unprovided for the sudden decline of the thermometer.

Below zero temperatures prevailed today across every state from Montana to Michigan. Lowest temperatures in this section were Escanaba, 16 below zero; Green Bay, 10 below; Madison, 2 below.

35 Below at Virginia.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—D. J. Quickstad, local science teacher, who takes weather observations for the United States weather bureau, reported today that this morning was the coldest in Virginia in two years, his thermometer registering 35 degs. below zero at 7 a. m., and 33 below at 8 a. m.

25 Below at Cloquet.

Cloquet, Minn., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Cloquet experienced its coldest weather of the winter today when thermometers registered 25 degs. below at 7 a. m. With a clouded sky it is gradually rising, reaching 22 degs. at 8 a. m. With a clear sky late last night and 20 degs. below, predictions were that it would register 30 below by morning, but the sky clouding during the night kept the mercury from reaching that mark. The steam thawing apparatus of the water department worked all day yesterday thawing out pipes and hydrants and will doubtless have to be on the job all day today.

VOTE 2 TO 1 AGAINST RECALL OF MAYOR

Unofficial Returns Show Great Victory for J. G. Woodward of Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 6.—Complete unofficial returns on a special election on the proposed recall of Mayor James G. Woodward and five members of the Atlanta police commission showed majorities of approximately two to one against the recall. The recall was asked because the police commission of which the mayor is an ex-officio member, reduced James L. Beavers from chief of police to a captaincy.

EIGHT LOST WHEN RIVER BOAT SINKS

Steamer Kanawha Goes Down in Ohio at Dam No. 19.

Gallipolis, Ohio, Jan. 6.—It was reported here today that eight lives were lost when the river packet Kanawha sank below Parkersburg, W. Va., last night. Those drowned were said to include Steward Lloyd Gee and Purser Bert Wolfe of this city, a watchman and five passengers, including four women and a child, the names of whom could not be learned here today. Government inspectors in this district were planning today to investigate the disaster.

Thinks Some Lost.

Parkersburg, W Va., Jan. 6.—Capt. Brady M. Berry and sixty-two of the passengers and crew of the steamer Kanawha, which sank in the Ohio river at Dam No. 19 last night, arrived here early today on a special train sent out by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company to pick up the survivors scattered along four miles of river front on the West Virginia side. Capt. Berry said that while he saw no one in the water and did not know that any had been lost, he felt there had been fatalities and was waiting for daylight to return to the scene of the disaster, when a thorough search would be made on the West Virginia and Ohio shores of the river.

LABOR CONGRESS DEFEATS MEASURE

Opposes Proposition to Support Compulsion of Single Men.

London, Jan. 6.—The temper of the labor congress was tested today by an amendment to the official resolution to the effect that the congress should support a measure of compulsion by forcing the single men to attest. The amendment was defeated on a card vote by the overwhelming majority of 2,121,000 against 541,000.

Arthur Henderson, president of the board of education and leader of the labor party in the house of commons, served notice on the labor congress today that if it decided that he should oppose the government's compulsion bill he would refuse to accept such decision; that he would immediately resign his seat in the house of commons and would ask his constituents whether they endorsed his actions or not.

BUILDING OF ILLINOIS STEEL COMPANY BURNS

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Fire in the South Chicago plant of the Illinois Steel company last night destroyed a three-story brick building known as the electrical appliance storage house. Officials of the company declared the company had no direct war munitions contracts but said that a number of articles were being made by the company for American manufacturers and that these products might be used in munition making.

The fire department placed the damage at $10,000. The cause of the blaze was not determined.

Lindbergh has written a letter to Chairman Henry of the house committee on rules, giving the latter until next Tuesday to take some action on Lindbergh's bill for a revision of the rules. BREAK UP BRONCHIAL COUGHS, CROUP AND COLDS PROMPTLY

Make the Best Remedy at Home—128 Teaspoonsful for 50 Cents.

Don't neglect your first cold, cough or any Bronchial affections, this fall, but commence treatment immediately, and through using the proper medicine, it can be checked from the very start and promptly cured, but if neglected probably will hang on all winter; if it does not develop into something more serious, such as Pneumonia or Consumption. True, there are hundreds, yes thousands of cough remedies on the market. While some are good, there are many which are not, but are positively harmful, due to the narcotics which they contain. But why experiment with these different remedies purely on the strength perhaps of some testimonials or on the exaggerated claims of manufacturers, when Schiffmann's New Concentrated Expectorant is sold by the Lyceum Pharmacy on such a positive guarantee to give perfect satisfaction, yes even more—money will be refunded by them if it is not found the best remedy ever used in Severe Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough or Croup, and it will also be found excellent for Bronchial Asthma and Bronchitis. Besides these druggists guaranteeing "that it will be the best remedy ever used," it will likewise be found the most economical, because one bottle (50 cents' worth) makes a full pint (128 teaspoonsfuls) of the most excellent medicine for any of the above affections, when mixed at home with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of water. It makes as much, or more, than would cost you $2.00 to $3.00 of almost any of the ordinary ready-made kinds, sold in bottles holding only 24, to 32 teaspoonsful. You will be the sold judge yourself and under the same positively "Money Back" guarantee which the druggists make for the famous Asthmador. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy.

Society • Women's Clubs • Music • Drama

WOMAN owes the leap year privilege primarily to Sosigenes of Alexandria and his associate astronomers, who, in the time of Julius Caesar, about 45 B. C., decided that every fourth year should consist of 366 instead of 365 days. It was convenience, and not the matrimonial problems of the fair ones that caused the astronomers to make some years different from others.

The fact was, and for that matter still is, that it required 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 49 7-10 seconds for the earth to revolve around the sun. As this computation would make it difficult to recognize at just what instant the old year goes out and the new year comes in and would cause some inconvenience in blowing whistles, ringing bells and furnishing climaxes for watch parties, the extra day was inserted. Leap years are those which are evenly divisible by four, except the century years, as 1900.

Leap Year Proposals.

It is not known how or where the custom of leap year proposals originated, but as early as 1828 a law was passed in Scotland to the effect that every leap year an unmarried woman should have the liberty to propose, and provided that every man who refused an offer of marriage, provided he was not already betrothed, should pay a fine in proportion to his means. A few years later a similar law was passed in France. That the leap year practice, if not a law, was observed in Italy, may be gathered from a biographer of Columbus, who says that the great discoverer received several leap year proposals.

Will Somers, the famous jester of Henry VIII of England, furnished much amusement to the court by having the maids at the palace propose to him. Each maid was refused, but was given a silk gown as a reward.

In England, in the early part of the Eighteenth century, the men made merry on Feb. 29, drinking to the health of the women they thought would propose to them. Even in the Nineteenth century women proposed to men, often at skating parties, and the men who cut fancy figures were likely to receive more proposals than those who knew only the garden variety of skating.

Silk Gown With Refusal.

The thrifty practice of giving a woman a silk gown with a refusal, on the trading stamp principal, instead of undertaking to supply her with gowns, silk and otherwise, for the rest of her days, was practiced for a time, but was stopped because it imposed too great a financial burden. Many maids and widows, more bent upon dress than matrimony, took an unfair advantage of leap year to replenish their wardrobes.

The leap year practice has come down to the present day but in the denatured form that calls only for parties at which the young women act as escorts to the young men.

EVENTS OF TONIGHT AND TOMORROW.

Irving S. Cooper will lecture on "The Garment of God" (stereopticon) at 8:15 o'clock tonight at the Little theater.

Miss McMillan Becomes Bride of R. S. Mushrush

Miss Marjorie McMillan and Roy Stanton Mushrush were married at 8 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McMillan, 113 East Fifth street. Rev. George Brewer, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. Miss Edythe Elmquist was the bridesmaid and A. Edward McMillan, brother of the bride, was the best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The ceremony took place in a bower of azaleas and evergreen.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and silk net, made short and caught with lilies of the valley. Her veil was arranged with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of Bride roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a turquois blue taffeta gown combined with silk net, made shepherdess style. She carried pink Killarney roses. The bride's mother wore silver gray crepe de chine.

Before the ceremony Miss Dorothy Close sang "I Love You Truly" and "Because." Her accompanist was Miss Harriet Close, who played the "Lohengrin" march as the processional and "Mendelssohn's march as the recessional.

The ceremony was followed by a wedding supper. A basket of pink flowers was the centerpiece in the dining room.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Emmett and son, Edwin, of Two Harbors.

The bride wore a dark blue traveling suit, with black velvet hat. After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Mushrush will be at home at 731 East Fifth street.

The bride studied voice, pipe organ and piano at the Valparaiso Conservatory of Music at Valparaiso, Ind. The bridegroom is a graduate of Valparaiso university.

Pneumonia Threatens, But Singer Gives Recital

Mme. Tenie Murphy-Sheehan, the Minneapolis soprano who assisted Franz von Loew at his piano recital at the Lyceum last night, sang under difficulties, as she was threatened with pneumonia and filled the engagement against her physician's advice. She had a high temperature during the recital, and was further handicapped, as her illness interfered with her practice yesterday morning. Mme. Sheehan-Murphy returned to her home last night.

Mr. von Loew played three original compositions, "Tremolo Etude," "Valse de Concart" and "Grand Polonaise," all of which were enjoyed, especially the brilliant valse that brought in play the unusual span of the pianist's hands.

His principal number was Franz Liszt's "Les Preludes," a symphonic poem of life. This was the first time it was presented in America as a piano solo. Mr. von Loew's other numbers were: "Meditation," Chaminade; "Fautasiestueck," Johannes Brahms; valse from ballet "Ruses D'Amour" Glazounow, and "Evening," Paderewski-Busoni.

The size of the audience was not in keeping with the excellent work of the pianist, whose touch, clear notes, technique and expression made his varied program a pleasing one.

Mme. Sheehan's numbers were, "Warum" Opus 6. No. 5, Tchaikovsky; "Traum Durch die Dammerung," R. Strauss; "Die Meinacht," J. Brahms; aria, "Figlio Mio!" from "Le Prophete," Meyerbeer; prelude from "A Cycle of Life," L. Ronald; "The Star," James Rogers, and an aria, "Oh, Weep Those Grief-Worn Eyes," from "Le Cid," Massenet. Her German and English enunciation were both excellent.

MME. TENIE MURPHY-SHEEHAN.

Press Associations Chose Palmer as Correspondent

Frederick Palmer, who will be the first lecturer of the second course offered by the Duluth branch of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, was in Mexico with Carranza, when the call to arms came to the countries of Europe. He hurried to New York, and after a stay of thirty-six hours, was speeding across the Atlantic.

The London war office ruled that only one American correspondent should be allowed at the front with the British troops, and asked Ambassador Page to name the man. Secretary Bryan, to whom the problem was referred, consulted with the four press associations serving all the daily papers. They united on Frederick Palmer, and in this way Mr. Palmer's opportunity was unique.

His lecture will be fully illustrated by moving pictures, the photographs for which were taken by himself on the scene of action, and will be given at the First Methodist church Jan. 14 at 8:15 p. m.

As has been previously announced the best seats in the body of the church have been reserved for the holders of tickets to the course, but no individual seats will be reserved.

Famous Singer Bridges Gap Between England and Germany

—Copyright by Bain News Service.

GADSKI'S MESSAGE TO BRITISH OFFICER.

The Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" has bridged the gap between Great Britain and Germany for five British officers and one great German singer. Mme. Johanna Gadski received recently through the London office of a talking machine company a letter signed by Lieutenants Hodgkinson, Moon, Burke, Greenwood and Ware. They signed themselves members of the "British expeditionary force," probably "somewhere in France" and they wrote that they had taken a machine and records to the front with them, one of the records being Mme. Gadski's rendering of the Liebestod. That record was being played as the letter was written, and the officers said they wished to thank the singer "for the many moments of most real pleasure which your beautiful voice, singing such truly great music, has given us." They ended by expressing the wish that they might hear Mme. Gadski sing some of Wagner's other wonderful music at Covent Garden in the future. Mme. Gadski was much touched by the letter, and she answered it expressing the fervent wish that peace may be restored and that until that time the record of her voice should brighten some of the dark hours of life at the front for the British officers. And with the letter she enclosed five photographs of herself as Isolde, each photograph having an autographed dedication to one of the five officers.

After the business meeting there will be a five hundred party.

HEALTH RESORT.

Chicago News—"Give me a good black cigar," said the fat man. "I need consolation. We're going away for a few weeks' rest and change. It's the doctor's orders."

"Gee, thats'bad!" said the tobacconist, with an air of dreamy sadness. "I feel mighty sorry for you. They worked that on us once. We were all a little under the weather, and the doc said something that gave my wife the idea that we'd never recover, unless we went away somewhere for a few weeks.

"We'd have been a thousand times better off at home! If you are going to be sick home is the proper place every time! I know. At home you have accommodations and comforts. At a summer resort you have—well, you know. If you leave home when sick in the expectation of getting well as soon as you get somewhere else you are likely to have a disappointment. Why, the further away from home you go the worse you become.

"That's the way it was with us, anyway. We established ourselves at a health resort, and we all got sicker and sicker, and were taking turns at the medicines all day long. Medicines! Why, we had so many bottles on the window sill in the front room of our cottage at Poplar Beach that people got to thinking our house a drug store, and they'd stop in the middle of the night and bawl for ipecac and benzoin.

"We had a much better assortment of drugs than the regular drug store because we had brought with us everything the doctors at home had prescribed, and we had added to our stock at the towns where we had to wait a few hours between trains. And then we had taken on the regulation medicaments of the summer resort doctors.

"I can see that row of bottles in the window now! We had tall bottles with tall stoppers like professional gentlemen in stove pipe hats, and we had bottles with college boy shoulders, and rakish bottles that wore their corks on the sides of their heads, and big bottles and little bottles and ointments, and one howitzer—"

"Howitzer!" exclaimed the fat man.

"Oh, I mean atomizer. But it's all the same thing, anyway. Now if we had stayed at home we would have had less medicine, less expense, fewer doctors, and I'll bet a dollar we'd have had less sickness."

Would Exchange Dancer For Nobel Prize Winner

NIJINSKI.

Nijinski, the dancer, is to be exchanged for Dr. Robert Barany, winner of a Nobel prize. So says the report from Vienna. Nijinski is the famous Russian dancer, member of the Diaghileff troupe which is to appear in New York. Nijinski is the most famous male dancer of the imperial ballet. Without him the company coming to America would have been weakened greatly. Diplomatic effort was used to have him released from internment in Austria. Meantime Dr. Robert Barany, interned in Russia, received the award of the Nobel prize but could not enjoy its honors among his friends and countrymen. Now Baron Burian has suggested that if Russia will let Dr. Barany come home, Nijinski will be released to keep his engagement here.

Peggy Peabody's Observations

Are You a Nuisance?

Yesterday I stepped on the skirt of a woman who was walking down a flight of stairs in a department store. I made my apology as best I could under the glare of her disdainful eyes, which made me feel that I was a clumsy clodhopper. But I commenced to grow a little bit haughty, myself, as she continued to look me over from head to foot as though I was some outlandish lout.

A gentleman friend of mine, who had a similar experience, told me he did not offer an apology after he caught a glimpse of the expression on the woman's face. It was no particular fault of his that he had trod upon her train, which she had not properly drawn about her. For his part he thought that he was entitled to an apology from the careless woman. And yet it never seems to enter the heads of these women that they are in any way to blame. If they do not express the audible opinion that you are a clumsy brute, they look it, and it is not particularly soothing to the party who has been startled out of himself and forced to catch himself before he falls down a flight of stairs.

This careless feature of woman's deportment when she walks abroad reminds me of another aggravating trick, not, however, peculiar to women alone. Men are quite apt to stand in a group in the middle of a sidewalk and block the traffic as women are. But men have the habit of speaking about such a matter as though their sex were never the offenders. When groups of either men or women stand thus for ten or fifteen minutes at a time a cyclone ought to come along and scatter them.

Yet men and women seem totally oblivious of the nuisance they make of themselves when they anchor themselves in the middle of a public thoroughfare and inconvenience hundreds of people. It is nothing at all if you happen to be among the standees, but when a group interferes with your freedom of locomotion what blithering idiots they are.

Another great incumbrance is the individual who rushes through a crowd with an umbrella held straight out behind. It makes no difference who it pokes in the ribs or eye. Such an act arouses the resentment of everyone and fills one with a desire to tear it from the careless and thoughtless grasp of the one carrying it.

PROSPEROUS AMERICA.

It is a picture of rampant prosperity that Chairman Gary of the United States Steel corporation draws in his statement published elsewhere in The Herald tonight.

The United States is producing pig iron at the rate of thirty-eight million tons a year compared with nineteen millions at the same time last year and thirty-three and a half millions in 1913, the previous high-water mark. Steel ingots are being produced at the rate of forty-one million tons a year against sixteen millions last year and thirty-five millions in 1912, the previous record year.

Moreover, as an answer to those who for political reasons would like to make it appear that our prosperity is all due to war orders, Judge Gary points out that SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT OF SALES ARE FOR DOMESTIC CONSUMPTION. What is true of steel, the basic industry, is true of all other industries.

A word of caution rightly accompanies this glowing picture of good times. As always when confidence is strong and business good, the greatest danger is that of over-inflation—of rearing too tall a structure too hastily without proper care with the foundation. That danger exists now, and Judge Gary's warning against it is timely.

It is the part of wisdom to go ahead with courage but not blindly; and if we watch our steps and use ordinary care our prosperity can be continued indefinitely.

"We have the greatest country," says Judge Gary truly, "with the greatest opportunities, and we may properly be hopeful and confident."

Good cheer is the word in the United States.

Pity the Palm Beachers who haven't a chilblain to their feet!

CRITICIZING THE SUPREME COURT.

The New Republic has a piece about the decision of the Minnesota supreme court declaring the Duluth preferential ballot unconstitutional. Here it is:

> Judicial hostility toward experiment and innovation is not often as flagrantly exhibited as it was in a recent decision by the supreme court of Minnesota, invalidating the system known as "preferential voting" as unconstitutional.
> Preferential voting is a relatively new form of balloting, designed by the registering of second and third choices to insure the election of those whom a majority, instead of a mere plurality, favor. Though still frankly in the experimental stage, it is yet a hopeful experiment and one that time only can test. Yet the supreme court of Minnesota has found a principle which makes this experiment impossible without constitutional amendment. By a process of metaphysical refinement, the right to vote is construed into the right of one citizen to vote for one office and to have every other citizen do no more.

Incidentally, the New Republic notes that about the same time the Minnesota supreme court was holding that the Constitution forbids something that the makers of the Constitution never heard of, the supreme court of New Jersey, passing on a similar voting system under a similar constitutional clause, reached the opposite conclusion and upheld the law.

There isn't much profit or satisfaction in criticizing what is done and ended; but there is interest, at least, in the reflection that if Duluth with its preferential voting system had been in New Jersey, the system would still be in force. And it's a good and promising system, too, objected to only by the very elements it was designed to circumvent.

Among reminiscers it is always interesting to note whether the narrator says "I remember," or "I recollect," or "I recall" or "I mind."

PLAIN HORSE SENSE.

In his annual financial review Henry Clews shows that there is one financier, at least, who can see beyond the end of his nose and who realizes that a nation can no more build up its trade by barring out trade than a man can lift himself by his own bootstraps.

Says Mr. Clews: "Slowly but surely it is being recognized that if we wish to sell our products abroad we must be prepared to buy freely in return, and that excessive tariffs check exports as well as imports; in other words, we must avoid shutting ourselves in while endeavoring to shut others out."

That's just plain horse sense—so plain that the wonder of it is that so few possess it. Nations that would sell must buy: for world commerce is an exchange. Nations that refuse to buy cannot expect to sell anything that other nations are not absolutely compelled to buy from them, and that isn't much. No nation can wax rich from merely selling: wealth from foreign trade comes through exchange of commodities. Money figures relatively little in foreign trade except as gold is transferred to adjust balances.

A tariff that would shut out virtually all foreign commodities would shut in virtually all domestic commodities. Protection carried to its logical conclusion, as many of its advocates would carry it, would destroy the nation's foreign trade—and foreign trade will be a larger factor hereafter than it ever has been before.

Henry Clews speaks the truth and talks common sense.

Then there are those whose resolutions have already lost the first two letters.

EARLY SHOPPING.

The merchants of Duluth are discussing plans to encourage early shopping—that is, shopping early in the day.

Their purpose, of course, is to lighten the burden of the late afternoon, which is the peak-load hour in the shops, by shifting some of it to the forenoon, which is now a dull interval.

The way to accomplish this—the only way, indeed—is to convince the shoppers that it is to their interest to shop in the forenoons. It IS to their interest, of course. The arguments are very like those for early Christmas shopping. If the housewife does her shopping in the forenoon, she gets the pick of the bargains advertised in The Herald the night before. She finds the sales force less occupied, and with more time to help her look things over and decide. Then, too, in going to her shopping and returning to her home she finds the streets and the street cars less crowded. Altogether, morning shopping is much more comfortable and more convenient and gives much better results.

Of course if everybody got the hang of it and started shopping in the morning, the peak-load of shopping would simply be transferred from afternoon to forenoon, and nobody would be any better off. But there isn't the slightest danger of that. The morning housework—which might in a pinch be put over to afternoon—holds many; and besides, such wisdom as early shopping is something that only the minority is canny enough to imbibe.

The fact is, though, that when the merchants campaign for early shopping, they are working not only in their own interests and those of their employes, but in the interests of the shoppers as well.

Bird, a Progressive leader, says "no compromise;" and "no compromise" says Taft of the standpat crowd. Assuredly it looks as if "no compromise" is in a fair way to be the ruling policy in the Progressican ranks.

THE SLANDERER CAUGHT.

When the government shipping bill was pending during the last session of congress Theodore Roosevelt charged, with great vehemence and with all his characteristic cocksureness, that President Wilson and Secretary Bryan "had endeavored in the interest of certain foreign business firms to secure for the United States the power to purchase the interned ships of one of the belligerents."

This was a charge of the gravest character. It is virtually an accusation that the president and the secretary of state were endeavoring to betray the national interest in behalf of foreign business firms.

Naturally and properly, congress appointed a committee of Democrats and Republicans to investigate the charge. This committee, having investigated, now reports.

Though divided on some points, as Democrats and Republicans must, the committee in its report is united on the two most important points:

First, that the charge is absolutely false.

Second, that Theodore Roosevelt should be condemned for his refusal to appear before the committee and substantiate his charge.

In other words, pursuant to his policy of discrediting the administration by fair means or foul, Theodore Roosevelt issued "a deliberate and unqualified falsehood" and then dared not appear before the investigating committee to substantiate it when requested to do so.

To most fair minded people, that would be about enough of Theodore Roosevelt to last a long time.

Yes, Mehitabel, it is said by cynics that public "bureaus" are so called partly because they are great places of concealment.

Jealousy in Woman.

W. L. George in the Atlantic: In ordinary times, when no world-movements stimulate, the chief exasperation of woman resides in jealousy. It differs from male jealousy, for the male is generally possessive, the female competitive. I suspect that Euripides was generalizing rashly when he said that woman is woman's natural ally. She is too sex-conscious for that, and many of us have observed the annoyance of a mother when her son weds. Competition is always violent, so much so that woman is generally mocking or angry if a man praises ever so slightly another woman. If she is young and able to make a claim on all men, she tends to be still more virulent because her claim is on all men. This is partly due to the marriage market and its restrictions, but it is also partly natural. No doubt because it is natural, woman attempts to conceal that jealousy, nature being generally considered ignoble by the civilized world. In this respect we must accept that an assumption of coldness is considered a means of enticing man. It may well be that, where woman does not exhibit jealousy, she is with masterly skill suggesting to the man a problem: why is she not jealous? On which follows the desire to make her jealous, and entanglement.

Boston Again.

Youth's Companion: A New Yorker, who recently returned from a visit to Boston, vouches for the truth of the following: One afternoon he found the 6-year-old son of his host settled in front of the drawing room fire with a sheet of paper before him and a pencil clasped in his chubby fist. Stealing a look over the boy's shoulder, he saw that the little fellow was making pictures.

"Well, Bobby," he asked genially, "are you drawing an engine?"

Slowly the child looked up, and slowly he spoke:

"It would take a very strong boy to draw an engine; but I am making a picture of a locomotive."

Stephenson and La Follette

By Savoyard.

Washington, Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—In his book that is printed, not to sell, but to distribute among his friends, Former Senator Isaac Stephenson tells how he got to be a statesman, how he fought the corporations, how he supported Robert M. La Follette and promoted that gentleman's political fortunes, and how he spent vast sums of money in the political game. Repeatedly he drops into something that smacks of sarcasm when he speaks of "the intricacies" of Wisconsin politics, and, ultimately it dawned on his mental horizon that his one concern with such politics was to foot the bills, while La Follette grabbed the offices and enjoyed all the glory. A famous English actress, Mrs. Jordan, made this plaint: "I am tired of filling the theater for Mrs. Siddons to run away with all the applause."

Uncle Stephenson, now a hale, hearty man past eighty-six years, tells how he served two terms in the state legislature and subsequently was thrice chosen to represent his district in the national house of representatives. He had long been associated in business with that wonderful man, Mayor Ogden of Chicago, and had had personal converse and business dealings with Samuel J. Tilden, both leading Democrats, and by the way, Uncle Isaac says "It is generally admitted that Mr. Tilden was elected president of the United States and counted out."

A day came when there was a revolt in Wisconsin against the political machine that was operated by old Philetus Sawyer, Henry B. Payne and others. Stephenson was in sympathy with the rebels and urged La Follette to head the mutiny. The latter thought the pear was not yet ripe and procrastinated. According to Stephenson, his leader was very mysterious about the thing, and held conferences in Chicago with his partisans that could as well have been held at the state capital, or Milwaukee; but nothing came of these movements until Uncle Ikey opened his purse and handed out the boodle. Instantly the pear became ripe; La Follette threw his hat into the ring and was elected governor. Then Stephenson wasted a barrel of money on a party organ, the Milwaukee Free Press, that was established to support the La Follette policies.

Soon thereafter the term of Mr. Quarles in the United States senate expired, and the "Half-Breeds," as the La Follette wing of the party was designated, held a conference. Uncle Isaac attended, but said nothing except to mention that he could secure eight or ten "Stalwart" votes if named for the succession. This did not please the "Half-Breeds" at all, who seemed to think Uncle Ikey had done enough for his country when he bore the campaign expenses, which were very heavy. The result was that La Follette took the senatorship, but held on to the office of governor till the last moment.

The next year John C. Spooner, the other Stalwart senator, resigned. Then several candidates announced themselves for the senate, among them Cooper, Lenroot, Esch and Hatton. La Follette appeared to be for Stephenson, and urged his friends to vote for him; but they would not, and that fact led Uncle Isaac to wonder how it came that the La Follette machine that cost him so much cash was not more efficient. Weeks went by without an election, when Uncle Isaac seems to have cut loose from "the intricacies" and made the race on his own hook, which succeeded admirably, for he was chosen.

La Follette became a candidate for president in 1908 and some of his friends besought Stephenson to put $250,000 in the campaign chest. And now the business sense of the old fellow came in play. He said that La Follette could not be nominated and refused to throw his money away. Then it became war between Uncle Isaac and the "Half-Breeds."

In the senatorial primary of 1908 Stephenson beat all his opponents, carrying thirty-nine counties of the seventy-one and running second in twenty others. The primary was an invention and a cardinal principle of the "Half-Breeds," but now they repudiated it and the La Follette machine did its utmost to beat the nominee before the legislature, but the old man was too tough a customer for them and after a battle royal he was elected to succeed himself.

Stephenson's "expenses" reached the enormous sum of $107,000. There was investigation of the primary, and for a time Stephenson seemed to be in a corner. But he pulled through and was allowed to serve the full term in the senate. He says he contributed approximately half a million in support of the "Half-Breeds," or La Follette faction, but for which he is assured that "the history of the achievement would have been a blank page."

* * *

It is curious to contrast the books penned by La Follette and by Stephenson. The former as good as says that Theodore Roosevelt and Albert B. Cummins played a bunco game on him, and Uncle Stephenson is convinced that the "Half-Breeds" buncoed him. The cases are different in this—Stephenson made his landing; La Follette missed his.

There is a great deal of homely worldly wisdom in Uncle Isaac Stephenson's book. It would profit any young man to read and ponder it, and it is to be hoped that the author will see his way to revise and enlarge it and put it on sale.

A most extraordinary man is Isaac Stephenson, from more than one viewpoint.

Gnosis.

Thought is deeper than all speech,
Feeling deeper than all thought;
Souls to souls can never teach
What unto themselves was taught.

We are spirits clad in veils;
Man by man was never seen;
All our deep communing fails
To remove the shadowy screen.

Heart to heart was never known;
Mind with mind did never meet;
We are columns left alone
Of a temple once complete.

Like the stars that gem the sky,
Far apart, though seeming near,
In our light we scattered lie;
All is but starlight here.

What is social company
But a babbling summer stream?
What our wise philosophy
But the glancing of a dream?

Only when the sun of love
Melts the scattered stars of thought,
Only when we live above
What the dim-eyed world has taught,

Only when our souls are fed
By the fount that gave them birth,
And by inspiration led
Which they never drew from earth,

We, like parted drops of rain,
Swelling till they meet and run,
Shall be absorbed again,
Melting, flowing into one.

Talks on Thrift

Issued by the American Bankers' Association.

The Bank and Its Depositors.

This is to be the centennial year of the savings bank. We shall hear much of the savings bank, what it is and what it does, and much of thrift, which is the foundation on which it is built.

It is but fitting that an institution which has survived a century should celebrate, for it has become an essential part of our everyday life, and whether we know it or not, we could not very well get along without it. It is proposed to tell you in this series (which will run throughout the year) something about the practical side of the bank, what it does for the individual, the community and the nation. You may think that when you hand in your money, and get a bankbook in return, that the matter is ended, but the wheels have just begun to move, and they grind a grist which benefits you and the community more than you may know.

To single out the savings bank for special attention would be a very worthy compliment to a very worthy institution, but would do an injustice to other banks, many of which perform, in a certain sense, the same functions for the individual and serve the community just as effectively as does the savings bank, although it may be in a different way.

As a broad proposition a bank is a bank, in that it performs certain definite functions irrespective of its character, whether savings bank, bank of discount or trust company, which functions are: (a) to receive deposits; (b) to make loans, and (c) to issue bank notes, the latter being confined to the national banks and Federal reserve banks.

It is well at the beginning of this series to make a distinction. When you open an account with a bank of deposit in its checking department you create a different relationship than when you open account in the savings department. When you open a checking account you say in the eyes of the law: "This money is mine. I deposit it with you—it is now yours. I accept a credit on your books and you are my debtor. I shall expect my money on demand, and will make this demand by drawing checks on you." But when you open a savings account, you say: "I am willing to enter into a special contract with you. I will accept the passbook you give me as evidence of my deposit with you, and agree to be bound by the rules and regulations found therein. I will not draw checks on you, but will present the book at every withdrawal, and I also agree to give you notice of withdrawal, should you require it as a necessary measure of protection."

In a mutual savings bank you go a bit further and say: "Take this money and invest it for me. You are my trustees to do this. The law tells you what securities you may purchase and I expect you to obey the law. Pay your expenses, establish a surplus or guaranty fund to save me from losses by reason of depreciation of securities or otherwise, and pay me the balance as interest. It is my bank; you simply run it for me." You will see by this process that you become a partner in the savings bank and a creditor in the other.

Smash the River Barrel

Collier's: To Senator Ransdell of Louisiana and his fellow backers of the new $46,000,000 waterway bill, "pork barrel" is one of the ugliest terms ever spoken or printed. Nearly all of the twenty or more speeches delivered at Washington at this winter's meeting of the National Rivers and Harbor congress, of which Senator Ransdell is president, were vehement denials that the annual ball is a wasteful, log-rolled measure. The Louisiana senator, in an interview, characterized the charge that the old system is a pork barrel as "a slanderous accusation as false as Satan himself." Yet the senator, being somewhat of a specialist in river legislation, can hardly fail to remember the Hennepin canal project. After being told that this canal, which gives Chicago, on the Great Lakes, connection with the Mississippi, would surely save shippers from fifteen to twenty million dollars a year, the government dug it at a cost of $7,401,000. The work was completed in 1909, and in 1914, the last year of which we have an official record, the traffic, hauled an average of fifty miles, was 26,856 tons, only 12,222 tons of which was commercial freight. Interest on the investment and maintenance amounted to $512,520, so for every ton of commerce shipped on the canal the people were out $41.93, forty times the corresponding rate charged by Middle Western railroads. And the gross tonnage that year was 21,972 less than in 1913! Here are the facts about one waterway failure. We could tell of scores of equally wasteful projects—jobs that never could have been shoved through congress as separate measures. There are about 250 items in the new river pork barrel, and probably less than thirty of them would have a ghost of a chance if submitted singly. The pork system is pretty near the most insidious force in our national government. Its wastage on waterways has been nearly $500,000,000—and that is a modest beginning. Congress must abolish the barrel and place the problem of river and harbor improvements in the hands of an appointive commission, as far removed as possible from log-rolling influences.

Acquisitive Statesmanship.

W. Morgan Shuster in the Century: How are we to demarcate acquisitive statesmanship from altruistic statesmanship, if you once admit that for any reason you can take another's native land? Suppose that the intricacies and tendencies of international law do make it more difficult in future for a nation to pick a quarrel of conquest, it is easy for clever statesmen to devise new pretenses. The right of conquest, the taking of territory by bald conquest, has already gone out of fashion. Nowadays a weaker nation is rarely taken by conquest. There is a clash of interests, carefully advertised and worked up in advance, then the national commerce of the aggressor becomes vitally important, or a racial affinity is discovered which makes it necessary that one nation leap 800 or 900 miles to stand by another nation in going to war. I mention these things only because we have grown used to them. Fine expressions may be very consoling to the people of the country being seized, but we all know that such things are merely a question of a pretext, and there can be no just pretext for taking the land and the birthright of another people.

His Sanity Established.

Youth's Companion: A Philadelphia paper tells the story of two rival delegates at a political convention in one of the Western states who got into a serious personal dispute.

"Oh, you're crazy," shouted one.

"I'm not crazy," denied the other.

"But you are crazy," vociferated the first.

"I can prove that I am not crazy, and that's more than you can do," came back the rejoinder.

"Let's see you prove it, then."

Whereupon the man who was accused of being crazy pulled from an inside pocket the discharge papers from a nearby insane asylum.

A Different Fish Story.

New York World: J. Clarence Harvey, the Lambs' club wit, is telling this story about elimination: The proprietor of a fish store had a new sign. "Fresh Fish for Sale Here." "Why say 'here'?" said the first customer. "It's unnecessary." He painted "here" out. Said the second customer, "Why 'for sale?' Of course they're for sale." He painted out two words more. "Why 'fresh?'" said a third customer. "You wouldn't sell them if they weren't fresh, would you?" At last the sign read just "Fish." Along came a fourth customer. "What's the use of having that sign," he asked, "when you can smell them a block away?"

Duluth and The Herald

Bouquets and Brickbats From the State Press.

Even the Twin Cities Have Felt a 100-Mile Gale.

St. Cloud Times: New York and New England were again visited by a terrific storm on the 26th. A gale of ninety miles an hour. It is said that the greatest wind velocity known in Duluth was seventy-two miles.

The Steel Plant's Promise.

Northern Minnesota: The Minnesota Steel company's plant is Duluth's greatest permanent manufacturing industry. The investment of over $20,000,000 in it is a substantial indication of the faith the United States Steel corporation has in the favorable nature of manufacturing and distributing conditions here. It will be the magnet to attract other industries. That is the history of big steel plants everywhere. Buffalo's great growth came after the steel industry was established in the city; Pittsburgh's growth is almost entirely due to steel manufacturing; Duluth is where those cities were a few years ago. The beginning of operations at the new plant will prove the biggest thing to happen to Duluth in a history of interesting events.

That's an Awful Place, Down There.

New Orleans States: Duluth has a club called the Jolly Wives, but the St. Paul Dispatch says its town has a club known as the Jollied Wives, several hundred strong, the membership comprising women whose husbands are not afraid to come home in the dark.

As to an Embargo on Gasoline.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The suggestion of The Duluth Herald that the government put an embargo on gasoline will be approved by every man owning a motor truck or automobile, as well as by hundreds of housewives. The soaring in the price of gasoline is due in a large measure to the demand from the war countries, and the American people are being hard hit. One way to hold down the high cost of living is to prohibit the sending abroad of gasoline until after the war.

Always Glad to Oblige.

Houghton Mining Gazette: It always is noticeable that when they are framing up a baseball league to include Calumet and Houghton the framing is done at Duluth, or Oshkosh or Green Bay.

"The Herald's Suggestion Is Timely."

Red Wing Eagle: The Duluth Herald calls attention to the manner in which England is hitting the United States both coming and going with her embargo on shipping, showing that while England is seeking to hit Germany over our shoulders she is hurting us more than Germany. The matter of dyes, which are so essential in textile and other industries in this country, is pointed to as an instance.

Another instance of injury to us by the war which the Europeans see fit to indulge in is that of the raise in price of gasoline. Because of the great demand for gasoline by the warring countries everyone in the United States who operates a gas motor of any sort must pay a penalty in the form of excessive prices.

On account of things like these The Herald wonders if it wouldn't be good policy to retaliate by placing an embargo on the shipment of gasoline to foreign countries. By giving the European war lords a good dose of their own medicine in shape of embargoes on things which they must have from us, they might possibly be brought to their senses before more serious complications arise.

The Herald's suggestion is timely, and it is to be hoped that the sentiments expressed may become general enough to crystallize into actual deeds.

"A Consummation Devoutly to Be Wished."

Roseau Region: In view of the German embargo on dyestuffs and the British embargo on Jamaican woods from which dyes are made, The Duluth Herald suggests an embargo on gasoline. This ought to have a tendency to bring the price back to a point where the American consumer could afford to use it. The big European demand has increased the price to a stage where gasoline is almost a luxury.

Promptness

Fresno Herald: Be on time.

Because of the lateness of Marshal Grouchy of the French army at the battle of Waterloo, Bluecher had time to whip his army on to the help of Wellington. Napoleon ordered right. Had not the man to whom he entrusted his awful order blundered—hesitated—been late—the whole history of Europe would have been changed from 1815.

Be on time.

"The train was late," is the most frequent explanation after a terrible accident. What a multitude of lives have been lost, what an army of men and women have been deprived of position and honor, what untold suffering and humiliation have followed in the path of the late Mr. Late. Nothing pays better than promptness.

Be on time.

Promptness is the act of being on the job when your name is called—and answering to it. Not nearly—but there.

Be on time.

Time tolls its minutes with even, regular strokes—never has a stroke been tolled out of tune or out of time. The job, the appointment, the order, the friend, the opportunity—won't wait for the man who doesn't respond on the dot.

Be on time.

Be not deceived by the cheap clanging of gold and silver—gifts through whose possession you imagine yourself immune to honor and the promptness of appointments. There is no winning to the slothful. The world with all its wonderful offerings gives its choice freely to the man of his word.

Be on time.

Be on time at your desk each day—at each and every appointment throughout each day. In fact, the path to greatness starts by being on time each morning at your own breakfast table. That's the beginning, anyway.

Be on time.

Inspiration.

If with light head erect I sing,
Though all the Muses lend their force,
From my poor love of anything,
The verse is weak and shallow as its source.

But if with bended neck I grope
Listening behind me for my wit,
With faith superior to hope,
More anxious to keep back than forward it—

Making my soul accomplice there
Unto the flame my heart hath lit,
Then will the verse forever wear—
Time cannot bend the line which God has writ.

I hearing get, who had but ears,
And sight, who had but eyes before;
I moments live, who lived but years,
And truth discern, who knew but learning's lore.

And now chiefly is my natal hour,
And only now my prime of life;
Of manhood's strength it is the flower,
'Tis peace's end, and war's beginning strife.

It comes in summer's broadest noon,
By a gray wall, or some chance place,
Unseasoning time, insulting June,
And vexing day with its presuming face.

I will not doubt the love untold
Which not my worth or want hath bought,
Which wooed me young, and wooes me old,
And to this evening hath me brought.

—Henry David Thoreau (1817-1862).

The French Servant Is One of the Family

J. Frances Cooke in the New Republic.

The French people have not, so far, produced a spiritually servile class. The occupation most dangerous to the soul—that of personal service—has not resulted for the people of France in flunkeyism on the one hand and superior airs on the other.

There is something in the poise and motion of French working girls, in their fearless eyes and vibrant voices, that suggests a fluid and mobile social structure which deepens the impression of rigidity in the life across the Channel and beyond the Rhine. French people of the more favored classes are never heard bemoaning the decay of a "proper" servant class. On the contrary, if you speak to them of the striking contrast between the French proletariat and that of other countries—theirs so natural and gay, the others so humble or so sullen or both—they instantly expand with pride. "Exactly!" they exclaim, "our brave French people! Just as good as monsieur, as madame—but also no better!"

The status of the French domestic derives in part at least from the weight of responsibility under which she serves. For her mistress is neither a careless housekeeper nor an indifferent mother. It is precisely because the Frenchwoman loves her children so ardently, so romantically, one might say, and because her quick, intelligent grasp of material situations makes her an excellent economist at home, that she requires and establishes in the household not a common servant, not a "mother's helper," but a woman of intelligence and character, a woman often young and untried but with the true ring, who is or soon becomes capable of assuming direct responsibility for the care of the children and the house—a woman who deserves and receives the consideration due to the head of an important department in the management of the family life.

French children are notoriously spoiled. The little monarchs are kept on a pedestal well into the age of moral responsibility. Father, mother, all the older relatives, vie with one another in admiring and indulging them. With this understanding of the term and scope of the child's autocratic reign, one can afford to laugh at turbulent scenes in which he puts to rout every adult in the house except his bonne. At the mere sight of her the little desperado begins to quiet down. He is in the presence of the only person who has, so far, exercised any rational authority over him, the person before whom he feels the beginnings of shame at doing wrong.

The bonne is the most important person in the family group, so far as its material well being is concerned. And morally, spiritually, she is a true member of the family. It is not for nothing that the word bonne means "good" as well as "nurse."

It may be that the prevailing good relation between masters and servants in France has a very simple explanation—simple and yet profound. It may be that it springs at bottom from the warm affections of the people. They cannot live without love and sentiment. Better than any other people they know how to keep alive the romance of friendship, of love, and even of that inherently bad relation, master and slave.

The French servant who has no family ties—and often the one who has—throws her whole heart and soul into the family life of her master and mistress.

She must love—she must serve—she must be loved. And the French master and mistress understand. Each one idealizes the sentiments of the other; in a word, the romance of the situation grips them all. French literature is crowded with examples of mistress and servant whose intimacy shows no trace of condescension on the one side or of servility on the other.

Just a Moment

Daily Strength and Cheer.

Compiled by John G. Quinlus, the Sunshine Man.

He who is not grateful of small favors is not worthy of larger blessings.

God honors and helps the man who respects himself too much to stoop to acts of meanness.

Prayer is the secret of victory over sin, because it is the channel through which we receive overcoming power.

Angelic songs God loves to hear,
And harps their music ringing,
As one great anthem, loud and clear,
Him, matchless praises bringing;
But deeper interest hath in him
Who is for mercy crying—
Their songs are dull, their praises dim,
When He can save the dying.
As when he passed through Jericho,
Though multitudes were pressing,
He heard the beggar's cry, and lo!
He stops to give a blessing.
He'd stop the building of a sphere,
If such a thing were needed,
The contrite sinner's prayer to hear,
And with a pardon heed it.
Then, sinner, do not fear to come,
His precious blood He gave you,
That you may share His glorious home—
He wishes now to save you.

DULUTH'S MAIL SERVICE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Postoffice reports, given out by the postoffice officials, about giving better service to the public, since the postoffice has been reorganized last May, are only false alarms.

Here are a few points that will prove it:

In the year 1915 alone, 881 new houses have been built in the city of Duluth, showing Duluth is one of the fastest growing cities in the United States. The mail in the Duluth postoffice has increased from 25 to 35 per cent, according to Mr. McEwen, the postmaster. With parcel post in effect since Jan. 1, 1913, the letter carriers have not received any help, nor have any additional carriers been put on for the last four years. With the mail increasing from 25 to 35 per cent, it makes it impossible for the carriers to give the same service as they did five years ago when the mail was normal.

Lately every carrier's office time has been reduced from 35 to 40 minutes a day. The carrier has not sufficient time in the office to route and set up his mail in a proper way in order to make a speedy delivery. With the mail increasing from 25 to 35 per cent it makes it impossible for the carriers to cover their routes twice a day. More than half of West Duluth, New Duluth, Gary, part of Lakeside, Woodland and part of Hunter's Park are getting only one delivery a day, where they should get two deliveries a day.

The business section on East Superior street, from Third avenue to Ninth avenue, has been getting four deliveries a day for the last ten years, but since last August the service has been cut down to three deliveries a day, because the carrier has been unable to cover the route four times a day in eight hours, on account of the increasing mail. "Some improvement in the service." Instead of increasing the carrier force when the mail increased from 25 to 35 per cent, they are cutting down the service.

Why should not those people mentioned in the suburbs be entitled to the same service as any other citizen of Duluth, as they have sidewalks to their houses, have mail boxes, and pay taxes according to their income, the same as the East End citizens? It is only the public's fault; if they would take the matter up with the higher officials in the postoffice department, the service soon would be improved, and the efficient and better service for the public would be a fact, and not a false alarm.

Respectfully, I. B.

"COMPANY" STORES.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I fear I am presuming to thrust myself in where I don't belong, but it seems to me something should be done by somebody. I don't know who should act or what they should do, but hope I can at least help to bring about some action.

It is about the proposal for the establishment of a "company store" at the Model City. I would not for a moment accuse the Steel corporation man of contemplating or countenancing any such abuses of such a system as were shown to have figured in bringing about the Colorado strike. And yet I do not believe it is just the right thing to bring this company store here.

Though I am not in the mercantile business myself, Mr. Editor, it seems to me that the Duluth merchants are entitled to the increase in trade that the steel plant will bring. They have stood by the city when the outlook was not as bright as it is now. They have accommodated the people of the city when it was a hardship for them to do so. They have helped to boost Duluth and make it as suitable as it is for the operation of the steel plant. And now that the plant is here, it seems to me that the established business houses should be given a chance to get the business that comes from the increases in population and industry.

Of course, they will get some of it, anyway, in certain lines. But it is a fact of human nature that "company stores" are generally looked on by employes as places where they are expected to trade, whether any such stipulation is actually made or not. And in the cases of skilled men coming here to work in the plant, these men will know of no other place at first, and will naturally do their first (and that is their heaviest) buying from the company instead of from local dealers.

I would not criticize the business judgment of the steel company men. But it seems to me that they should consider the interests of the men who have made Duluth a valuable place for the steel plant, and not enter on any side lines of business that will interfere with Duluth business men.

THE GREEK CHRISTMAS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Please allow me to correct a statement made in your paper at Christmas time. The question as to whether Christmas was observed on the same day everywhere was answered "yes." Christmas is observed in Turkey by Europeans (and Americans) on Dec. 25. The Greek calendar is two weeks later than ours and Christmas is observed by the Greeks Jan. 8. The Armenians use the Greek calendar, but do not observe Christmas until Jan. 19. Rather late for correction but it may interest some to know the above facts.

ECZEMA ON BABY'S HEAD AND FACE

Started With Little Pimples, Spread All Over Her Face, Head and Neck and Got Real Sore.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

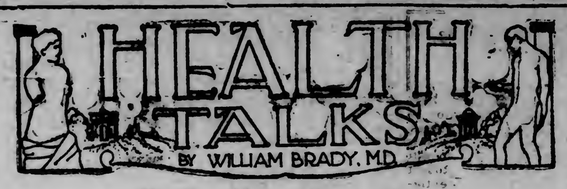

"My little daughter had a bad case of eczema on her head and face when she was five months old. She took it with just a few little red pimples, and it started from that and spread all over her face, head and neck. They got real sore and she would scratch as they would itch her so much. She was terribly cross and fretful.

"While it lasted, her face was disfigured. She could not sleep or rest until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I started with just a free sample and it relieved her so I purchased more and about two months after, she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Alice Wilbarger, R. F. D. 4, Alliance, Ohio, July 26, 1915.

Fasting Versus Starvation

THAT most of us eat too much and that most of our ills are directly or indirectly the result of overeating, is now pretty well known. If good evidence is demanded to support the idea we have it in the remarkable good results obtained in the treatment of various ailments by fasts.

Right here let us beg both physicians and laymen to refrain from calling fasting, starvation. To fast means to abstain from food; to starve means to die from hunger. One may fast voluntarily and with good effect; one would not voluntarily starve. The careless misuse of the term starve or starvation when a fast is meant, tends to frighten timid invalids and perhaps oppose an insuperable obstacle to a very necessary, beneficial fast.

One of the most spectacular applications of therapeutic fasting is the new treatment of diabetes. By means of a preliminary fast of a few days it is possible, as investigators in the Rockefeller Institute, New York, and elsewhere have shown, to clear up the glycosuria (sugar in urine), and place the patient in a state of balanced metabolism which can be reached in no other way so promptly and safely.

A 12 or 24-hour fast is an old and efficacious remedy for an acute so-called "cold."

People are generally obsessed with the belief that it is dangerous to skip a meal or several meals. That three square meals a day are essential for good health and strength. That loss of appetite is a thing to be whipped into shape by all sorts of artificial stimulants, whereas in fact loss of appetite is mostly a fortunate thing for the overfed.

Missing a meal occasionally is a habit most of us ought to acquire. Especially if we are a few pounds overweight for our age and height. Especially if we are of a "bilious" type. Especially if we are subject to indigestion. And very especially, if we are victims of that many-sided condition, autointoxication. Missing a meal is a lot better than tamping a meal down by the help of cathartics.

Fasting, as a remedy for one whose health is frankly poor, for one with a definite disease, is not an experiment to be tried as a patent medicine, but a powerful therapeutic measure to be applied only by the physician who thoroughly understands the patient and his disease.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Grape Juice Propaganda.

Is grape juice (unfermented) a nutritious, healthful beverage? How does it compare with wine?

Answer—Grape juice possesses at least ten times the strengthening qualities of the best or worst wine. Wine surely is a mocker when used with the mistaken notion that it is tonic or blood-building.

Why the "Schools" Are Not in Harmony.

As you seem to take a broad, liberal view of the healing art, says Francis, I would like to ask you why the various schools of healing do not harmonize, why the medical men sneer at chiropractors, for instance?

Answer—There is only one reason that we know of to explain any gulf between the schools. It is this: The art of healing isn't born in a man, nor is it inherited; it is acquired by hard study. The state fixes a minimum standard of educational preparation for physicians. All the medical men ask is that no short cuts be opened for uneducated or half-educated practitioners. Let all "schools" be admitted to practice on equal terms.

Dr. Brady will answer all questions pertaining to Health. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Dr. Brady will not prescribe for individual cases or make diagnoses. Address all letters to Dr. William Brady, care of The Herald. All questions will be answered, whether they come from people residing in Duluth or outside, provided they comply with the rules here stated.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department does not pretend to be infallible. It will endeavor, however, to answer questions sent to it by readers of The Herald to the best of its ability, reserving the right to ignore all that are trifling or of concern only to the questioner, or that ask for advice on legal or medical questions.

To receive attention, every inquiry must bear the name and address of the person sending it. This is not wanted for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.

F. H. Duluth.—Would you kindly tell me in the Questions and Answers column of The Herald to whom would a person apply for a position in the state Forestry service. Also, please tell me if there is a school in Minnesota that offers a short course for forest rangers.

F. H.

Answer.—W. T. Cox, state forester, St. Paul. The Herald knows of no such school in Minnesota.

Marie—Which number of The Herald was it that contained a statement of the cost of the next city election?

Answer.—Any statement of the cost of the next election would be but an estimate. A city election, including the two registration days, costs about $3,000.

DIRECTORS FOR RESERVE BANKS

William H. Lightner of St. Paul Among Those Appointed By Board.

Washington, Jan. 6.—Government, or Class C., directors of four Federal reserve banks, were announced last night by the reserve board as follows:

Minneapolis, William H. Lightner of St. Paul; Dallas, William F. Ramsey of Austin; San Francisco, Wolton Moore; Kansas City, Charles M. Sawyer, and F. W. Fleming of Kansas City. Messrs. Lightner and Moore have been designated as vice chairmen until deputy Federal reserve agents, and Messrs. Ramsey and Sawyer as chairmen and reserve agents.

The board made public a resolution providing that no national bank examiner can be made a director of a reserve bank, or a reserve or deputy reserve agent. The resolution also provided that designations of examiners to such positions now in force be revoked as soon as possible.

Another resolution provides that members of the Federal advisory council shall hereafter not be officially connected with Federal reserve banks, so that the system may obtain wholly unbiased and disinterested advice. The new rule as far as directors are concerned will not apply until Jan. 1, 1917.

It was said that the resolution in regard to bank examiners was not directed at individual banks, but the new policy was deemed advisable for the benefit of the entire system. Several examiners now hold positions in reserve banks.

MAIL ORDER VICTIM TURNS AND ASSAULTS ADVISER

It looked like a case for a charge of assault and battery when the big policeman interfered. He had no trouble stopping the scrap, however, and when both parties offered to explain the row, he listened, good-humoredly, only starting the thing off by asking, "What made you hit him?"

"He advised me to order some stuff from a mail order joint," the aggressor said.

"Did you?" asked the policeman of the other man.

"I did—but never again," was the reply, as the speaker patted a snow poultice into place over one eye.

"It was like this," the aggressor explained. "About a month ago I was talking to him about the heating plant in my house and he said I would get more heat if I'd cover the furnace with asbestos cement. I asked him where I could get some and he said, 'Don't try to get it around here. Send to the mail order people and save half your money. That's where I buy all my stuff.'

"Well, he talked so sure and all that it sounded good, and I did what he said. I sent to the mail order house for 200 pounds of asbestos cement and they wrote back and said it couldn't be shipped c. o. d., and I must pay in advance. So I sent them a money order for $5 and they sent the cement. When I went after it at the depot here I found there was freight to pay; but it wasn't an awful lot, and I paid it. Then I hired a drayman to take the two sacks up to the house. They were heavy and awkward to handle, and he charged me a dollar for the job.

"Then I got busy and put the stuff on, and a few days afterwards I was telling one of the men in the shop about it. He asked me where I got the cement and what it cost, and said he wanted to get some. So I told him to send where I did—and save half his money."

"Did he?" the policeman asked.

"No!" yelled the aggressor. "That's what makes me mad. He went to a place right here in Duluth and bought the stuff, and the people he bought it from delivered it free at his house. But he paid only $4 for the 200 pounds, and there I'd paid $5 for mine, besides freight and drayage.

"That settled the mail order business for me, and when this guy tried to put over another one on me I got mad and hit him, that's all."

"I don't know that I blame you," said the policeman.

"And I don't know that I do, either, under the circumstances," added the man with the snow poultice on his eye.

CHICKENS GET GRIP SAYS CHAPMAN JUST LIKE HUMANS

Chickens—the real, feathered kind—get grip, colds, catarrh, bronchitis, pneumonia and diphtheria very much as human folk do at this time of year, according to N. E. Chapman, poultry specialist at University farm. These diseases, as in humans, are induced by changes in the weather, poor ventilation, exposure to drafts and such things.

Also, there is a way to diagnose grip in chickens and to treat it, too.

"The careful poultryman," Mr. Chapman says, "will visit his roosts at night and look and listen for signs of cold. He will remove at once any fowls showing symptoms of disease, to prevent infection of the flock.

"Labored breathing, wheezing, rattling in the throat, gaping and sneezing are symptoms to be looked for. The bird showing these symptoms should be treated at once with a mixture of kerosene and zenoleum, sweet oil and kerosene, or chloroform and cotton seed oil. In the first two mixtures equal parts of the ingredients are used. In the third, one of chloroform to three of cotton seed oil.

"The head of the chicken should be immersed in the mixture for a moment, or a small amount should be injected through the nostrils and mouth. This should be supplemented with a tonic."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON: JAN. 9.

II Acts, 1-13: The Coming of the Holy Spirit.

CONNECTION.

We saw the disciples return with joy from the Mount of Olives whence they saw Jesus go back home and we got some of their names, both men and women. We know the number of them, 120, though there were other disciples, especially up in Galilee; where "above 500" met Him at one time after His resurrection. We know what they were doing during those ten days, waiting for the coming of the Spirit—keeping together; praying together, conferring together over what they had seen and heard and what they were expecting. They had, at the suggestion of Peter, filled the vacancy in the ranks of the apostles by the selection of Mathias in the stead of Judas. They were undergoing a great change. From the last words of Jesus they were getting their eyes opened to the fact that His kingdom was spiritual instead of temporal. His ascension began the work of changing them; the coming of the Spirit would enlighten them still further; the conversion of the Samaritans and other Gentiles would complete the transformation. Now the time is at hand and, after ten days of prayer, meditation, study and conference, they are ready for the great gift of the Spirit.

THE LESSON.

I.

Symbols of the Spirit. 1-3.

"And when the day of Pentecost was now come, they were all together in one place. And suddenly there came from heaven a sound as of the rushing of a mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them tongues parting asunder, like as of fire; and it sat upon each one of them."

1. REALITY.—The symbols were only shadows of an eternal reality. The Spirit had been with them and in them all the time, converting, comforting and keeping them. Now He will be with them to instruct fully, to fraternize them with men of all kinds and to endow them with all the forms of power needed in the work they are given to do. This new endowment was in effect a new coming. Till Christ's work for the disciples is completed the Spirit's work in them is incomplete. Till they no longer have Christ's visible presence they cannot appreciate and appropriate the Spirit's invisible power. The Spirit has now come to be the power of the individual and of the corporation which the individuals constitute, called the church. Now that Christ's work is finished, the Spirit has a new opportunity, undertakes a new phase of His work for mankind and inaugurates a new era in the world.

The day was appropriate. At the Passover Christ died for the sins of the world, as the lamb had been slain as symbol of Him, and it was right that the Spirit should inaugurate the new era at the next feast, Pentecost, which was the feast of the "first fruits" and a fitting time for the disciples to enjoy "the first fruits of the Spirit;" the time when the Jews gratefully remembered their complete deliverance from Egypt and now they celebrate the complete work of their Deliverer; a time when they were gathered from all parts of the earth and could take back the news; a time which was close to the anniversary of the giving of the law from Mount Sinai, which brought in a new era, while this brings in the greatest of all eras.

2. TWO SIGNS.—Though His coming is into their hearts and He resides within them, He gives two external marks of His coming which are, at the same time, symbols of the work He does.

First is air. The impalpable, unseen, ever-moving, powerful air, which supports life by penetrating the whole body and yet gives itself out in degrees varying from the soft zephyr to the terrible storm, is a fit symbol of the Holy Spirit, unseen and pure, the Giver and Sustainer of all life, material and spiritual, the Purifier of the impure and the Perfector of the imperfect. The sound they heard gave them that conception of the Spirit.

The other symbol was fire. It completes the teaching of air. Air is necessary to life, but fire warms, purifies, stimulates, a fit symbol of the Spirit who refines the heart, gives it the glow of zeal and brings its true fruits to perfection. The fire that appeared was in one mass, but "divided itself into separate tongues of flame, one for each person." The clear meaning of that was that the Spirit gives His power to each person, to each as he may need, and that it is the one self-same Spirit who gives suitable gifts to men.

II.

The Spirit's Gifts and Works. 4-11.

"And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

"Now there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men from every nation under heaven. And when this sound was heard, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speaking in his own language. And they were all amazed and marveled, saying, Behold, are not all these that speak Galileans? And how hear we, every man in our own language wherein we were born? Parthians and Medes and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, in Judea and Cappadocia, in Pontus and Asia, in Phrygia and Pamphylia, in Egypt and the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and sojourners from Rome, both Jews and proselytes, Cretans and Arabians, we hear them speaking in our tongues the mighty works of God."

1. GIFTS. — Note several things. First, the universality of the gift. There were 120 and they "all" received the gift, apostles and laymen, men and women. All were to bear witness, officials and laymen, and all were prepared. Second, the completeness of the gift. They were "filled," every faculty of every soul charged with the subtle pervasive, enabling power—memory, will, heart, reason. Each one was put in possession of his own power and all were co-ordinated under the guidance and control of the Spirit, ready for all emergencies.

2. WORKS.—They were internal, first, an internal revolution, giving great joy, peace, love, devotion to Jesus and His cause and unerring insight into truth and into the needs of hearts, as we see by Peter's masterly address. The work was external, too, shown in one great sign, the power to speak in other languages. The tongue of fire indicated that the gospel was to be made known by the speech of Spirit-filled men and this shows the utmost power of the consecrated tongue. The Spirit was pledged to give them whatever was needed for a given occasion and right here they needed to reach the visitors in their own languages. It impressed the visitors that the gospel had power and made the apostles feel that their message was for all men.

III.

The Explanations. 12.

"And they were all amazed and were perplexed, saying one to another, What meaneth this? But others mocking said, They are filled with new wine."

Notice how they explained the strange thing—speaking in foreign languages. Some were simply amazed and—reverent. Some still resisted and said the apostles were drunk. Peter said three things about it—that it was too early in the morning for them to be drunk in that way; that it was the fulfillment of a prophecy which they should all have been familiar with and that God's power was so evident they ought to be able to recognize it. Three thousand were converted.

WHAT THE MASTERS SAY.

The whole nature was influenced; for that divine Spirit can enter into every part of the soul, and will prove Himself the Spirit of truth to the understanding, the Spirit of power and of love and of self-control to the will and the affections and the governing reason, the Spirit of sound understanding to the practical man; and the whole, filled with Him, will flame with new brilliance, like a bit of black carbon in a stream of electricity. The Spirit of God has all humanity for its sphere of action.—McLaren.

Christian eloquence is not a gift of nature, but of grace. Piety is necessary to the best oratory. But when Peter's address on this morning is studied we have still more convincing proof of the Spirit's presence. In its adroitness in the arrangements of the arguments, in its analysis, in its steering clear of Jewish prejudices, in its appeal and effect it is without a peer among the products of inspired men.—Stifler.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

1. What is the value of combined and confident prayer?
2. How is the Spirit's help needed in our life and labors?
3. What are the needs and what the sources of power today?
4. Why do we not have the gift of tongues now?

MILLION-DOLLAR PARK, MUNITIONS PLANT AND COLLEGE SUGGESTED FOR DULUTH

Writers in "What Would You Do for Duluth?" Contest Are Very Philanthropic; One Opposes Sunday Shows.

Government-owned munition factories, million-dollar parks, a university, an endowed free dispensary and hospital, housing code amendments and "movie" restrictions—these are some of the many things that would be done for Duluth, if today's contestants for The Herald's prizes had their way.

A Socialist, a peace-at-any-price man and a preparedness advocate vie with one another for first honors in the contributions of today.

First of all an outsider—a resident of Ely—offers three suggestions, which, he believes, would do a lot to make Duluth one of the greatest cities in the Northwest.

Here is his letter:

Wants Million-Dollar Park.

"If I had it in my power, the three things I would do for Duluth are: First—I would give about $1,000,000 towards the making of a very large and beautiful park. I would let some contractor take the job of making a nice cement walk all over and through the park.

"Then I would get an expert gardener to plant lawn grass and flowers in the park, and also to tend them after they were planted. I would put a large swimming pool in the middle of the park and have benches all around in the park.

"Second—A large, in fact the largest and best college in the Northwest I would have built in Duluth. In every way I would have the college modern. The fees charged would be very moderate. Only very learned teachers would be hired, so that the students could learn much. I myself would pay all expenses for the college the first year, including the expense of building it. After that the people of Duluth would be willing to help it along.

"Third: The third thing for Duluth that I would do would be to build a very large hospital. I would have the hospital situated in the quietest part of the city. I would pay the doctors and also pay for all the medicine they used. The people of Duluth would not need to pay for the medicine. I would pay the expenses of the hospital, myself, always.

"JOSEPH PLUTH.
Ely, Minn."

This citizen evidently has suffered from a fire that damaged the rear part of his residence, and from firemen who damaged the front part of the house in putting out the blaze:

Opposes Sunday Shows.

"First—If I had the power, I would pass a law prohibiting all shows from playing in Duluth on Sundays.

"Second—I would amend the housing code so the fire department would not be forced to pass with their outfit through the front part of a house in order to put out a fire in the rear.

"Third—I would pass a law prohibiting the city authorities from allowing every special privilege to the rich and turning down the just requests of the common people—as they do.

"A. A. Campbell, 3710 West Third street."

Here are the ideas of the advocate for preparedness, who is a man agreeing with Congressman Clarence B. Miller in some respects:

Wants Munitions Made Here.

"First—I would establish a government-owned steel plant in Duluth to manufacture all the state ore in her iron lands into war munitions, battleships, submarines, torpedo boats, cruisers and hydroplanes on the banks of the St. Louis river, the Duluth harbor, Superior and Two Harbors.

"In 1920, when we may have a saloonless nation and war may be no more, use these same plants to make the agricultural and industrial machinery, and sell them to our people at cost.

"This can be done, just as we built the Panama canal and all other great government works.

"Second—Acquire and improve all available water power northwest of Duluth and generate electricity for all Duluth's manufacturing industries, light, heat, and furnish the same at near cost.

"Third—Make every acre in the state a fertile one and lease them to market gardeners to live on with their families, so that they can produce the butter, eggs, meat and vegetables for the workers in these various industries.

"Joseph J. Thatcher, 812 East Third street."

WHAT WOULD YOU DO FOR DULUTH?

What three things, if you had the power, would you do for Duluth, and how would you do them?

Write out your answer, LIMITING IT TO TWO HUNDRED WORDS, put your name and address at the top of the sheet, and send it to the Problem Editor of The Herald before Jan. 20. WRITE ONLY ON ONE SIDE OF THE SHEET.

For the best answer to this question The Herald will give a prize of $10.

For the second best answer The Herald will give a prize of $5.

For the third best answer The Herald will give a prize of $3.

Drug Proof?

If there ever was a human being who was not in some way susceptible to drugs he's never been heard of. Yet in spite of the warnings of reputable physicians many persons with whom coffee disagrees continue its use and take into their systems the drug, caffeine.

The 2½ grains of this drug, in the average cup of coffee, taken regularly is often the cause of headaches, nervousness, biliousness, heart flutter and many other ailments.

The sure, easy way out of coffee troubles is to quit the coffee and use

BIG CHECK FOR POLES

Prominent Duluthian Sends $100 to The Herald for War Sufferers.

Appeal So Far Results in Contributions Amounting to $152.

The Polish war fund took a big jump yesterday afternoon when a prominent Duluthian turned over a check to The Herald for $100, the largest single amount given to a war fund in Duluth up to this time. The generous donor of the check requested that his name be concealed and that the money be acknowledged as from "cash."

The first contribution sent The Herald was for $50. Two dollar contributions followed, and this taken with the latest contribution received makes a total of $152. The Polish committee believes that when the people of Duluth begin to realize the appalling conditions of the people in the war zone of Poland that the response will continue and that contributions will be numerous and generous. Duluth has always been prompt in its response to appeals for worthy causes, and this is said to be one of the most deserving of all. The fund as received by The Herald follows:

"BABY WEEK" IN MARCH.

Uncle Sam Is Sponsor for Nation-Wide Observance.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The first week in March will be "baby week" throughout the country. More than 400 communities, representing every state in the Union, are already laying their plans for its observance, according to the Children's Bureau of the United States department of labor, in order that during these seven days the needs of the babies may be presented so that all the parents in these communities will learn a little better how to care for their babies.

It is confidently believed by those who are interested in this nation-wide "baby week" that the remainder of the year will be marked by a strengthening of all community activities for saving babies' lives and giving them a better chance to grow to a healthy maturity. The baby week idea originated in Chicago two years ago.

Old Trustees Re-elected.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 6.—At a meeting of trustees of the Wesley Foundation of Wisconsin, incorporated to raise $250,000 for a chapel, social center and school of religion at the University of Wisconsin, all the old trustees were elected, and C. S. Gilbert of Wausau was chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the death of T. E. Bennison of Janesville.

An Easy Way to Get Fat and Be Strong

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which seemingly embodies the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This modern treatment is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through regenerative, re-constructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to the starved, broken-down cells and tissues of your body. You can readily picture what result this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight the cheeks fill out, hollows about neck, shoulders and bust disappear and from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh is added to the body. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Boyce Drug store and other leading druggists of this vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired. Advertisement.

FORECAST IS MADE BY GARY

Chairman of Steel Corporation Issues Statement on Business Conditions.

Warns Against Danger of Over-Confidence Resulting From War Orders.

New York, Jan. 6.—Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation yesterday issued a statement dealing in detail with prevailing prosperous conditions in the steel and iron trade, together with a forecast of the future of that industry. Reference is made to the European conflict in its world-wide application to economic conditions. Judge Gary calls attention to the dangers of over-production or inflation by manufacturers and bankers, resulting from over-confidence, and the aid of the government is invoked for adequate protection of the country's industries. In part, the statement follows:

"It will be admitted by all manufacturers of these products that there is no reason for complaint at the present time as to the volume or urgency of the demand nor, in most cases, the prices received, notwithstanding the cost of production has been larger during the last five years because of increases in wages and freight charges, etc.

Great Rate of Production.

"The rate of production at present in the United States is about 38,000,000 tons of pig iron and about 41,000,000 tons of steel ingots per annum. This is compared with a rate of 19,000,000 tons of pig iron and 16,000,000 tons of steel ingots one year ago and 33,500,000 tons of pig iron and 35,000,000 tons of steel ingots at high water mark in the year 1913 for pig iron and 1912 for ingots.

"Prices could easily be materially advanced and perhaps will be, although I believe as to some of the commodities at least, they are high enough. It is not certain they can be controlled, for the reason that the requirements of purchasers, and the offers they make, fix the prices to a large extent.

"Apparently about 75 per cent of the sales is for domestic consumption and the balance for foreign use, directly or indirectly. The influence of the export sales upon domestic sales I do not undertake to say.

Evidence of Great Prosperity.

"Conditions pertaining to this industry reflect, more or less, those of other lines and perhaps are an indication of the general situation. Certainly there are evidences which cannot reasonably be questioned of great prosperity. It is not my purpose to discuss the reasons for these satisfactory condition. They exist; and it now seems probable that they may continue for months to come.

"When there is possible danger ahead, the locomotive engineer is directed by his rules, formal instructions and signs, to proceed with caution; and sometimes to stop, look and listen. We may draw an analogy. I would offer words of caution. We are proceeding at a rapid pace. There is great expansion at present. I fear there is great inflation. Some of the circumstances surrounding the financial and industrial world are peculiar and not justified. There will be jars and jolts when eyes are opened and things become normal. We ought to stop, ponder, reason. We shall be all the better for it. Legitimate enterprise and progress will be benefited if we read all the signs, consider the past, and reflect upon the future.

What of the Future?

"What of the future? Who can say with any feeling of certainty? It may be very dark and desperate. It will be thus in Europe, and we in America will feel the effects to a greater or lesser extent. The destruction of billions upon billions of property in any country must necessarily affect, in some degree, all other countries.

Economic conditions in the United States may and should be good in the long future, with the usual interruptions, if we are fully alive to our opportunities.

"I believe the war of Europe will not be so long protracted as many, if not the most of men, predict. This opinion is based principally upon two grounds: In the first place, it seems apparent that little, if any, benefit to any belligerent country or to the world at large can result from the war, except and unless it be the firm establishment of an international tribunal for the settlement of all international differences; one that is universal and practical; and whose decrees are enforceable; one that will prevent the prolongation of wars in the future. This can be created. If so negotiations for peace and for such results should be opened at once and pushed to a conclusion. There will never be a better time.

No Need For Tribunal.

"If one side or the other should absolutely conquer the other side (which seems impossible, unless the war is carried to an extent that would leave the surviving peoples of the present generation of all the nations helpless and hopeless) there would be no need for disposition for an international tribunal. The leaders of all the nations must realize and appreciate these facts and are likely to act upon them soon.

"The other ground for my belief is that each of the warring nations is starving for men and money, both. They do not admit it, but the signs are plenty and convincing. Any nation that is prolonging the war beyond the time when it can be reasonably and honorably discontinued is slowly, but surely committing suicide.

"But whenever the war shall close, the business of the country will be confronted with new conditions. The purchasing power of the whole world will have been very greatly reduced. Foreign countries who are now buying our products, because compelled, will withdraw their patronage in a large measure. Other non-producing countries will find their financial resources and credits lessened. More than this, foreign producers, in great need, will strive more diligently than ever to supply the countries that are financially able to pay and at prices based on cheap labor and low cost, as they have a perfect right to do.

"Our producers, including our wage earners, will find themselves in commercial antagonism with the most perfect and difficult competition ever experienced unless this shall be prevented by laws that are reasonable and sufficient. This is not a question of politics, nor for political parties as such. It is one of economics and of good business and it affects all the people. It is a question of the greatest good to the greatest number. There should be an effort to ascertain and establish a line of justice and fairness between the producer and the consumer.

Times Are Serious.

"This is an epoch. Times are serious, perhaps critical. Financial, commercial and industrial interests of this country may be firmly established on an independent and invulnerable foundation, but there must be co-operation between all classes and departments, private and public.

"We must be prepared for radical changes in volume, in prices and resources. There is danger of overproduction, over-extension of credit and liabilities, over-confidence. We have observed this before and we shall see it again. It is possible the banks will over extend their credits, particularly in favor of foreign interests who offer attractive rates, but they will take care of that matter for themselves. We business men should realize there is possible danger ahead in the business outlook and if we proceed with caution, however aggressive, we will have done no harm and we may hereafter have reason for congratulations. We have the greatest country with the greatest opportunities and may properly be hopeful and confident."

FIRE IN BASEMENT OF DEPARTMENT BUILDING

Washington, Jan. 6.—Fire early last night caused minor damage in the basement of the great building that houses the state, war and navy departments. The loss, practically confined to odds and ends stored in the basement, was estimated at about $2,000, but before the flames had been brought under control, dense clouds of smoke poured through the long corridors and out of the windows.

Stories of incendiarism were circulated, but officials declared spontaneous combustion generated in a pile of old rags started the blaze. Two kegs of gasoline standing near a pile of lumber to which the flames spread were removed in time to prevent an explosion. Valuable departmental documents, military records and other priceless papers, including the original copies of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, are stored in the building. It is separated from the White House only by a narrow street.

N. P. Railroad Fined.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 6.—The Northern Pacific railroad was given a fine of $500 and costs by Judge C. F. Amidon in the United States district court Tuesday after it had pleaded guilty to violating the safety appliance act.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

MARE ISLAND NAVY YARD MAY BE ABANDONED

Washington, Jan. 6.—Possibility of the navy being forced by an inadequate channel to abandon the Mare Island navy yard for the use of big ships, at least, was advanced today by Rear Admiral H. T. Stanford, head of the bureau of yards and docks, before the house naval committee. Representative Stevens of California, suggested that congress might provide a commission to study the desirability of finding another location for a navy yard in San Francisco bay.

Admiral Stanford said that if it were shown to be impossible to provide a reliable entrance through Mare Island strait for the superdreadnaughts to get to the present yard, the navy department probably would recommend locating facilities for them at another point on the bay.

Lives to Be 98.

GRAND JURY INDICTS NINE

Preliminary Report Made and Final One Expected Shortly.

Names of Three Withheld as They Are Not in Custody.

Work of the January, 1916, grand jury will probably be concluded this afternoon when it is expected that the inquisitorial body will make its final report to District Judge Fesler. The grand jury yesterday made an official visit to the county and city jails and may include some recommendations as to these institutions in its report.

In a partial report presented at noon today to Judge Fesler, nine indictments were returned. Three of the counts were secret, the defendants not being in custody. Those made public were returned against the following defendants:

J. E. Soucey, for forgery in the second degree. Soucey, it is claimed, passed a check on H. C. Matzke, assistant cashier of the City National bank. The paper purported to be a certified check on the Detroit Savings bank. The name of the maker, O. M. Brooks, and the certification were both forged. Soucey's crime is alleged to have been committed on Oct. 23, 1915.

George W. Butterfield, for forgery in the second degree. This defendant is accused of having forged a time check of the International Falls Lumber company for $34, which he passed on Holmer Tillotson on Nov. 3 last.

Mary Selkamaa, for grand larceny in the second degree. She is accused of shoplifting. The indictment charges her with having helped herself from the counters of the Glass Block store and with taking away $18 worth of silk waists and hose and other dainty bits of lingerie without first settling for them, on Jan. 3, last.

Augusto Guzzo, for assault in the first degree. Guzzo is charged with having hit Paul Sanas on the head with a heavy iron bar on Nov. 27 last in the Northern Pacific round house at the West end. Sanas was badly injured.

Stanley Androsky, for assault in the second degree. Androsky is indicted for an assault he is alleged to have made on the person of his father, John Androsky, on Nov. 29, last. The elder Androsky was slashed with a knife. The fracas happened in West Duluth.

Frank W. Wellers, for forgery in the second degree. Wellers, it is claimed, passed a forged promissory note on R. J. Carnes Dec. 30, using the name of Phil C. Busha. He secured $20 on the paper, it is said.

PEACE REFERENDUM IS WELL INDORSED

National Chamber of Commerce Reports on International Court Measure.

The Duluth Commercial club has been notified by the chamber of commerce of the United States that the referendum submitted by the chamber to membership organizations, the Duluth club among them, concerning the establishment of an international court of conciliation to prevent war, has been adopted by a large majority.

The method of enforcement contained in the proposal—to bring economic pressure to bear upon any nations resorting to military measures without submitting their differences to the proposed court, was carried by a vote of 556 to 187; but the proposed method of using a military force in the event that concerted economic pressure should not be sufficient, did not carry, the vote being 152 in favor, while the two-thirds vote required by the chamber for passage was 468.

This is the referendum on which the executive committee of the Duluth club took no action, claiming that it was "untimely."

Opera Singers Are Well Wrapped When They Leave Their Train.

The members of the company were registered at the Holland. The intense cold of Duluth today made some of the song birds apprehensive lest their delicate throats would be affected, and the members of the troupe bundled up with exceeding care as they left the train. Exclamations of dismay and surprise escaped them, most of the exclamations being in foreign accent, as the opera singers encountered the first frigidity.

As the majority of the singers are from Southern Italy and unused to excessive cold, the first real winter weather of the season took them "off their feet."

YOUTH MUST "PAY PIPER"

Has Traveled Rapid Pace in Duluth Cafes on Stolen Funds.

Admits the Theft of $500 From Bank in Milwaukee.

Homesick and "broke," Reginald Williams, 25, wandered into police headquarters this morning and asked for help.

Up to that time police knew him as a good-looking, well-dressed youth, who had been "playing" cafes rather too much during the last few days.

"I'm flat broke," he told Lieut. N. U. G. Terry, "and I was just thinking of 'beating' my bill at the McKay hotel."

The officer volunteered to help him and arranged with Probation Officer Frank Hicks to get him work. Williams was to meet the probation officer at 1 o'clock.

Throughout the morning he sat in a chair at headquarters, slouched down disconsolately, and spoke to nobody.

A few minutes before 1 o'clock he arose, walked over to the desk, and said:

"There's no use of me keeping that date, I might as well tell you who I am. "My name's Williams and I'm wanted in Milwaukee. I stole $500 from a bank down there."

Further questioning disclosed the fact that Williams was among the most trusted of the younger employes of the Marine National bank at Milwaukee until the day before Christmas.

Then he left for the Twin Cities. Two or three days of the bright lights in St. Paul and Minneapolis were enough, and he came on to Duluth.

Lieut. Terry wired Milwaukee and held the boy.

President Wilson told callers today that before appointing a successor to Justice Lamar, he would thoroughly canvass the situation and hear arguments of delegations with candidates to present. He said he wanted to get the best man in the country for the place.

CARLSON NOW UNDER ARREST

Virginian, Alleged to Have Stolen From Fitger, Caught in Idaho.

Given $300 to Cash Checks, Is Accused of Embezzling the Money.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—As soon as the necessary papers are secured from St. Paul an officer of St. Louis county will leave for Boise, Idaho, to present to the governor of that state a requisition for a warrant for the removal from the state of Warner Carlson of Virginia, now under arrest at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, on the charge of embezzlement.

It is charged that Carlson, who ran a saloon here, was given $300 by the Fitger Brewing company of Duluth early last month for the purpose of cashing pay checks, but instead of doing so he pocketed the money and left for the West. Officers of St. Louis county have been looking for him since he disappeared and last night Assistant County Attorney Boyle was notified Carlson had been apprehended in Coeur d'Alene. Carlson figured in a divorce case here some time ago in the action of Lina Berg vs. T. Berg, the husband in a counter suit naming him as co-respondent.

It was also decided to purchase a complete gymnasium equipment to be installed in the fire hall for the joint use of the members of the police and fire departments.

BALK AT WOOD CUTTING.

Applicants for Aid in Virginia Find Work Too Hard.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The woodyard established by the Associated Charities to give employment to able bodied men wanting aid did not make a hit with two local men heads of families who wanted assistance and were given the tools and told to tackle the woodpile at $1.25 per cord.

One of the men returned to the Charities headquarters and informed Miss Brotherton, the secretary, that the work was too hard and the pay inadequate. He was told to return to the yard and finish his cord of wood.

In the afternoon Miss Brotherton visited the yard but the men had gone. They had not touched any wood. The saws they were given were found at the fire hall.

Eighty-two visits were made by Miss Brotherton during the last two weeks of December, thirty business calls; fifty-eight calls at headquarters; six letters written; seventy telephone messages; thirty hours of volunteer work by local women; four days' employment to woman; twelve given employment.

MEAT CAUSE OF LAME BACK AND KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys If Your Back Is Aching.

Noted Authority Says Uric Acid From Meat Irritates the Bladder.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervscent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases. —Advertisement.

ANOTHER VIRGINIAN FILES FOR OFFICE

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—George J. Williams, who is in the real estate and insurance business, filed today for city treasurer, a position he sought at the polls two years ago.

Lafayette Bliss, for several years superintendent of the Virginia schools and active in local politics, is being mentioned today as a candidate for mayor. His entrance in the race would make the fight for mayor three cornered and very interesting.

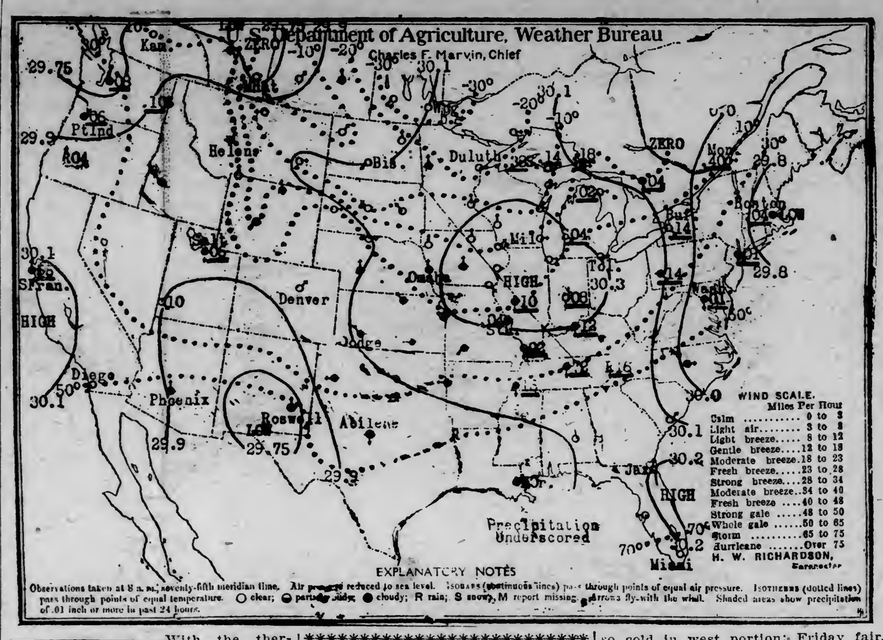

The campaign thus far has been free from mud-slinging and is expected to be one of the cleanest in the history of the city.

City Treasurer Fred J. Verville has begun his campaign for re-election. For some time it was thought he would have no opposition.

Judge James P. Carey is expected to file for re-election this week, but no other filings are expected for the judgeship. It seems certain that U. G. Holloway, deputy clerk of the district court, will not run for judge.

The candidates for special municipal judge are Charles L. Eaton, Joseph W. Kindred and J. Gannon.

Moderate southerly to easterly winds.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The temperature has fallen anywhere from 20 deg. to nearly 50 deg. in the lake region, Ohio, Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys and Southwestern states during the last twenty-four hours. Zero weather prevails over most of Canada, Northern Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, the Dakotas, Wyoming and Montana, the coldest reported temperature last night being 34 deg. at Minnedosa, Man., while at Duluth the minimum was 25 deg. Moderating temperatures cover the extreme Northwest, which condition will extend to the Head of the Lakes by Friday morning. Westerly winds of gale force occurred in the lake region Wednesday and last night. In the meantime rain or snow fell over the Ohio and Lower Mississippi valleys, Lake region, Eastern Canada, North Atlantic states, and Pacific coast districts."

A Sure Way to End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Advertisement.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, billious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.—Advertisement.

WILL HARVEST ICE FRIDAY

East End Company Will Begin Work on 30,000 Ton "Crop."

Product of Fine Quality; Will Comply With New Ordinance.

Duluth's annual ice harvest will begin tomorrow, and promises to be one of the most successful in the history of the business at the Head of the Lakes. The weather has been favorable and the ice is of good depth and quality.

The East End Ice company will begin operations with about 75 to 100 men, according to the number that can be employed to advantage at the beginning. Only six teams of horses will be used at the start. To comply with the new ordinance the East End company will begin operations at New Duluth beyond Commonwealth avenue.

"Duluth should get better ice this year than ever before," said Manager E. H. Falgren of that company today. "The city has inspected and given a bacteriological test to the ice and found it to be of excellent quality and as near pure as is possible to get ice. We are going to get out 30,000 tons this season, and will push operations until the last block has been cut and housed.

"The weather has been unusually good this season. The snows have not melted and frozen often enough to make a rotten surface, and so the product is hard and clear all the way through. If weather conditions continue as they have been the harvesting of ice this season should prove the heaviest and most profitable in the history of Duluth."

TO UTILIZE FLAX STRAW

Idea of Getting Revenue From Waste North Dakota Product Revived.

European Genius Claims He Can Make Flax Thread From the Straw.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Manufacturing establishments to convert the flax straw of North Dakota into commercial products may be established in the western part of the state. North Dakota grows from one-third to one-half the total flax acreage of the United States. The crop is raised exclusively for its seed and no attention is paid in this state to the fiber end of the crop.

Some years ago a number of plants were constructed in the state to convert the flax straw into fiber. Fargo led with an expensive plant and others were established at Grafton, Mayville, Finley, Wahpeton and elsewhere in the state, but the high freight rates made it impossible to haul the fiber back East and manufacture commercial products. One by one the plants dropped out of existence until today there is not one running in the state. Annually hundreds of thousands of tons of straw are burned and wasted.

Thread From Flax Straw.

Commissioner of Agriculture Flint has had a number of inquiries recently from Eastern parties asking for specimens of fiber and also for specimens of the flax straw just as it comes from the threshing machines. A carload was baled and shipped to a European inventor who claims to have worked out a plan whereby he can make flax thread out of the straw.

The original Fargo plant planned to convert the straw into fiber and intended to ship the fiber to a central plant at Niagara Falls for the further manufacture of linen paper. Whether linen goods or linen paper are either possible from the broken up straw as it comes from the machine is not certainly known, but it has been demonstrated the fiber possesses high value for electric work, especially for insulation purposes. It is also regarded as one of the best things to use in upholstery. There are dozens of kindred uses to which it can be put, and the establishment of a central manufacturing plant in the western part of the state accessible to the flax fields might result in the by-products of the farm, which are now being wasted, being converted into a profitable source of revenue for the farmers of the state.

DULUTH-MOORHEAD ROAD WORK PLANNED

Carlton County Board Will Let Contract for Graveling Highway.

Carlton, Minn., Jan. 6.—The Carlton county board has let three contracts for hauling gravel to gravel roads, the hauling to be done this winter with sleds, when it is cheaper. The board plans to do a lot of road graveling next spring and summer. One of the important pieces of road graveling decided on will be the Duluth-Moorhead road from here to the Aitkin county line, contracts for which will be let tomorrow.

The sub-grade on this road was completed last year, but some of the road was sandy and the clay section was bad in wet weather. This road will now be graveled and put in first-class condition and will complete a direct road from Duluth to Fargo and Moorhead. This will complete the only road in Carlton county under the Elwell law. The road will be of great benefit to Cromwell and Wright and the entire western section of the county.

Moose Lake-Barnum Road.

The board is also planning to complete the road from Moose Lake to Barnum and to build a fine road from Moose Lake to Kettle River. During the last year a great deal of work was done between Kettle River and Cromwell and the completion of the road west of Moose Lake will furnish a highway from Moose Lake to Cromwell and from there north to Floodwood in St. Louis county.

The board also plans to build a road to Holyoke. The southeastern section of Carlton county has never had direct connection with the rest of the county as the Nemadji river has very steep banks and there are no bridges. A large number of farmers from Iowa and Illinois have settled near Holyoke the last year and others have arranged to come in next spring.

HEADS CHICAGO BANK.

Former Minnesota Banker New President of Merchants Loan & Trust Co.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Orson Smith, president of the Merchants' Loan & Trust company, one of Chicago's largest banks, has announced that he would retire Feb. 1 from active charge of the institution. He will be succeeded by Edmund D. Hulbert, first vice president, formerly of Minnesota.

Edmund D. Hulburt has been a Chicago banker since 1895, when he came here from Winona, Minn., to become second vice president of the Merchants' Loan & Trust company. Three years later, when J. W. Jones retired from the presidency, he succeeded Mr. Smith as first vice president and became a member of the board of directors.

Mr. Hulbert was loath to talk about his success in the banking world.

"I never made but two changes," he said.

"I started as a messenger boy for the Hurlbut National bank in Winsted, Conn., when I was 17 years old. That was in 1875.

"Two years later I went to Winona and became bookkeeper in the First National bank there. Two years later, when I was 21, I became cashier of that institution and held that place until I came to Chicago in 1895."

HEMLOCK BARK IS IN GREAT DEMAND

War Has Advanced Price of Commodity Used in Tanning.

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 6.—Another of the far-reaching influences of the European war is felt in the Copper Country. The demand for hemlock bark for tanning purposes is so great that buyers for the big leather manufacturers are coming into the district and bidding against each other for present stocks and for the output of the next season, which opens in May.

The bark is now selling at $9 a cord and this is an advance of 50 per cent over the price last May. It is the highest price ever offered for hemlock bark in the Copper Country.

Sells Hold Over Stocks.

One large lumbering concern has sold out its entire hold-over stock at this price, and it is possible that within the last few weeks 1,000 cords have been sold at the high figure. The Copper Country, including Houghton, Baraga and Ontonagon counties, will produce 25,000 cords of bark in a season and it is expected that this amount will be contracted for delivery next May or June at $9 or even more per cord.

This high price of bark is an effect of the war because that disturbance has to a great extent shut off shipments from South America.

GOVERNOR L. B. HANNA HAD GASTRIC FEVER

Condition at One Time Serious, But Is Rapidly Recovering.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Latest advices from Copenhagen indicate that Governor L. B. Hanna was suffering from gastric fever instead of typhoid fever and that his condition was really serious for several days but that he is now entirely out of danger. In a short time he will resume his trip over Europe and get some first hand information on the actual condition of the war-ridden sections of the other side.

Many friends of the governor advised against his making the trip with the Ford peace party, but all are unanimous in their opinion as to his sincerity in making the attempt to initiate a peace movement. He freely expressed a lack of confidence in the Ford party being able to accomplish anything conclusive but did believe they might be able to start something that would ultimately lead to the inauguration of a peace movement.

JOE STECKER IS A VERY QUIET AND MODEST CHAP

The Nebraska Boy Has Little to Say; Hetmanek Says His Boy Will Meet Gotch; The Colored Fighting Brigade Is Again Busy; Fulton and Porky Flynn.

BY BRUCE.

TO MEET and talk with Joe Stecker one would never gain the impression that the Nebraska farmer boy is one of the greatest athletes in the world. Joe is mild, even placid, looking, and he doesn't give the decided impression of tremendous strength and vitality that are part and parcel of the makeup of Frank Gotch.

In this respect young Stecker is a replica of Ed Adamson. If there was ever a harmless and inoffensive athletic appearing man in this world, that was little Ed Adamson in repose; and yet when stirred to action this fellow was one of the most terrible of them all.

That old adage which says you can't tell how far a frog can leap by his looks, seems to apply to athletes. This Stecker looks anything but impressive in street attire, or when merely in a conversational mood, but his really wonderful athletic record is there to controvert any mild and pleasant looks the boy carries around with him.

What Hetmanek Says.

J. HETMANEK is the manager of Stecker. Hetmanek was the postmaster of Dodge, Neb., but resigned to look after the wrestling interests of Joe Stecker and his brother, Anton.

"I think Frank Gotch is doing light training right at the present time," said Hetmanek yesterday. "We want to wrestle Frank, and, what's more, if we do wrestle him we want the big fellow to be in the best condition. Joe will beat Gotch, just as sure as I'm talking to you, and for that reason we want the public satisfied as to the condition of Gotch."

As to Stecker himself, he has little to say. We had heard and read a lot regarding the excessive quietness of the Nebraska boy, but, verily, his disinclination to talk is remarkable, comparing his attitude with the general run of athletes.

Praises Adolph Ernst.

DO you know who gave Stecker his hardest match? Maybe you say Cutler. Though the huge Chicago wrestler gave Joe a mighty tussle while it lasted. Stecker himself comes to bat with the statement that Adolph Ernst gave him his hardest mat battle.

"I was younger then and less experienced," said Stecker, in telling of this contest, "and Ernst gave me a real battle. For over an hour we struggled up and down the mat. Finally I got him and then in the second fall he was pretty easy. But I guess Ernst really gave me the hardest fight of them all."

Advice From O'Leary.

JOHN O'LEARY, who has had a long and varied line of experience in the Copper country, emits a word of advice to the Northern league schedule makers in regard to Calumet and Hancock-Houghton, should the league invade that country.

"Give 'em all the latter week end games possible," says John, "Friday, Saturday and Sunday games are what will draw up there. I know, and the advice is solid, sound and substantial."

John has backed yellow metal baseball teams and knows extensively whereof he speaks.

Beating Porky Flynn.

FRED FULTON'S match with Porky Flynn may be filled with unpleasantness and rude surprises. From all accounts the Porky person is an abysmal gink, one showing a glaring disregard for blows rained upon him, and one, moreover, rough and unconventional in a pugilistic sense.

A veteran such as this is liable to get the goat of a novice of Fulton's immature hempen experience. While it is also true that big Fred might wallop the Porky to sleep with one or two blows, there is always the possibility of a surprise being chucked into the party when fighters like the Porky Flynns are in the jamboree.

Remember, it was old Jim Flynn, groomed as a harness trial horse for Jim Coffey, that cast all well laid calculations to the winds by nearly stopping the Rosecommon giant.

Any man with the name of Flynn, be it real or assumed, will bear watching when it comes to ructions.

The Black Brigade.

JOE JEANNETTE has partially retired from pugilistic activities, but there remains Sam Langford, grizzled and hoary in a ring sense, and Sam McVey, Battling Jim Johnson and Harry Wills, the latest acquisition to the closed corporation of ebony wallopers.

Since black fighters are seldom arrayed against white boxers, it has been necessary for the smokes to hustle along among themselves.

Jeannette and Langford have fought a full score times, and the same is true of McVey and Langford. Now Langford and Wills have taken up the refrain of the black man's burden, their New Orleans cantata the other evening being the fourth.

Some do say that Langford, McVey or this Wills person can lick any of the white heavyweight gentry; be that as it may, it looks like it won't prove possible to learn this point. What Langford did to Gunboat Smith in their second meeting was a sure enough warning.

STAR QUINT IS WRECKED

Central High School Has Gloomy Outlook for Basket Ball Season.

First Game Friday With Nelson Dewey High School.

C. S. Blake, coach of the Central high school basket ball team, has selected the squad which will represent the local school in its first game of the season with the Nelson Dewey high school quint of Superior tomorrow night in the gymnasium across the bay.

The basket ball prospects at Central this year are very gloomy and the students feel that the team will have to fight for even its first game, the easiest one on the schedule. Former Captain O'Brien, Karon, Shaw and Farah, all "D" men of former school teams, in addition to Christoferson and other stars, have been declared ineligible because of being low in their studies, and the school team has therefore been wrecked. There are not enough men left for two teams to practice with, and there is very little hope of a successful season.

Don't Lose Heart.

Coach Blake, however, is working hard with the few men he has and they certainly will put up a fight in all games before they are defeated. Games have already been arranged with the very classiest basket ball quints of this part of the country, including Cathedral, Virginia, Hibbing, Superior, and many others. All of these schools have especially strong teams and the local lads will have a tough road of it this year.

The men who will be taken to Superior tomorrow night are as follows: Capt. Goglins, who was recently selected to fill O'Brien's place, Rosenberg, Mason, Hermanson, Henrickson, Bondy and Bush.

WELSH WILL FIGHT TWENTY-ROUND BOUT.

THREE LIVELY GAMES AT "Y"

Basket Ball Fans See Fast and Exciting Contests—One Close Score.

Class of Ball in Intermediate League Shows Improvement.

Three good games were played last night at the Y. M. C. A. in the Intermediate Basket Ball league. With one exception the games were close and kept the players on the jump at all times. The class of ball being played in this league is improving with great strides over that which marked the league's opening, proving that the organization is doing good work to develop players.

The Ennkays won a fast game from the Cubs by a score of 10 to 3. The first half concluded "two all," but the West end quint came back strong in the final period and ran up a safe lead. McKay scored all of the points for the winners, while Flink, on free throws, scored all of the tallies for his team.

The Peyton Papers, formerly the Giants, scored a victory over the Dormitory Blues. The score at the end of the affray was a tie, but in overtime play the paper men had considerable the better of it, winning 13 to 10.

The Central Business college five showed its class in a walkaway victory over the Laurels to the tune of 20 to 7. The game was featured by the fast work of the victors, all of the men playing especially well. Mulnati put up a great game for the losers.

JEALOUS OF THEIR AMATEUR STANDING

Golf Association Refuses Free Transportation Across Continent.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—The offer of the California Golf association to furnish free a special train to carry competitors in the next amateur championship tournament of the Western Golf association to the Pacific coast and back, should the meet be awarded to the Belmont club, was refused yesterday by a majority vote of a meeting of the board of directors of the Western Golf association. This decision could be overridden at the annual meeting Jan. 15.

The reason assigned was that the acceptance of the offer would violate the by-laws' definition of an amateur, who is not permitted to accept traveling or living expenses for his participation in a golf tournament.

HALF MILLION FOR CONTROL OF CUBS

Weeghman Gets Only 90 Per Cent—Close Sale Jan. 20.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 6.—Charles Weeghman, former president of the Chicago Federal league club, agreed, among other things, at the conference here yesterday, to pay $500,000 in cash to Charles P. Taft of this city for 90 per cent of the stock of the Chicago National league club, which Mr. Taft accepted. The actual sale, exchange of money and transfer of property will take place Jan. 20.

The sale of the Cubs served to partly complete the conditions of the treaty of peace recently signed here, and at a meeting of the committee to settle the dispute between the Federal and International leagues all other loose ends that were found after the signing of the peace treaty were picked up and put in order.

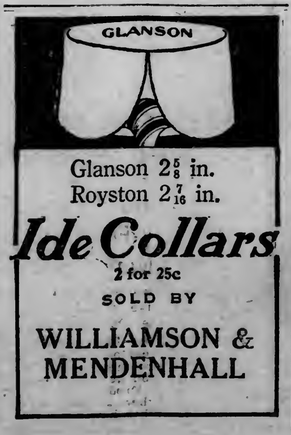

Shortly after the Cubs had been sold, the national commission went in session and re-elected August Herrmann as its chairman and John E. Bruce as its secretary.

The negotiations for the Cubs, which came to an end yesterday, were started some weeks ago. The original negotiations were between Harry F. Sinclair of Oklahoma and Mr. Taft, and it was not until Mr. Weeghman arrived here yesterday that he was identified in the negotiations, Mr. Sinclair having made all of the previous arrangements.

None of the details of the sale of the Cubs were given out other than the amount of stock sold, the price and the fact that Mr. Weeghman has agreed to assume all the obligations accruing from the West side baseball park in Chicago for a period of two years, with the understanding that Mr. Taft and his associates will make every effort possible to dispose of the lease of these grounds.

The full committee appointed at the recent peace meeting here to take up the International-Federal dispute held a meeting here last night, directly following the adjournment of the national commission meeting. After a short meeting the committee adjourned to meet in New York in about two weeks.

President Edward Barrow of the International league was suddenly stricken with appendicitis yesterday and left for New York last night.

BROWN WINS BY A KAYO

Iron Range Kid Knocks Out Sammy Taylor of Detroit.

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Pal Brown of Chisholm, Minn., last night knocked out Sammy Taylor of Detroit in the sixth round of a scheduled eight-round contest. Up to the knockout blow the fight was fairly even. A right uppercut to the jaw put the Detroit boy down for the count.

Brown boxed well and seemed troubled little by the punches landed by Taylor.

Ten Eyck says he expects to be in Duluth some time next month.

SOME WINTER SPORTS

RELAY RACE # 2

In Relay Race No. 2 a track is made around the ice by placing an object at the four corners. The teams line up on opposite sides of the rink and at the command "go" the first man skates around the track and touches the second man of his own team who does the same touching the third man and so on. The first team, using all men, to finish the course wins.

PLOWBOY JOE STECKER IS AN ATHLETIC FREAK

Dodge, Neb., Youngster Throws Two Opponents in Calm and Nonchalant Manner; Olaf Johnson Gives Zorbas a Great Battle; Pappas Wins Wrestling Royal.

BY BRUCE.

Americus was thrown two falls by Joe Stecker in 6:23 and 3:30 and Yussiff Hussane fell before the remarkable mat prowess of the Nebraska freak in 4:10 and 5:20, last evening Bobs Clemens held out for 7 minutes and 4 seconds against the long-geared farmer boy in the first fall, succumbing to the Stecker scissors for the second fall in 4 minutes.

George Soldat lasted an even 2 minutes for the first fall and then became entangled in the scissors and had the breath pumped out of his system in the second bout in 2 minutes and 8 seconds.

Clemens lasted longer against Stecker than Americus or Hussane managed to stay, but after looking at the 22-year-old kid from Nebraska work last evening those present still are entirely lacking in a definite idea of just how good this latest sensation of the athletic world is.

Stecker is a freak—different from Gotch or Zbyszko or any of the rest. He covers his man from toe to head and looks like a huge bird of prey that has pinned its quarry to the ground. Stecker holds an opponent locked fore and aft, working with his legs more effectively than most wrestlers are able to manipulate their hands.

The tremendous leverage he is able to exert with those long and powerfully muscled legs of his was made plainly evident last evening. Soldat was pumped out like a tire that has fared badly in a glass pile, while Clemens was rendered as impotent and helpless as a baby in the vice-like leg clutch of the rangy Dodge, Neb., grappler.

Stecker Works Slowly.

Stecker worked slowly and coolly last evening, and they say he took things just as easily and just as nonchalantly in his match against Charley Cutler, nothing whatever seeming to ruffle the calm and easy-going mat demeanor of the plowboy.

Until he stacks up against a man of the tremendous mat ability of Yussiff Mahmout, it will be difficult to thoroughly establish just how good this wonderful youngster is. Neither of his opponents of last night could make Stecker go the limit, but Americus, Hussane, Connolly or any of the others fell just as easily before the prowess of young Joe.

Standing one inch over six feet which is taller than the majority of wrestlers, Stecker is not built along orthodox wrestling lines. He is long-geared and of the greyhound type of man, not possessing particularly heavy shoulders or powerful torso. But once in action Stecker goes about his job in a thoroughly workmanlike manner, cool and deliberate, seeming to know where he is at all the time and seeming, also, to let no emotion or no excitement of any kind creep in upon him.

They say that when this youngster, green and inexperienced, this unsophisticated farm lad faced Cutler in Omaha last July, the hardy Chicago veteran was the first to develop "nerves", young Joe remaining cool, calm and unshaken, while Cutler went all to pieces.

Stecker is a freak, like Fitzsimmons, and is not to be judged by ordinary standards. He wrestles like no one before him; he is, in fact, a school unto himself, and just as hundreds of ordinary wrestlers attempted futively to imitate the original and flashy style of Frank Gotch, so will the famous Nebraska plowboy have a covey chasing along in his illustrious wake, trying to grab some of his "stuff."

What would happen were Gotch and Stecker to meet?

"I'd win," said Stecker yesterday.

"I don't think he could do that stuff to me," says Gotch. There you are. Duluth has seen Stecker and like others, the fans here really wonder just how far this freak from the tall grass can go.

A Local Star Uncovered.

In Olaf Johnson, the stocky little Norwegian Olympic belt holder, a real wrestling star was uncovered. The little Norsk came mighty near pinning the husky shoulders of Loule Zorbas to the mat on one occasion, and that is a feat that has never as yet been accomplished.

The boys met in the Greco-Roman style of wrestling, and the match was a rip-snorter. Once Johnson threw the stocky little Greek clear over his head, Louie lighting on his konk with a thud that could be heard throughout the big building.

Zorbas proved too strong at times when it looked like he was in trouble, and like Waino Ketonen, broke holds when his followers began to get anxious.

Johnson gave the great little Greek, a local kid who has never in his life lost a single fall, a great fight for half an hour, and that is quite praise enough for the little Norwegian kid.

Sailor Jack the Goat.

Sailor Jack was the goat for six Greeks in the wrestling royal. Led by Tom Pappas, the crack bantamweight, the Greeks, chattering in their native tongue, climbed right into the sailor and quickly and effectively disposed of him. Then the fight developed into a Horatius at the bridge stunt, with wiry little Tom Pappas in the haughty and mighty role of Horace.

Tom remained on his feet until all hands were down, thus being automatically proclaimed the winner.

While the intense cold hurt the attendance somewhat, a fairly good house greeted Stecker.

It was announced from the ring that Waino Ketonen and Al Francis of St. Paul will wrestle the latter part of this month for the world's title now held by the little Finn and a side bet of $500 apiece. Each wrestler has already posted a $100 forfeit with Harry McCollum. Each wrestler will post the remaining $400 before the day of the match, according to the articles of agreement.

DULUTH HOCKEY LEAGUE PLANS TO INCORPORATE

Officials of Local Association Hope to Make It Equal of Any Hockey Body in the Country.

The Duluth American Hockey association will become an incorporated body. Announcement of the plans under way to this effect was made today.

Officials of the association believe that its affairs will be administered more efficiently if it becomes a duly incorporated body, and it is expected that the plans will be completed within a short time.

It is believed that the incorportaion of the local league will be the means of placing it on an equality with any similiar body in the country.

The plan of securing a practice rink for the teams is under consideration. With but one practice night a week at the curling club, no adequate opportunity is given to the players to whip themselves in shape.

A plan is also being considered to have a regular training place established. If this plan is gone through with, a competent trainer will be employed to look after the physical needs of the boys.

The four teams will meet tomorrow evening at the curling club. Because of the decided demand that the curling night be switched from Thursday to Friday evening, Friday night will be the regular hockey evening during the remainder of the season.

All of the teams are in the swing of the game and some real hockey is expected. All of the boys have been practicing the present week.

OH, DOCTOR! ROOMS TOO HOT WITH MERCURY AT TWENTY BELOW

Most living quarters are kept too warm at this time of the year, declares Dr. I. J. Murphy, former Duluth police surgeon who is now secretary of the Minnesota Public Health association.

"The habit of living in overheated rooms," he says, "lowers the general resistance and injures the membrane lining of the nose and throat so that one becomes easily a victim to a cold bronchitis, or pneumonia.

"Fresh air, too, is just as essential in a sleeping room in the winter time as it is in the summer time. It should not be excluded, but there should be a proper amount of clothing for protection. Clothing should suit the kind of weather, not the season. In warm spells clothing should be reduced; in cold snaps, increased. Clothing should be reduced when one enters a warm room and put on again when exposed to the cold.

"Colds are catching. People suffering with a cold should not cough or sneeze without holding a handkerchief over both nose and mouth. They should spit only in proper receptacles. Small drops containing millions of germs may be scattered about in coughing, sneezing, or as a result of ordinary conversation. A person with an acute cold should try not to infect others.

"To keep up the general resistance the skin should be kept in a healthy condition. This can be done best by taking a warm bath at bed time at least twice a week and a cold shower or a sponge bath of very short duration every morning."

GRIP HAS DOUBLED CITY'S DEATH RATE

NATIONAL EPIDEMIC

AGED PERSONS AND CHILDREN VICTIMS

Duluth's death rate continues to show a considerable increase because of the ravages of grip and pneumonia.

Federal health officials say that the United States is being swept by probably the worst epidemic of this kind in its history, and Duluth is getting its share, say local health department heads.

Cleveland, Ohio, and Detroit, Mich., each have reported 100,000 cases of grip, and other Eastern centers of population, particularly New York and Philadelphia, are busy caring for the unusual number of fatalities.

Persons of advanced age and infants are most frequently the ones who succumb to grip or one of its complications, judging from the death certificates filed at the city hall, which show that there have been nearly a score of deaths from this source in the last few days.

The average number of deaths for 1915, according to Dr. E. W. Fahey's annual report, published earlier in the week, was between two and three daily. The total for the year was 987. This rate has been doubled recently, and even tripled on some days.

More octogenarians of Duluth have died since Dec. 20 than during the two months preceding, and although the epidemic is less violent now than at that time, there still are a large number of deaths daily.

Here are some of the deaths which have occurred since Christmas day, in which grip, pneumonia, or allied sicknesses, are named as primary or contributory causes:

Alexander Crawford, 81, 4402 Dodge street, died Christmas day.

Mrs. Margaret McCormick, 88, St. Ann's home, died Dec. 27.

Mrs. Ingeborg Hanson, 84, St. Ann's home, died Dec. 27.

Hans P. Johnson, 57, 323 North Sixty-third avenue west.

Since Monday certificates have been filed telling of the death of the following children or infants, where pneumonia is given as the cause:

Infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barmaca, 209 One Hundred and First avenue west; died Dec. 27.

Louis Wells, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Wells, 324 West Wabasha street, died Dec. 26.

Albert Anderson, 1, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Anderson, 311 South Fifty-eighth avenue west, died Jan. 3.

Milton A. Brodahl, 10, 721 West Third street, died Jan. 1.

Clements Stan Petschak, 1 month, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Petschak, Twenty-ninth avenue west and Thirteenth street, died Dec. 28.

Robert S. Burt, 19, 2913 West Second street, died Dec. 31.

MAIL BOXES ON THE INTERSTATE CARS

M'EWEN'S PLAN

QUICKER SERVICE BETWEEN TWO CITIES

Postmaster McEwen is eager to secure street railway service for carrying mails between Duluth and Superior. There should be a mail box on each street car where letters and cards could be deposited and picked up as soon as they reached the city of their destination, he says. Mr. McEwen spoke of the excellent service on the street cars in the Twin Cities, and said he would work to secure the same results in this city as soon as possible.

The service between Duluth and Superior is far from what it should be Mr. McEwen says, although care upon the part of the public will bring better results. The other night a letter for Superior was placed in the crowded mails of the late afternoon train. The mails were so heavy that they could not be sorted completely in the short time allotted for the work, and the letter was carried on beyond the Superior station. It took until noon the next day to get the letter back to Superior. If the letter had been mailed at the postoffice, it would have been properly placed and gone to Superior for the morning delivery.

Prompt and efficient mail service rests with the public as well as with the postoffice employes, according to Mr. McEwen, who has returned to Duluth after attending the funeral of the late Governor Hammond and going through the postoffices at St. Paul and Minneapolis. Mr. McEwen gave a number of suggestions whereby the public may secure for itself prompter and more efficient service.

"If mail is addressed clearly and correctly, it will always be delivered safely," he said, "but the trouble is that people neglect to do the little things that are absolutely necessary to secure such service. An example that illustrates this point well came to our attention today.

Finds $50 in Letter.

"A letter came to the postoffice here the other day addressed to 'James Downey, Duluth, Minn.' We referred to the city directory and found that James Downey lived in New Duluth. We delivered the letter to him. He opened it and found it contained $50 for some other 'James Downey' not living in Duluth. He returned the letter to the postoffice, saying the letter and money were for somebody else. The matter was straightened out this morning when James Downey, No. 2, came to the general delivery window and asked for mail. The latter was not registered in the general delivery records and did not live in the city. He might have lost the money, because mail addressed with only the names of the city as an address, is not distributed to general delivery unless the addressee is registered. We first refer to the city directory."

Some Suggestions.

Postmaster McEwen gave a number of suggestions today that he feels sure will be of benefit to the public if they are carried out. Among them are these:

Business houses or persons with large quantities of matter to mail should sort the letters, keeping the small ones and large ones together, and also putting them into the proper basket at the postoffice. Many outgoing letters are mailed in the local basket, while many local letters are put in the outgoing basket.

In speaking of the conditions in Minneapolis at the new postoffice, he said:

"The mailing room at the Minneapolis office is as large as our whole building. There the best of equipment added to plenty of space, makes the work easy. A great many of the offices are on the second floor, giving a great amount of room below. In St. Paul the postoffice is crowded and postal employes are greatly handicapped."

AGAIN HEAD OF MASONIC BENEFIT

W. B. Patton Re-Elected to Twentieth Term—Union's Fine Condition.

W. B. Patton was re-elected president of the Masonic Benefit union at the anual meeting last evening at the Masonic temple, beginning his twentieth term as the head of the organization. Other officers elected were: Dr. W. J. Works, vice president; H. Van Brunt, secretary, and W. E. Richardson, treasurer. The directors chosen were: C. A. Bronson, N. H. Wilson, H. Van Brunt, W. W. Richardson and S. L. Frazer.

The benefit union was organized in 1895 and now has a membership of 602 among the Masons of the city. It has paid eighty-one death claims since its organization. The annual report shows $8,543.78 in the treasury with a reserve fund of $8,014.01.

The Masonic Benefit union membership is limited to Masons belonging to the blue lodges of Duluth.

TAKES HIGH DIVE; SENT TO HOSPITAL

V. Ruspino Leaps From Twenty-Foot Wall to Railway Tracks.

Vincent Ruspino, 30, did an Annette Kellerman dive from a twenty-foot wall onto the Duluth & Iron Range railroad tracks near Eighth avenue east and Superior street yesterday, and then forgot his reason for it.

"How did you get down here?" asked Police Driver Fred Dinkel, a few minutes later, when he saw Ruspino reclining with his head near one of the rails. "I don't see your tracks in the snow."

"Jumped," was the laconic response.

"What's the matter? Are you tired of living?" the officer then asked.

Ruspino just looked at him, and refused to say a word.

At St. Luke's hospital he maintained his silence, and Police Surgeon Harry Klein tried in vain to find any broken bones or sprains.

Police think he tried to commit suicide. Ruspino lives in Crosby and has two brothers, James and Tony, who live there.

NEW CROOKSTON MAYOR.

Harvey W. Misner Assumes Office and Rumor Fills Jobs.

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 6.—Harvey W. Misner, the new mayor, has assumed the position to which he was elected, and will meet for the first time with the members of the city council on next Tuesday evening. The new members of the council are: O. O. Christianson, alderman-at-large; William Becker, Second ward; L. D. Foskett, Sixth ward; W. L. Ireland, Fourth ward; Charles Booth, Seventh ward; William R. Low, re-elected, Eighth ward.

Mayor Misner stated that he would have nothing to say regarding any appointments that he may make until the regular meeting of the council next Tuesday, at which time they would be announced.

Local politicians, however, are of the opinion that City Attorney Martin O'Brien will succeed himself, as will also City Engineer C. S. Giles.

It is also understood that Aaron Eck, a former chief of police, will succeed the present incumbent.

It is not believed that there will be any change in the officers of the council except that of Vice President Morrisey, for whom a successor will be named. President of the Council Peter Snyder will in all probability be re-elected to that position.

It is also the belief of many that Mayor Misner's appointments will carry the name of David Sanders as city street commissioner.

The president was empowered to appoint committees to arrange for the state society's meeting in the Copper country in August.

U. S. WOULD NOT AGREE TO GREY'S SUGGESTION

Washington, Jan. 6.—It was authoritatively stated last night that the United States government would not agree to the suggestion by Sir Edward Grey to Germany that a tribunal of American naval officials investigate belligerent charges and counter-charges of inhumane conduct by naval officers.

Officials conversant with the situation say informally that the United States undoubtedly will continue to adhere to its policy of non-intervention in controversies of this kind between belligerent nations.

COMMON SENSE AND HEALTH

COMMON sense tells you that real health cannot be forever dependent upon the artificial stimulation of laxatives and cathartics.

Drugs relieve constipation temporarily, but never cure it.

Nujol is odorless and tasteless, absolutely neutral, and is not digested or absorbed into the system. It acts merely as a mechanical lubricant.

Nujol is not a drug. Its use will not give quick, temporary relief. But Nujol is a genuine remedy in that it relieves constipation in the most natural way by lubricating the lining of the intestines, softening the intestinal contents, and thus promoting healthy and normal bowel activity.

ROBERT KELLY PASSES AWAY

Leading Citizen of Superior Is Victim of Pneumonia.

Manager of the Company That Founded West Superior.

Robert Kelly, 67, one of Superior's leading citizens, died at noon today at his residence, 1608 John avenue, following a week's illness of pneumonia. Mr. Kelly is survived by his widow, two sons, Robert Kelly, Jr., of Superior and Maj. William Kelly, U. S. A., Washington, D. C., and three daughters, Mrs. P. G. Stratton, Mrs. James M. Kennedy and Miss Elinor Kelly all of Superior.

Mr. Kelly was one of Superior's most public-spirited men. He came to the city in 1892 as manager for the West Superior Steel and Iron company, and in 1896 was appointed general manager for the Land & River Improvement company, the concern which platted and established West Superior. He was manager for the two concerns up to the time of his death.

It was through the activities of Mr. Kelly, since becoming chairman of the Superior park board in 1899, that the citizens of Superior acquired Billings park. Mr. Kelly had the place developed and later was instrumental in the construction of the boulevard which now runs through this pleasure ground.

ROBERT KELLY.

Son of Tammany Leader.

Mr. Kelly was a son of Robert Kelly, one of the first members of Tammany Hall of New York city. He was graduated from Yale in 1870 and from the Columbia law school in 1873. After leaving school he became interested in iron in Pennsylvania and as representative of these iron interests of the East he came to Superior in 1892.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been made as yet. It is probable that these will not be complete until word has been received from relatives in the East.

BODY NOT FOUND FOR WEEK.

Injuries Insufficient to Have Caused Amanda Maki's Death.

The body of Amanda Maki, aged 40, which was found frozen in a shack on Lower Banks avenue, is believed to have been there for at least a week, according to the coroner. Marks found on the body, in the opinion of the coroner, are not sufficient to have caused her death.

These marks included bruises on her left wrist and arm and blood spots on her right hand. A chair with four rungs cracked and broken was standing near the body. This, in the opinion of police officials, was used in beating the woman.

The police have as yet failed to find any trace of persons who have been able to throw any light on the case.

Many Divorces Granted.

During the year 1915 there were seventy-five actions for divorce started in the superior court of Douglas county and of these sixty-two were granted, according to records of the county clerk. In these actions the welfare of only fifty children were effected. In thirty-three cases there were no children.

Looking for $75.000.

Charles S. Ward, financial expert for the International Young Men's Christian association, arrived in Superior this morning to assume charge of the campaign for $75,000 which will be carried on in the city next week. It is proposed to raise this sum of money to complete and equip the "Y" building now under construction at Fourteenth and Ogden. The campaign will open on Jan. 12 and close Jan. 19.

Armenian Woman Launches Peace Plan

MME. LUCY THOUMAIAN.

The leader of another peace movement is in New York. She is Mme. Lucy Thoumaian, an Armenian, and the movement she heads is called "The International Movement of 'Every Woman' for Peace." The organization of which she is the president wants the neutral nations to get together to form a tribunal-parliament for peace, this tribunal to become permanent when the war difficulties have been settled with its aid. This tribunal is then to decree that war be recognized henceforth as a crime "and forbidden by law as is already any other murder between individuals." It is the belief of Mme. Thoumaian and her associates that as a logical consequence of this plan there will develop "United-World's - Peace - Protective - Forces," which will save the world from the possibility of war in the future. Mme. Thoumaian's husband is a member of the Turkish parliament though he is a Protestant Christian. He is one of the founders of the Christian college at Marsovan, where he has been a professor of theology and philosophy. Mme. Thoumaian is the daughter of M. Rossier de Visme, a Swiss pastor.

PREPAREDNESS THE MAIN TOPIC

Occupies Center of Stage in Congressional Committee Activities.

Warm Discussion in Senate Over Questions of the War.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The question of national preparedness again today occupied the center of the stage in congressional committee activity.

Hearings on the administration's national defense program were begun today before the house military affairs committee and the house naval affairs committee continued its hearings on the annual naval appropriation bill.

Bonds of restraint against public discussion of international relations of the United States incident to the European war were broken in the senate yesterday and for more than an hour the session was enlivened by debate over the government's neutrality policy, exports of war munitions and travel by American citizens on belligerent owned ships.

The discussion was precipitated when Senator Jones of Washington, Republican, read a newspaper editorial urging American citizens to keep off belligerent ships and advising the president to proceed slowly in the present crisis, holding the interest of $9,000,000 rather than that of "a thousand reckless, inconsiderate and unpatriotic citizens who insist on traveling on belligerent ships."

Nelson Arouses Gorman.

Senator Nelson of Minnesota, Republican, then aroused Senator O'Gorman of New York, Democrat, by asking whether Senator Jones regarded Consul McNeely unpatriotic because he sailed for his post on the Persia. The New York senator explained that McNeely had declined to heed Consul General Skinner's advice to sail on a Dutch ship and blazed the way to general debate on the position of the United States in the war.

There was no division of the debaters along party lines. Senator Works of California, Republican, asserted that the government of the United States was "hypocritically" claiming to be neutral when it was, in fact, participating in the war through the sale of munitions.

Senator Lodge, ranking Republican member of the foreign relations committee, declared that, to place an embargo on arms now, would be worth more to Germany than a million men, that it would be a "grossly unneutral act" and would, in fact, make the United States an ally of Germany. Senator O'Gorman and Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, both Democrats, urged the advisability of an embargo of munitions.

Asserting at the outset that the government shared responsibility for deaths of Americans on the Lusitania, Senator Works said:

Government Knew.

"The government knew that the Lusitania was loaded to the guards with ammunition and explosives. Passengers were permitted, in spite of this, to travel on the vessel. The government itself, in full knowledge that the ship carried munitions of war, is morally responsible for the deaths of our citizens."

When Senator Works declared the United States actually was participating in the war by the sale of munitions, Senator Reed, Democrat, interrupted to ask:

"Does the senator not know that the first loan placed in this country after the war began was a loan of $25,000,000 to Germany and that the loan was made without protest from him or any other citizen? Does the senator not know that Germany procured arms in this country as long as it was possible for her to get them?"

"That may all be true," Senator Works replied, "but that does not alter the situation."

Markets Open.

"If it be true," continued Senator Reed, "that the markets of this country are free and open to Germany as well as to all other countries, and that this government does not distinguish between any belligerent nations, then how can the senator say that this government has taken an unneutral position."

"It is impossible to get arms to Germany, and I say it is morally wrong for this government to permit shipment of arms to any of the belligerents," Senator Works insisted. He added that his principal objection was based on a conviction that the United States was aiding in prolonging the war and killing of men and that he would not only put an embargo on munitions, but also on shipment of food and clothing to the armies of Europe.

Senator Lodge in upholding the position of the United States as to the shipment of munitions, engaged in a lengthy colloquoy with Senators O'Gorman, Hitchcock and others.

Anyone Can Buy.

"Our markets are open to all the world to buy," said Senator Lodge. "We have taken no action to prevent any belligerent or anyone else from buying in our markets and we are at peace with the world. A condition has been created by this war, and by the war alone which prevents one or more belligerents from buying in this market. If we undertake to reverse a condition created by the war, we at once enter into the war, and endeavor to restore a condition existing before the war and that is an act of unneutrality."

"Evidently in time of war, such as is now disturbing the peace of the world," Senator O'Gorman rejoined, "almost any act of a neutral power would be regarded by some as an act of partiality, but in my judgment, this government, if it deemed it best for the American nation and for the best security of peace with all the nations, could place an embargo against the shipment of munitions to any belligerent without exposing itself to the imputation of an unneutral act."

Not Unneutral.

Senator Hitchcock asked Senator Lodge whether it was unneutral for Norway, Denmark, Sweden and Holland to place an embargo on munitions after the war began. Senator Lodge said he thought not, because that act did not change a condition.

"Placing an embargo by these nations," Senator Hitchcock replied, "deprived Germany of a safe method of procuring munitions and other contraband from those countries, and yet no one was heard to claim that those countries were guilty of unneutrality. Every one knows that Germany was deprived of an enormous advantage when Great Britain forced those neutral countries of Europe to put on that embargo, or lose the food which they needed, and which Great Britain could keep from them."

"Does the senator consider," asked Senator Works, "that the condition he thinks we ought not to change, was brought about by action of the government to which we are now supplying arms?"

Brought About By War.

"Of course it was not," replied Senator Lodge. "It was brought about by course of the war, in which one side got control of the sea. We should be doing just as unneutral a thing as if it were in our power to shut down the arms factories of Liege of which Germany got possession and which she is now running in her own interest."

"Suppose," Senator O'Gorman interjected, "the belligerent that is the chief beneficiary of our present policy with respect to exportation of munitions, were to disregard our rights as a neutral nation, does the senator think we would be justified in placing an embargo on munitions as a retaliatory measure?"

"We should have a right to impose a retaliatory embargo, but I think it would be an unneutral act," the Massachusetts senator replied.

At this point Senator Stone, chairman of the foreign relations committee, pointed out that the debate was out of order, and ended it by moving an executive session.

"I have not objected, up to this time," he explained, "I thought it was very well to let it run a little while by way of feeling out and getting an index to the senate."

RETURNS TO BURY HIS TWO CHILDREN

August Klar's Sad Mission; Wife in Fergus Falls Asylum.

August Klar arrived in Duluth today from Minneapolis to attend the funeral of his two children, August, 12, and Elizabeth, 4, both of whom have just died of diphtheria within a short time of each other. The daughter died at St. Luke's hospital Sunday night, and the boy, Tuesday evening at the isolated ward at the Children's home.

In the Klar family there were three children. The other child, Mildred, 8, is being kept by relatives in West Duluth. The family was split up some time ago. Shortly afterwards the mother lost her reason and was committed to Fergus Falls, and two of the children became charges of the Children's home.

The death at the Children's home makes three that have occurred in seven years among children outside of the infants' ward. The two children were isolated as soon as indications of their illness came to the attention of those in charge of the institution.

Mr. Klar was accompanied to the city by his sister, Mrs. Haas of Minneapolis. They will remain here for the funeral.

TAKE NO CHANCES WITH YOUR HEALTH

If you have a sore throat, call the doctor.

This is the advice given out today by Health Director Fahey, who urges everyone to be especially careful at this time of the year.

"Do not dally, but see a doctor at once," said the health commissioner this morning. "Sore throats are extremely dangerous if they are neglected the least bit."

TO PROVIDE TWO NEW DISTRICTS

Woodland and Kenwood Territory Will Be Effected.

Two new election districts, the Forty-fourth at Kenwood and the Forty-fifth at Woodland, are provided for in an ordinance that Mayor Prince will introduce at a special meeting of the city council tomorrow morning. The meeting has been called to pass the December payrolls.

Residents at Woodland and Kenwood Park petitioned the commissioners several months ago to change Districts No. 6 and 11, so that those sections of the city would have districts of their own. At present District No. 6 includes both Hunter's Park and Woodland, voters in the latter section being compelled to go from one to three miles to vote. This situation is also true in regard to the Kenwood district.

At the meeting tomorrow Commissioner Farrell will introduce an ordinance appropriating $5,000 for the construction of the concrete culvert over Miller's creek at Lincoln park and a resolution rejecting all bids on furnishing the city with a diaphragm pump.

DIES IN BORDER CITY.

International Falls, Minn., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Louis Tippel, aged 20, died here yesterday of pneumonia after a brief illness. The funeral will be held from the Methodist Episcopal church at 2:30 Sunday afternoon and the body will lie in state at the church until that time. Interment will be made at the city cemetery. Her maiden name was Gladys Payne and she became the bride of Mr. Tippel on Sept. 5, 1914.

STATE BEGINS IN PRICE TRIAL

Jury Secured and Assistant County Attorney Makes Opening Address.

Gives History of Case From Marriage of Price to Death of Wife.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The jury which will determine the innocence or guilt of Frederick T. Price, on trial, charged with the murder of his wife, was completed today. Immediately George W. Armstrong, assistant county attorney, made the opening address for the state.

After relating the early acquaintance of the defendant and Mary Fridley, their subsequent marriage, the assistant county attorney's remarks led up to the day of the tragedy. "The day before, Nov. 27, we will show," said Mr. Armstrong, "David Fridley, father of Mrs. Price, after much persuasion by Price, gave his daughter $10,000 worth of bonds. Price had grown tired of his wife, he had become enamored with a stenographer in the office of his wife's brother-in-law, William Dye. The stenographer pleased him and he took her, but he didn't leave the wife he no longer cared for, neither did he divorce her. A husband is entitled to no alimony in Minnesota, and Price wanted money, he wanted it badly, his extravagant manner of living demanded it. He didn't want Mary Fridley but he wanted Mary Fridley's money. If she died the law would give it to him.

Etchison Almost a Servant.

"At this time Charles D. Etchison was in Price's employ and was under such obligation to him that he occupied almost the relation of Price's servant. We will show by the evidence that Price suggested to Etchison that he aid him in making away with his wife and that Etchison tried to dissuade him. That on Nov. 28, 1914, Etchison at Price's suggestion bought tickets for Price and his wife at a theater. That after the show, Price and Etchison at the defendant's suggestion drove to the home of Mrs. Price and the defendant suggested to his wife that they take an automobile ride. She consented and they arrived at the spot where the murder was committed."

TO ADVANCE WAGES OF OTHER EMPLOYES

United States Steel Corporation to Extend Increase to Departments.

New York, Jan. 6.—In a statement issued today by the United States Steel corporation it was announced that the wages of unskilled workmen in its employ would be advanced largely on account of present prosperous conditions. It added that in addition to the new wages for common laborers, employes in practically all departments of the corporation will receive proportionate increases. Adjustments in the wage rates of the various mining companies controlled by the corporation are also under consideration.

Early in 1915 the employes of the United States Steel corporation numbered about 200,000 with total annual salaries and wages of approximately $170,000,000.

The average daily salary or wage per employe at that time was $2.88, the selling and administrative forces averaging $2.97. Later in the year the number of employes of all classes and particularly those in the so-called unskilled labor division was greatly augmented to meet the improved trade conditions.

Steel common was at the low price 86¼ when announcement was made of the proposed wage increase. It soon recovered a small fraction but sold off again in common with the balance of the active list.

FIGHT VILLAGE INCORPORATION

Township of Stuntz Will Lose If Mahoning Forms Municipality.

Incorporation of the village of Mahoning will meet with strenuous opposition from the officials of Stuntz township, of which the territory proposed to be incorporated is now a part.

The county board Tuesday granted a petition calling for a special election on the question of incorporation. This will be held on Jan. 29.

Victor L. Power, mayor of Hibbing, and Victor Benoe, town clerk of Stuntz, were in Duluth today in connection with the matter.

MARVELS OF A WATCH.

Power of Pocket Timepiece Is Equal to That of Four Fleas, Says Expert.

Seattle Post-Intelligencer: R. H. Greenfield, the jeweler, is an enthusiast about watches. Not only because watches are his business, but because of the fascinating scientific speculations in the taking of time. Mr. Greenfield has read and thought a greaat deal about time-recording machinery.

Recently Mr. Greenfield tried to impress a customer with some of the marvels of the watch.

"There isn't a piece of machinery like it," he declared earnestly. "A watch runs day and night for years and years, yet when it stops the owner feels aggrieved. What other piece of machinery is there that can run twenty-four hours a day for years at a time?

"Any man who owns machinery will tell you that it must have a rest every day to do its best work, but the watch seldom gets a rest. A good watch will last at least 100 years with a little care.

Miles of Mainsprings.

"And look at the marvelous things that go into a watch. Look at the springs, for instance. One of our big American factories uses five miles of mainspring wire a day, while two and a half miles of this steel wire is made into hairsprings every day.

"And have you any idea how much a mile of hairspring wire weighs? It weighs just one-half a pound."

"What is it worth a ton?" asked the customer, with the careless ease of a man who might buy a ton for amusement.

"A ton of hairspring wire," said the jeweler, after some figuring, "is worth $8,000,000. Taking the cost of things, one pound of the tiny screws that go into a watch is worth $3,000.

Why It Gets Tired.

"Do you know that the balance wheel of a watch vibrates five times a second? That means 300 vibrations a minute, or 18,000 vibrations an hour, or 432,000 vibrations a day, or more than 157,500,000 vibrations a year. Then you wonder why your watch sometimes gets tired."

"A watch must have a lot of horsepower to do all that work," said the customer thoughtfully.

"Horsepower! Well, I should say. Scientists have calculated that the power of a watch is equal to that of four fleas. Or, in other words, 1-horse power would run 270,000,000 watches.

"Now, a horsepower is a measure gauged upon a minute. If you want to find out how much horsepower your watch uses in a day the calculation would be very simple.

"Since a horsepower would run 270,000,000 watches one minute, and four-flea power would run one watch one minute, and 270 millionth of a horsepower would equal the power of four fleas, wouldn't it?

Flea Power of a Horse.

"Well, then, to get the horsepower of one flea just multiply your horses by four fleas. No, hold on. Never mind the fleas.

"I mean to say, to get the flea power one hour divide by the horses and multiply by sixty. No, hold on again; that isn't it. Wait, now I've got it. To get the flea power of one horse divide by the watch and multiply by 270,000,000."

"Good night!" shouted the customer. "Here comes my car."

He bolted for the door and left the jeweler immersed in his calculations about fleas and horsepowers and hairsprings.

HE COULDN'T LAUGH.

Chicago News: "Oh, my! I'm awfully disappointed!" wailed Anna, coming in from school. "The teacher picked out the girls to sing in the Thanksgiving concert today, and the girl in front of me was chosen and she can't sing at all. I just know it was me the teacher heard and thought it was the girl in front of me."

"That was always my luck, too," consoled Uncle Dick. "Some one else was always given credit for my good singing. I remember very well hearing my teacher say: 'There is one boy who is doing remarkably good singing, and I'm sure he will be selected for the star part in the concert.' At that I'd feel sort of modest and sorry for the other fellows. But when the star was announced, who do you suppose it was? Bill McCombs, who couldn't sing a little bit. The teacher evidently thought all my good singing was coming from Bill McCombs, across the aisle.

"I used to turn sideways and put my hands around my mouth like a megaphone and sing the hair right straight up on Bill's head and make his ears flop. I wouldn't be surprised if there were four or five fellows in my neighborhood who got in on the concert on account of my singing. But whenever I laughed every one knew it was me right away. Other people got credit for my music, while I alone had to stand the consequences of my laugh. It was most annoying.

"It seems that I had a very peculiar laugh. The teacher couldn't stand it. Laughter has long been considered the most innocent thing a schoolboy can be guilty of, but mine wasn't. All the other kids could laugh and the teacher would let it pass."

"Why, he was awful mean!" exclaimed Anna. "How could he punish you for just laughing?"

"Oh, he thought it was a sardonic laugh, a derisive, cynical burlesque. I wasn't even allowed to laugh at his jokes. Other kids were allowed to roar at his jokes as long as they liked, often enough to cut out quite a bit of the arithmetic lesson.

"But just as soon as I opened up his expression of quizzical wit, irony and satire would immediately change to one of modesty and shame.

"It required my laugh to work the teacher up into the right frenzy. The day he fell on the ice he looked around for me, to lick me for laughing. But I wasn't there that day and consequently I couldn't serve. That was about the only time I ever failed him, but he never forgave me.

"If I could have made my laugh anonymous and received full credit for my full throated melody my school career would have been one grand, sweet song!"

DISTANCE GAUGE FOR PHOTOGRAPHERS.

To assist amateur photographers in readily estimating focusing distances, a simple instrument has lately been produced, says the Popular Mechanics magazine in an illustrated article. A handle is provided by which the user holds the instrument out at a convenient distance, keeping a small indicator on the contrivance in line with his eye and the base of the object which he intends to photograph. On a scale opposite the pointer the desired distance is at once indicated. For accurate work the ground between the observer and the object should be level, and the scale on the device properly suited to the user's height. For this purpose a number of scales are provided with the instrument.

HUNT VACANT ROOM SIGNS IN COLD WEATHER?

NEVER!

Busy, Sensible people, seek different quarters in a sensible and comfortable way.

You can't imagine a regularly employed person tramping up one wet street and down another in a search for signs in the windows revealing the fact that there are rooms for rent inside.

Nevertheless, there are scores of people in Duluth right now who are earnestly considering a change of lodgings. Perhaps they want to be nearer to work or friends, or want more heat, or more room, or better board.

But whatever the cause, they will seek new quarters in the sensible, comfortable way—through the proper classifications in The Herald want ad columns.

Herald want ads are read by the thrifty, earning, prompt-paying kind of people you want to deal with. They more than repay their cost by the promptness with which they put your vacant room on a dividend-paying basis. Now is a good time to use them in featuring the warmth, cheerfulness and convenience of the room you have to offer. To act, either call at the office of this paper or telephone an ad to Melrose or Grand 324.

LEFT FAMILY HUNGRY.

Money Earned By Trapping Expedition Went for Liquor.

Thomas Olson living on the Oneota cemetery road, came home drunk last night after having spent money needed by the family for purchasing food and aroused the ire of his wife. She immediately sought the aid of the police and had him arrested. In police court this morning Judge H. W. Lanners sentenced Olson to sixty days at the work farm.

Mrs. Olson told the police that her husband had been in the woods for a few days and while there had been successful in killing some fur bearing animal. She said he had gone uptown yesterday morning and disposed of the skin for a fair price and had used the money for liquor.

"There is not a morsel of food in the house," she told the officer in charge of the West Duluth station. "My husband has not been working for quite a while and when he does get money he spends most of it for liquor."

There are three boys, ages 18, 16 and 12, the oldest of whom is on a farm, and one daughter, aged 11 years.

THREE PAY FINES.

Disturbance in Gary Saloon Nets City $60 in Penalties.

A disturbance in a saloon at Gary last night resulted in Joe Huber receiving a bad gash over the head with a knife and Antonio Vecckl being arrested as the wielder of the knife. Patrolman McKenna arrived on the scene just after the row started and arrested the participants, but was unable to find the knife which it was alleged Vecckl had used.

In police court pleas of guilty to disorderly conduct were entered. Vecckl paid a fine of $20 and costs, Huber $10 and costs, and a third man who was mixed up in the fracas, paid $20.

"KID" CURLERS SCORE VICTORY OVER "DADS"

The Wade "kid" rink turned the trick on their elders at the Western Curling rink last night by defeating F. H. Wade's rink. Cold weather prevented the players from participating in more than six heads but at the end of that number of ends the "kids" lead by a score of 5 to 3.

This evening sixteen players will journey to Superior to participate in the first of the series of games for the Manley-McLennan trophy. The rinks will be skipped by Frank H. Wade, Richard F. Wade, Emil J. Zauft and Alex Donald. It is expected that several members of the Western Curling club will attend.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

AGREE ON BILL FOR WAREHOUSING

Permits Establishment of Bonded Warehouses for Storage of Grain.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, Jan. 6.—The house committee on agriculture has agreed upon a bill for the warehousing of non-perishable agricultural products, including grain, cotton and other commodities to be designated by the secretary of agriculture.

The bill is not compulsory in requiring the establishment of warehouses for grain or other products, but permits any person who desires to establish a bonded warehouse for the storage of grain. The owner of the warehouse must give bond to the United States for its proper conduct and it will be subjected to inspection at all times. There will be no interference with the Minnesota grain inspection system if the bill becomes a law, as it provides that in states where there is a grading system, that shall be accepted in storing the grain.

It will be possible, however, for the government to grade the grain in states like North Dakota, where there is no grading law. The bill permits the storage of grain of the same grade from different consignees to be stored in one bin, but it prohibits mixing of different grades in the warehouse.

The house committee on agriculture will consider the bill for Federal grain inspection backed by the North Dakota senators and members, and Representative Helgeson said today that he would try to have the warehouse and grading bill combined.

BOTTINEAU COUNTY WILL ISSUE BOOKLET

Bottineau, N. D., Jan. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Immigration work of a character and magnitude never before attempted officially by a board of county commissioners was launched here yesterday, when the county board of Bottineau county let the contract for printing 50,000 booklets descriptive of Bottineau county and resources.

The booklets will be profusely illustrated with half tone views of farm scenes from all parts of the county, as well as photographs depicting the scenic grandeur of the Turtle mountains and their numerous beautiful fishing lakes.

Besides the illustrations, the booklet will contain a great deal of descriptive and statistical information, all of which is vouched for over the signatures of the several members of the county board.

An issue of 25,000 copies of a similar booklet was printed and circulated in the Eastern states last year. The result of this method of advertising have been so satisfactory to the board that it was decided to get out a larger and more comprehensive edition this year.

PUPILS SAVED THEIR MONEY

Savings at School Banks Hold Up During Holidays.

Only Few Students Draw Out Funds—Deposits Gain for Year.

School savings bank accounts didn't suffer much during the 1915 holiday season, for the monthly report on savings accounts of school children shows that deposits reached a total of $1,783.37, which is a gain of $340 over the record made in December, 1914.

Officials at the First National bank today made public the December report, showing how children at thirty-four schools had saved their nickels and pennies during the month. The list includes all of the public schools, as well as four parochial schools.

Just before Christmas many of the boys and girls drew out some of their money, so that they would be able to buy some presents for the other members of the family, but in spite of this the total was a high one.

The Irving school in West Duluth leads the list, with $238.67 to its credit, and 462 individual deposits. The Monroe is next with $155.05 to its credit and the Jackson is a close third, with $145.08 on deposit. Excellent records have been made at the Morgan Park school at the steel plant, and the new Harriett Beecher Stowe school in New Duluth. At the last named buildings the saving plan was started on Nov. 24, so children have had less time in which to make a record.

"KING" COLE DIES AT HIS OLD HOME

Former Pitcher of Cubs and Yankees Succumbs to Sickness.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 6.—Leonard J. Cole, pitcher on the New York American league baseball team and formerly with the Chicago National league club, died at his home here today. He had been ill for several weeks.

COAL FOR DULUTH CONTRACTED FOR Three-Year Arrangement Is Made for Next Navigation Season.

A contract for 1,000,000 tons of Lake Superior coal a year that expired this year has been renewed for three years at whatever rate prevails each season, according to word from Cleveland. When made three years ago the contract rate was 30 cents a ton.

Both the shipper and the vessel owner who made the contract have headquarters in Pittsburgh. The coal all comes to this point, and is considered good cargo by vessel owners. The fact that the season contract rate shall prevail would indicate that the vessel owner is inclined to believe the coal rate will not always be 30 cents a ton and will not go below 30 cents.

Efforts to obtain boats through the entire 1916 season for grain has resulted in tonnage being offered at 4 cents, and it is thought 3½ cents could be obtained for the opening trip.

There is no big tonnage on the market for more than a single trip, as the ore shippers have covered practically all of the large boats or have bought them.

Almost all of the ships that have been sold are vessels that have been largely dependent upon grain to keep busy part of the time. In the dull years the boats sold have been the ones that were in ordinary.

Under the new arrangements these ships will carry ore when there is any ore to be carried and will be available for grain only when the ore shippers cannot get enough ore for them. The shippers, however, will be in position to use the ships, as they formerly gave ore to outside boats in all but the leanest years.

With the centralization of boats by ore shipping interests, the control of grain rates by vessel owners probably will automatically occur. Ore interests will be in position to look more closely to the grain business and will not be so hard pressed for cargoes as the independents were under the passing system.

Another marked tendency in the handling of vessels carrying grain is insistence upon dispatch. This always happens in brisk seasons, but with larger fleets in fewer hands the boat owner will be in position to demand dispatch commensurate with the expense and investment involved. Grain has been a loosely handled business in many ways, but it is likely that some of the slack will be taken up without the necessity of boat owners going to the formality of taking combined action.

ALPHA COUNCIL, SAMARITANS, HOLDS INSTALLATION

The officers for the year of Alpha council, No. 1, Modern Samaritans, were installed last night by Imperial Good Samaritan C. E. Lovett, assisted by the imperial council. Honorable H. J. Achenbach and Lady Goward acted as imperial messengers.

The honor guest of the evening was Mayor W. I. Prince, who after the ceremony addressed the council on "Unity, Brotherly Kindness and Charity." This was followed by talks by General Counsel A. E. McManus, who spoke on the early history of the order, the policies issued by it and of the financial condition of the Modern Samaritans, and emphasized the fact that the Modern Samaritans have in their reserve fund $104 for every $100 of liability of the society, and of the excellent personnel of its membership. Innkeeper W. A. Hicken extended a general invitation to non-members present to join the order. Imperial Scribe H. J. Achenbach spoke on the social features of the order. W. B. Henderson spoke on the promptness of the payment of death claims. L. A. Barnes, imperial vice good samaritan, spoke of the ritualistic work of the Modern Samaritans.

The music was furnished by Blewett's orchestra.

The following officers were installed: Samaritan degree—Good samaritan, William B. Henderson; vice good samaritan, H. P. Lawson; past good samaritan, Arthur A. Fider; scribe, John F. Davis; financial scribe, Frank N. Noble; treasurer, Wallace P. Welbanks; high priest, Arthur O. Norberg; levite, George Maxwell; chief messenger, Arthur A. Fider; junior messenger, George F. Todd; innkeeper, William A. Hicken; organist, Myrtle M. Noble; centurion, C. O. Kristenson; watchman, Robert Stewart; trustees, Thomas J. McKeon, Thomas A. Call, D. A. Butchart.

Beneficient degree—Lady good samaritan, Minnie O. Lawson; lady vice good samaritan, Gertrude Dickey; lady treasurer, Libbie Gullingsrud; lady high priest, Mabel H. Owens; lady levite, Lottie Hatley; lady chief messenger, Tessie Davis; lady junior messenger, Victoria Mealey; lady centurion, Ida M. Reilly, and lady organist, Myrtle M. Noble.

State Paid Interest.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 6.—Interest on state bonds of Massachusetts and Virginia, owned by Minnesota, totaling $71,250 for the last six months of 1915, was paid Tuesday to Walter J. Smith, state treasurer. Minnesota owns $3,025,000 worth of Massachusetts bonds and $2,145,000 worth of Virginia bonds. The interest on the Virginia bonds was $31,725 and on the Massachusetts securities $39,525.

Was Diseased, Not Starved.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6.—An autopsy on the body of W. R. Gregory, aged 60, of Stone Lake, Wis., who died Monday night at the City hospital, showed that a kidney disorder caused death. According to the proprietor of the hotel, where the man had roomed, he had been ill and had refused food for five days. When taken to the hospital shortly before he died Gregory was thought to be starving himself.

BATH FOR EVERY FARM BOY, HER MOTTO

Teacher in Colvin Township Instilling Principles of Industry, Cleanliness and Home Helpfulness By System of "Credits."

Lazy farmer boys with snarly hair, dirty faces and dark complected hands, who are wont to come to school in clothes which are saturated with a fragrance, not of a green house, will find no "welcome" mat on Miss Mary Thayer's doorstep.

Miss Thayer, by the way, is engaged in the occupation of instilling education into the younger generation of school district No. 56, Colvin township, St. Louis county. She is the teacher at the Lincoln school in that district.

Miss Thayer hates to see youngsters come to school with dirty hands and faces. That explains why she has put a premium on cleanliness and spotlessness in her sanctum-sanctorum. Children are encouraged to clean up and keep clean. Then they are also taught to be thrifty and useful around the house.

Her modus operandi is simple. She has worked out a novel plan of giving the children home credits at school. Each boy and girl hands her a statement each week of the work he or she is entitled to receive credit for and the scores are posted in the schoolroom.

Credits for Arthur.

For instance, if Arthur were to fetch a pail of water for mother on Monday and bring in an armful of wood for the box in the kitchen on Tuesday he could truthfully report that he had earned four credits. If he took a hand at hoeing his father—and they all do—he would receive ten credits for each of the following chores: Milking cow, cleaning barn, getting the cows, sawing wood, picking potatoes, separating cream or tending the baby.

Biggest Premium for Bath.

But the biggest premium offered is bestowed upon the farmer boy who is willing to make an affidavit that he has taken a bath. For this alone he will receive thirty credits. Were he indisposed to venture immersing himself completely, he may earn fifteen marks by simply washing his head. City folks don't appreciate what it means to take a bath in a log cabin with the mercury below zero.

Girls, of course, are made of "sugar and spice and everything nice," but Miss Thayer in her school work believes in teaching them to be thrifty housewives. And when they report that they had assisted their mother, they are given credits in proportion to the amount done. The schedule of credits is given as follows:

Tending the baby	10
Sweeping—each floor	5
Ironing	10
Scrubbing	10
Preparing meal	10
Washing dishes	10
Wiping dishes	15
Making bread	15
Making cake	10
Making pie	10
Washing clothes	20
Making bed	5
Dusting rugs	5
Putting up lunch	5

THIS MAN WILL TELL DULUTH CITIZENS

IN SIMPLE LANGUAGE

JUST HOW THE FURNACE SHOULD BE RUN

The next time father goes down cellar to "shake the furnace for the drinks" and talk to himself through a cloud of ashes he can do it scientifically.

Just as a leaky broncho can be mastered and made as gentle as the dove of peace, so can an incorrigible furnace be made to lie down and roll over and perform tricks, according to Joseph W. Hays of Chicago, who will lecture here at the Commercial club tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Building Owners and Managers. This expert will tell "How to Get Efficiency Out of a Furnace."

Those who have been working with coal-begrimed hands, wrestling with furnace problems during this sub-zero weather and getting everything out of the furnace except efficiency, will find comfort in listening to this apostle of household joy, and the household gods in Duluth will probably be thoroughly warmed for the first time this winter in some Duluth homes—following this address.

Mr. Hays will tell how to coal a furnace, to feed it properly and to regulate it, so that heat can be obtained and still keep the coal bill down. He will talk in words of one syllable, and, after hearing him, father can go home and tell mother just how to run the furnace.

Engineers, firemen and all others interested in this timely topic are invited to hear this lecture, which will begin at 8 o'clock. It is free and open to the public. The Building Owners and Managers have undertaken it as part of a crusade against profanity.

HAS FAITH IN SCIENCE

Helps in Every Walk of Life. Declares Theosophist.

Lecturer Says Theosophy Does Not Interfere With Religion.

Irving Cooper of San Francisco, who is delivering a series of lectures at the Little theater here, declares that modern day scientists have taken a more practical view of their work and have arrived at the belief that science, when properly taught and applied, is helpful in every walk of life and to every profession.

"Theosophy," said Mr. Cooper, "is greatly misunderstood. It is not a religion, but rather a science. We never take anyone away from his or her church. On the other hand, we have many church members among us. We also have philosophers and moralists who are greatly interested in theosophy, because in reality theosophy embraces many of the qualities of both philosophy and other sciences.

"In this country the average man of science has begun to take the viewpoint that science should be utilized along practical lines, and should be used to achieve practical results. We are taking this viewpoint in a greater degree than the scientific men of Europe. We believe a knowledge of science will assist any thinking man and a man in any profession. With this end in view, science is becoming more popular and is yearly gaining more attention from earnest and intelligent men and women."

On Verge of Discovery.

"The world of science is on the verge of a marvelous discovery, and that is that the universe, instead of being a mere machine, is in reality a living universe," he said last night during his lecture on "The Living Universe."

This was the second of the series of lectures.

"The material universe is a living, intelligent body, animated by Divinity. We have long been victimized by the old mechanical idea of things, but we are learning that matter is neither dead nor inert, but, on the contrary, is remarkably sensitive. Some scientists say that a bar of steel, for example, is far more sensitive than nerve tissue. No doubt in time we shall know more of God by a study of the laws of nature.

"Religion tells us of God; science studies the plan and place of His manifestation and our growth; philosophy makes our relations with the Divine intelligible; art reveals His beauty, and mysticism points out the way to realization. One moment of realization is worth a whole century of speculation."

"The Garment of God" is the title of a stereopticon lecture to be delivered tonight by Mr. Cooper in the Little theater. It will be illustrated by colored slides of exquisite scenes in nature. The lecture is free to the public.

To Have Curly, Wavy Hair Like "Nature's Own"

Women who have trouble keeping their hair in curl, or of securing the desired wavy effect—and especially those who realize the harm that the hot iron does to the hair—will do well to try plain liquid silmerine. In no other way can they acquire such pretty waves and curls, having all the appearance of "Nature's own." And the hair, instead of being singed, ragged or dead looking, has such a lively luster and wholesome beauty.

If one will get a bottle of liquid silmerine at any drug store and follow the accompanying directions, she will be simply delighted with the result. This product is of course perfectly harmless and there is nothing sticky, greasy or unpleasant about it. The hair will be quite manageable, no matter in what fashion it is done up.

PLANS FOR BURNS' ANNIVERSARY

Clan Stewart Appoints Committee to Complete Arrangements.

A committee of thirty was appointed last night at the regular meeting of Clan Stewart, No. 50, O. S. C., to complete arrangements for the Burns' anniversary banquet to be given by the clan at the Spalding hotel on Jan. 25. Preliminary arrangements have already been made, the speaker of the evening, John Z. White of Chicago, a noted orator and student of Burns, having been engaged, and the musical and other numbers have, for the most part, been arranged for. The committee named last night will stand as the amusement committee of the clan for the ensuing year and will have charge of all entertainments given by the clan besides that at the Burns banquet.

The latter, however, is the chief social event of the year among Scots, for Scotland is inordinately proud of her bard of the people, who was born Jan. 25, 1759, and died in 1796. In all parts of the world, where even only two or three Scots are gathered together, the birth anniversary of Burns is duly celebrated, and the enthusiasm over his poems and his humble life seemingly never wanes. Instead of dwindling, the observance of his birthday has become an institution, and in it Duluth Scots are ranked among the foremost in this country.

The new officers of the lodge were installed last night and other committees appointed for the year consist of the following: Finance, P. T. McDonald, J. G. Ross and A. G. Macaulay; auditing, A. W. Torrance, Alex Macrae and James T. McMullen; sickness, D. A. Cameron, P. T. McDonald, J. G. Ross, Samuel Gillespie and A. G. McKnight.

The officers installed are: Chief, D. A. Cameron; tanist, P. T. McDonald; chaplain, John G. Ross; secretary, John Gow; financial secretary, John Burnett; treasurer, R. P. Christie; physician, Dr. C. J. Wallace; senior henchman, A. H. Brown; junior henchman, John Fergusson; seneschal, W. W. Stevens; warder, Samuel Gillespie; sentinel, John Williamson; standard bearer, James McCroy; piper, Robert Mowbray, and trustee for three years, Malcolm A. Thomson.

NEW STATE CALLED SUPERIOR DISCUSSED

Proposition to Carve It Out of Upper Michigan Considered.

Calumet, Mich., Jan. 6.—Plans for a campaign to carve the forty-ninth state of the Union out of the upper peninsula of Michigan under the name of Superior were discussed here last night by Roger M. Andrews, proprietor of the Menominee Herald-Leader. Mr. Andrews spoke at the annual banquet of the Calumet Business Men's association and backed up his argument by statistics comparing the size and resources of the Upper Peninsula with those of communities already admitted to the Union. He asserted that the assessed valuation of the district exceeds that of one of seventeen states, which he named, and laid particular stress upon the fact that it is isolated geographically from the rest of the state.

The wheat market showed marked strength throughout today's session. An advance of 1¾c was recorded during the first few minutes' trading, with a flood of buying around the opening on a realization that the reports regarding the German emperor's death were false. That had been used as a club to bear the market on at yesterday's close.

The market thereafter turned dull, with bearish reports regarding the Argentine and Australian crops a factor. It was intimated that the British government will release some ships to move the crops from those countries, and it was officially announced that all ships trading to Argentina have been ordered to load 75 per cent wheat cargoes. Against that, it was said that concession is being made by two of the railroads in their embargoes against shipments of grain to the seaboard. That is taken to foreshadow a betterment in shipping conditions as likely to come about in the near future.

Good demand was advised by Eastern grain experters, and the cash market was strong in all quarters. A feature commented upon is that No. 1 northern wheat was offered ex-Fort William elevators today on a basis of 5¾c under the Duluth market. A maintenance of that condition over any period must inevitably lead to shipments of Canadian wheat to this market, it was conceded.

Receipts of grain at the Northwestern markets showed a further falling off today, and that exercised a strengthening influence.

May wheat opened ⅛@¼c up at $1.24½, and gained ⅞c more up to the noon hour. There was fair trading in durum, but its market was easier. May durum opened unchanged at $1.23½, advanced ⅝c and then eased off to $1.22.

Flaxseed Easy.

Flaxseed showed an easier tendency as a result of some realizing on the part of holders and disinclination on the part of crushers to follow up the advance. Operators in the flax market were not a little less bullish in their views, the general expression of opinion being that the advance will be resumed as a result of the statistical conditions governing supply and demand.

May flax opened unchanged at $2.28½ and closed 2c off at $2.26½.

At Winnipeg, May flax closed ½c off at $2.07⅝ asked.

At London, flax closed 1¾c up at 42 7-8s.

MARKET GOSSIP.

Cash wheat was stronger on the Duluth market today, and the price was advanced ½c relatively. Cash No. 1 northern sold at 1c under May, and cash No. 1 durum at 1c under May.

* * *

C. E. Lewis & Co. wired from Minneapolis: "Some of the recent bulls on wheat have sold out again and rumor has it that the Armour house has given out the tip to sell wheat. Cash prices are 1c higher this morning in Minneapolis, and export inquiry continues, but they won't guarantee shipment owing to the embargo on many roads."

* * *

E. W. Snow says: "The special government report on the relative maturity of 1915 corn crop furnishes data from which may be worked out approximately the feeding value of the crop. This year fully matured equals 2,637,491,000 bu, against 2,620,864,000 in 1914. It is only 17,000,000 bu greater this year than in 1914."

* * *

Broomhall's linseed cable said: "Argentine weather is clear and hot. Argentine freights are strong and the shortage of tonnage is becoming acute. "Buenos Aires closed strong, due to the foreign advance and some buying for export. London opened strong with oil steadily advancing."

* * *

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat was quiet and inclined lower with larger Argentine and Australian offers. Spot was unchanged and cargoes easier. Australians were freely offered at 3d to 6d decline, with Plates unchanged to 3d lower. Manitobas and winters 3 to 4½d lower. English country offers were larger and millers' demand quiet. The advance has been too rapid. Argentine advices regarding weather and crop prospects are exerting an influence. Corn was strong, spot 1½d higher. Parcel market was strong at 9 pence higher, with indications of lighter Plates shipments."

* * *

All British ship owners plying with Argentina have been requested to load 75 per cent wheat after Feb. 1. It is hoped that this will relieve the situation materially, and it is rumored that additional tonnage will shortly be added.

* * *

Russell's News, New York, said: "A prominent exporter expressed the opinion that the extent of the export business during the next several days will be closely followed as indicating the significance that should be attached to this morning's advices telling of prospective larger wheat shipments from Argentina and Australia."

* * *

At Minneapolis the cash market was about ½c higher on the top grades. This is a full cent higher since the first of the week. No. 1 northern blue stem sold at May price to 2c over May, and velvet chaff at May price to ½c under.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Develops Fresh Strength on Various Reports.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Wheat developed fresh strength today, influenced by the fact that rumors of the kaiser's death had failed to be confirmed. The presence of a cold wave in the absence of snow protection over the winter crop belt tended also to lift prices. Advances in ocean freight rates, however, and lower quotations from Liverpool acted as a handicap on the bulls. The opening, which ranged from ⅜c to ⅝c higher, with May at $1.27½ to $1.27⅝ and July at $1.19⅝ to $1.19¾, was followed by decided further gains, but then a sharp reaction.

The market later rallied on account of smallness of receipts northwest and owing to assertions that imports from Canada were next to impossible because of the difficulty of getting cars. Upturns though, were more than offset by advices telling of prospective larger shipments from Argentina and Australia in consequence of new cargo regulations by the British government. The close was steady, ⅛@¾c to ¼c net lower, with May at $1.26⅞@1.27 and July $1.18⅞@1.19.

Waves of buying holsted corn. The government crop report continued to be the incentive. After opening ⅜@½c to 1@1⅛c higher, the market scored further gains before undergoing a moderate setback.

Car scarcity and smallness of country offerings helped to cause renewed strength. Besides Liverpool prices were the highest ever known. The close was steady at ⅝@¾c to ¾c net advance.

Oats hardened with other grain. Bulls pointed out that oats were 8c lower than a year ago, whereas corn was 1c higher.

Higher prices on hogs gave a lift to provisions. Gains though, were not fully maintained.

STOCK MARKET IS FEVERISH

Irregular Opening Followed By Increase in Leading Issues.

Heavy Closing Sees Lowest Prices of the Session.

New York, Jan. 6.—Initial prices in the stock market today pointed to further speculative uncertainty. A new factor of interest was injected by the statement of the head of the United States Steel corporation, which counselled caution. United States Steel opened at 87⅛, a small fraction over yesterday's heavy close, but soon declined to 86⅞ on large sales. Other leading shares were disposed to sag after their irregular opening, but declines were comparatively nominal except in certain high-priced specialties. General Motors losing 15 at 470. Rails were slightly lower, with heaviness in Erie.

Copper and specialties, particularly oils and some of the better known war descriptions, made substantial recoveries in the first hour and steel rose to 87⅛ before another selling movement of larger and wider proportions was encountered. On this decline steel fell to 86⅛ with offerings ranging from 1,000 to over 4,000 shares. Other leaders, including standard railways, went lower and some of the high-priced specialties followed the lead of General Motors, International Agricultural Chemical preferred falling 8 to 64. Further heaviness was manifested with the approach of the noon hour on a combination of short selling and fresh liquidation. Bonds were irregular.

Trading quieted in the early afternoon with a further decline in General Motors to 445 and some strength in specialties. Later, however, prices shaded again, Steel showing renewed heaviness.

Today's feverish market was governed almost entirely by the cautionary statement issued over night by Chairman Gary of the United States Steel corporation.

Most of the standard stocks and many specialties made their lowest prices in the final hour. The closing was heavy.

NEW AGENT TAKES HOLD

H. W. Cross Becomes General Agent of Independent Package Freight Line.

Port Huron & Duluth Steamship Co. Extends Route and Increases Fleet.

H. W. Cross of Houghton, Mich., has arrived in Duluth to become general agent of the Port Huron & Duluth Steamship company at this point and took up his duties today.

In a circular just issued by W. S. Jenks, general manager of the company, the announcement of the resignation of J. W. McLean, Western agent with headquarters in Duluth, is announced. The circular also announces that the position of Western agent is abolished; and notified the public of the apointment of Mr. Cross as general agent.

Mr. Cross has been agent for the steamship company at Houghton for the past year, but for the two years prior to that was assistant to Mr. McLean in the Duluth office. He is well known here. He is a son of Rev. W. Reid Cross of Houghton.

Mr. McLean, who has been Western agent for a number of years, and has become generally known throughout the Northwest in connection with the building up of the business of the Port Huron & Duluth Steamship company's business, this being the only independent package freight line on the Great Lakes, will take a vacation for some time, and will then return to Duluth to enter other business. He is not yet ready to definitely announce his future plans.

Longer Route; More Boats.

The Port Huron & Duluth line will extend its scope during the navigation season of 1916. Heretofore its run has been between this point and Port Huron, the Lake Erie route not being touched. During the coming season, it is announced, the company's steamers will run to Cleveland. This will enable it to carry business to and from the Central Freight association territory, and the rest of the Eastern territory will be tapped through Port Huron, as formerly.

That the company will also add to its fleet, is another anouncement. Just how many ships will be added to the present number is not known, chiefly because it is not known how many can be obtained. However it is believed that there should be little difficulty about that owing to the fact that the lake-and-rail lines have been divorced by order of the interstate commerce commission and the lake fleets of these lines are now on their hands for disposal of some kind. Whether they would sell them to an independent, an old rival, is, of course, a question; and it is also rumored that there is a plan on foot to combine the boats of all of the dissolved lines into one fleet under an independent company, and operate to Lake Superior and Lake Michigan ports.

The proposed increase of service, both as to territory and fleet, promised by the Port Huron & Duluth company gives shippers from this point and those in the Northwest who are accustomed to receiving goods from the East via the lake, assurances of service, which, the lake-and-rail line officials declared the lakes would not have if the divorcement was enforced.

DECEMBER LAKE LEVELS.

Lower Stages of Water Reported By United States Lake Survey.

The United States lake survey reports the stages of the Great Lakes for the month of December, 1915, as follows:

Lakes—	Feet above mean sea level.
Superior	602.72
Michigan-Huron	579.51
Erie	571.37

Lake Superior is .17 foot lower than last month, .63 feet higher than a year ago, .17 foot above the average stage of December of the last ten years, .41 foot below the high stage of December, 1900, and 1.52 feet above the low stage of December, 1870. During the last ten years the December level has averaged .2 foot lower than the November level and .3 foot higher than the January level.

Lakes Michigan-Huron are .01 foot lower than last month, .03 foot lower than a year ago, .63 foot below the average stage of December of the last ten years, 3.01 feet below the high stage of December, 1883, and .51 foot above the low stage of December, 1895. During the last ten years the December level has averaged .2 foot lower than the November level and .2 foot higher than the January level.

Lake Erie is .09 foot lower than last month, .04 foot lower than a year ago, .36 foot below the average stage of December of the last ten years, 2.16 feet below the high stage of December, 1885. During the last ten years the December level has averaged .1 foot lower than the November level and about the same as the January level.

Lake Ontario is .16 foot lower than last month, .05 foot lower than a year ago, .72 foot below the average stage of December of the last ten years, 2.83 feet below the high stage of December, 1861, and 1.35 feet above the low stage of December, 1895. During the last ten years the December level has averaged .1 foot lower than the November level and .1 foot lower than the January level.

THE PUMPKIN.

Chicago News: "I'm sure," observed Mrs. Tweedle, "that we have many things to be thankful for."

"I suppose," agreed Tweedle, as he ran his finger along the edge of the carving knife and shook his head sadly, "that we should be grateful for pretty much everything. For my part, I am thankful for pumpkin, cranberries and mince meat. They don't have to be carved.

"What I particularly like about the pumpkin is that it is never made into salad like carrots and called mock crab, mock shrimp or whatever form of mockery it may assume. No one has ever struck protein or anything in the good and faithful pumpkin, either. And, come to think of it, the pumpkin has never butted in on the pickle game. There are fifty-seven pickles and nary a one is made of pumpkins. But I doubt if pickled punkin would be the punkest of the punk at that.

"The pumpkin was used originally as a chaser when they entertained the Indians, just as they always put something bad on the program to drive people out of the picture playhouses so that the janitor can sweep out.

"Mine host would say: 'Oh, Mr. Rain-in-the-Face! Do have some more of this pumpkin!' or 'Oh, Mr. Sitting Bull Mrs. Standing Cow, do have a little more of this pumpkin float!'

"To that the Indians would reply that circumstances over which they had no control rendered it imperative for them to stay not on the order of their going but to go at once.

"'Oh, dear Mrs. Givemthehaha, won't you change your mind, and have some more of the pumpkin pie?'

"'No,' said the guest, facetiously, 'Puritans and Quakers never allow people to change their minds. Their answers have to be yea, yea and nay, nay. If a Quaker or a Puritan offered you a piece of pie you'd have to make up your mind quick and say so. A fellow tried to change his mind once and lost out completely. The Puritan offered him a cranberry tart, but the guest didn't see much in sight and in order to be polite and not to embarrass his hostess he said he didn't care for any.

"He backed it up strong by saying that he never ate more than seven or eight, or whatever number it was he had had and just as he had finished his polite speech they brought in another whole tray of steaming hot cranberry tarts. Seeing that there were so many, the guest tried to renig. 'Oh, Mrs. Plymouth,' he said, 'if you will allow me to change my mind I believe that I'll have one more small tart, just a little one.'

"At that Old Man Plymouth got up and addressed the young man with considerable acerbity 'Thee hast said "No." Let it go at that.'"

BUCKSHOT BALLISTICS.

Outing: If any man wonders why buckshot so often fails to kill, he need only go into the field and test it for range, pattern, and penetration. He will find that it has two principal weaknesses. First, it scatters so badly that except at very close range it is impossible to land more than a few shot on the game; and second, it is sadly lacking in power when it does land.

The carrying power of a buckshot cannot be compared to that of even the smallest bullet.

WAGES TOO LOW BY SOME $150

The Average Worker Gets Only $500 a Year and He Should Get $650.

John Callan O'Laughlin in the Chicago Herald: Do you earn more than $1,000? If so, you are better off than fifty-nine out of every sixty persons in the United States. Statistics compiled show that the average yearly income of persons employed in the principal industrial centers of the Union range from $591 to $510.

Dr. Frank H. Streightoff, an authority on economics, places the minimum family income adequate to the maintenance of normal living conditions in the smaller cities of the North, according to the general prevailing American notion of decent living, at $650. Accordingly, unless more than one member of each family contributes to the household expenses the income is $150 a year less than adequate.

Among Workers One in Twenty-Five.

Estimates compiled show that not more than one person in every twenty-five engaged in gainful operations in the United States earns more than $1,000 a year. The latest census returns show that only 40 per cent of the population is so employed. From this the deduction is made that not more than one person in every sixty men, women and children in the United States earns $1,000 a year or more.

While the Federal government has never made a survey of the earnings of the entire population, statistics have been compiled on certain industries. The last table made on the earnings of railroad employes shows that only seven men in every one hundred earned as much as $1,000 a year. Earnings of men employes under 21 years old were not considered. Neither were the earnings of women employes. If there are but seven adult men employes in every one hundred making more than $1,000 a year statisticians here are confident that not more than four employed persons in every one hundred are making more than $1,000 when the low salaries of women employes and minor men is figured in the average.

One-Half of Population Earns.

With one of every twenty-five persons in general occupations in the country making $1,000 a year or more, there are in the United States approximately 1,500,000 with incomes of more than $1,000 a year. The last census showed 38,167,366 persons engaged in gainful operations. The total population at that time was 91,972,266 and the number of persons 10 years old or more was 71,580,270. Fifty-three per cent, or a little more than half, of all the persons in the United States more than 10 years old were engaged in gainful operations.

They were engaged as follows:

Agriculture	12,659,203
Extraction of minerals	961,824
Manufacturing and mechanical industries	10,658,881
Transportation	2,657,631
Professional service	1,663,569
Domestic and personal service	3,772,174
Miscellaneous occupations	1,737,933

According to the estimates made as to the number of persons in the United States making in excess of $1,000 a year and the returns made to the treasury department on the income tax statements, there are in this country 1,161,997 persons who have incomes of more than $1,000 but less than $3,000.

Fewer Large Incomes.

That there is widespread misconception as to the number of persons having even moderate incomes was proved by the returns made as a result of the passage of the income tax law. When the law was being considered by congress estimates were made to the committee that at least 425,000 persons in the United States had incomes of more than $3,000 a year. The returns showed but 357,598.

When the law was passed it was believed that more than 100 persons in the United States had incomes of more than $1,500,000 a year. The returns showed only forty-four to be getting more than $1,000,000. Similar reductions were made in all classes.

The first report made by the treasury department showed the number of returns made on the income tax as follows:

Annual Income.	Number returns.
$3,000 to $4,000	79,429
$4,000 to $5,000	114,481
$5,000 to $10,000	101,718

JOE MILLER AND HIS JESTS— HUMOR OF LONG AGO

Ever hear of Joe Miller, the jester? Joseph was the sort of a chap who was always telling jokes, says the Kansas City Star. He told so many of them in London between the time of his birth in 1684 and his death in 1783 that he became known as the foremost wit of the nation. By occupation he was an actor. Says his epitaph.

Here Lye the Remains Of Honest Jo. Miller
Who Was
A Tender Husband
A Sincere Friend
A Facetious Companion
And an Excellent Comedian

His jests were collected by John Mottley, a dramatist, in 1739 and sold broadcast throughout the nation by the Chapmen, or itinerant venders of cheap stories and ballads in pamphlet form.

A few of Miller's typical jokes follow:

A person of quality coming into a church where several of his ancestors lay buried, after he had praised them very much for worthy men—"Well," said he, "I am resolved, if I live, to be buried as near them as possible."

One man told another who used not to be clothed very often that his new coat was too long for him. "That's true," answered the other, "but it will be longer before I get at other."

A poor man who had a termagant wife, after a very long dispute, in which she was resolved to have the last word, told her if she spoke another crooked word more he would beat her brains out. "Why then, 'ram's horns, you dog," said she, "if I die for it."

A certain country squire asked a Merry Andrew why he played the fool. "For the same reason," said he, "as you do, for want; you do it for want of wit, I do it for want of money."

A very harmless Irishman was eating an apple pie with some quinces in it. "Arrah now, dear honey," said he, "if so few of these quinces give such a flavor, how would an apple pie taste made all of quinces?"

An Irish lawyer of the temple, having occasion to go to dinner, left this direction in the keyhole: "Gone to the Elephant and Castle, where you will find me, and if you cannot read this carry it to the stationer's and he will read it for you."

A prince, laughing at one of several nobles whom he had employed in several embassies, told him he looked like an owl. "I know not," said the courtier, 'what I look like; but this I know, that I have the honor several times to represent your majesty's person."

A gentleman who had been shooting brought home a small bird with him, and, having an Irish servant, he asked him if he had shot that little bird. "Yes," he told him. "Arrah, by my shoul, honey," replied the Irishman, "it was not worth the powder and shot, for this little thing would have died in the fall."

A profligate young nobleman, being in company with some sober people, desired leave to toast the devil. The gentleman who sat next to him said he had no objection to any of his lordship's particular friends.

Two honest gentlemen who dealt in brooms, meeting one day in the street, one asked the other how the devil he could afford to undersell him as he did, when he stole the stuff, and made the brooms himself. "Why, you silly dog," replied the other, "I steal them ready made."

Two Irishmen, having traveled on foot from Chester to Barnet, were much tired and fatigued with their journey, and the more so when they were told that they still had ten miles to London. "By my shoul and St. Patrick," cried one of them, "it is but five miles apiece; let's e'en walk on."

"Effendi" in Turkish has its equivalent in the British "esquire."

General Election Will Be Last Measure Adopted By Government.

Text of Military Service Bill Is Given to the Public.

London, Jan. 7.—The Manchester Guardian expresses regret that the first result of the project of compulsory military service is a breaking up of the union of parties which, however checkered by some untoward events, nevertheless helped to keep a united nation concentrated on a single object from the outbreak of the war to the present day. It says:

"This breaking up was announced by a massive majority against the government bill at the great labor conference yesterday, and is signalized by the prompt resignation of three labor ministers. Of the three parties forming the coalition, one has thus withdrawn, of the other two parties, one distinguished member has withdrawn, while a material proportion of the rank and file will go with him.

Party Government Again.

"The government has at a stroke become again a party government, although the party is new in politics,

LONG BEDSHEET LAW NO LONGER A JEST

Wisconsin Hotels Complying With Statute Regarding Length of Linen.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 7.—The long bedsheet law, formerly a topic of jest, has come into its own. State hotel inspectors report that 95 per cent of the commercial hotels and 50 per cent of the others now comply with it. When the old linen supply of the other 50 per cent is worn out, it must be replaced by sheets of the full length. The state hotel rules say that worn-out bedding should be discarded entirely.

The top sheet, according to the state law, must be not less than ninety-six inches long after being laundered. This allows the end to fold over the edges of the covers, preventing the covers which are not changed for each guest from coming in contact with the mouth of the sleeper. The top sheet is to be folded back so as to cover all top coverings at least twelve inches.

The undersheet must be long enough to cover the mattress completely and fold under on sides and ends.

PASSENGERS ARE LANDED

Those From Thessaloniki Tell Stories of Great Hardships.

Rough Seas and Gale Start Repeated Leaks in Ship.

New York, Jan. 7.—The 177 passengers who were forced to abandon the sinking Greek steamship Thessaloniki at sea arrived here today on the steamship Patris of the same line and gave vivid descriptions of the hardships they suffered during the five weeks that the Thessaloniki was battered by a series of terrific gales.

On Dec. 25, Christmas day, passengers said the supply of meat on the steamer was entirely exhausted, only a few gallons of water were left and officers began to portion out short rations.

The Thessaloniki first sprung a leak on Dec. 21, when she entered a hurricane which raged for twelve hours. The boiler and engine rooms were partly flooded and the steamer sent out calls for assistance. After the hurricane, the flooded portions of the Attain Much Better Position in Regard to Balkan Affairs.

Any Further Advance Will Threaten Kovel, German Stronghold.

Teutons Make No Move Against Allies in Macedonia.

London, Jan. 7.—According to official advices from Vienna, the fighting on the eastern front has decreased in violence, the Russians having ceased to attack with vigor between the Pripet and the Bessarabian frontier. The only gain officially announced for the Russians yesterday was at Ceartorysk, where it is said the Austrians were driven from the cemetery.

Any advance in this region will threaten Kovel, one of the strongest Austro-German positions. It is believed that even though no further gain should be made, Russia's forces have attained a position which will give the nation a degree of power in Balkan affairs it has not had since its armies were driven back from the Carpathians.

No Move Detected.

The Teutonic allies still threaten to expell the French and British from their Macedonian positions, but no forward move has been detected thus far in that direction. Strong Turkish forces are said to be concentrating on the Thracian frontier of Greece, and it is suggested the Turks may attempt to make good some of the territorial losses they suffered during the Balkan wars.

The British public is still concerned chiefly with the domestic crisis. Notwithstanding the heavy majority for the compulsion bill on first reading in the house of commons the press is speculating on the possibility of a break-up of the political truce with a general election as the final chapter of the controversy.

Porto Rican Electrocuted.

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Antonio Ponton, a Porto Rican student, was put to death in the electric chair this morning shortly after 6 o'clock for the murder of Miss Bessie Kremer, a Schenectady, N. Y., school teacher, with whom he was infatuated. Three shocks were administered before Ponton was pronounced dead.

BRITISH LABOR LEADER RESIGNS FROM MINISTRY

ARTHUR HENDERSON, President of Board of Education.

LABOR LEADERS QUIT THE BRITISH MINISTRY

Arthur Henderson, William Brace and George H. Roberts Resign.

London, Jan. 7.—Arthur Henderson, president of the board of education and leader of the labor party in the house of commons, William Brace, parliamentary under-secretary for home affairs, and George H. Roberts, lord commissioner of the treasury, also labor party leaders, have resigned from the ministry.

Arthur Henderson and his two minor labor colleagues will remain in the labor party and retain their seats in parliament.

Mr. Henderson said regarding a suggestion concerning his resignation from parliament made in his speech before the labor congress that he there stated that he would resign his seat if he were definitely bound by the vote of the delegates to certain action in the house. He has not been so bound, and there is no reason for him to resign and seek re-election, he said, adding:

"I am a supporter of the bill and shall vote for it on every possible occasion."

CINCINNATI HAS $800,000 BLAZE

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 7.—The large three-story depot and office of the Adams Express company at the northwest corner of Front and Butler streets, this city, was destroyed by fire early today. The loss is estimated at $800,000.

Crossed electric wires in the auditor's department, on the second floor of the building are said to have caused the fire.

Increases Disapproved.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Increases of 28 cents a ton on coal from Toluca, Ill., to points in Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway were disapproved today by the interstate commerce commission.

BURGLARS ROB REVENUE OFFICE IN ST. PAUL OF $1,000,000 IN STAMPS

Several Thousand Dollars in Cash Also Secured By Robbers.

Safe in Office of Internal Revenue Collector Lynch Blown.

Most Successful Crime of Its Character in the Northwest.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Robbers last night obtained approximately $1,000,000 in negotiable internal revenue stamps and several thousand dollars in cash as the result of probably the most skillful and successful crime of the character in the history of the Northwest. Blowing a large safe in the old Federal building at Fifth and Wabasha streets without atracting attention, the robbers selected their loot with comparative leisure and rejected a large quantity of stamps that were unnegotiable. They then made their escape without leaving the slightest trace of their movements.

Discovered in Morning.

The robbery was not discovered until the building was opened for business today. It will be two days before E. J. Lynch, revenue collector, in whose office the robbery was committed, can determine the exact amount stolen. Obviously well informed, the robbers effected an entrance to Mr. Lynch's offices during the night. With apparent deliberation, they used an electric drill in opening a hole five inches in diameter in the outer door of the big vault. Then the police state, a small hand mirror was inserted in this aperture and the location of the lock on the inside of the door was determined, with exactness. A charge of a high explosive was poured into and on this lock from the inside and the big front door blown out without further trouble. The second door of the vault was opened by picking an exposed lock. The third door, that directly guarding the large amount of stamps was unlocked, it is said, and offered no resistance to the robbers.

HOSPITAL PROVIDED FOR GERMAN WAR DOGS

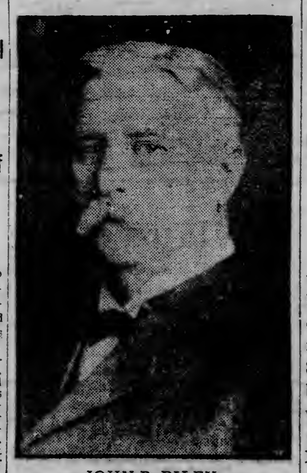

Berlin, Jan. 7, wireless to Sayville.—The dogs of the army hospital service have had a hospital provided for them in Jena and already a number of dog patients have been treated there for wounds and various ailments. The hospital was built by convalescent soldiers.

So far during the war the dogs of the service have rescued at least 3,000 wounded soldiers who otherwise would have perished.

Serbians Want to Fight.

Rome, Jan. 6.—Thousands of Serbian refugees are presenting themselves at the Serbian legation and consulates in Italy to request that they be incorporated in a new Serbian army to fight with the allies in an effort to win back their country.

SUPERINTENDENT OF NEW YORK PRISONS IS ASKED TO RESIGN

JOHN B. RILEY.

CONSIDERED BY CABINET

President and Advisers Discuss Sinking of Liner Persia.

Lack of Information Prevents Reaching any Decision in Case.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The submarine crisis, still of uncertain status because of lack of details, was placed by President Wilson before the cabinet today in its first meeting since his return from Hot Springs, Va. The senate foreign relations committee also met to consider the situation but as Chairman Stone was detained at the White House by a conference with the president, adjourned without action.

Still in Doubt.

Although more than a week has passed since the steamship Persia was sunk in the Mediterranean with the loss of American life, officials were today still uninformed as to whether the vessel was torpedoed and, if so, the nationality of the submarine. Developments today continued to indicate that the American government would withhold action pending official advices determining these points.

Overnight developments included the receipt of dispatches from Ambassador Penfield at Vienna asserting that

RESIGNATION OF J. B. RILEY ASKED

Governor Whitman Criticizes Work of Superintendent of Prisons.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Interest in the administration of the state department of prisons which subsided a week ago when Thomas Mott Osborne relinquished the wardenship of Sing Sing, was revived yesterday by Governor Whitman's demand that John B. Riley, state superintendent of prisons, offer his resignation immediately.

In a letter to Supt. Riley the governor alleges that the prison executive had attempted to hamper the work of Osborne's successor, Prof. George W Kirschwey, in ordering the transfer from Sing Sing to Dannemora prison of several members of the Mutual Welfare league, the Sing Sing self-governing body organized by Warden Osborne.

PROPOSALS ARE RECEIVED FROM BERLIN

Believed to Offer Settlement Satisfactory to United States.

Includes Indemnity to Americans Lost When Liner Was Torpedoed.

Declares Destruction of Vessel Was Act of Reprisal for Blockade.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Proposals which the German government believe will end the controversy over the Lusitiania disaster in a manner satisfactory to the United States were understood to have been received from Berlin. Count von Bernstorff had an appointment to confer with Secretary Lansing this afternoon.

Germany is believed to have agreed to pay an indemnity for the Americans lost when the liner was torpedoed; at the same time basing a reservation of all wrongdoing upon the contention that the destruction of the vessel was an act of reprisal in retaliation for the British blockade of Germany.

Germany is also understood to be ready to give assurances that her submarine commanders operating in the Mediterranean will not torpedo without warning privately-owned vessels of any description, including liners, freighters and tramp steamers. German assurances in regard to the submarine warfare in the North sea include only liners in passenger service.

BRITISH SUBMARINE SINKS OFF HOLLAND

Entire Crew of Submersible Rescued By a Dutch Cruiser.

London, Jan. 7.—The sinking of a British submarine off the coast of Holland was officially announced this morning. The crew was saved.

The admiralty statement says that the submarine, the name of which is not given, was sunk yesterday off the island of Texel, the largest and most southwesterly of the Frisian group. The entire crew, numbering 33, was rescued by the Dutch cruiser Noord Brabant and brought into the Dutch port of Helder.

STRIKERS RIOTING AT YOUNGSTOWN

One Man Injured in Clash at Sheet and Tube Company's Works.

Youngstown, Ohio, Jan. 7.—Incipient rioting occurred here last night and early today in connection with the strike at the plant of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company in East Youngstown. One man was injured.

The strike forces had grown today to 3,000. There are 9,000 employes of the plant. Strike pickets during the night and early today refused to permit workmen to enter the plant. Those who attempted it were greeted with showers of cobblestones, bricks and clubs.

Street cars were stopped and workmen on board were dragged off and placed on cars going in the opposite direction. Stones were thrown through car windows.

The Old Bear Hasn't Gone Into Its Winter Hole, After All.

SUMMARY OF THE WAR NEWS

A British submarine was sunk yesterday off the Dutch coast. The admiralty announcement of the sinking does not state the cause or give the name of the submarine. The entire crew of thirty-three was rescued.

Previous statements that no warning was given the liner Persia and the blow that sent her to the bottom came from an unseen source are confirmed in affidavits from twenty-one survivors obtained by United States Consul Garrels at Alexandra. The consul so advised the state department today.

Ambassador Penfield cabled from Vienna that the Austro-Hungarian government up to yesterday was without advices regarding the sinking of the Persia.

A Rome dispatch says Serbian refugees by the thousands are flocking to the Serbian legation and the various consulates in Italy with requests that they be permitted to join a new army in an effort, with the help of Serbia's allies, to win back their country.

There is no indication in official reports or news dispatches of marked activity on any of the war fronts except along the line in the east from Volhynia, southward to Bessarabia. Even here the fighting between Austro-German and Russian forces seems to have slackened.

NEW PASTOR INSTALLED

First Presbyterian Church Formally Receives Dr. George Brewer.

Dr. Bushnell of Minneapolis Preaches Sermon; Local Pastors Present.

The installation of the Rev. George Brewer, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, was held last evening, and the majority of the members of the congregation were present.

Dr. W. W. Lawrence, pastor of Glen Avon Presbyterian church, gave the charge to the pastor, and Rev. J. A. McGaughey gave the charge to the people. He urged the members of the church to stand by their pastor by being present at all the services of the church.

"Nothing," said Mr. McGaughey, "takes the heart out of a preacher more than to feel his people do not appreciate the messages that he brings. The preacher also needs the prayers of his congregation; a praying congregation means a powerful ministry."

He closed by urging the people to stand by their pastor by volunteering their services. No church can succeed unless there is a large number of volunteers.

The sermon of the evening was given by Dr. Bushnell of Minneapolis. His theme was taken from John iii, 16, using the words, "God so loved the world."

"There was no measure to God's love," the speaker said. "It is so big that all these centuries have not yet realized what it means. God is not the God of any nation. England claims Him as her God and sings 'Confound our enemies;' Germany claims Him as her God and prays, 'God punish our enemies.' God is the God of the world, and He so loved the world that He gave His Son. There are many pagan gods—50,000,000 of them in India. There is Budda and Mahommed, but under none of these pagan gods could you put the words, 'God so loved.'

"There is the god of pleasure that millions are serving. They love the god of pleasure, but the god of pleasure doesn't love them, but finally leaves them wrecks. The god of ambition! Napoleon loved that god, but the god of ambition didn't love him, but cast him on the island of St. Helena. There is but one deity, and that is the God who so loved the world, and there is only one place where those words apply.

"God has given us much prosperity, but His love is not shown there. God has given us great gifts, but we do not stop at any of these to apply these words. But when He gave Himself through Jesus Christ on Calvary's cross, we find the place to apply the words, 'God so loved the world.'"

Dr. Bushnell closed with giving a picture of what the world would be when the love of God had permeated it. The mission of the church, the mission of every Christian man and woman everywhere, is to tell that message until the love of God has found its way unto the heart of every man and every nation.

SUGGESTIONS MADE FOR DULUTH'S BENEFIT ARE BOTH MATERIALISTIC AND ALTRUISTIC

Contestants Suggest Some Changes in City's Arteries of Commerce, Advertising, Compelling Use of Duluth-Made Goods, and Help for Poor and Sick.

Two of those whose letters in reply to the question "What would you do for Duluth?" appear today, deal with material benefits, while two are altruistic in their offerings.

One man has in mind topographical improvements for the city for business convenience and a very excellent "hunch" that publicity might bring more industries to Duluth than now exist. That part of his suggestion concerning the removal of tumble-down dwellings is regarded as good, but it might also be said in passing that much work along this line has been done in Duluth by State Fire Marshal Hargadine.

In the second of the materialistic letters, "Do it for Duluth" is the keynote and there is not a discord in the general tune.

As to the other two, kindness of heart is evident on the part of both authors and the poor and sick are remembered.

The first man would alter the highways of the city for business reasons, advertise Duluth and wipe out fire menaces. His letter follows:

"If I had the power I should inaugurate and gradually enforce a comprehensive plan for widening the alleys throughout the central part of the city, have them cleaned up and made suitable for both thoroughfares and business marts. Because of topography, Duluth cannot expend its business north or south, and the alleys, already of good width, would soon become established trade avenues if this were done.

"I should also organize a lively campaign for publicity for Greater Duluth, with the purpose in view of securing new industries for the city. A diversity of industries, especially small manufacturing, is both practicable and essential, so that when the big industries are slack, Duluth business interests would not feel the loss and wage-earners would still have employment.

"I would, with this authority (imaginary, of course, for the purposes of making these points), start a gradual campaign of effectively ridding the city of tumble-down frame buildings, now a menace to life and health. There are too many such buildings, destroying the symmetry and beauty of downtown Duluth.

"EDWARD M. HEERMANS,
"17, 314 East Second street."

This is from a young girl who must have been taught from the cradle up to "Do it for Duluth":

"If I had the money or power I would patronize home industry and frame a law that no mail-order house would receive any trade from Duluth; that all men, women and children would get preference for jobs before outsiders, and to build a fire hall in Hunter's Park.

"VIOLA BURTON,
"A Duluthian 14 years of age, 420 St. Marie street."

Care of sick, prevention of family neglect and city cleansing finds an advocate in the writer of the following:

"If I had the money or the power to do it with I would see that the poor and sick got all they need, and that nobody would have to go hungry or without work.

"Then I would see that the saloons would be closed so that Duluth wouldn't be disgraced by having a drunken man walking along the street, and so they would attend more to their work and families.

"I would see that everybody kept the streets and alleys clean so that Duluth would be the nicest and cleanest city you could wish to see.

"VIOLET KELLY,
"429 North Sixtieth avenue west."

One who evidently has the interest of unfortunates and of workingmen at heart submits the following:

"First, I would build a free hospital and dispensary so that the poor who could not pay could have the benefit of free treatment, both surgical and medical, with room and board included, and I would endow it so it would prosper.

"Second, I would erect homes and furnish them for poor aged people, say 70 years and over, supply them with food, fuel and other necessities, so that they could enjoy their declining years in comfort.

"Third, I would erect a building to be occupied as a workingmen's club, where all respectable men could spend their evenings. I would have the building contain a reading room supplied with books, magazines and daily papers, also a pool and billiard room, and other games, such as dominoes, checkers, etc. I would have refreshments, cigars, tobacco, etc., sold in the building, but no intoxicating drinks. I would try to make this club self-supporting by charging a small fee for membership. I believe a place like this would have a good effect on the workingmen of our city. Yours truly,

"FRED LOCKWOOD,

CAMBRIDGE DENUDED TO SUPPLY THE ARMY

Medical School Alone Is Maintaining Full Activities.

Cambridge, Eng., Dec. 7.—Cambridge has poured her wealth of young manhood into the British army and navy without a stint and, with the exception of the medical school, the various colleges of the university are only being continued so that a 1,000-year-old record may not be broken.

And now the integrity of the medical school is being threatened by the Lord Derby recruiting plan, but the authorities of the university will make a bitter fight before they consent to this college being denuded of its students.

This fight is being led by Dr. Arthur Shipley, who is well-known in the United States, where he holds a Princeton degree and where he spends much of the time he can spare from his duties as master of Christ college. Discussing the efforts to attract recruits from the student body of the Cambridge Medical school, Dr. Shipley said to a correspondent of the Associated Press:

"We must not only continue to supply the army with surgeons and doctors, but we must never lose sight of the necessity of a careful conservation of our civilian population. England is already short of doctors, and since it is by no means impossible that a great epidemic might succeed this war, it can be seen that, instead of urging medical students to enlist, every effort should be made to keep them at their studies."

No action has yet been taken by the recruiting department on the protest of the Cambridge authorities.

OLD MAN SENTENCED.

Stearns County Farmer Convicted on Wife's Accusation.

St. Cloud, Minn., Jan. 7.—John Keske, age 72, a farmer living at Maine Prairie, was sentenced yesterday to the county jail for sixty days on a charge of disorderly conduct brought against him by his wife, who alleged that he has been cruel to her.

Keske told the court of his marital troubles. His wife, who is his second helpmate, is but 45 years of age. He asserts that he has repeatedly tried to persuade her to sell the valuable farm valued at about $16,000 and move into town to live on the interest of the money. Mrs. Keske is not willing and claims that her husband has been ugly and disagreeable.

The man objected to the sentence, asserting that leniency should be shown in the case, as it is his first offense.

TO PRACTICE IN COUNTRY

Range High School Students Will Be Assigned to Rural Work.

Plans have been completed by the county school superintendent and his assistants whereby the normal cadets of the high schools of Ely, Gilbert, Eveleth, Virginia, Chisholm and Hibbing will be given an opportunity to do practice teaching in certain of the rural schools of the unorganized district.

"There are ninety-two students enrolled at the present time in these departments," says the Rural School Bulletin for January, which is published from Supt. N. A. Young's office. "It is deemed advisable to send them out in five different divisions, eighteen to twenty in a division.

"Each division will be expected to practice for a period of two weeks. The dates for the various divisions are as follows: First division, Jan. 10 to Jan. 21 inclusive; second division, Jan. 31 to Feb 11 inclusive; third division, Feb. 28 to March 10 inclusive; fourth division, March 13 to March 24 inclusive; fifth division, March 27 to April 7 inclusive. All students will be expected to reach the schools so as to begin work at 8:30 on the morning of the first date assigned.

"The regular teachers of the following schools of the county district have been called to a meeting at the office of the county superintendent on Jan. 3 and 4: Nos. 19, 23, 28, 29, 31, 40, 41, 45, 49, 52, 56, 60, 61, 68, 70, 71, 73, 74, 77, 78, 83, 84, 85 "B." The object of this meeting is to discuss methods of handling the work so as to make it possible for each student to derive the greatest possible amount of benefit from the work undertaken.

"The list of schools selected for this work may be changed somewhat as necessity seems to demand. In selecting these schools we have tried to keep in mind the interest of the cadets, and no school has been selected where the enrollment is so large that the help of the cadet can be considered of any particular value.

"Each cadet will be expected to work under the direction of the regular teacher, and a daily record must be kept which will show the activities of the cadet while working at the school. No especial effort has been made to select schools which are more accessible than the average rural school of the county. It has been considered advisable to give the cadets a fair idea of what may be expected of them in this particular respect.

"Directions for reaching the school and for securing accommodations will be furnished by the county superintendent's office. All expenses incurred through travel and for board must be borne by the cadet doing the practice work."

FIREMEN HAVE TWO RUNS DURING NIGHT

News Tribune Building and Tailor Shop Are Scorched.

A mysterious blaze starting in the floor of the Duluth Photo-Engraving company's office, third floor rear, News-Tribune building, about 6 o'clock this morning, caused $200 damage.

Engravers left the rooms several hours before, and when the janitor was attracted by smoke, the flames had a fair start. After burning in the floor they ran up some piping along a wall and touched off a sprinkler head, flooding the rear of the building.

Most of the damage, sustained by the photo-engraving company and by the composing department of the News-Tribune, on the floor below, was caused by water. Asst. Chief C. W. Wilson was unable to reach any conclusion as to the cause of the blaze.

Fire apparatus was called out shortly after 10 o'clock last night by a blaze in the tailor shop of Samuel Meyer, 430 East Fourth street. Damage was estimated at between $600 and $700, and the loss is mostly on stock.

The origin of this blaze also is unknown.

STATE SUPREME COURT DECISIONS

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court today announced decisions in the following cases:

RAMSEY COUNTY.
New Trial Granted.

Charles M. Coleman, appellant, vs. Illinois Central Railroad company, respondent—

1. Section 2 of the Supplemental Safety Appliance act, enacted by congress and approved April 14, 1910, construed in connection with section 3 of the same act, and held to impose the absolute duty upon interstate railroad companies of maintaining the appliances and equipment of their cars in secure and safe condition for use, and that the statute became and remained in full force and operation after July 1, 1911.

2. Section 3 of the act provides for a uniform standard of such car equipment appliable to all interstate roads, and an order of the interstate commerce commission fixing a time for compliance with its order prescribing such uniform standard did not affect the provisions of section 2 or suspend the operation thereof.

Order reversed.

BROWN, C. J.

RAMSEY COUNTY.
Procedure Defined.

Ethel Stolorow et al, respondents, vs. National Council of the Knights and Ladies of Security, appellant.—

Where the fact that several causes of action are improperly united appears upon the face of the complaint the objection must be taken by demurrer, or it is waived.

Affirmed. BUNN, J.

LE SUEUR COUNTY.
Stockholders' Assessment.

Finch, Van Slyck & McConville, respondent, vs. Le Sueur County Cooperative Creamery company, defendant, John F. Vanasek, et al., appellants, John H. Lebens, receiver, respondent—

1. Proceedings under Section 6616 G. S. 1913, for an assessment against stockholders of an insolvent corporation are summary and informal, not controlled by all the forms of ordinary judicial procedure, and the stockholders are not entitled to a jury trial of the questions involving the authority of the court to order an assessment.

2. The court may under the statute receive such evidence, by affidavit or otherwise, as will aid in the determination of the essential questions.

3. Certain schedules in bankruptcy proceedings and certain affidavits, though the affidavits contained some matters of hearsay, held properly received in evidence.

4. The statute authorizing such evidence does not deprive the stockholders of their property without due process of law, and is therefore not unconstitutional.

5. The assessment is preliminary to subsequent proceedings for the collection thereof, is conclusive only as to the insolvency of the corporation and the amount of the assessment, and does not preclude the stockholders from interposing in such subsequent proceeding any other matter which may be available in defense.

6. The proceeding was pending in Le Sueur county, but the final hearing upon the petition for the assessment was had in the adjoining county of Scott. Held, not error, since the adjournment to Scott county was by the consent of both parties.

Order affirmed. BROWN, C. J.

WABASHA COUNTY.
Validity of Will.

In the matter of the estate of Lars E. Elberg, deceased, Alfred Elberg, et al., appellants, vs. Maria Elberg, respondent—

1. It is not necessary to the validity of a will that the intention of the testator be expressed in exact legal terms. Any language from which such intention may be ascertained is sufficient.

2. The expression, "my wife shall have and be lawful owner of one-half my property," and certain children "shall have their equal share after my wife takes her half," held to have been intended by the testator as express grants to the legatees named.

3. The will provided for a distribution of the estate to the children "after my death." The expression "after my death" is held to fix the death of the testator as the time when the legatees should come into possession of their legacies.

4. The rule that where by a will an absolute estate in property is clearly and unequivocally granted, a subsequent indefinite clause thereto limiting or attempting to limit the grant to one for life is inoperative and void, applied to the will set out in the opinion.

Judgment reversed.

BROWN, C. J.

LYON COUNTY.
Conviction Sustained.

State of Minnesota, respondent, vs. Arthur Meyers, appellant—

In this prosecution for an illegal sale of liquor the evidence sustains the conviction.

The definition given in section 3188 G. S. 1913, of the meaning of the terms "sell" or "sale" in chapter 16, G. S. 1913, (the laws relating to intoxicating liquors) is sufficiently clear and complete and may be given to the jury without further explanation.

The instruction of the court did not unduly limit or restrict the effect of the testimony relating to the good reputation of defendant.

The court rightly refused to single out the testimony of the detectives and instruct that the same should be closely scrutinized.

No error was committed in refusing to instruct that if the liquor was furnished in a spirit of hospitality, with no intent to violate the law, there was no crime, for defendant denied that he furnished the pint of beer, for the illegal sale of which he was tried, either in the spirit of hospitality or for any other purpose.

Affirmed. HOLT, J.

Loan Not Usurious.

William H. Jenkins, appellent, vs. Union Savings association, respondent—

The court having found that the loan involved was by agreement of the parties to be considered as a South Dakota loan, there payable, and governed by the laws of that state, and thereunder not usurious, the mortgage securing it upon lands in this state is valid. Further, were the loan held to be a Minnesota contract, the findings do not affirmatively show it tainted with usury.

Assuming, but not deciding, that defendant, a foreign corporation, in order to obtain a valid mortgage upon lands in this state must first comply with the Sommerville law, the curative acts, validating the contracts made before compliance with the law, effectively legalized this loan.

Affirmed. HOLT, J.

WASECA COUNTY.
No Prejudicial Error.

Eugene Tanner, respondent, vs. Emily Joslin et al, appellants—

1. Evidence considered and held sufficient to sustain the finding of the jury that defendants had agreed, that in case plaintiff procured a purchaser for their farm at a price above $90 per acre, he should receive for his services the amount received for the farm over and above that price, and that plaintiff had procured such purchaser.

2. The charge to the jury was without prejudicial error.

Affirmed. TAYLOR, C.

KITTSON COUNTY.
Judgment Affirmed.

Dell Ewing, respondent, vs. D. P. Kirtland, appellant—

Where a complaint in an action for board and lodgings sets out the dates between which the same furnished, the number of meals and the number of lodgings, and the value of each, the failure of plaintiff to furnish a bill of particulars in response to a demand therefor, is not presumptively prejudicial to defendant, where such demand does not indicate what information, further than that given by the complaint, defendant desires.

Judgment affirmed.

PER CURIAM.

DOES WORK IN RECORD TIME

Grand Jury Disposes of Thirteen Cases in Day and Half.

County Jail Again Declared Inadequate; City Jail in Good Condition.

Establishing a record for celerity and despatch, the January, 1916, grand jury late yesterday finished its work for the term and submitted its final report to District Judge Fesler. The grand jury convened Wednesday noon and in a day and a half's time disposed of seventeen cases, presenting indictments in thirteen and no true bills in four.

Judge Fesler complimented the jury for its quick work, stating that it had broken previous records for St. Louis county. In its final report the grand jury returned four indictments and three no true bills. Of the four indictments, one count is secret. The indictments made public were returned against:

Acted as "Fence."

Frank D. Roscoe for receiving stolen property. Roscoe is alleged to have acted as a "fence" for Marmaduke Meyer, who stole horse collars, sweat pads and other articles from the barn of Gust Marsh on Dec. 11, last.

Charles Anderson for forgery in the second degree. Anderson, on Jan. 1, it is charged, passed a forged check for $5 on Sam Ginsberg. The name of the maker, C. J. Anderson, and the indorser, August Johnson, were both forged signatures.

Thomas Egan for attempted forgery in the second degree. Egan is accused of having tried to pass an $85 check on Sam Smith on Dec. 31, last. The paper was drawn on the City National bank and was signed with a forged signature of McGillis & Gibbs.

The grand jury refused to indict Erick Tolson who was bound over on a charge of assault in the second degree. He was arrested for taking part in a saloon brawl in which Andrew Helsing was slashed on Dec. 27, last.

In the case of the state against Matt Sebel, held to the grand jury on a charge of adultery on Oct. 2 last with Antonia Komletinsky, the grand jury also returned a no true bill. No true bills were also returned in the cases of Mary Clark and Stanley Kolodyski, jointly charged with a statutory offense.

Jail Declared Inadequate.

On Wednesday the grand jury visited the county and city jails. The following report of this visit was made to the court:

"Honorable Bert Fesler, judge of the district court, St. Louis county—

"Dear Sir: We, the grand jury, have visited the county and city jails, and wish at this time to particularly call the attention of the court to the fact that, in our opinion, the county jail is entirely inadequate to properly take care of the prisoners now confined therein. From our observation, we are of the opinion that the place is well and properly managed insofar as the facilities afford, but it does seem as though the attention of the county board should again be called to the seemingly imperative necessity of taking some action to relieve the very unsatisfactory condition insofar as the housing of the prisoners is concerned.

"The city jail we found in first-class condition in every way.

"Your jury fully realizes that this question of the county jail is one which has been brought to the attention of the court frequently, particularly during the last few years, and while we do not deem it within our province to suggest what should be done, nevertheless, we are seriously impressed with the fact that some steps should be immediately taken to relieve, what, in our opinion, is now a very unsatisfactory situation.

"Respectfully submitted,
E. P. NEFF, Foreman."

PLAGUE OF RATS IN ALLIES' TRENCHES

Trainloads of Dogs Are Sent to Combat Rodents.

Paris, Dec. 7.—Four special trains of dogs have just been sent to different parts of the French battle front. One train of twenty-five cars had twenty-five dogs in each car—fox terriers, rat terriers, police dogs and other breeds—to be divided between different sectors of the front and most of them employed in chasing rats out of the trenches. Attracted by the remains of the soldiers' rations, rats invaded the advanced works, shelters and trenches, even on the first line, and multiplied to such an extent that the soldiers are incapable of exterminating them. Dogs are now to be tried.

Three special trains of dogs, carrying about 500 dogs each, in a large proportion wolf hounds, but including specimens of nearly all breeds, were a gift from Canada to the French army. They are to be employed mostly in the mountainous regions, in the commissary and sanitary services, while some of them will be trained as sentinels and trench dogs.

SEEK EVIDENCE OF LID-TILTING

Polk County Grand Jury Reported to Be Making Probe.

Crookston, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is rumored that the Polk county grand jury is doing some probing into the question of whether any blind pigs are thriving in Polk county. Since the county option law went into effect the latter part of November there has been a notable absence from the streets of Crookston of the habitual "jags" and very little complaint has been heard of any infractions of the law. However, there have been reports of some violations and it is understood these are being looked into though no intimation has been given as to where lightning is apt to strike. Public sentiment is overwhelmingly against blind pigs and bootlegging, and there is no chance, in the present state of the public temper, to get away with violations of the law in this respect.

The grand jury has returned indictments against John Holter, a laboring man formerly in the employ of Joseph Boucher on a farm, for alleged abuse of child under 14 years of age, and against Joseph Verreaux, charged with setting fire to a building which he occupied with intent of defrauding the insurer thereof. Another batch of indictments are expected today and the grind will not be finished this week from indications.

WILL HOLD HEARING ON STANDARDIZATION

Committee on Agriculture to Hear Discussion on Grain Bill.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, Jan. 7.—On request of Representative Anderson the house committee on agriculture today agreed to give a hearing Wednesday, Jan. 12, on the grain standardization bill, that has been proposed by the department of agriculture and introduced by Chairman Lever. Mr. Anderson was today appointed a member of the sub-committee to consider the bill.

"I expect that members of the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission will attend the hearing," said Mr. Anderson. "The bill as submitted provides for the establishment of standards and supervision by the department of agriculture of state inspections to see that the standards fixed by the government are equitably applied. I want to hear from the Minnesota commission, and others northwest, who are interested in the legislation before the committee acts."

Mr. Anderson and some other members of the committee are objecting to certain features of the bill to establish bonded warehouses for grain, cotton and other agricultural products, upon which the sub-committee in charge had agreed. The hearing next week probably will include that bill.

FLOODWOOD BANK DIRECTORS CHOSEN

Floodwood, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The stockholders of the Floodwood First State bank yesterday elected the following directors: S. C. Orwoll of Granite Falls; D. A. McLarty of Minneapolis; J. W. New, M. W. Johnson and M. W. Hingley of Floodwood. The bank has a capital stock and surplus of $18,000 and about $75,000 deposits. The newly elected directors will meet next week and elect officers for the coming year. The present officers are: D. A. McLarty, president; M. W. Johnson, vice president; M. W. Hingley, cashier, and C. J. Zobel, assistant cashier.

NEW AITKIN RATES NOW EFFECTIVE

Aitkin, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new rules and rates for the Aitkin electric light and power department went into effect Jan. 1. The item that affects the greatest number of consumers under the new rules is the establishing of a minimum rate of $1 per month.

No meter rent will be charged and the consumer is entitled to use $1 worth of current at the old rate of 10 cents peh kilowatt. Current used in excess will be charged at regular rate except to large consumers who may have separate meters for power and heat current at a reduced sliding scale.

CUT PROM EXPENSES.

North Dakota University Social Affair Stripped of Frills.

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Cabs and flowers again will be absent from the North Dakota university junior prom, on Jan. 14. The committee in charge has ruled against the use of either by the students attending, and in that manner they will materially reduce the "prom" cost.

This year's prom will be held in the university gymnasium. Miss Marguerite O'Connor of St. Thomas, N. D., is in charge of decorations; Douglas McKay of Pembina is business manager; Arthur Shaft of Minot is floor manager; Miss Grace Ellis of Valley City is in charge of the banquet, and Miss Winnifred Nelson of East Grand Forks, is in charge of the music.

GOPHER BOY TO OXFORD.

Fred Tryon of Minneapolis Gets Rhodes' Scholarship.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 7.—Fred G. Tryon of Minneapolis, a graduate of the University of Minnesota, has been chosen by a committee of college and university presidents as the next Rhodes scholar to go to Oxford university, England, from this state.

Tryon, who is 24 years old, was graduated in 1914 with high honors. He was made a member of Phi Beta Kappa and also won a place in Delta Sigma Rho, honorary public speaking fraternity. This year he held the Shevlin fellowship in the graduate school of the academic college.

An average of 97.6 per cent in all his work was maintained by Tryon during his course.

The annual support provided under the Cecil Rhodes trust is $1,500 a year.

EMPEROR WILLIAM IS RAPIDLY RECOVERING

Berlin, Jan. 7, via London.—It is reiterated that the persistent stories concerning the serious illness of Emperor William were absolutely unfounded and emanated in unreliable and irresponsible news sources outside of Germany.

The emperor is recovering rapidly from a minor illness and has been out recently.

Takes Poison As "Cure."

Grand Forks, N. D., Jan. 7.—Helga Thompson, 13-year-old daughter of a prominent farmer of Grafton, is said to have taken bichloride of mercury as a cure for stomach trouble, while staying at the Y. W. C. A. in this city, and is now in a critical condition at a local hospital.

(Think what this shortage means! 75 per cent of all the linen flax comes—or should come—from Belgium and Russia! Nine-tenths of all the big foreign firms have men at the front! Our old friends, "Slater & Anderson," of Dumferline, Scotland, tell us that 150 out of their 250 men are in the trenches! Including all three members of the firm! The same is true of nearly all the big linen manufacturers!) Any wonder, in the face of these conditions, that our White Sale prices are awakening Duluth women?

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

AS It Seems to Be

A GOOD many letters from readers of this column ask us to base an opinion or advise a suitable diet or tell what should be done for some such trouble as this:

"I am a young girl of 22, and for a long time I have been feeling run down and poorly. I work in an office where the ventilation is not just what it should be. I was told my trouble is nervousness, and advised to take various medicines. But after several experiments I still feel as badly as ever. I have a little catarrhal trouble in the throat, and sometimes a slight cough, but my lungs seem to be all right, there is no pain anywhere. I have lost fourteen pounds in weight. My back aches some, but my kidneys seem to be normal. Won't you please suggest something to help me?"

The young lady—like all others who write in that vein—labors under a misapprehension. Her letter details some vague symptoms which might mean any of a dozen or more things. It tells absolutely nothing upon which an opinion or any advice worth writing could be based.

Note that her lungs seem to be normal, and her kidneys seem normal, too. Why do they seem so? Perhaps because there is no pain in the chest, and because the kidney functions do not disturb the patient. Well, tuberculosis is painless in its early stages; kidney disease causes no disturbances which the victim could attribute to the kidneys—it causes general ill health or digestive disturbances, or headaches, or anemia, or loss of weight —Bright's disease, we mean.

You because these organs "seem" normal the young lady eliminates them from the case and expects us to do so, too. Imagine how much good—or rather harm—a doctor would do by undertaking to advise anyone on such insufficient knowledge of the condition present!

We are aware that we have been able to render some little help to readers through correspondence with them and with their physicians and dentists. We are glad that this is so. We eagerly welcome the opportunity to do good where we feel that it is good.

But we wish to protest once more against such letters as that quoted. It is a dangerous thing to trust to a diagnosis made by long-distance communication, and still more risky to follow treatment based upon such a diagnosis. If you have any questions upon which you desire information that we can give, put them to us. But do not ask us to tell you what is the matter with you. Do not expect us to do by mail what no doctor can do—even in his private office—diagnose the trouble without examining the patient.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Kidney Trouble Never Causes Backache.

Is backache, dull, deep-seated, always present, a symptom of kidney trouble?

Answer—In all our hospital and private practice we cannot recall ever having met with backache due to kidney trouble.

Her Joints Grate.

Can you explain what causes my knee to grate when I go up and down stairs or turn in bed? My hand feels the grating, too.

Answer—Either loose body in the knee or overgrowth of the synovial membrane, lining the joint. If it doesn't cause pain or disability, ignore it.

Dr. Brady will answer all questions pertaining to Health. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns. If not it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Dr. Brady will not prescribe for individual cases or make diagnoses. Address all letters to Dr. William Brady, care of the Herald. All questions will be answered, whether they come from people residing in Duluth or outside, provided they comply with the rules here stated.

OPERATIONS ON GALLIPOLI

Report of Gen. Hamilton Tells Story of Desperate Fighting By British.

Throws Light on Disastrous Landing of Troops at Suvla Bay.

London, Jan. 7.—Gen. Ian Hamilton's report on the British operations on the Gallipoli peninsula was published in the official Gazette last night. It tells the story of the fighting on the peninsula from the beginning of May to the middle of October.

Probably no more important contribution to the history of the present war has yet been made. The report throws light on the great landing at Anzac cove and Suvla bay Aug. 7, which has been the subject of strong attacks upon the military administration of the government, the whole operation requiring the combined action of the army and the navy.

The handling of the masses of troops within a limited area probably was the most complicated ever undertaken and military men are surprised that some important details failed to work out as planned.

The Suvla bay landing failed to accomplish its object, the report shows, partly because the force consisted largely of untried troops under generals inexperienced in the new warfare and partly through the failure of the water supply. The sufferings of the troops for lack of water make painful reading.

High Praise for Men.

Gen. Hamilton bestows the highest possible praise upon the bravery of the men. He believes that after the middle of August the Turks outnumbered the British and had plenty of fresh soldiers and munitions while the British government was unable to furnish him with the reinforcements he wanted.

The general strongly opposed the abandonment of any of the bases held by the British troops.

Gen. Hamilton's report, which was submitted to Field Marshal Earl Kitchener, secretary of state for war, carried the story of the Dardanelles operations up to mid-October when he relinquished his command. Concerning his retirement Gen. Hamilton reports:

"On the 11th of October your lordship cabled asking me for an estimate of the losses which would be involved in the evacuation of the peninsula. I replied in terms showing that such a step was to me unthinkable. On the 16th of October I received a cable recalling me to London for the reason, as I was informed by your lordship on my arrival, that his majesty's government desired fresh unbiased opinion from a responsible commander upon the question of early evacuation."

Ill-Fated Landing.

The most stirring passages of the document describe the ill-fated landing at Suvla bay and Anzac early in August.

This operation began on Aug. 6. The climax was reached at daybreak on the 10th when the Turks made a grand attack from the summit of Chunnuk Bahr hill upon a short front held by two batteries of the Sixth North Lancashire and the Fifth Wiltshire regiments.

"The North Lancashire regiment was simply overwhelmed in the shallow trenches by sheer weight of numbers, while the Wiltshires, who were caught out in the open were literally almost annihilated," Gen. Hamilton says.

GEN. IAN HAMILTON.

"The ponderous mass of the enemy swept over the crest and swarmed around the Hampshires and Gen. Baldwin's brigade, which had to give ground, and were only extricated with great difficulty and heavy losses.

"Now it was our turn. The warships and the New Zealand and Australian artillery, an Indian mountain artillery brigade and the Sixty-ninth brigade royal field artillery were getting the chance of a lifetime. As successive solid lines of Turks topped the crest of the ridge, gaps were torn through their formation and an iron rain fell on them as they tried to reform in the gullies.

Turks Paid Dearly.

"Not here only did the Turks pay dearly for the recapture of the vital crest. Enemy reinforcements continued to move up under a heavy and accurate fire from our guns. Still they kept topping the ridges and pouring down the western slopes of Chunnuk Bahr as if determined to gain everything they had lost. But once they were over the crest they became exposed, not only to the full blast of the guns, naval and military, but a battery of ten New Zealand machine guns which played upon their serried ranks at close range until their barrels were red hot.

"Enormous losses were inflicted, and of the swarms which had once fairly crossed the crest line, only a handful ever struggled back to their own side of Chunnuk Bahr.

"At the same time strong forces of the enemy were hurled against the spurs to the northeast, where there arose a conflict so deadly that it may be considered the climax of four days' fighting for the ridge. Portions of line were pierced and the troops were driven down the hill. At the foot of the hill the men who supervised the transport of food and water were rallied by Staff Capt. Street. Unhesitatingly they followed him back, where they plunged again into the midst of that series of struggles in which generals fought in the ranks and men dropped their scientific weapons and caught one another by the throat.

Traditions Maintained.

"The Turks came on again and again. Fighting magnificently and calling upon the name of God, our men stood to it and maintained by many a deed of daring the old traditions of their race. There was no flinching; they died in the ranks where they stood. Here Gens. Cayley, Baldwin and Cooper and all their gallant men achieved great glory. On this bloody field fell Brig.-Gen. Baldwin, who earned his first laurels at Ladysmith. There, too, fell Brig.-Gen. Cooper, badly wounded.

"Toward this supreme struggle the absolute last two battalions from the general reserve were now hurried, but by 10 o'clock in the morning the effort of the enemy was spent. Soon their shattered remnants began to trickle back, leaving a stack of corpses behind. By night, except for prisoners or wounded, no live Turk was left upon our side of the slope."

Two lesser attacks were made the same day. Gen. Hamilton continues:

"By evening the total casualties of Gen. Birdwood's force had reached 12,000 and included a very large proportion of officers. The Thirteenth division of the new army under Maj.-Gen. Shaw had alone lost 6,000 out of a grand total of 10,500. Brig.-Gen. Baldwin was gone and of his staff men and commanding officers, thirteen had disappeared from the fighting effectives. The Warwicks and Worcesters had lost literally every officer.

"The old German notion that no unit could stand the loss of more than 25 per cent has been completely falsified. The Thirteenth division and the Twenty-ninth brigade of the Tenth Irish division had lost more than twice that and in spirit were game for as much more fighting as might be required."

DULUTH—SUPERIOR—VIRGINIA—HIBBING

ACCIDENT VICTIM DIES AT HOSPITAL

Andrew Dahl Succumbs to Injuries Received Saturday Night.

Andrew Dahl, 35, 1313 East Eighth street, injured last Saturday night in Duluth's first severe storm when his auto was hit by a trolley car, died at St. Luke's hospital last night shortly before 11:30 o'clock.

For two or three days Dahl has been unconscious most of the time and physicians had long since given up hope for his recovery, as he had sustained a severe skull fracture. His death is the first one due to traffic tangles this season.

At the time of the accident Dahl was driving west on Superior street, near Twenty-fifth avenue west. One wheel of his machine was inside the eastbound track and the deep snow prevented him from crossing to the north side of the street before the car struck him. A blinding snowstorm concealed the auto until the car was almost upon it.

Dahl was hurled through the windshield and out into the snow. Emil Harris, 517½ West Second street, the other occupant of the car, was slightly injured. Dahl was not a member of the Duluth Jitney association, but was driving his car for fares at the time of the collision.

He leaves a wife and three children, his parents, three brothers and a sister. Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Dahl, the parents; Edward, Roy and Alvin Dahl, the brothers; and Miss Myrtle Dahl, the sister, all live in Duluth.

The body was taken to Crawford & Sons undertaking rooms. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

HEADACHES

Thousands of men and women suffer from headaches every day, other thousands have headaches every week or every month, and still others have headaches occasionally, but not at regular intervals. The best Doctor is often unable to find the cause of many of these headaches, and in most other cases, knowing the cause, he does not know what will remove it, so as to give a permanent cure. All he can do is to prescribe the usual pain relievers, which give temporary relief, but the headache returns as usual, and treatment is again necessary. If you suffer from headaches, no matter what their nature, take anti-kamnia tablets, and the results will be satisfactory in the highest degree. You can obtain them at all druggists in any quantity, 10c worth, 25c worth or more. Ask for A-K Tablets.

SICK-HEADACHES

Sick-headache, the most miserable of all sicknesses, loses its terrors when A-K Tablets are taken. When you feel an attack coming on take two tablets, and in many cases, the attack will be warded off. During an attack take one A-K Tablet every two hours. The rest and comfort which follow, can be obtained in no other way.

Genuine A-K Tablets bear the K on package. At all druggists.

KNAPP DIES OF APOPLEXY

Well-Known Editor Passes Away Suddenly in New York Times Office.

C. W. Knapp Closely Identified With American Journalism Since 1867.

New York, Jan. 7.—Charles Welbourne Knapp, 68 years old, former editor and publisher of the St. Louis Republic, who became treasurer of the New York Times company last Monday, died of apoplexy yesterday afternoon, while seated at his desk in the Times' office. Less than ten minutes before, he had been in conversation with associates and apparently in the best of health. He was found dead by his assistant who had left the office only a few moments before. He evidently died instantly. The door was open between his office and another office which was occupied, but no sound from him was heard. He was found lying back in his chair, pen in hand.

Mr. Knapp's body will be taken to St. Louis for burial.

Last Newspaper Man of Knapp Family.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 7.—Charles Welbourne Knapp, treasurer of the New York Times, who died in New York yesterday, was the last newspaper man in the famous Knapp family that had been closely identified with the progress of American journalism since 1837.

For years editor and publisher of the St. Louis Republic and one of the organizers of the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers' association, he exerted a strong influence on western journalism.

He was president of the Associated Press in 1900 and was a member of its board of directors at the time of his death. From 1895 to 1899 he was president of the American Newspaper Publishers' association.

Mr. Knapp was born in St. Louis, Jan. 23, 1848, the son of John and Virginia (Wright) Knapp. He was graduated from St. Louis university when 18 years of age.

With Republic Forty-eight Years.

He had been actively connected with the St. Louis Republic for forty-eight years. His father, John Knapp, and his uncle, George Knapp, owned the paper when he entered its service, and he succeeded them in the control of the property.

Mr. Knapp entered the service of the Republic, then the Missouri Republican in 1867. He became president of the publishing company in 1887, and his resignation to accept the treasurership of the New York Times was announced in the Republic Dec. 24, 1915. He continued a member of the Republic directorate.

Mr. Knapp was one of the executive committee of nine that had actual direction of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition of 1904.

QUEEN MOTHER SERVES COFFEE TO THE SOLDIERS

QUEEN ALEXANDRA, Mother of King George V.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

London, Dec. 12.—Queen Alexandra, mother of King George V, has taken a particular interest in the work of the soldiers' canteens which furnish coffee and sandwiches free to all men in uniform at the principal London railway stations. On several occasions the queen mother has insisted on taking a turn at the coffee urn, serving the customary hour-and-a-half trick with the other voluntary workers at one or another of the stations. The soldiers seldom recognize her highness for some time, and she takes especial delight in serving them incognito and receiving their "Thank you, missus," just as it is given to the other workers in the canteen.

Perhaps the best of the queen's customers was a Kentish farmer who looked in at the London Bridge station canteen one foggy night. He was evidently neither a soldier nor sailor, and was distinctly not in uniform. But somebody whispered to him that the queen mother was serving coffee. He approached one of the other waitresses and asked if, supposing he gave a little money to the cause, the queen would give him a cup of coffee with her own hand. Queen Alexandra readily consented. So the farmer from Kent had his coffee and then, coming inside the counter, he wrote out a check for $25.

Soon after he took his train for Kent, and the next thing heard from him was in the form of a check for $250, being money which he had raised in subscriptions among his neighbors. A fortnight later he appeared in person with $125 more, and declared that he was not going to rest until he had brought his total contribution up to $1,000.

PLAN AID FOR PRISONERS

International Red Cross Starts Movement in Geneva.

Co-operation of All Belligerents Will Be Asked.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Geneva, Switzerland, Dec. 4.—A movement has been started in Geneva to make more adequate provision for the welfare of prisoners in detention camps of the various belligerent countries. The present winter is bringing with it increased suffering and hardship to countless thousands of men, and these it is proposed to endeavor to alleviate.

It is a well-known fact that there were insufficient preparations in the beginning for dealing with such large numbers of interned men, both soldiers and civilians, as rapidly became necessary to care for, and as a result living conditions in many detention camps today entail suffering and sickness to a degree realized only by actual observers.

The International Red Cross Committee of Geneva is behind this movement, and headquarters for the conduct of the work have been established at La Petite Pierriere, Chambesy, near Geneva. The main object is to succor suffering prisoners of war. It is believed that the admission into each civil and military camp of special delegates belonging to neutral countries would be of great assistance in bringing about an improvement of existing conditions, without in any way interfering with the necessary local organization and discipline. These neutral delegates are to be chosen from the professions, such as doctors, lawyers, etc. They are to make themselves useful in many ways at the camps where they are to have the privilege of free access and sojourning for a specified length of time.

It is felt by the promoters of this idea that, inasmuch as each belligerent country has an equal interest in establishing and maintaining a wise and just method of meeting detention camp requirements, and at the same time to mitigate the suffering of the captives and the anxieties of their relatives, that the governments concerned will meet with them on the common ground of humanity and help. The actual negotiations with the states in question, looking to the carrying of this project into effect, will be undertaken by the international committee.

FINDS SENTIMENT FOR LA FOLLETTE

North Dakotan Says State Republicans Are for Badger First.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Making a trip over a greater part of the state recently and keeping closely in touch with the presidential situation both personally and by correspondence, a well-known state official announces that the Republicans are for La Follette, Cummins, Root, Hughes and Burton in the order named, with quite a sprinkling for Taft.

"I find that La Follette, despite the fact that he has lost ground greatly since four years ago, when he had the delegation from this state, still occupies a strong position in the hearts of the voters, and I believe an effective campaign in his behalf could again win him the delegation.

Cummins Is Second.

"Next to La Follette, Cummins is the strongest candidate. The defection from La Follette appears to have gone to the Iowan. It will require greater effort on the part of Cummins to land the delegation from North Dakota than it will for La Follette, but Cummins can win if the proper effort is made. I find the insurgents quite divided in their favoritism between these two men with an occasional booster for Borah.

"Among the stalwarts, sentiment is overwhelmingly in favor of Root. Were Root a decade younger he would be the man of the hour, but his age is a serious handicap despite his exceptional mental activity and virility at his age. Were Hughes really a candidate there would undoubtedly be fore-sentiment for him, but it is generally believed he is not seeking the place. Burton of Ohio is regarded as a kind of a last-choice candidate, not because of his personality, which does not appear to appeal, but rather for the reason he is supposed to stand for the things the stalwarts want. There are many stalwart Republicans who have kindly things to say of Taft, whose ability appears to be appreciated more as time passes, but Taft's reciprocity measure found no answering echo in North Dakota and lost him the friends he should have had.

Some Bryan Sentiment.

"The Democrats are largely, of course, for Wilson, still there is quite a strong Bryan sentiment in the state. There are others opposed to Wilson and not particularly enthusiastic over Bryan, who believe Champ Clark would make a dandy man for the Democrats to run.

"On the whole my investigations have led me to be greatly astonished at the lack of enthusiasm and interest in the presidential situation as compared to the same period four years ago. I attribute it to the elimination of Roosevelt, who was at high tide at that time and is now scarcely ever mentioned."

MANY FINAL PROOFS NOW BEING MADE

Baudette, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—W. F. Steffes, U. S. land commissioner, was busy this week making final proofs and land filings. Frank Lowe, Frank Crabtree, both of Carp, Raymond Lee of Hackett, proved up on their claims. Charles Farber of Pequot, Minn.; Henry S. Manni of Pitt, Herbert C. Henry of Pa., Antonio Scavo of Williams and James McKay of Maple Lakefiled on claims in this vicinity.

The farmers are busy filling timber contracts, and a great many will be able to take some of last season's cut as well as this if the roads continue to remain in as good a condition as they are now.

HOT TEA BREAKS A COLD—TRY THIS

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Advertisement.

FIXES STATUS OF PUBLIC LIBRARY

North Dakota Concern's Position Defined By New Law.

Valley City, N. D., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The action of the last legislature in placing all the educational institutions under the newly created board of regents and also in placing the state public library under that board seems to fix the status of the state public library as a part of the educational system of the state.

Considerable interest has been aroused among the state educators as to what ruling the state board of regents will make on this subject. It is presumed the public library will be correlated and co-ordinated with the educational work in North Dakota and it will have a permanent and fixed recognition.

For some years the smaller state educational institutions, especially the state normals, have made excellent use of the state public library, not only while the students were at the normals but also after they had left and assumed their positions, especially in rural school work.

Invades Another's Field.

The state university and the state agricultural libraries have to some extent invaded what is generally regarded as the distinctive field of the state public library. The agricultural college was especially active up to three years ago, since which time it has to a great degree confined its work to other lines. The state university library has been especially active during the last two or three years.

Educators assume the state board of regents will not permit duplication and a conflict in the work of the libraries under its control. It is generally assumed the state public library will be permitted to occupy its distinctive field and the librarians of the university and the agricultural college will be restricted to the work which will give technical information along the lines of instruction at their respective institutions. There is undoubtedly a great field for this technical and specific information. A duplication by them of the work of the state public library would be regarded as unfortunate and certainly as conflicting.

BIG BEMIDJI TEAM TO AGAIN ORGANIZE

Bemidji, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Big Bemidg basket ball team has again been organized and will hold first practice in the city hall this evening. Although it is late in the season to begin practice, the team will be strengthened by Lloyd Tanner, a Bemidji high school player, who has left the team of that institution to play with the big team as forward. Cameron, the center of the high school team, may also play with the big team, and some of the other material that will try out for positions will be: Glen Peck, guard and center on the Big Bemidg team for the past four years; William Berrigan, center of the Big Bemidg team last year; Dr. Joseph Diedrick, formerly a guard of the University of Minnesota team; John Burke, formerly a player on the Notre Dame college team; Fred Graham, guard on the Bemidji high school team of last year; Ed Ripple, former high school player; Paul Howe, forward on the Big Bemidg team for the past three years, and others.

Practice for basket shooting will be held in the city hall and the games will be played in the armory. A schedule will soon be arranged which will include the fastest teams in Minnesota, and the team expects to be playing hard games before the end of the month. No manager or captain has been selected, but a captain will probably be named this evening.

CATHCART TO APPEAL.

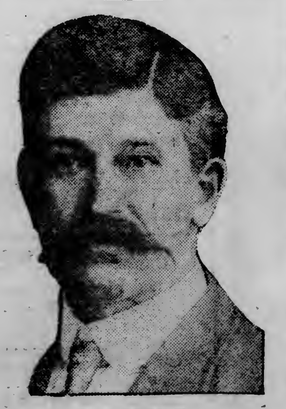

Will Ask Higher Court to Pass on Old Baudette Ownership.

Baudette, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—William Cathcart, Sr., lost in the first round in the courts in connection with the controversy as to who is the owner of Old Baudette. The Canadian Northern railroad claims the land from a government title through a special act of congress and Mr. Cathcart claims it by right of a squatter. There are houses on the land but none has been able to buy lots on account of the dispute. Judge Stanton of Bemidji gave a decision in favor of the railroad, but Mr. Cathcart will appeal to the supreme court.

Red Trail Bridge Work.

WELL-KNOWN MERCHANT INDORSES SIMONDS SAWS

N. F. NELSON.

Mr. N. F. Nelson, 5628 Grand Ave., one of Duluth's leading hardware merchants, carries one of the most complete stocks of high-grade hardware in Duluth.

In an interview yesterday, Mr. Nelson said: "I try very hard to give my patrons the very best goods at the most reasonable prices. I take particular care of my tool department, buying only the best grades of standard brands. My stock of Simonds Saws gives particular satisfaction. My customers tell them that for fast, easy cutting and stay-sharp steel, no saw in the world can compete with the Simonds. I strongly recommend it."

Mr. Nelson is the pioneer hardware merchant of West Duluth, and has been a resident of Duluth since 1888.

Since 1832—for 84 years—Simonds has been making steel products, but Simonds Saws are sold on merit, not on tradition. Simonds Saws have always borne the same guarantee: "You can't own a Simonds Saw and be dissatisfied." —Advertisement.

LUXURIES IN DEMAND

Prosperity Brings Better Patronage to Commission Men.

Butter and Eggs Lower; First Florida Strawberries Arrive.

That the recent spell of cold and stormy weather extended over a wide area of country was shown in the fact that receipts of California fruits and vegetables here were cut down somewhat. Dealers think, however, that this condition is only temporary, and they are looking forward to a greatly extended movement within the next few days.

That a definite era of prosperity has been ushered in is considered to be attested in the present greatly augmented demand for edibles that a year ago were generally classed as luxuries.

Oranges and apples are the features in the fruit market just now, according to the Fitzsimmons-Palmer company, the Culbertson Bros. Fruit company and the Stacy-Merrill Fruit company. Oranges in peck lots are said to be relatively the cheapest fruit on the market just now. Marketings of California navels have been setting records so far this season. While apple quotations are unchanged, their market is firm, with a substantial sale being met with. The first Florida strawberries of the season were received today and are being offered at 55 cents a quart. They are later than a year ago in making their appearance. That is ascribed to wet weather conditions at their points of origin.

Sales of grapefruits continue to increase, the volume being now the largest on record here at this season.

Potatoes Going Up.

In the vegetable list a substantial advance has come about in California celery today, but that is thought to be only temporary, being due to wet weather conditions out there.

Minnesota potatoes have moved up to $1 a bushel, and are now 25 cents higher than a year ago. That is ascribed to the colder weather affecting the movement, and a sharp demand starting in after the beginning of the year.

Decline in Butter.

Consumers will be pleased to discover that the butter market is still on the downward trend, the creamery produce being quoted at 32@34 cents a pound. That has been brought about through a slight increase in current production and liberal supplies being carried in the associated warehouses, so the Bridgeman-Russell company and the Victor Produce company say.

Storage eggs are also down a cent at 23@24 cents a dozen, and the market in strictly fresh eggs is easier. The decline in storage eggs is due to the desire of dealers to reduce their holdings in view of the fact that the fresh article is likely to become more of a factor from now on. Dealers aver that receipts of fresh eggs are increasing, and that if the cold weather is not unduly extended, they will not be such a luxury in a month from now. Poultry-raising is conceded to be on a much larger scale in this district, and shipments of eggs from here to the East are expected to show material expansion during the coming season.

The market in meats has been advancing of late, with lamb and mutton in particular skyrocketing. They have taken a shoot up to the extent of 4@5 cents a pound. Poultry prices are firm, with receipts of live poultry nearly cut off through the cold weather. Frozen stock was therefore supplied quite largely by dealers this week.

WANTS FACTS AS TO TARIFF

National Chamber of Commerce Urges Tariff Commission.

Says Business Men of All Parties Demand Such Body.

Washington, Jan. 7.—To prevent frequently recurring disturbances due to friction between government and business—disturbances which it is declared have no excuse in any orderly system of national government, a permanent tariff commission is advocated by the chamber of commerce of the United States. This is one of the earliest subjects which came before that body when it was organized, and during the spring of 1913, in a referendum taken among the 343 commercial organizations then in the membership of the chamber, the votes cast were 715 in favor of a commission and 9 opposed. Each organization was entitled to from 1 to 10 votes according to the number of its membership. In 1915, the delegates in the third annual meeting unanimously reaffirmed the position determined in the referendum. At this meeting the delegates represented 260 commercial organizations.

Not a Political Issue.

By way of adding to arguments in favor of a permanent tariff commission, the chamber declares in a pamphlet just issued that the proposal is not political. It asserts that before the tariff revision of 1909 was determined upon, a commission was urged by advocates regardless of party. In 1911 the members of the house committee on ways and means—the committee in which party lines are most closely drawn, the committee which bears the burden of the present method of formulating a new tariff, and the committee which accordingly understands most completely the inadequacy of the facts upon which tariff bills are now based—unanimously approved a bill for a permanent commission. Champ Clark, at the time the minority leader of the house and since speaker, said: "The demand for such a board is insistent and increasing. In fact, it is widespread and, in my judgment, should be heeded."

Where Business Is Concerned.

For sixty years the tariff has been a source of constant friction between government and business, the national chamber document points out. Whatever the tariff policy determined through national elections, its application by congress has been accompanied by controversies regarding facts of industry and commerce. As these facts have seldom been authoritatively ascertained, business men, regardless of political beliefs, find their enterprises menaced by legislation based upon data which is inaccurate and incomplete. Under such conditions consideration of new tariff legislation inevitably causes apprehension and uncertainty throughout the entire business world.

Universal recognition is accorded to these circumstances. In calling congress into extraordinary session for the last revision of the tariff, the president declared that among his purposes was a desire "that the busines interests of the country may not be kept too long in suspense as to what the fiscal changes are to be to which they will be required to adjust themselves."

Business Unsettlement.

The national chamber pamphlet says: "A periodic unsettlement of the material progress of the country without reason or explanation in economic conditions imposes a burden which is repugnant to every dictate of business efficiency and every principle of statesmanship. The frequency with which these dislocations of normal conditions occur is indicated by the dates of recent enactments—1890, 1894, 1897, 1909, 1913. All of these enactments affected the entire range of American industrial and commercial enterprise. Worse still, these laws establish no discernible rule of general applicability, while every one of them has been criticized on the ground that it contains gross discriminations against particular industries and grants corresponding abnormal advantages for others.

"Tariff legislation as now conducted gives rise to more irritation, to more suspicion of legislative willingness to discriminate on behalf of local or private interests, and to more undemocratic procedure than any other source in American life."

"Should Be Fixed By Facts."

"Whatever the policy which congress means to pursue, the tariff should be fixed by facts," is a conclusion of the national chamber pamphlet. "The legislative function is to apply a policy to facts. A permanent tariff commission will, for the first time in the history of the country, ascertain the facts authoritatively, make them as well known as the legislative policy which is to be applied to them, and so enable congress to give to tariff legislation the definiteness which should be the first requisite of all legislation."

SETTLE THE MUKDEN BOMB CONTROVERSY

China and Japan Have Come to Terms—Press Not Pleased.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Pekin, Nov. 22.—Announcement has been made of the settlement of the Mukden bomb incident, about which negotiations between Japan and China have centered for months. The three Chinese students who were arrested by Japanese officials and held on a charge of having dynamited the shop of a Japanese medicine dealer last summer are to be turned over to the Chinese authorities.

However, the conditions under which these students are to be surrendered to the Chinese are very distasteful to Chinese newspapers, which are commenting upon them with much bitterness.

Under the terms of the agreement, China is to pay $20,000, Mexican, indemnity to the medicine dealer in whose shop the bomb exploded. Wang Lo-min, the Chinese whom the Japanese now accuse of having caused the explosion is to be arrested, tried and punished according to the evidence collected by the Japanese police. The right of the Japanese to review the judgment passed on the prisoner is reserved by the Japanese authorities. Punishment is to be meted out to the Mukden chief of police, and to all his subordinates as a warning that they must preserve order.

It is contended by the Chinese newspapers that the medicine dealer whose shop was dynamited was really a dealer in opium and one of the many Japanese charged with violating the Chinese law against the opium traffic. Mukden is in Chinese territory and consequently the Chinese resent sharply the Japanese assumption of jurisdiction in that city.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

ENGLISH FOOD COST IS UP 44 PER CENT

London Says Berlin Increase Is 61 Per Cent.

London, Dec. 7.—Food prices in England show a general increase of 44 per cent since the war began, according to statistics by the board of trade. Sugar is double the price it commanded in July, 1914; tea is about 50 per cent dearer; British meat has increased 40 and imported meat 50 per cent; flour 46 per cent, bread 40 per cent, and bacon, milk, butter and cheese about 30 per cent.

Taking the country as a whole and considering the relative importance of the various foods, the difference in the cost of maintaining the table in a home of moderate circumstances is 44 per cent higher than before the war.

Between Nov. 1 and Dec. 1 of 1915, retail prices of food rose less than 2 per cent. The average increase between the prices of Dec. 1, 1915, and the same date of 1914 show an average rise of 24 per cent.

Figures compiled by the Berlin municipal statistical bureau show that in Berlin between Nov. 1, 1914, and Nov. 1, 1915, the cost of ordinary foods advanced 61 per cent, while the difference between the past September and October prices came to 8.3 per cent.

LEE FOR BURNQUIST; MAY SUPPORT HIM

But Former Candidate for Governor Disapproves of Some Methods Used to Get Harmony in the Party.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 7.—William E. Lee, Republican candidate for governor in the 1914 campaign, in a statement yesterday expressed his confidence in Governor J. A. A. Burnquist and in his ability to work out an affirmative policy that will win him popular support.

If Mr. Burnquist "makes good" as Mr. Lee expects, the Long Prairie man declared he will be a supporter of the new governor in the coming campaign.

In his statement Mr. Lee expressed disapproval of some methods used to get party harmony.

UNCLE SAM RUNS TRAINS

Success of Second Government Railway Pleases Officials.

Arizona Road Capital Refused to Build Is in Operation.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Successful operation of a government-owned railroad, which private interests could not be persuaded to build, is causing much satisfaction to interior department officials. The line, extending twenty-five miles from Yuma, Ariz., to the Mexican boundary line through the Yuma valley, has been in operation daily since February, and has carried 300,000 tons of rock besides frequent shipments of other freight which are increasing. Passenger traffic has been light, owing to the unpopulated region through which the road runs, but considerable progress has been made in the settlement of the country, and a townsite eighteen miles from Yuma has been opened.

Construction of the railroad, the second government-owned line, was deemed a necessity by officials of the United States reclamation service. They had been unsuccessful in efforts to interest private capital, which considered the prospect doubtful for the payment even of its expenses. As a system of rock revetment was required by the Yuma valley reclamation project, the engineers decided the material could be placed economically only by use of a track laid upon the levee which protects the Yuma valley from the overflow of the Colorado river. Work was begun April 9, 1914, and the first spike driven May 1 of that year. The summer of 1914 delayed construction work, but it was completed to the Mexican boundary in February, 1915. The line is twenty-five and one-half miles long, including sidings.

Equipment of the road consists of a gasoline motor car bearing in bold letters the inscription: "United States Reclamation Service, Yuma Valley Line." The car carries seventy passengers and makes regular trips daily to the boundary and return from Yuma. A contract has been made with a transcontinental railroad for joint use of tracks at Yuma. Carload shipments destined for the Yuma valley are taken over by the reclamation service and carried on its line, charges being regulated by the interstate commerce commission.

ABUNDANCE OF FRESH FACTS.

First Aid to Happiness and Prosperity In the New Year.

Among the first aids to a happy and prosperous New Year there is always the World Almanac. This standard reference book, fresh from the presses and bearing the date 1916, is now available to purchasers. A peep into the book shows that it comes to the public bringing, according to its annual custom, not only the election returns, crop reports, business figures, sporting records and other statements and statistics covering the transactions of the year just passed, but the abundance of fresh facts and features necessary to keeping up with a world that moves.

The great war in Europe receives attention in a summary of events and a chronological table. At another extreme of public interest, the development of the motion picture business is considered. There are two pages about woman suffrage achievements and the recent vote. The substance is given of the Constitution rejected at the New York polls last November. And among the other and unnumbered subjects of special attention are these:

Widowed mothers' pensions, political platforms, congressional committees, state legislation in the United States, peave movements, the Lincoln highway from New York to San Francisco and the Dixie highway from the lakes to the gulf, war relief societies, armed strength of the world, manufacture of munitions and explosives, 1915 state census, diplomats dismissed from the United States, national reading circle, public, society and school libraries in the United States, women's compensation laws, Gary school system, health laws in New York city, the automobile industry, naval advisory board, public school system in New York city, unemployed in New York city.

As to things not to be found in this almanac, it seems almost likely that there are not any such things. Anyway, one must go out of his way to discover them.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentation and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results. —Advertisement.

KILLED BY LOCOMOTIVE

Oscar F. Brosell Decapitated By Northern Pacific Engine.

Section Man Reported to Have Been Hard of Hearing.

Oscar F. Brosell, 118 North Twenty-second avenue west, was killed at 7:25 this morning, being decapitated by a Northern Pacific engine near Garfield avenue as he was crossing the tracks on his way to work.

It was reported that he was hit by a morning passenger train but this is denied by the claim agent of the road, who would vouchsafe no further information.

Mr. Brosell, who was a section hand, was hard of hearing, it is said, and evidently did not hear the train approaching. At any rate he failed to hear the warning whistle, was struck, knocked under the wheels and his head was cut off.

Mr. Brosell is survived by his widow and three grown children. The latter are Hannah, Fred and Henry Brosell, all residing in Duluth. Mr. Brosell came to Duluth thirty-five years ago from Sweden, and has resided here ever since. The body was taken to Stewart's undertaking room.

Mrs. Brosell was overcome by the shock of the terrible news, and is under the care of a physician.

PASSENGERS LANDED

ship were pumped out and the steamer proceeded on her voyage.

Rough seas and gales were encountered from Dec. 22 to Dec. 28, when the Thessaloniki ran into a 90-mile hurricane which lasted for twenty-four hours. Many of the passengers and crew feared the steamer was sinking. Fresh leaks were opened up and the boiler and engine room and coal bunkers rapidly filled with water.

S. O. S. Calls Sent.

It was then that the ship sent out numerous S. O. S. calls which were heard by the Patris, United States, Florizel and other steamers. The Florizel was the first to reach the disabled vessel and offered to take off the passengers and crew and carry them to Bermuda. Capt. Goulandis, who was making his first voyage as a master, declined this offer. The Florizel stood by until the Patris came in sight.

The Thessaloniki's passengers were transferred to the Patris with considerable difficulty and were forced to leave all of their baggage and personal belongings on the disabled vessel. After the transfer the Patris shot a line to the Thessaloniki and took her sister ship in tow on Jan. 1. The wind increased greatly during the night and early in the following morning the tow line parted. That afternoon the Patris succeeded in getting another line to the Thessaloniki, but the cable parted for a second time early on the morning of Jan. 3 and the Thessaloniki was driven rapidly to the southeast before a terrific hurricane, accompanied by a blinding snowstorm.

Owing to the Thessaloniki's engines being stopped by the water in the ship's hold she was only able to send out infrequent wireless calls which covered a small area.

Capt. Goulandis said he had been unable to make solar observations by reason of the almost continuous storms and it was for this reason, he added, that he sent out six erroneous messages regarding the position of his vessel.

Refused to Call For Aid.

The captain of the Thessaloniki repeatedly refused to send out wireless calls for aid at the behest of both crew and passengers, according to William William, a naturalized citizen of the United States, who was a passenger returning from Greece. William said:

"The Thessaloniki left Piraeus Nov. 16. On December 21 the first severe storm came up and the first the passengers knew there was anything amiss was when all the crew was ordered below to work on something that had gone wrong. Many passengers became alarmed and on Dec. 22, when the Italian liner Stampalia was sighted, several of them went to the captain and asked that they be transferred. He assured them that everything was all right and that they would arrive in New York on time. That storm lasted more than twelve hours.

"On Dec. 26, another storm came up. One of the lifeboats was carried away. Several passengers and members of the crew went to the captain and asked that wireless calls for aid be sent out. He was indignant, saying he was running the ship and knew his business and refused to send out any call.

First Officer Sent Calls.

"Later all the officers and crew, except the first engineer and two sailors, demanded that the captain send out messages. He refused and the first officer then sent out the calls.

"When the Florizel came in sight on Friday, we were living on short rations and half a cup of water a day. We had no meat for two weeks, although there were vegetables and bread.

"When the Patris came up on Dec. 31, the captain and a few men went to the other ship. He brought back ten casks of water and a supply of meat. All this time the vessel was leaking badly, but the captain seemed determined to take his ship and passengers to New York.

"On New Year's day, however, he gave up hope and the passengers were transferred to the Patris.

"There was much trouble among the steerage passengers when they learned the ship was leaking, but a Greek priest, Kallistratos Glaves of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, went among them and stayed until they were transferred. He quieted them and held services much of the time."

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Hurry, Mother! Remove Poisons From Little Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Bilious or Feverish.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

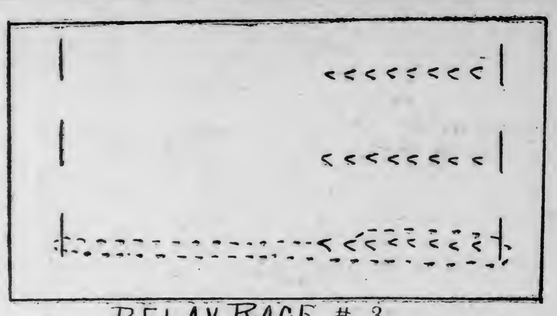

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that it's little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

SOME WINTER SPORTS

Written for The Herald By J. R. Batchelor, City Recreational Director—No. 12—Relay Race.

In Relay Race No. 3 the teams line up at one end of the ice at the command "Go!" The first man of each team skates around an object at the other end of the ice and back around an object back of his team and forward again to touch the second man on the team, who does likewise and so on until all have skated. The first team to complete the course wins.

This race may also be skated in pairs, threes and fours.

SPLIT IN COMMONS MAY CAUSE BREAK

and a definite and regular opposition emerges at the same moment. Such are the consequences, deeply regrettable, of which many of us have consistently warned the government since the conscriptionists' agitation began."

The Guardian demands positive evidence that compulsion is necessary, saying at the same time that the national cause is paramount over other considerations. It says the figures of the Derby recruiting campaign as given out by the government do not convince it, as they have not convinced the labor party. These figures, the Guardian contends, have made out a case for further examination rather than for action without examination.

Text of Bill.

The text of the military service bill was made public today. The publication shows that the only provision of the measure not amply outlined in Premier Asquith's speech regarding it is one for a penalty of imprisonment not exceeding six months for persons making false statements in order to obtain exemption certificates, and a fine of £50 for failure to notify the authorities should there be change in the circumstances upon which the certificate was granted.

Election Last Resort.

There seems little doubt that a general election will be the very last measure resorted to by the government to obtain the desired "general consent" to the establishment of the attenuated form of compulsion provided for in the pending military service bill. That such general consent would be obtained by an appeal to the country is admitted by virtually every one, but the belief is expressed in many quarters that it can be won without such an upheaval.

The Westminster Gazette emphasizes the fact that only forty-five members of the house of commons opposed the measure. It thinks the majority can be convinced of the necessity of enacting the law and that the threat to national unity will be removed by free debate in the later stages of the bill's course through parliament.

Given First Reading.

Amid scenes of wild enthusiasm, the house of commons last night passed the first reading of the government bill for compulsory military service by the decisive vote of 403 to 105.

The vote came shortly before midnight, with the galleries again packed, every seat on the floor of the house occupied, the ministerial benches filled and an air of eager expectancy prevailing. The events of the day had increased the tension to a high pitch, notably the action of the labor congress, and the quick sequel of the retirement of three labor members of the ministry.

It was reserved for A. J. Balfour, first lord of the admiralty, to close the debate in behalf of the government, and he did it in a persuasive appeal of half an hour, which roused the lagging spirits of the advocates of the bill and turned the tide of adversity which had been running against the measure through the debate and the outside events of the day.

"Let this vote tonight show that we are a united people," was his closing appeal. "Do not let us give a false impression to the world, that in the moment of the country's greatest emergency we are divided against one another. Abandon your abstract theories and remember we are dealing with stern realities which call for great sacrifices."

Interest Intense.

Then came the vote which was taken amid eager interest as the members filed before the tellers and peers crowded to their galleries to witness the final result. The announcement of the figures was received with a tremendous outburst of cheering, which rang through the chamber and was echoed to the waiting crowds outside.

Scores of members in khaki waved their handkerchiefs and the air was rent with white papers flung in triumph at the government's success.

Amid the demonstration, Premier Asquith, his face usually pale, now glowing with satisfaction, walked down the floor of the house to present the bill formally to the chamber. His appearance was the signal for a rapturous ovation, members of all sides standing and cheering, while the galleries could with difficulty be restrained from joining in the enthusiasm.

Analysis of Vote.

An analysis of the vote showed that the government had held the great bulk of the Liberal and Conservative vote. The Irish Nationalists had voted against the bill, but the Irish Unionists supported the measure, and the O'Brienites took no part in the division.

The minority showed a sprinkling of Liberal members, the most notable being John Burns, the former cabinet member. A number of labor members also voted with the opposition.

Mr. Balfour's closing speech was the one notable feature of the debate. He spoke with great earnestness, but with good-natured confidence, which kept the members between applause and laughter. This measure, he declared, was not designed to settle the military policy of Great Britain. It was for the present occasion and the present war.

PEACE PARTY IS KNOWN BY NUMBER

pected that delegates from a large number of neutral countries will gather at The Hague for a protracted peace conference.

Known Only By Number.

Each member of the party is known only by a number. Each man or woman of the party throughout the trip in Germany must occupy the seat in the train bearing the number given him or her. Each number will correspond with one placed on each passport by the German consul at Copenhagen, and one in the hands of the authorities of the railroad.

The German railroad officials have explained that owing to the need of coaches for transporting wounded, the accommodations for the Ford delegates must be limited. They therefore would be without sleeping or dining cars. At the Benthein frontier in Holland, everybody aboard the train will be subjected to a personal search. The Hague will be reached Saturday.

IS CONSIDERED BY THE CABINET

the Austrian government was without information concerning the incident up to the night of Jan. 4, and from Consul Garrels at Alexandria, Egypt, stating that he had obtained affidavits from twenty-one survivors and that all confirmed previous statements that "no warning was given and no vessel was seen."

Ambassador Penfield's dispatch added that Baron Burian, the Austrian foreign minister, had asked what information concerning the incident was in possession of the United States.

Crew Go to England.

Officers and crew of the Persia, Consul Garrels reported, have left Alexandria for England. Their affidavits will be sought upon their arrival there.

As the cabinet assembled it was made plain that the members agreed with the president that in the case of the Persia nothing can be done until all the facts were at hand. Some members expressed the opinion that it might never be learned whether the Persia was sunk by a submarine and if so what nation was responsible.

Regardless of the outcome of the Persia case, however, the majority of the cabinet members are represented as believing that the time has come for making certain that no further attacks on merchant ships carrying Americans will be made.

The Persia incident was taken up only briefly at the cabinet meeting because Secretary Lansing had no definite recommendation to make in the absence of specific facts.

No Vessel Seen.

Consul Garrels at Alexandria, Egypt, today advised the state department that he had secured affidavits from twenty-one survivors of the Persia, including Charles H. Grant, an American citizen, and that all confirmed previous statements that "no warning was given and no vessel was seen."

The Austro-Hungarian government until yesterday was without information concerning the sinking of the Persia, according to a dispatch received today by the state department from Ambassador Penfield at Vienna.

Ambassador Penfield's dispatch was dated yesterday and contained only informal information in response to his inquiry as to whether the Austro-Hungarian government has knowledge of the sinking of the Persia, and, if so, what the circumstances were.

Officers and crew of the Persia, the consul advised, have left Alexandria for England, where their affidavits probably will be obtained on arrival.

Consul Garrels has been instructed to forward summaries of the affidavits he has obtained.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

A Mixture of Sage and Sulphur Darkens the Hair Beautifully and Evenly.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.—Advertisement.

FIGHT OVER CLAIM.

Action Involving Money Due Contractor P. McDonnell.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Jan. 7.—On Dec. 6 last a claim of P. McDonnell, Duluth contractor on State Rural Highway No. 3, was allowed in final payment and settlement at $9,551.58, by the county board. An appeal was taken by the county attorney at the request of seven taxpayers of Alvwood township. Now the Northern National Bank of Bemidji, assignee of the claim, has made a motion, through its attorney, Graham M. Torrance of that city, to become a party to the case and secure the release of the warrant upon filing a bond to protect the county against all loss. The motion will be argued at Bemidji today, and the case will be tried at the March term of court here, taxpayers now gathering evidence which will be submitted at that time. At the time of the settlement $1,000 was held back from Mr. McDonnell to pay expenses of completing the road. Taxpayers claim that $4,000 should be withheld for this purpose.

To Keep Chisholm Healthy.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS HIGHLY COMMENDED

Outlines Plan for Pan-American Alliance in Near Future.

Washington, Jan. 7.—President Wilson's address before the Pan-American Scientific congress last night, in which he outlined the government's plan for a Pan-American alliance guaranteeing absolute political independence and territorial integrity, was favorably commented upon by delegates today.

The United States proposes, the president said, that all the American nations shall agree to settle all pending boundary disputes as soon as possible by amicable process and to dispose of all disputes in the future by arbitration. Furthermore all countries under the plan would agree that no revolutionary expedition shall be outfitted against or supplies for revolutionists shipped to neighboring states.

Announcement of the selection of Lima, Peru, as the meeting place of the next congress in 1921 was regarded by the delegates as an evidence of the desire for closer relations among the American republics.

Sessions of the various sections of the congress today were brief. The congress will close tomorrow with a joint meeting when resolutions and suggestions evolved in sectional meetings will be taken up.

Last year Germany launched six steamers of more than 10,000 tons, the largest being of about 56,000 tons gross.

INJUNCTION WILL RESULT

Council Notified That the Armory Cannot Be Kept for Social Hall.

Taxpayers Threaten Appeal to Courts If Referendum Succeeds.

Several big taxpayers of Duluth have notified Mayor Prince and members of the city commission that they will enjoin the council from using the old armory as an essembly hall and social center for workingmen, in the event it is not sold to the Shriners.

"We are unable to divulge the names of these persons or corporations," said Mayor Prince this morning, "but they notified us a week ago that an injunction will be sought to prevent the city from using the old armory for the purposes advocated by some persons.

"They claim that the city has no authority to spend money on the armory for an assembly hall and social center and that the charter makes no provision for the spending of the taxpayers' money for such purposes. As a result, they threaten to bring proceedings in district court to stop us, in case we decide not to sell to the Shriners."

William E. McEwen, postmaster, has started a referendum against the ordinance authorizing the sale of the armory.

"This threat is made," said the mayor, "to stop the referendum petition. These interests say that they will start the suit if the council should order the armory remodeled into a social hall, whether or not it is favored by a majority of the voters at the special election.

"I, for one, feel that the city has no right to authorize the expenditure of money for a social hall and that the sale of the building is the best business move undertaken by the city for years."

Postmaster McEwen said yesterday that a petition will be circulated shortly and that it will be filed before the ordinance goes into effect on Feb. 5.

DRAINAGE OPENS UP NEW TERRITORY

Many New Settlers Locating South of Warroad, Minn.

Warroad, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The vast territory south of this village, made possible for farming by the drainage system of ditch No. 62, is fast being settled. Thursday a party of eight from Menomonie, Wis., filed on homesteads in that section. The party consisted of W. Roach, John Miles and Charles Barber, Charles Wait, Leon Roach, Paul Sheriff, Billie Roewell. Most of them have families and expect to return here next June to commence their homestead duties.

The total distance of state road No. 1, from Warroad to Pelan, is fifty and a half miles, exclusive of the portion within villages. There are thirty-three miles of gravel and gravel surfaced road, thirteen and one-tenth miles of improved earth roads, four miles of partially improved earth and three and five-tenths miles of unimproved earth roads.

School opened up again Thursday morning after the holidays with the following new teachers to fill the vacancies caused by those who resigned, High school, Mrs. Martha Dana, and Miss Rose Damberg in the sixth grade.

CAN USE DIPPER NOW.

Two Sent to Work Farm for Misuse of Cups at Station.

If you want to have a social drink on a train, don't use the paper cups provided by the porter.

That's what William Lanz, 36, and Joseph Bennett, 33, attempted to do last night at the Endion depot, while the Duluth & Iron Range train was taking on passengers.

Special Officer Nick Christiansen saw them go to the window, near the cup rack, and take out the paper cups. Curious, he continued to watch, and when one of them produced a flask, he interfered.

Judge Smallwood fined them $10 and costs apiece in municipal court today, and in lieu of a fine, they will serve twenty days at the work farm.

Undermuslin Styles Have Changed--

You See Many Clever Proofs at Gray's White Sale

Vogue says "Though latitude is the assured feature of lingerie, Longitude is a thing of the past." Garments may be white or they may be delicately tinted—their materials may be of a dozen different weaves of silk or cotton, but shortness, fineness and simplicity they all have.

All smart lingerie must be exquisitely fine in material, clever in design and trimmed with no less taste and skill than is a frock.

However plain it may be, lingerie which is hand embroidered possesses daintiness and distinction not to be found in machine-made elaboration.

The writer of the above might well be talking about Gray's lingerie, which is attracting so much favorable attention.

The reasonableness of Gray's White Sale prices is because the garments themselves are figured on the basis of June prices on fine cottons and embroideries.

OFFICIAL PAPER, CITY OF DULUTH

SUBSCRIPTION RATES—By mail, payable in advance, one month, 35 cents; three months, $1; six months, $2; one year, $4; Saturday Herald, $1 per year; Weekly Herald, $1 per year.

Daily by carrier, city and suburbs, 10 cents a week; 45 cents a month.

Subscribers will confer a favor by making known any complaint of service.

When changing the address of your paper, it is important to give both old and new addresses.

The Duluth Herald accepts advertising contracts with the distinct guarantee that it has the largest circulation in Minnesota outside the Twin Cities.

The Herald will be glad to have its attention called to any misleading or untrue statement which may appear in its news, editorial or advertising columns.

A HIGH-WATER MARK OF WEALTH.

The Duluth bank statements issued yesterday showed total deposits of nearly thirty millions—a gain of $1,370,829 over the last report, and the highest bank balance in the history of the city.

Also, and even more significant, the loans and discounts of $22,616,819 are $2,588,612, or over twelve per cent, greater than those shown in the previous report—and loans and discounts are an accurate register of business activity.

Just another straw showing that Duluth rounded into the new year on the flood tide of prosperity and good business.

San Francisco boasts of having fewer thunder storms than most places get. But most of us prefer occasional thunder storms to occasional seismic disturbances.

THE STEEL CORPORATION RAISES WAGES.

The United States Steel corporation gives very tangible evidence of its faith in the reality and permanence of the prevailing prosperity by announcing a wage increase that is far-reaching.

There is to be a ten per cent increase in the wages of all unskilled labor, and an equitably proportioned increase in other departments. "Adjustment in wage rates in our mining companies is under consideration." Evidently there are more detailed announcements to come.

The iron country faces the prospect of the greatest year in its history in the number of tons of ore moved and the number of men employed. That in itself means inevitable new prosperity for the mining country. If on top of that comes a sweeping wage increase, that makes the wave of new prosperity roll just that much higher for the range towns, Duluth and the agricultural country that feeds them.

Automobiles are said to be less deadly than formerly, but that quality has not yet been so far developed as to interfere seriously with the sales.

"CONNECT UP."

No matter how highly you may have polished the glass bulb of a high candle power electric light—no matter how carefully the wires may be adjusted inside of it—no matter how thoroughly the wire cavity may be sealed to prevent the entrance of air—YOUR LAMP WILL GIVE NO LIGHT UNLESS IT IS CONNECTED WITH A SOURCE OF ELECTRICAL CURRENT.

No matter how carefully you may have adjusted the parts of a powerful motor—no matter how well lubricated its bearings may be—no matter how cautious you are not to overload it—YOUR MOTOR WILL STAY AS MOTIONLESS AND AS USELESS AS AN OLD TIN CAN OR A RUBBISH PILE UNLESS IT IS CONNECTED WITH SOME SOURCE OF ELECTRICAL ENERGY.

You are mighily like the electric light globe and the electric motor.

No matter how well prepared you may be to show the results of energy—no matter how splendidly you may be able to work alone for a time—you will sooner or later find yourself in need of some inspiration from outside to charge with energy the potentialities within.

There will be times when you will "go stale;" times when you will have what are sometimes called "blue devils;" times when you won't have the "pep" or the "ginger" or the "punch" to do what you know you ought to do, and what you know you could do if you could only find some means of freshening up.

What you need then is some inspiration from outside yourself. Maybe it is needed in the form of a different viewpoint on life or some of its problems; maybe it is needed in the form of stinging, spurring words—words with a "punch."

Whatever form it might take, what you need is exactly what is needed by the darkened lamp and the idle motor. YOU NEED TO GET CONNECTED UP WITH SOME OUTSIDE SOURCE OF ENERGY.

One of the best means of accomplishing this is to read the words of some man with a magnetic personality and a tense power of expression.

Herbert Kaufman is such a man. He is a wonderful generator of human energy. He is a veritable powerhouse of dynamic inspiration. He grasps questions of the day and presents the human side of them with tremendous force. He understands men and he knows how to go about it to thrill them with his own power.

The Herald has made arrangements to publish the Kaufman writings in its Saturday editions, beginning tomorrow.

Do not fail to read his prose and poems of punch, power and purpose. None of them will be long, but every line will thrill with life and vigor.

By reading these articles you will "connect up" with one of the most marvelous distributors of dynamic power the world has ever known. They will give you some new, vivid and worth-while views on life. They will inspire you for your daily tasks. They will make life more worth the living because of these things.

Do not fail—CONNECT UP.

When other "pork" schemes run out, somebody might move to get the government to deepen Kelly pool.

IT WAS TIME SOMEBODY WAS ASKING.

The Minneapolis Tribune points out that nobody knows where Justice Hughes stands on any of the leading public issues, though he is widely talked of as a Republican candidate for president.

We have been wondering how long it would take to get around to that. Here Hughes has been talked of as a possible presidential nominee for many months, and nobody knows where he stands on anything—except that he has said that he doesn't want to be a candidate for president. For all anybody knows he may agree with President Wilson on nearly everything. Nobody knows—and apparently nobody has cared—whether he is for a high protective tariff or thinks the Underwood schedules high enough. Nobody knows whether he is for no preparedness at all, for the preparedness we now have, for a moderate increase as Wilson proposes, or for an immoderate increase as Roosevelt and others propose. Nobody knows what he thinks about Mexico.

In fact, where advocacy of Hughes has not been arrant hypocrisy, half concealing personal ambitions or simulating a progressiveness not inwardly felt, it has been based so solely and so sordidly on the mere hope of party victory involving recapture of the offices that nobody has bothered to inquire where Hughes stands on anything.

Yet surely we have not passed the time when that was a matter of some importance?

Another definition of "optimist:" Anybody who thought all congressmen would leave politics out of their discussions of questions growing out of the country's foreign relations.

CITY ADVISORY BOARDS.

The charter commission, according to a local story in The Herald last evening, is thinking of submitting a charter amendment restoring the old water and light, library and park boards in an advisory capacity.

The Herald believes that it will be a good idea to submit this amendment, so the city can talk it over and restore the boards if it is thought best. While it would not do to make changes that would scatter responsibility, there is much to be said for having advisory boards to counsel with the executive heads, and it is not at all improbable that the city will vote to restore them.

It was not the intention of those who framed the present charter to do away with these boards, nor did the charter do away with them. The matter was left entirely in the hands of the commissioners, and they, either deliberately or through misapprehension of the intention of the charter, abolished them.

Speaking of hard people to satisfy, it sometimes seems absolutely impossible to some people to please Remit.

CONSCRIPTION.

Though voluntary enlistment is a dear tradition of British democracy, the war is a condition and not a theory. Conscription is necessary, therefore, and however little Britain likes it, it will have to come if Great Britain is to hold its end up in the death-struggle with Germany.

Conscription during a war is one thing, and compulsory universal service in time of peace is another. The one is an extreme measure of necessity; the other is militarism pure and simple.

This country had to resort to conscription during the Civil war, as the South did in the beginning. If it had another great war, beyond doubt it would have to resort to it again, and it would be better to resort to it in the beginning than to wait until need compels.

But neither Great Britain nor the United States will ever embrace the system of militarism that imposes conscription or universal compulsory service, which is the same thing, in time of peace.

It would help some if the temperature and the price of gasoline would give up their efforts to become spectacular.

Getting Even.

London Opinion: "Don't you care for any postcards today?" asked a postal clerk, as he handed the man the stamp he had requested.

"No, not today," said the man.

"Or some stamped envelopes? We have some new ones."

"No, thank you."

"Would you like a money order?"

"No."

"Or perhaps you would like to open a postal savings account?"

But the man had fled.

"Who was that fellow, and why did you ask him all those questions?" asked a fellow clerk.

"That," said the other clerk, "is my barber. For years when he has shaved me he has bothered me with recommendations of massages, shampoos, haircuts and hair tonics. I am even with him now!"

The Ceaseless Search.

Washington Star: The search for the elixir of life and the philosopher's stone has been abandoned, but the hunt for some kind of tax that will arouse no objection continues.

Some Baby.

Journal of Race Development: "I saw a baby today that gained twenty pounds in two weeks on elephant's milk."

Whose baby was it?"

"The elephant's."

Behind the Waiter's Mask Soldiers of Fortune Hide

From the New York Sun.

When the suave, smooth-faced person whisks back a chair, waves you into it, frisks a bill of fare before you and stands back with ears inclined, regard him with more attention than you usually bestow.

At the moment his whole being seems in attendance upon you. Perhaps in his zeal he makes a suggestion.

"A cocktail, monsieur?" he says, and his very soul, you would think, hangs upon your reply.

As you make your laborious suggestion he painstakingly writes them down, then hands over the slip to the man who is really going to wait upon you and passes on with something like a sigh.

While he is hovering above the next table steal another look at him. His may be a life filled to the brim with romance. Under that unruffled shirt front a heart may pulse with experience of adventure such as never once thrilled you in your twice-a-year journeying between city and country.

This story is mainly inspired by news that has just come from Paris concerning Jules. A year and a half ago Jules was perhaps one of the most noted figures in the tenderloin. As head waiter of that gloomy gilded eating house in Broadway just below Forty-second street, which after various aliases tottered with its famous Babylonian picture to its end under the name of the "Cafe de Paris," Jules became widely known among those who dine luxuriously and wine expensively. When the Castles opened the Sans Souci, Jules became manager of that establishment, and made a fortune as his share.

When the war broke out Jules was one of the first to take ship for France. Several times reports came back that he was dead. The first man from hereabout who has seen Jules since the day he departed from New York got back the other day. He is an engineer widely known in New York.

He had been in a cafe in Paris for luncheon, one of a few men in civilian clothes in the restaurant. Most of the other men wore the new blue of the French army uniform or the British khaki. His attention was attracted by one of a party of French officers at the next table who kept turning and looking at him.

Finally the officer got up and came over.

"Why, don't you know me?" he said. "I am Jules. Jules of the old Cafe de Paris in New York."

It was Jules, but so changed that he was hardly recognizable. He had broadened out and bronzed. He wore the insignia of a lieutenant of cavalry. On his breast was the "Croix de Guerre," the French military medal. He said he was taking the first leave of absence since the war began.

"When the war came I was too old to be called out, so I volunteered as a private in my old cavalry regiment," Jules told the American. "I have seen service all along the line, part of the time in the trenches."

The New Yorker inquired how Jules had won his war medal, but Jules blushed and would not tell. The other gathered that it was for reconnoitering service performed behind the German lines.

Once "Maxim," a waiter known in all the fashionable cafes of Paris and New York, was asked to tell his story. He smiled.

"If there were a couple of hundred thousand dollars in it I might," he said. "Otherwise, what is the use? I have lived and have enjoyed life. Again, I want to live. There is only one thing to do, and that is to get money. Then there is only one thing left—to spend it."

Eight or ten years ago there was a waiter at the Savoy hotel in London whose manners were perfect. A few years later the same waiter—he was an Italian—turned up in the restaurant on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria. Then he disappeared. Fully two years later, going into the Hotel Astor for luncheon, the writer was astonished to behold the same waiter gliding about with a napkin on his arm. Asked where he had been during the interval, he replied:

"On an exploring expedition. I have come over here to try to get together enough money to enable me to continue my work. Exploring costs a lot of money, and waiting is the only thing I can do that brings me in money. Since I saw you I have been making a little trip into Northern Africa, and I have made a report to the Royal Geographical Society of England and have received a medal from it."

And it was just a few months later that he sailed for Buenos Aires, to become second to the manager of an American business house, at a man's salary and with a man's chance.

Courage

Toledo Blade: Tell a man that tight belts will cause appendicitis and he loosens his belt at once. Warn him that stiff hats make the hair fall out and he carries his hat in his hand until he can find a soft one to put on. This is one of the striking differences between men and women.

You cannot scare a woman with any such threat. It must be centuries since women were told that stays would be the everlasting ruin of them. But is there any decrease in the use of these articles? None that is indicated by the windows of the dry goods stores. Tight skirts were bound to shorten their steps permanently. V-necks would invite ills with the most terrifying names. Fur collars would weaken their resistance to murderous germs. But what did the women think of these cautionings? About as much as you would think of the humming of a gnat. They wore the tight skirts until they were blessed well ready to abandon them. They bared their necks to the wintry breezes as if they were no such thing. You may be sure that the fur collars will not come off until they become unfashionable. You may be equally sure that women will be callous to the advice of the Cleveland doctor now urging the discarding of high heels because they made bow legs.

The female of the species is more nervy than the male.

The Chambered Nautilus.

This is the ship of pearl, which, poets feign
Sails the unshadowed main,—
The venturesome bark that flings
On the sweet summer wind its purpled wings
In gulfs enchanted, where the Siren sings,
And coral reefs lie bare,
Where the cold sea-maids rise to sun their streaming hair.

Its webs of living gauze no more unfurl;
Wrecked is the ship of pearl!
And every chambered cell,
Where its dim dreaming life was wont to dwell,
As the frail tenant shaped his growing shell,
Before thee lies revelled,—
Its irised ceiling rent, its sunless crypt unsealed!

Year after year beheld the silent toil
That spread his lustrous coil;
Still, as the spiral grew,
He left the past year's dwelling for the new,
Stole with soft step its shining archway through,
Built up its idle door,
Stretched in his last-found home, and knew the old no more.

Thanks for the heavenly message brought by thee,
Child of the wandering sea,
Cast from her lap forlorn!
From thy dead lips a clearer note is born
Than ever Triton blew from wreath-ed horn!
While on mine ear it rings,
Through the deep caves of thought I hear a voice that sings—

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length are free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Who Gets It?

Editorial in the Emporia Gazette.

A Kansas steer before walking down the chute into the packing house has seen a lot of the world. Usually he is born in New Mexico, or Northern Texas. He has ridden into Kansas City or St. Joseph as a calf, looking at the country, and then he has a nice jaunt back to a pasture, then again as a 2-year-old he packs his grip and goes down to the Kansas City stockyards again and comes back into Central Kansas as a "feeder." After that it is all pie for the steer—pie and oil cake and alfalfa meal and breakfast food of one kind and another. Finally he bids the yearlings and 2-year-olds, and the cows good-by, and sails out to become a beefsteak and move in good society. When he gets down to Kansas City or St. Joe, he brings on the market about 7 or 8 cents. Then he begins to separate and becomes hide and glue, and horn buttons and canned soup and shaving brushes and fertilizer, and sirloins and porterhouses and rib roasts, and boiling meat and chuck steak, and flank steak and tripe and liver and brains and kidneys and ox-tail soup and devilled chicken.

Now the price of the steer is 7½ cents a pound. But when the steer is divided up as aforesaid every pound of him sells at retail for at least 15 cents, and at least a third of him sells for from 30 to 35 cents, and some of him sells for 50 and 60 cents. He should average at retail in the raw material, before he becomes a piece of leather, or a shaving brush or a button or a roast beef medium or a well-done beefsteak or scrambled brains—he should average something like 20 cents a pound at retail.

Now, where does the 12 cents go? Before he becomes the raw material for food and clothing, the steer passes through two or three hands and spends three or four years at it—each hand taking its proper profit, and the whole transaction amounts to 7 or 8 cents.

After the steer becomes the raw material for man's use, as the steer lays on the block ready for the ultimate consumer, the steer also passes through two or three hands, but the price going through those two or three hands, covering three or four days, rises from 7 to 20 cents.

Who gets the 12 cents?

It may be said without question that no one steals it; that no one is making outrageous profits. But the fact remains that something is wrong. We have organized the beef industry badly. The proof of this is seen in the tremendous increase in the price of the steer on the hoof and the steer separated for purposes of commerce into various raw materials.

No one in this country wants public ownership of anything except to correct abuses of private ownership.

The abuses of private ownership may easily be corrected by private ownership—only often they are not, and this brings about public ownership. The government should not go into the meat business. If the meat business as it is now controlled is reorganized to cut out the economic maladjustments that are seen in the case of the steer and his component parts, public ownership of packing plants will not come. But this is sure: We are a patient people, who sooner or later get our own way. And if the private ownership and control of the agency for the distribution of food and clothing from the steer continue to work badly, some public ownership or drastic public control will step in and act.

Things can't always go wrong in this world. And if the steer as a gay young blade seeking adventure, and as a carcass looking for an ultimate consumer has to ride too far on the steam cars, has to pass through too many greedy hands, has to pay dividends to too many companies that give small service for their toll—look out! The American people always have their remedy. There never was a real need of the American people, a need that settled into a long felt want, that did not come, and no constitution ever acted as a permanent check to the people for what they intelligently and determinedly desired.

Just a Moment

Daily Strength and Cheer.

Compiled by John G. Quintus, the Sunshine Man.

God lets us go our way alone,
Till we are homesick and distressed,
And humbly, then, come back to own
His way is best.

He lets us thirst by Horeb's rock,
And hunger in the wilderness;
Yet at our feeblest, faintest knock,
He waits to bless.

He lets us faint in far-off lands,
And feed on husks, and feel the smart,
Till we come home with empty hands,
And swelling heart.

But then for us the robe and ring,
The Father's welcome and the feast,
While over us the angels sing—
Through last and least.

—Anna F. Burnham.

How often we look upon God as our last and feeblest resource! We go to Him because we have nowhere else to go and then we learn that the storms of life have driven us, not upon the rocks, but into the desired haven.—George Macdonald.

Live not for selfish aims. Live to shed joy on others. Thus best shall your own happiness be secured; for no joy is ever given freely forth that does not have quick echo in the giver's own heart.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Where Does Hughes Stand?

Minneapolis Tribune: One consideration in connection with the nomination of Justice Hughes for president is that there is no way to find out what his views are with regard to the big questions that are thrusting themselves to the front at the present time. We have never tried Mr. Hughes on national policies. We know his ability as an executive, as demonstrated in the office of governor of New York. We know his courage. But what he thinks about preparedness, or tariff commissions, or any of the other large Federal policies which must receive his attention and toward which his attitude is of importance, there is no way of finding out.

He is not only not a candidate but he has resented every effort to make him appear in that attitude. He will therefore be particularly careful not to declare his political views. So that, if the Republicans must have him, it will be necessary to make the nomination and be prepared for his acceptance without being able to ascertain whether he is fully in sympathy with the sentiment of the convention and the declarations of the platform, or not.

This is something to think about, and yet it will probably not seriously affect the availability of Mr. Hughes. The public has come to have so much confidence in his judgment, his courage and his integrity that it will probably be willing to take him without definite information as to his personal views about any of the great current questions.

What Shall It Profit?

If I lay waste and wither up with doubt
The blessed fields of heaven where once my faith
Possessed itself serenely free from death;
If I deny the things past finding out;
Or if I orphan my own soul of One
That seemed a Father, and make void the place
Within me where He dwelt in power and grace,
What do I gain by what I have undone?

Political Straws in the Minnesota Breezes

Off-year Campaign Talk by Minnesota Editors.

Lindbergh and Partisanship.

Brainerd Tribune: Our versatile and virtuous congressman, C. A. Lindbergh, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, in his latest campaign booklet, we are told, "censures partisanship severely."

Mr. Lindbergh's rather varied and unique experience as a trimmer in partisan politics certainly entitles him to speak by the card upon this subject, as he is in a class by himself when it comes to going after partisan votes while posing before the dear people as a lone crusader against partisanship in politics.

It Will Anyway.

Red Wing Eagle: Paradoxical as it may seem it is nevertheless true that if it is to be Elihu Root, it will be Woodrow Wilson.

An Ad-verse Decision.

Mankato Review: The Springfield Free Press says: "Root is too old, Fairbanks too cold and La Follette is too bold. What is the matter with Cummins?" The matter with Cummins is that the regulars hold he was out of the fold when the Taft vote was polled and defeat waves rolled in 1912.

A Battle Which Both Will Lose.

Fairmont Sentinel: It is a battle royal in Minnesota between Ed Smith, leading the reactionaries for old man Root, and I. A. Caswell, marshaling the disorganized forces of pretended progress for Cummins. As between the two the masses will adopt the shibboleth, "Safety first," and respond at Democratic roll call, "Woodrow Wilson."

Not Namin' No Names, Y' Understand.

Winnebago Enterprise (Republican): A number of gentlemen who have been feeding at the public trough for, lo, these many years, and who have held down rather fat political positions so long that their names are household words, like Peruna and Castoria, are evidently loath to back away from the soft stuff, and give every indication of holding on as long as they have strength in their bodies. They are wearying the public and breaking all former endurance records. It is time for a change. Give us new candidates for governor! It is time to write the political obituaries for several of the self-seeking gentry who are burdening the public prints.

Meaning Just Whom?

Little Falls Transcript: Many of the state politicians are urging Minnesota Republicans to get together. This is a sure sign that somebody wants something.

There's Nothing Like a Frank Discussion.

Hinckley Enterprise: Sam Iverson is out with the announcement of his candidacy for governor. Sam's announcement pledges him to right most of the wrongs, real and imaginary, suffered by residents of Minnesota, and does it in the smooth Iverson way. Although Iverson would probably be elected if nominated, Sam is not our candidate for the job. We have no candidate as yet, but Sam is by far the best one of the bunch so far openly in the field. Hot air and egotism are the component parts of the candidates now in the field, although the proportion of the mixture varies. For instance, Manahan might be analyzed as 90 per cent hot air and 10 per cent egotism, while the percentage of the mixture is reversed in Lindbergh, who would appear to be 90 per cent egotism and 10 per cent hot air and ambition.

Wisconsin Clippings

Things the Badger State Editors Are Saying.

What the People Will Do.

Chippewa Falls Independent: The Ada Herald is an example of how the Republican press of Minnesota feels toward President Wilson. It says it would not be a bit surprised to see the delegates to the Republican national convention from Minnesota go for Root. It makes little difference as to whom the Republicans put up next year. The people are going to stand by the president and insist on a second term for him.

A Republican Seeks Consolation.

Wausau Record-Herald: Among the few things we have for our consolation in entering the new year, one is that the moving picture plays won't get any worse.

They Can't Improve on His Methods.

Eau Claire Telegram: No wonder the president decides foreign affairs problems within his province of duty according to his own independent investigation and convictions. He would never get a solution from any of his critics, big or little.

It's Coming, Sure as Fate.

Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin: Every civilized country now regards woman suffrage as an important political issue, not a proposal to be laughed at, as was the habit only a few years ago.

The Harmony Chorus Grows.

Wausau Record-Herald: A political movement must have an object. It may be ever so hypocritical. It need not even be honest, or intelligent, or patriotic. Anything may succeed temporarily if it is properly pushed. But it is impossible to evoke enthusiasm without an issue of some sort. For that reason the interest in the so-called progressive campaign in Wisconsin this season is purely academic and historical.

The Americans Lead.

Madison State Journal: Let us hope that the germ of international federation, nourished here in America, the home of the democratic idea, may spread to other continents. Europe, perhaps, seeing the ruin wrought by intense nationalism, with its greed, hatred, ambitions, jealousies, and seeing our example of peace and fraternity and the fruits of our union, may enter the family of nations when the war is over.

Is No Ancient Custom Sacred?

Grand Rapids Reporter: Congress should veto the antiquated custom of the free distribution of seeds. It is simply a steal that costs the country $150,000 per annum and is productive of no good, and is not wanted except by senators and congressmen who pose as givers at the public expense.

A Tip to the Mexicans.

Oshkosh Northwestern: If the Mexicans were wise, they would end their strife and put their country in shape to attract American tourists. The latter are barred from Europe by the war, and perhaps would welcome the opportunity to go to Mexico and spend their money.

If.

Yes, death is at the bottom of the cup,
And every one that lives must drink it up;
And yet between the sparkle at the top
And the black lees where lurks that bitter drop,
There swims enough good liquor, Heaven knows,
To ease our hearts of all their other woes.

The bubbles rise in sunshine at the brim;
That drop below is very far and dim;
The quick fumes spread, and shape us such bright dreams,
That in the glad delirium it seems
As though by some deft sleight, if we so willed,
That drop untasted might be somehow spilled.

—William Dean Howells.

Difficult.

Pennsylvania Punch Bowl: Indignant Professor—Quit this quibbling, sir! Who was King Henry VIII? Answer "yes" or "no."

Apostrophe to Work

B. C. Forbes in His Book, "Finance, Business and the Business of Life."

I am the friend of all business.
I am the font of all prosperity.
I am the parent, most times, of genius.
I am the salt that gives life its savor.
I am the sole support of the poor.

The rich who try to do without me deteriorate, languish and usually fill premature graves.

I am the primeval curse, yet a blessing that no healthy man or woman can be happy without.

Nations that woo me ardently rise; nations that neglect me die.

It is I who have made the United States what it is today. I have built her matchless industries, opened up her rich minerals, laid her incomparable railways, reared her cities, built her skyscrapers.

I have laid the foundation of every fortune in America, from Rockefeller's down.

I alone have raised men up from the ranks and maintained them in positions of eminence.

I am the friend and guide of every worthy youth. If he sticks close to me, no prize or place is beyond his reach. If he slights me, he can have no enviable end.

I am the sole ladder that leads to the Land of Success.

Sometimes men curse me, seeing in me an arch enemy, but when they try to do without me life turns bitter and meaningless and goalless.

I must be loved before I can bestow my greatest blessings and achieve my greatest ends. Loved, I make life sweet and purposeful and fruitful.

Fools hate me; wise men love me.

Savages, some rich men and many rich women shun me—to their undoing.

The giants who fill the presidential chairs of our railroad systems, our great industrial organizations, our colossal mercantile establishments and our institutions of learning, almost without exception, owe their places to me.

I can do more to advance a youth than his own parents, be they ever so rich.

I am the support of the millions; indirectly, the support of all.

I am the creator of all capital.

Wealth is me stored up.

I am represented in every loaf of bread that comes from the oven, in every train that crosses the continent, in every ship that steams over the ocean, in every newspaper that comes from the press.

I am more zealously cultivated in America than in most other countries, especially by men of wealth.

I am sometimes overdone—voluntarily by the ambitious, involuntarily by the oppressed and the very young.

But in moderation I am the very oxygen of the able-bodied, even though some sure of my constancy, look upon me as loathsome. A little taste of my absence quickly brings them to their senses.

My followers among the masses are becoming more and more powerful every year. They are beginning to dominate governments, to overthrow anachronistic dynasties.

I am the mother of democracy.

All progress springs from me.

The man who is bad friends with me can never get very far—and stay there.

The man who is good friends with me who is not afraid of me, can go—who can tell how far?

Who am I?
What am I?
I AM WORK.

The Meaning of Ruskin.

Chancellor Charles F. Thwing in School and Society: As one reviews all that Mr. Ruskin wrote through a half century, and under diverse conditions, on education, the question emerges: What was the worthiest contribution which he made to the great cause, and what, if any, was the defect or weakness in his offering? The answer is not far to seek. Mr. Ruskin's chief contribution lies in the emphasis he placed on, and in the analyses he made of the moral element in character and training. By the moral element one does not mean merely the ethical virtues, either major or minor, although they are included. One does not have in mind those parts of character which are primarily spiritual or non-intellectual. Perhaps no better single illustration or example could be found than that which is furnished by the Beatitudes of Christ. The love for, and the making of peace, mercy, purity of heart, meekness, are the supreme qualities which he holds most dear. Obedience, faith, gentleness, charity are words which drop from his pen like dew from the summer skies. To him, cruelty and idleness are abominable. Like St. John, he is an apostle of and to the heart. His seven lamps of architecture are the lights which illumine every human path. The stones of the city which he most adores are laid with the fair colors of goodness and tenderness and love.

A LONG FOUR MINUTES.

o the Editor of The Herald:

Not long ago a party of residents in Hunter's Park and Woodland called on ommissioner Silberstein and renewed he request of those sections of the ity for better fire protection. In re- y, I am informed, Mr. Silberstein as- ured his callers that with the present quipment the city fire department ould get out to any part of that sec- n in four minutes. The other day a ouse took fire and burned clean to he ground before the department could et there. I think perhaps Mr. Silber- ein had better have his stop-watch dusted, if that constitutes four min- tes' time by that timepiece. How ould he like to have his creditors ccept on time on the same basis?

HUNTER'S PARK RESIDENT.

MAYBE HE COULDN'T FIND HIS WAY AROUND

o the Editor of The Herald:

Where, oh where was our smoke in- ector this morning? Or was he ex- ptionally busy, improving the oppor- unity to inspect the smoke? When I got downtown about 8 a. m., it was as if the sky had put on mourning for something or other. There was a little fog, that drifted in off the lake; but not much, for when the fog got up against that wall of smoke it got dis- couraged and some of it just laid down and died right there, and the rest drifted back to the cleaner and whole- somer region over old Superior's rip- pling tides.

Every month we get a report from the smoke inspector, telling what he has done. I'd like to suggest that he be instructed to get on the job such mornings as this was, and he'll find enough smoke to inspect to keep him busy for all the rest of the day.

ROOSEVELT MEN ARE WORKING IN MILL CITY

Prepare to File His Name for Minnesota Primary.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 7.—Roose- velt men are actively canvassing the presidential situation here with a view to filing the colonel's name in Minne- sota.

A. A. D. Rahn, who is a close friend of Roosevelt, is quoted as of the opin- ion that if the filing is made the col- onel will allow his name to remain on the ballot.

It is pointed out that his name has been filed in Michigan and that he has not yet asked that it be stricken from the ballot, although he ordered the fil- ing canceled in Nebraska when it was made some weeks ago.

Admitting that Roosevelt is strong in Michigan, in that state he would have to run against a popular native son, United States Senator William Alden Smith, and would be taking a chance of a defeat that might injure his prestige.

In Minnesota he would not have to contest with a native son for the dele- gation, and, moreover, this state has been even more friendly to him than has Michigan. In 1912 this state gave him in round numbers 124,000 votes as against 64,000 odd votes cast for Will- iam H. Taft, the Republican nominee for president, while at the same time a complete Republican state ticket was elected.

CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS AND PREPARES FOR YEAR'S ACTIVITY

GEORGE M. JENSEN.

L. A. SIMONSON.

As an inducement to members to attend meetings of the West End Commercial club, luncheon will be served in future on evenings when important business is to be brought up. The lunch was adopted following a discussion at the annual business meeting of the club held last night as the best method of bringing the tired business men out in the evening. An entertainment committee, consisting of E. H. Olson, chairman; C. Lundquist and L. A. Simonson, was appointed to have charge of this feature.

L. A. Simonson was re-elected president of the club. E. A. Swanstrom was chosen vice president; George M. Jensen, secretary (re-elected); E. Gustafson, financial secretary, and Carl E. Lonegren, treasurer. The directors chosen are Sanford W. Hill, James W. Preston, James Maghan, Victor Juten and John J. Moe.

The Commercial club, as a civic organization, will be far more active this year than during 1915, according to the belief expressed by members. Many improvements desired for this section of the city are expected to be made this year and it is proposed by the club to take an active part in getting these accomplished.

Mayor W. I. Prince and members of the city commission will be invited to attend meetings of the club from time to time to discuss affairs of interest to this section of the city. The date for the appearance of the city commissioners at the meetings will be arranged by the officers soon.

A committee consisting of George M. Jensen, John Moir and E. A. Swanstrom was appointed to represent the club in assisting to draft the building code.

KNOCKED DOWN BY STREET CAR

Staggering across the street in front of a street car, John Nervig, aged 47, 2607 West Railroad street, was struck by a westbound West Ruluth car at Nineteenth avenue west and narrowly escaped being ground under the wheels. But for the presence of mind on the part of Motorman James Loman, who reversed the power, he would have been killed.

Nervig, according to witnesses, is said to have left a saloon on the corner to cross the street. After he had gone across the tracks, he turned around to go back and stepped in front of the car. The car was going at a slow rate of speed, which made it easier for it to be brought to a stop suddenly.

The man was picked up by Patrolman Olson, who called the emergency ambulance to take him to a hospital. He is expected to be able to leave the institution today.

POLES STARVING IN THE WAR ZONE

Duluthians Continue to Aid By Contributing to Relief Fund.

The Polish relief fund for war sufferers was increased by $2 today when a check was received for that amount. Duluthians have made an excellent showing in contributing to this fund. It was only about a week ago that President Wilson's appeal went out, and the local contributions already amount to $154, representing the amount received by The Herald. The News Tribune is also receiving contributions, but they are not included in The Herald's figures.

A. Grabarkiewicz, who is chairman of the relief committee for Duluth, directs attention to the fact that winter weather is now working great hardships on the people in the war zone of Poland and that thousands are starving and freezing to death. The contributions are all turned over to the Red Cross society and relief is given out as soon as possible. The Herald fund now stands:

Part of the proceeds will be sent abroad to provide wages for women who are in desperate need of them and part of the proceeds will be used by the women of the Glen Avon and Hunter's Park communities to buy materials for the hospital supplies which they will continue to make. They have been doing sewing for the Red Cross for six weeks and packed their first box last week. Mrs. Washburn extends an invitation to the luncheon to the women of all parts of the city.

Madge Lesher is one of the attractive debutantes of the present season in New York. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lesher. She has traveled abroad a great deal with her mother.

Another Musical Refugee From Europe

OLGA SEYMOUR.

Olga Seymour, who arrived in New York a few days ago from England, is one of the great army of musical refugees from Europe which is now camping in the United States. She is a young lady of English birth whose sponsors say she has a promising voice. There are no engagements for musical artists in Europe this year and the American market is so flooded with talent known and unknown that there are few opportunities for engagements here.

Mashed Potato Recipes.

It has been said that nothing ages as rapidly as a fried egg, that an egg which is fried in the morning looks a hundred years old by night. Another article of food that ages rapidly is the potato, but it is capable of rejuvenation. Here are a few ways of rejuvenating, reviving, resuscitating, and otherwise making palatable, the mashed potatos that were left from dinner:

Croquettes—Beat the yolk of one egg until thick, add two tablespoonfuls of cream, then work in two cupfuls of mashed potato. Shape into bells, and decorate each around the bottom with tiny cubes cut from a boiled sweet potato. Place a small, curving piece in the top of each, to represent the handle of the bells. Put the bells in a buttered pan, broad ends down. Beat the white of an egg slightly, add a teaspoon of milk, and brush each bell with the mixture. Bake the bells until golden brown, and serve them on a hot platter. Garnish prettily with parsley.

Potato cakes—Season two cupfuls of very finely-mashed potatos with a half-teaspoonful of pepper and a half-teaspoonful of salt. Sift in one cupful of flour containing one teaspoonful of baking powder. Add enough milk to make a soft dough. Flour well then roll one-half inch thick. Cut into potato cakes two inches square. Grease a hot gridiron very lightly, lay the cakes on it, and cook them on top of the stove or on gas that is turned low. Cover for about five minutes, until they raise and are brown on one side. Then turn them over and brown them on the other side. When done, split them open while hot, and butter them. Serve at once.

Potato pancakes—To one cupful of cold mashed potato, add one cupful of milk. Sift together, in another vessel, one-half cupful of flour, one-half saltspoonful of salt (assuming that the potatoes have been previously salted), one teaspoonful of sugar, and a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder. Add this to the potato and milk. Beat well. Add a tablespoonful of melted butter and beat again; beating is the secret of light cake. An egg will help to make the mixture lighter, but is not necessary. The sugar helps to brown the cakes. Fry in the usual manner and serve with maple syrup.

Winter Fashion Hints.

A very attractive dance frock for a young girl is made of pink taffeta. On each side of the skirt there is a patch pocket, shirred at the top, and decorated with a little spray of blue and pink chiffon flowers.

* * *

This year the fit of the cuff has much to do with the smartness of the costume. The long, tight cuffs are meant to fit really snugly about the wrist. So if you buy a ready-made frock with a long cuff that does not fit, have it remodeled to fit snugly and neatly. Then fit it with buttons, hooks and eyes or snap fasteners so that the sleeve may be easily taken on and off.

* * *

Diva is a new washable satin in white, flesh, pink, blue, maize and lavender, which is intended for lingerie, waists and gowns. It is in a soft weave, with an attractive satin finish which brings out the different shades. When properly washed, this fabric does not fade or pull, which makes it practical for undergarments as well as outer attire. Another washable silk for the same purpose is honeycomb crepe, intended for waists, lingerie and children's frocks. It has a tiny stripe effect made by an open-work or hemstiched stripe which is not transparent, though thin and ornamental. This fabric washes perfectly.

The sash that trails is now fashion's favorite frivolity. One calls it a frivolity because in all the annals of dress there is no record of it, and eccentricity seems its only excuse for being. These sashes encircle the waist and a smart bow is arranged at the back. From the bow, the sash trails downward in a single, broad strip of silk, resting on the floor several inches beyond the short frock.

Of course the sash-end is lifted over the arm for dancing. A frock of black tulle in hooped flounces has a sash of black and American Beauty brocade; a frock of white tulle and lace, a sash of turquoise blue pussy willow taffeta. The long sash-end gives an excellent line down the back and adds color to the frock. The real dignity of a train it can hardly be said to express.

Loosely knotted or tied Windsor scarfs of bright color finish off four-fifths of this winter's neckwear effects, and the shops are gay with these ties in every conceivable shade—all the strong primary colors and wonderful, soft art tones broken into stripes and plaids. These pretty "little boy" neckties have a graceful, youthful suggestion and add much to simple blouses with open collar effect. They are used also in trim four-in-hand knots with high turnover collars on tailored blouses. The Windsor scarf in the picture worn with a dainty blouse of white crepe de chine, touched with fur at the collar, is coral pink in tone, with diagonal stripes in pale blue, brown and orange, the colors softly blended.

TELEPHONE FAR FROM PIANO.

Robert Haven Schauffler in Good Housekeeping: One important point about musical good housekeeping: Keep the telephone as far as possible from the music room. It is fatal to cut off the Kreutzer sonata just at the most frenzied climax, while the grocer explains why he forgot the lard, or the operator informs you in a bored voice that she begs your pardon.

Woman's Council Members Hear City Playgrounds and Girls' Schools Discussed

Instead of the banquet which is given every winter, the Woman's council decided at the meeting this morning to substitute for it a luncheon, which will be given the latter part of this month. The date and place were left to the decision of the committee.

The report of only one standing committee was heard, that of the infant welfare work, which was given by Mrs. Archibald T. Banning, Jr. J. R. Batchelor, director of playgrounds, spoke of the moral feature of playgrounds; Mrs. J. L. Washburn, a member of the board of visitors of the Girls' Home school at Sauk Center, told of some of the things that impressed her most at her last visit to the school, and Mrs. T. J. Davis of the school board outlined the courses in sewing and cooking that are given in the public schools, and told to what extent she would like to see them developed.

Moral Phase of Playgrounds.

As the time was limited, Mr. Batchelor confined himself to the moral phase of the playgrounds. "One-third of human life is a preparatory period," he said, "and I think the great factor in this preparatory time is leisure. It is when boys and girls find time hanging on their hands that they do wrong. They must be taught to play, as they have not the faculty of organizing new systems of play."

To defend this statement, which the speaker said is often challenged, he told of how five school boys were questioned regarding what they played after school hours. Four said if one of the boys had a football they kicked it around, if someone had a baseball they threw it, and that they sometimes played "kick the can." The fifth boy, who had been a regular visitor to one of the playgrounds last summer, had a wealth of knowledge of athletic games.

Mr. Batchelor spoke of honesty in sports as a preparation for honesty in business and gave examples to show how supervised games, with this ideal, develop clean athletics.

Sauk Center School.

Mrs. Washburn said that at her last visit to the school at Sauk Center she was impressed by the unusual success of the garden during the last year, the improved nature of the industrial work and the organization of a Camp Fire group by the girls of one of the cottages.

She told how the garden of 110 acres, which Mrs. Fanny French Morse insisted upon for the moral benefit it would be to the girls, despite the fact that many said the soil was not fertile, produced last year 2,500 bushels of potatoes, 700 bushels of onions, 500 bushels of beets and 400 bushels of carrots.

Several pieces of beautiful embroidery and crochet work which had been done by the girls were displayed on a table in the clubroom. Mrs. Washburn told of a program given by the Camp Fire girls and of her surprise at the clever suggestions that were made for an entertainment to which all the girls of the school were to be invited.

Mrs. Davis explained how lessons in sewing are begun in the sixth grade and lessons in cooking in the seventh grade, and of their being obligatory in the grades and elective in high school. As examples of the practical benefit derived from such courses, she told how girls who have not gone beyond the grades have become efficient housekeepers, able to keep families together and serve well-cooked, nourishing meals.

Making Own Clothes.

She told how the sixth grade girls are taught the elements of sewing and how the instruction is continued until, when they are in high school, they are able to make their own underclothes and skirts and waists. In regard to the classes in cooking, Mrs. Davis said that the pupils are taught to prepare food with simple equipment, to plan balanced menus and learn, in high school, the chemistry of food.

The speaker expressed a wish that the courses be enlarged, that more girls take them, that the courses be correlated and that cooking, sewing, nursing and hygiene become important parts of the high school course.

Mrs. Banning told how the infant welfare committee of the Woman's council will co-operate with the Scottish Rite Masons by giving their services for baby week, which will be held the first week in March. Baby week will be a national affair, as it was suggested by the General Federation of Woman's Clubs and was indorsed by the national bureau of child welfare.

The committee has decided upon the Masonic temple as the place in which to hold demonstrations and lectures and has planned to make education and not competition the keynote of the undertaking.

The principal aim is to reach all the mothers of Duluth, who will have the opportunity to hear lectures and to see practical demonstrations of the proper care of their children, which demonstrations will be given in booths, each of which is to be in charge of some organization. Miss Elizabeth Helkila, who is the nurse in charge of the infant welfare work of the Masons, will be at the head of the undertaking.

In one booth a demonstrator will show what children should be fed and what they should not be fed; in another there will be shown the proper clothing for children from infants up to those 2 years old; by inexpensive garments, in another mothers will be told how to treat diseases with home remedies and what remedies to avoid, and so on, through the various phases that apply to health of children.

In one part of the building children will be tested, though not on the "baby show" plan, and in still another part lectures will be given. Many doctors have volunteered to give a great part of their time for baby week.

The committee has under consideration the presentation of a film on the care of babies, the film to be shown downtown, in the West end and West Duluth.

CARDINAL MERCIER WILL VISIT ROME

All Obstacles to His Return to Belgium Are Finally Removed.

Rome, Jan. 7.—The Belgian minister to the Vatican has been informed that Cardinal Mercier, primate of Belgium, intends to leave for Rome after presiding at the consecration, to take place in a day or two, of the new bishop of Tournai.

Cardinal Mercier abandoned the idea of coming to Rome last month for the consistory because he was unable to obtain guarantees that he would be permitted to return to Belgium. Having applied to Gen. Von Bissing, military governor of Belgium, for guarantees he was informed that they could come only from Berlin, although the general gave him such assurances as he could. The response from Berlin came too late to enable the cardinal to attend the consistory, but he has now been informed officially from Berlin that no obstacle will be raised to his return to Belgium.

It is expected the cardinal will arrive here about Jan. 15. He will reside at the Belgian college during his stay here. Pope Benedict has been notified of his expected arrival.

PUBLICITY IS URGED.

Secretary Gravatt of Rotary Club Declares It Should Be Fostered.

In an address on "Publicity and Rotaryism" at the weekly meeting of the Duluth Rotary club at the Holland hotel yesterday afternoon, William M. Gravatt, secretary, urged the members to advertise the work of the organization.

"Rotary clubs should give their organizations publicity," said Mr. Gravatt. "Good newspaper advertising, reading notices of the proper kind, and advertising in periodicals should be followed out. The Rotarians are organized for the purpose of bettering business conditions, and the people are interested and have every right to know what is being accomplished."

About sixty members of the club were present at the luncheon.

CHINESE COMPLAIN OF JAPANESE ACTS

Pekin, Dec. 7.—Chinese newspapers are bitter in their criticism of the constant stream of Japanese who are pouring into Harbin. The Russians deny the Japanese residence in the Russian concession, consequently they live in the Chinese section of the city. The Hsui Chung Kuo Pao, a Chinese paper published in Pekin, gives the following list of the occupations of Japanese now residents in Harbin: Bank (1), general importers (17), factories (9), hospital (1), drug stores (21), hotels (3), tailor shops, (7), laundries (8), barber shops (11), bath parlors (6), restaurants (10), builders (4), disorderly houses (22).

This paper charges that practically all the Japanese drug stores deal largely in morphine and opium, and openly violate Chinese laws prohibiting the sale of these drugs.

WARROAD FIRE.

Pool Hall and Family Sustain Substantial Loss.

Warroad, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fire was discovered at 1:30 o'clock Thursday morning in the building formerly occupied by the Great Northern saloon. The first floor was used as a pool hall by Thomas Barr and the second floor as a dwelling place by Guy Perkins and family. It is thought the fire started in the pool hall from an overheated stove and worked its way between the walls until it reached the upstairs where it broke through. The Perkins family suffered almost a complete loss without any insurance. The pool fixtures and stock were carried out but were greatly damaged by water, on which Mr. Barr carried no insurance. The building was badly damaged, the second story being completely destroyed. It was owned by Ed Carron and was insured for $1,500.

North Dakotan Hurt.

Napoleon, N. D., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Peter Silvernagle was leading a team hitched to a grain tank, when the horses, becomnig frightened, charged forward, knocking him down, and the heavy grain tank passed over one leg, crushing it. He was taken to a hospital at Bismarck to undergo an amputation of the leg.

Hinckleyite Did Not Die.

Hinckley, Minn., Jan. 7.—Gene Johnson, who was reported dead at the hospital in Duluth last week, is recovering from the pneumonia and will return to Hinckley in a short time. His little sister who was sick at the same time is recovering also.

Notice is hereby given of the Annual Meeting of the

Peggy Peabody's Observations

Husbands Unafraid.

I have a friend who has occasionally remarked that such and such a man was afraid of his wife. I would like to see a man who is really and truly afraid of his wife. Now and then you see a hen-pecked individual who gives in in small things rather than endure a lot of talk, but when it comes to the big things he usually has his way, suffering the consequences if need be.

The man afraid of his wife is always depicted as a creature sparse of hair and weak in the knees and just about as small physically as men are made. If his wife told him to remove his shoes in the vestibule and come into the house in his stocking feet he would do it without raising an objection, so afraid is he of the frowning woman who has the whip-hand over his life.

Before the hen-pecked husband married he had a host of friends. He considered them assets and tried to cultivate them. Now he has friends, but they are not the old friends of his youth or of his choice. They are his wife's friends selected by her. He hardly dares mention the names of his old-time friends in the presence of his wife and never invites them to his home.

Such a man doesn't dare more than speak to the young women upon whom he used to call in days gone by. It wouldn't be safe. If his wife had given up her former friends, both men and women, it wouldn't be so maddening for the husband. She, however, has retained all her own friends. Her men friends smoke her husband's cigars and lounge in his den, while her girl chums visit her at length and depend upon him to make it pleasant for such men as may follow in their train on these visits.

I have known young wives to demur at their husband's friends at first through a sort of foolish jealousy which soon wore off, but I have never known of a case where the feeling was carried to such length or where the man became such a slave to a woman's most unreasonable whim.

For the life of me I cannot see why a man should give up good friends who are tried, true and congenial, just because he is married. I wouldn't. It shouldn't be necessary. And I cannot see the object of subjugating a husband so that he is an object of pity or ridicule to all who know him. It is not an enviable reputation for any woman to hold, for she is not admired in the role by either men or women.

HUSBAND AND WIFE AGREE

Gottfred Gunderson Has a Marvelous Recovery From One Year's Illness.

His Wife Joins in Giving Her Personal Indorsement for Tanlac.

"Meat and potatoes were almost strangers at our house for over a year; it was more like toast and tea. Both my wife and I had stomach trouble and when two people in the same house have the same ailment and get relief in so short a time it is well worth the time I have taken to come down here and tell you why," said Gottfred Gunderson, 4821 Glenwood street, Duluth.

Mr. Gunderson's remarks were made to the Tanlac Man in W. A. Abbett's Drug store, 219 West Superior street. This gentleman is very well known in this city. He is employed at the Kelley-How-Thompson Co., and has lived in Duluth for over thirteen years.

"I had a severe case of somach trouble," continued Mr. Gunderson. "I had a severe pain in my right side and would get dizzy spells. The pain in my side was almost a steady pain and bothered me so I could not sleep at night.

"Well, I decided to try Tanlac and, after taking one bottle, the dizzy spells disappeared and I was able to sleep at night because the pain in my side was so much better.

"Now here is probably the most remarkable part of my story. My wife had the same trouble that affected me. Her case was not as severe as mine, but she has had the trouble longer than I have; three or four years, I think, she told me to tell you. Well, anyway, she gave me positive instructions to tell you that she was well.

"We both join in giving Tanlac our hearty indorsement."

Tanlac is a great reconstructive tonic. It does not act by falsely stimulating the gastric glands and creating an artificial appetite, but, on the contrary, it strengthens the tissues and enriches the blood, thereby assisting Nature to overcome weakness.

Tanlac is being specially introduced in Duluth at W. A. Abbett's Drug store, 219 West Superior street, and at the Abbett branch stores, 101 West Fourth street and 932 East Second street.

TWELVE MORE DIVORCES GRANTED BY DISTRICT COURT

Desertion, Cruelty, Drunkenness, Given as the Causes.

Bigamist, Now Serving Sentence, Divorced By Legal Wife.

And still the divorce mill grinds.

Since yesterday afternoon district court judges have granted matrimonial freedom to twelve who told their tales of disappointments. Of this number, six were given decrees because of desertion. Cruelty and drunkenness were responsible for the others.

* * *

Frank Thomas Grummitt scoffed at the sanctity of marriage vows and having more wives than the law allowed was a mere trifle to him. For that and other good and sufficient reasons he is now doing a turn at Stillwater penitentiary.

Laura Grummitt, the woman he wronged and left behind him, cared though. She told her story to Judge Fesler in district court this morning and was promptly awarded an absolute separation from Grummitt.

The Grummitts were married on Sept. 3, 1912, in this city. They went to Proctor to live. Frank had employment there with the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company. In May of the following year he deserted her. In a resort at Superior he became infatuated with a habitue of the underworld. The woman threatened to shoot herself if he did not marry her, and he complied. That was his story, at least, when he was later arrested.

Grummitt left his second wife and was apprehended in Cleveland. Brought back to Duluth he pleaded guilty to a charge of the abandonment of wife and family and was committed to the state's prison. The bigamy charge, which he admitted, was not prosecuted. Grummitt began his sentence at Stillwater last June.

Mrs. Grummitt was given the custody of their child, now aged 3.

Presumably Cornelius A. Maher, 31, changed his mind about contesting the divorce action brought by his wife, Lillian C. Maher, 28. On Wednesday afternoon, he came into court and asked permission to appear and contest the case. The eleventh hour request was granted and a day's continuance ordered. When the case was taken up this morning, Maher was nowhere to be found.

Mrs. Maher testified that her husband had an ungovernable temper. Sometimes when he becames angry at her, he would break the furniture or smash the clock or even turn upon her. She declared that he was addicted to the use of intoxicants and that she was tired of living with him under such circumstances. She also claimed that one time at the dinner table he referred to their 15-months-old baby as a "d——n thing" and gave the child a blow that knocked it breathless.

Just eight days after Rosalie Novack, 34, had repeated wedding vows with Thomas J. Novack, 58, she discovered that she had made a terrible mistake. The matrimonial yoke began to chafe and before she was a bride of a month she filed suit for divorce.

In Judge Fesler's division of district court yesterday afternoon, Rosalie was made a free woman again. She related how she had married on Aug. 1, last, and told of the circumstances which led to her leaving him eight days later. She testified that he called her vile names, threatened her and made further continuance of the marriage relationship impossible without sacrificing her health, comfort and life.

The court permitted Mrs. Novack to resume her former name, that of Mrs. Rosalia Delweska. Novack is a laborer employed on the Missabe coal docks, and resides at 113 West Eighth street.

Oscar Aho, 57, got drunk shortly after he married Hanna Aho, 57, two years ago at Carlton, and he has drawn few sober breaths since, if the story which Mrs. Aho told Judge Fesler in the divorce court this morning is to be believed. Mrs. Aho obtained a decree on a double cause, however, as she also proved to the satisfaction of the court that her husband was cruel in his treatment of her.

In her complaint she alleged that Oscar had kicked her without justification or provocation. The alleged assault occurred last July.

Judge Dancer yesterday afternoon granted Margaret A. McPhedran, 31, a legal separation from Herman D. McPhedran, 33, on the grounds of desertion. She testified that they were married at Grand Forks, N. D., on Oct. 23, 1913, and that he left her in March of the following year. McPhedran is now residing in Seattle, Wash. He did not contest the divorce.

On the grounds of desertion, Antonio Verruto, 38, was granted a divorce from Teresa Picciano Verruto, 32, by Judge Fesler this morning. They were married at Ithaca, N. Y., in 1899, and she is the mother of his two children. Verruto said that his spouse left him in September, 1910.

* * *

Less than a year after marriage trouble broke out in the household of Theodore and Helen Amonson. This morning, Judge Ensign granted Mrs. Amonson a divorce on the grounds of cruelty. She testified that her husband had struck her with clenched fists, kicked her and falsely accused her of infidelity. He is 26 and she is 25. They were married on Dec. 3, 1908, and lived together until May 5, 1911, when she left him.

Edward C. La Hay, 22, never really knew why his wife, Hilda S. La Hay, 21, did leave him. They were married Feb. 20, 1912, and in October of 1914 she took their child and left for a visit with her parents. Since that time they have never lived together. She has persistently refused, he told Judge Ensign yesterday. The court granted the plaintiff a decree.

* * *

William H. Blake was this morning granted a decree of divorce from Lourane Blake on the grounds of desertion. They were united in 1905 but the bond was not so strong but what Mrs. Blake broke it. She told him that she was going to Minneapolis on a visit. She never returned. The case was tried before Judge Dancer this morning.

* * *

Judge Ensign today granted a divorce to Myrtle R. Walker, 26, from Charles T. Walker, 27, on the grounds of cruelty. They were married at New Lisbon, Wis., Feb. 16, 1909 and have one boy, now 6.

* * *

A decree of divorce was granted by Judge Dancer yesterday to Myrtle Schuler, who married Bernard Schuler in Superior in 1911. She testified that he deserted her two years later.

* * *

Edith Cameron told Judge Ensign that her husband Gordon Cameron left her in Grand Forks, N. D., in May of 1912, and that since that time she has been self-supporting. The judge allowed her to drop the name of Cameron.

UNCLE SAM WILL MEET REQUIREMENTS

SAYS McEWEN—

ANSWERS CRITIC OF POSTAL SERVICE

In reference to an article published in the Open Court of The Herald last evening, in which the service of the Duluth postoffice was criticized, Postmaster William E. McEwen gave out a statement today. Postmaster McEwen says that the writer of the article made several incorrect statements, and he says that a government official will be here soon to make a thorough examination of the territory and recommend changes and extensions in the service. Mr. McEwen's statement follows:

"Regarding the criticism of Duluth's delivery system in last evening's Open Court column by some one who has not the manliness to sign his name, for obvious reasons, I would like to say the facts are these:

Carriers for New Territory.

"Since the establishment of the parcel post service Jan. 1, 1913, the postoffice records show this office has been allowed a carrier for new territory at New Duluth and Gary, an extra carrier at Hunter's Park, another at Lakeside and one in the East end district, besides two auxiliary carriers and a wagon to deliver the heavy and bulky parcel post at the main office, and one foot carrier for delivering the same class of matter in the West Duluth territory. And lately it has been found necessary to supplement the man and wagon at the main office on such days as Monday, and frequently on Saturday, with an additional man and wagon to keep up with the increase in this parcel post matter. These increases were allowed to care for normal delivery conditions at various times and were permanent when made. This scarcely agrees with I. B.'s claims, whoever he is, that no increase in the force has been allowed in four years, and it might be that it accounts for his neglect to affix his name to his statements.

"It is true that some carriers' office time on residence routes has been reduced from five to ten minutes a day, and on business routes from fifteen to twenty minutes—not thirty-five to forty minutes, as is stated—in obedience to instructions and in accordance with a schedule from the inspection division, after a careful count and weighing of the mail on each route, the feasibility of such schedules having been demonstrated at other offices before being put into effect here. Duluth carriers, I am confident, can come up to this standard as well as the men at the older and larger offices, where the average age of the employes is much higher than here, and so far the schedule has not interfered with efficient and speedy delivery on the routes, as far as we can see.

Holiday Deliveries.

"It is true that carriers during certain brief periods, where there is a flood of advertising matter placed in the mails, and particularly near the holiday season, cannot complete two deliveries over their entire routes, and this is a condition that exists in the East end just as well as in suburban territory. But it is not reasonable to expect the postoffice department to adjust routes on a basis of such abnormal conditions for a few days at a time, as the carriers would be, comparatively speaking, idle at all other times. To relieve these conditions during these brief periods, carriers are permitted to work beyond their eight-hour day to effect the delivery of important mail, but it is not considered by the department that such matter as personal property statements, public service corporation bills, such as telephone, electric light, gas and water, and certain second and third-class matter, warrant this extra expense in order to advance its delivery one carrier trip.

"Some suburban territory receives but one delivery at all times because it is too sparsely settled and receives too little mail to warrant the milege and time consumed in covering it twice, these deliveries being regulated by the department's inspectors, after actual examination of the territory involved, and not by the postmaster or his subordinate supervisors in the office. Some of this suburban territory we are now covering, within the city limits, is not even as thickly populated as other territory, such as Homecroft, outside the city limits which has but one mounted rural delivery.

Number of Deliveries.

"The section between Third and Ninth avenues east never had four deliveries of mail. For a time we made four deliveries between Third and Sixth avenue east (in a section that now has but three) and two deliveries between Sixth and Ninth, the curtailing of one delivery in the district stated enabling us to make three deliveries as far as Ninth avenue to new business patrons thereon, and the patrons between Third and Sixth preferring the present schedule of three deliveries to the old one of four. These are details of the service that J. B. cannot be expected to speak honesty of in view of his misstatements on primary matters.

"Now as to getting the higher officials interested in extending the service to other people in the suburbs who are still without free delivery, I had the matter up this week with an official of the department who has charge of this work, while on a visit to Minneapolis, where he is now working on a matter of the same character. He promised to come here soon and look into the situation thoroughly. When he does I will forcibly present our case to him, showing him over the entire ground, and it will be no fault of mine if everybody having the necessary requirements to entitle them to free delivery within our city limits does not get it."

NO MORE "BARGAINS" IN WIRELESS OR CABLEGRAMS

Swamped by a rush of wireless and cable messages between war-torn Europe and America, cable and wireless companies have announced that deferred messages, week-end service and half-rate cables or wireless messages will not be accepted until further notice.

Recent storms along the Atlantic coast also have made the task of caring for the enormous amount of business a difficult one, officials of the Western Union Telegraph and Marconi Wireless companies say.

OLD RESIDENT DIES SITTING ON STUMP

Death overtook L. H. Olson, 60, an old resident of Northern Minnesota, while he was sitting on a tree stump near the road leading to Palmer station yesterday.

His companion, standing nearby, attracted by Mr. Olson's silence, reached out his hand to touch him, and found that life already was extinct. They were on their way to Palmer from a small tract of land near there owned by Mr. Olson, in order to purchase some supplies.

The body was brought to Crawford & Sons undertaking rooms last night. Two nieces, Mrs. Frank Lundberg and Mrs. D. W. Johnson, live in this city. Mrs. Elm of Kenosha, Wis., a sister, also survives.

Mr. Olson was single and lived in this part of the state for thirty-five years. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Loss of Life Placed at Sixteen.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Jan. 7.—Reports reaching here from the points on the Ohio river where the Pittsburgh & Charleston packet Kanawha was wrecked Wednesday night, said that the body of Mrs. Beegle of Racine, Ohio, a passenger, had been recovered early today. O. E. Sisson, second mate, today placed the dead and missing at sixteen.

COUNCIL TO DISCUSS SALARY SCHEDULES

Salary schedules for all the city employes during 1916, including a large number of increases and several "cuts" will be discussed informally by the city commissioners at a special conference scheduled for 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Each commissioner will recommend the schedule for his department, and it is expected that the entire list will be decided on today, so that Commissioner Voss can introduce a resolution at the regular meeting next Monday, authorizing the salary changes.

Commissioner Silberstein, safety head, will ask for a blanket raise of $5 a month for all patrolmen, beginning July 1 next, while Commissioner Farrell, works head, has prepared a schedule of raises for about fifteen members of his division. Secretary Culver is given the largest raise of $600 a year, bringing his salary to $2,400.

Mayor Prince and Commissioners Voss and Merritt said this morning that they will ask for two or three slight raises for their respective departments. Just what "cuts" are desired, the commissioners refused to divulge this morning, saying that the matter will probably come up at the conference this afternoon. If not, then the matter will be definitely settled when the schedule comes before a vote of the council next Monday.

OPPOSED TO CIVIC BOARDS

Merritt and Prince Say They Would Divide Responsibilty.

Think Proposed Amendment Would Be a Step Backwards.

Mayor Prince is still opposed to the re-establishment of the old civic boards, claiming that the fundamental principle of commission government is to place the commissioners in charge of their resuective departments, making them solely responsible for the enforcement of all regulations and the economic operation of the divisions.

"Civic boards," he said this morning in regard to the proposed charter amendment making the appointment of boards mandatory, "will simply give the commissioner an opportunity to shift the responsibilities. And that is just what commission government and the city manager plan are attempting to evade.

"If fault is found with my department and I am working with two or three non-salaried boards, it is very simple for me to declare that the boards opposed my plans and that, as a result, they are to blame. At present, each one of us is responsible for everything done and the public knows where to put the blame.

"By re-establishing these old boards, such as the library, park and water and light, the city will simply revert to the old system and lose the real significance and value of the commission form of government. I don't know who suggested the plan to the members of the charter commission, but I am sure that the general public is not in favor of such a rearrangement. I was against such a plan when we took office two years ago and am still of the same opinion."

Merritt Agrees.

Commissioner Merritt, head of the utility division, agrees with the mayor, but said this morning that if the people vote for the re-establishment of the boards he will abide by their wishes.

"We are on the job every day of the year," he said, "and do not need special boards. In the old days, when the aldermen came around to the city hall but once a week, such boards were necessary. Right now it is different and each commissioner is responsible for his department. We bring our matters before the entire council, which is, in reality, a board by itself."

Only Mayor Prince and Commissioner Merritt commented on the proposed charter amendment, as the re-establishment of civic boards would affect only their departments.

ARTISTIC TRIBUTE TO HENRY F. GREENE

R. W. GRASSI.

R. W. Grassi, draftsman in the city engineer's office, has just completed an engrossed copy of the resolution of condolence on the death of the late Henry F. Greene, city attorney.

Local engineers and artists who have seen the drawing, say that it is perfect in every detail. The Gothic script of the Sixteenth century is used, symbolic of the kind used by the early Episcopalians, of which church the late Mr. Greene was a member.

All the work was done by hand, Mr. Grassi gilding all the capital letters and the border. The hour glass, with the sand run down, symbolic of death, and the palms, exemplifying immortal life, are distinct features of the drawing.

The resolution was signed yesterday by Mayor Prince and the city commissioners and after being attested to by City Clerk Borgen, was prepared for mailing to Mrs. Greene, widow of the former city attorney.

Mr. Grassi studied drawing at an Italian college in Torino, Italy, where his mother now resides. He came to this country ten years ago and to Duluth in 1912.

ABSCONDING YOUTH WILL FACE MUSIC

Williams, Confessed Milwaukee Embezzler, Will Be Prosecuted.

Determined to "face the music," Reginald Germain Williams, 25, a prominent young man of Milwaukee, sat on a bench in the boys' department of the city jail and told police he wanted to go back and "square himself" for the embezzlement of $500 from the Marine National bank of that city.

Up until the day before Christmas, Williams was one of the most trusted employes of the institution, and when he disappeared mysteriously, friends began to fear that he was a victim of foul play.

After spending most of the holidays in Minneapolis and St. Paul, he came to Duluth, where he went "broke." Unable to pay his bill at a local hotel, he walked into police headquarters yesterday and told Lieut. N. U. G. Terry that he was "down and out" and that he wanted a job.

The officer arranged to help him, but at the last minute Williams weakened, and said there was no use of getting work, because he was wanted in Milwaukee.

"I may as well have it over with," he said.

George H. Gilbert of the firm of Abbott, MacPherran, Lewis and Gilbert, local representatives of the bonding company with which Williams was secured, conferred with the police, and with the young man, today.

Williams announced his intention of returning home, and said he would not fight extradition. The bonding company will prosecute, it was said.

"SURE DID MISS THE TONIC."

Theft of Face Lotion and Other Articles Send Man to Farm.

One soiled brown shirt, plus a dollar razor, plus a bottle of "face tonic," equals twenty days at the work farm.

Murdock Gillis, 48, never has gone to school very much, but his knowledge of mathematics enabled him to figure out the above truth this morning in municipal court. Judge W. H. Smallwood was the teacher.

Murdock entered the room of Walter Priest, a friend of his, and walked off with the property, the testimony showed. Walter didn't care about the shirt, and he could have stood the loss of the razor, but he sure did miss that "face tonic" as he puts it.

The testimony did not reveal the exact nature of the "face tonic," but the victim said today was his day to shave, and he didn't know whether he would do it now or not.

"What's the use of shaving if you haven't got any face tonic?" he asked.

Nobody could answer his question.

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question is asked every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but often due to disordered blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the system better able to withstand the varying elements. This is the important reason why Scott's Emulsion should always be taken for colds, and it does more—builds strength to prevent sickness.

Scott's Emulsion contains Nature's rare strength-building fats, so skillfully blended that the blood profits from every drop. It is free from harmful drugs or alcohol. Sold at drug stores—always get the genuine.

CHINESE REBELS LOOT CUSTOMS

Further Trouble Expected as It Is Believed Troops Are Corrupted.

Canton, China, Jan. 7.—One hundred armed men at midday attacked and looted the Chinese custom house on the boundary of Kowloon. The marauders posted proclamations describing themselves as revolutionaries.

Further trouble is expected here at any time, as it is believed that the rebels have corrupted the government troops.

The town of Kowloon is situated in the peninsula of the same name, opposite the island of Hongkong. The boundary referred to in the above dispatch evidently is that which divides Chinese territory from the British colony.

Missionaries Withdraw.

Shanghai, Jan. 7.—The authorities of the province of Sze-Chuen have been advised of the withdrawal of Christian missionaries from interior stations.

Sze-Chuen is one of the western provinces of China, bordering on Tibet.

Baudette, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Jefferson highway, which comes to Bemidji, will, on good authority, pass through this place. It is expected that leaving Bemidji it will follow the county line as far as Clementson and from there follow the Elwell road to this place. From here it will go to Warroad, thence to Roseau, and from there to Winnipeg. The road follows along the river and will be a great attraction to tourists.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

Gathering to Be Held at Fargo Jan. 8, Jackson Day.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—A call has been issued for a meeting of state Democrats to be held here tomorrow, "Jackson day," but it is claimed that only members of the so-called "McArthur faction" have been invited.

The call was sent out over the signature of Judge John Carmody of Hillsboro, who is now in the city attending the session of the United States district court, Judge Carmody being assistant United States district attorney.

The call says: "We have it from the best authorities that 'in the multitude of counselors there is wisdom.' Therefore, in order to get the benefit of the wisdom of the Democrats of the state it is thought advisable to call a meeting of those interested."

The salary of W. J. Trescott, county superintendent of mines, was placed at $100 a month and he will also receive his expenses.

Assessors are Appointed.

Assessors for the several unorganized district of the county were appointed. These were named: Charles Swan, district No. 1; J. A. Sheriff Sunderson was authorized to employ an additional deputy sheriff at a salary of $100 per month.

The board voted to transfer an overbalance of $276.70 in the last year's contingent fund of Ralph A. Stone, county attorney, to the revenue fund. The state laws require that there be no balance left in the contingent fund at the beginning of a new year. After taking this action the commissioners caused $500 to be transferred from the revenue fund to the county attorney's 1916 contingent fund.

Percy Warner was appointed engineer to take a sectional survey subdividing township 57-24. The accounts of the offices of Frank Sherman, county auditor, and John McMahon, county treasurer, were examined and approved.

POSTPONE ELECTION.

Virginia Commercial Club to Choose Officers Jan. 20.

Virginia, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Because of the absence of President M. A. Murphy the Commercial club at its meeting last night did not elect officers. The election was postponed till Jan. 20.

William Rooney, President Murphy, Lawrence M. Barrett, Edward J. Larson and Douglas Greeley were appointed to represent the club at the opening of the new Mountain Iron village hall, Jan. 14.

That the roads between Virginia and Gilbert should be plowed was a contention made by Lawrence M. Barrett.

The club accepted the invitation of Manager Nathan Keller to attend the opening game of the Range Basketball league here Monday night between the Virginia and Buhl teams.

That he has the Dressen wagon patent and can make wagons at a reasonable cost was a statement by Dan McGhee of Burkhart, Wis., who, in a letter, asked whether Virginia capital would be interested in wagon manufacturing.

Acting President Eaton urged the members of the club to continue working for the passage of the proposed amendment to the city charter, which provides that not more than $5,000 should be appropriated by the city council for Commercial club purposes.

One Need In Tuberculosis

is careful attention to hygienic living and proper diet. Science is agreed that fresh air, rest and avoidance of food excesses constitute the most effective non-medical treatment in this widespread disease.

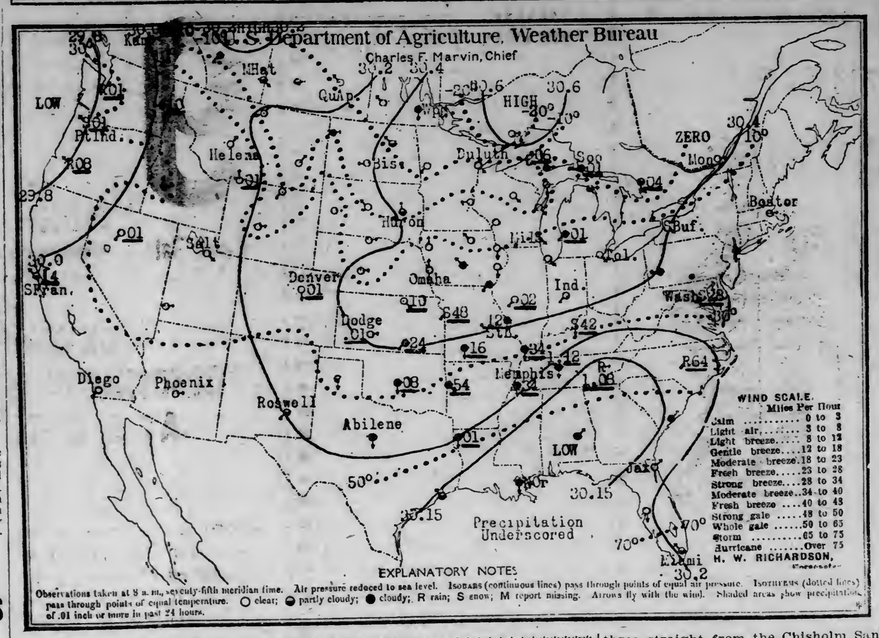

Often, however, these measures need supplementing by proper medication. The system lacks sufficient resistance to overcome the attack, and something must be done to assist in upbuilding the patient's strength.

In many cases of this sort Eckman's Alterative has been used with marked success. Its efficacy in this disease has borne fruit in a record of numerous apparent recoveries, and where a tonic is indicated, it has produced most beneficial results.

Since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try. At your druggist's or direct from

PARTLY CLOUDY

This morning was somewhat different from yesterday, may be said with a good deal of truth. Even though the weather was nothing of the Florida order, that agitated Duluth frames were absent, and getting into one's attire this morning was not so much of an effort and not nearly so urgent. The day is truly delightful, and sunshine always helps a lot anyway no matter what the temperature is.

A year ago today, snow fell and it was cold. The sun rose this morning at 7:53 and will set this evening at 4:36, giving eight hours and forty-three minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The temperature has risen somewhat over Central states, the Northwest and the greater portion of the lake region, and has fallen over Eastern Canada, North Atlantic states and Alberta. Zero weather prevails over most of Canada, Northern Michigan and Northern Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana, the lowest reported temperature for last night being —28 deg. at Winnipeg, while at Duluth it was —12 deg. Snow or rain fell during Thursday or last night over portions of the lake region, most of the Central and Middle Atlantic states, Northern California, Nevada, Oregon and Washington. Heavy rains occurred over Central and Eastern Tennessee."

Cocoanut Oil Fine for Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonsful will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—Advertisement.

Eat Without Fear of Sourness, Heartburn, Belching or Dyspepsia.

The Moment "Pape's Diapepsin" Reaches Stomach All Distress Goes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lays like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of dyspepsia, sick headache, biliousness, constipation, griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that fermentation and sour stomach is causing the misery of indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble catarrh of the stomach, nervousness or gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that instant relief is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out of order stomach within five minutes; and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort all of any kind of food you eat.

LINDBERGH WILL STICK

Writes J. J. Opsahl of Bemidji He Will Still Strive to Be Governor.

Claims Elevation of Republican to Governorship Does Not Change Matters.

Bemidji, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Following the public announcement of Congressman Charles A. Lindbergh that he would not withdraw in his contest to obtain the Republican nomination for governor because of the death of Governor Hammond and elevation of J. A. A. Burnquist, a Republican, to the governorship, J. J. Opsahl of this city gave out the following letter which he has just received from Mr. Lindbergh:

"Washington, Jan. 2, 1916.—J. J. Opsahl, Bemidji, Minn. Dear Opsahl: I feel that Tuesday is the time that I should make my announcement of the fact that my candidacy is not a personal matter, and that the accident of the loss of the governor is not a matter that should in any way change the situation. It would be impossible for me, even if I desired to do so, which I don't, to change now without being obliged to apologize to almost innumerable persons for having been a candidate at all. The very purposes for which I became a candidate exist just as much now as they existed before, and it is utterly impossible for me, as I say, even if I wished to withdraw, to do so without appearing ridiculous. I have had no thought of withdrawing. The only reason I write about it is because a number of people have suggested that I should withdraw. I figure that no few fellows have the right by a process of elimination to take from the people the chance to make a choice.

"I think the above lines express sufficiently my position so that you will understand it. I am sure that you will agree with me, because I know what your thoughts are along this subject. Sincerely, "C. A. LINDBERGH."

Continues in Race.

Coincident with the Lindbergh letter, Mr. Opsahl announced that he would have been willing to have withdrawn as a candidate for congress had Mr. Lindbergh seen fit to drop from the state race and again try for congress. In the absence of such action, Mr. Opsahl declares he will remain in the race for congress. He is regarded as a Lindbergh man.

MOST OF INJURED WILL RECOVER

One May Die as Result of Wreck of Electric Car.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—With possibly one exception all of the thirty passengers injured and burned in the wreck of an interurban car on the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric railway, near Willmette, a suburb, last night, will recover, according to attending physicians today.

A man, whose identity has not been established and who has not regained consciousness, is not expected to live, the physicians said. Several of the passengers taken to hospitals were able to leave after their injuries had been dressed.

The car, which was traveling at high speed, left the track as it struck a curve, turned over and then caught fire. Members of the car's crew insisted the car was not traveling in excess of ten miles an hour.

William Oppenheimer of Highwood, Ill., motorman of the car, was taken into custody by the police pending an investigation.

LACK OF HARMONY IN CHARITY WORK

Fargo Ministers Are Seeking to Bring About Co-operation.

Fargo, N. D., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charity work in Fargo seems to be due for a shakeup in the near future in order to get all denominations in the city working together through the Associated Charities, and there seems to be indication that the Associated Charities will come in for its share of the disturbance.

For a time after the Associated Charities was organized the work progressed very harmoniously, but from time to time one or more of the churches assisting and the individuals engaged in it have dropped out, with the result that at the present time there are few of the religious denominations working through the Associated Charities at all. The Salvation Army is working separately, Glad Tidings mission is working separately and others are doing the same thing.

Realizing that there was something wrong somewhere and with the idea of getting all factions together in the work, through the Associated Charities as the clearing house, a large number of the ministers of the city got together and appointed an investigating committee to look into the causes of the unsystematic charity work being done and to recommend ways and means of harmonizing the work.

Those on Committee.

This committee is not after anyone's E. Peterson of the First Baptist church, the other members being Bishop J. Poyntz Tyler, Episcopallan; Rev. Graham, Presbyterian, and Dr. J. M. Walters, Methodist Episcopal. This committee has done considerable work in the matter of investigation and another meeting of the ministers will be held on next Tuesday, when it is probable that recommendations will be made as to the method of procedure necessary to gain the desired results.

This committee is ot after anybody's scalp, but has been named to learn the true facts and conditions and attempt to apply a remedy so that there will, in the future, be a systematic method of distributing charity in this city.

FIND MANY CHANGES.

Mr. Smith left on Tuesday morning for Williams, where he will place his twelve teams, which he brought with him from the Dakota prairies, to work during the logging season.

ANTIGO SCHOOL BURNS.

Fire Catches in Early Morning and It Burns Rapidly.

Antigo, Wis., Jan. 7.—Following an explosion heard all over the city at 3 a. m. yesterday, fire destroyed the high school building, with a loss of $100,000.

Had the explosion, presumably of the boilers, taken place seven hours later, it would have been impossible for all the pupils to escape.

Three churches have offered their guild halls for classes. Other rooms are available in the city hall and courthouse.

INDIAN DELEGATION SENT TO WASHINGTON

Ball Club, Minn., Jan. 7.—A delegation consisting of Sam Lyons, Sr., Dave Bemway and Charles Wakefield, representing the Chippewa Indians of this district, has left for Washington to appear before Cato Sells, commissioner of Indian affairs, and a committee of congress, in the interest of Chippewa claims now pending.

Special efforts will be made to obtain favorable action on claims of Indians at the Leech Lake reservation, involving a fund of $760,000 which the Chippewas assert they are entitled to as an outright payment. They are now receiving only small payments at long intervals, according to Lyons, and some of the tribesmen are sorely in need of funds to tide them over the winter.

The Indians say the delay in apportioning the funds has worked a hardship upon the tribe and Commissioner Sells will be asked to aid them in bringing the proposed apportionment to the attention of congress in the hope that action may be taken at this session.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results From an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyperacidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heatburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jads Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.—Advertisement.

Happy, Happy Wash Day! SKITCH Made It So

No More Rubbing Clothes on a Washboard—No More Making Your Hands Tender And Sore in Hot Suds—Use SKITCH.

Who'd be so foolish as to rub clothes on a wash-board now when SKITCH will clean your clothes better and quicker without rubbing? SKITCH is a wonder! Use three teaspoons of SKITCH to a boilerful of clothes and it just skitches the dirt out of the clothes while you sit and rest or do up your other work. Mrs. Alice Juhre of 540 Stowell Ave., Milwaukee, says: "My clothes are all out on the line now by 9 o'clock. It used to be 12 and often later before I was done. And I would be so worn out from bending over a wash-board. SKITCH is a perfect godsend to women."

Don't worry for a minute that SKITCH can hurt your clothes. SKITCH positively is guaranteed not to injure the finest fabric. It's so harmless you can even eat a handful of it without hurt.

Get a 10 cent package of SKITCH from your grocer and try it—seven big washings in every package—just a little over a cent to save the hard work of a wash day—less than the soap used in the rubbing would cost. If your grocer won't supply you with SKITCH send his name to me and I'll send you a free sample. Hans Fichtenberg, Milwaukee, Wis.

DULUTH HOCKEY LEAGUE SHOULD DEVELOP RAPIDLY

Local Players Will Become Stars Just as Other Cities Have Produced Clever Performers; Collins in Optimistic Vein; Hetmanek Hooked on in Easy Fashion.

BY BRUCE.

INCORPORATING the Duluth Amateur Hockey league is a move distinctly in the right direction. In the time that is to lope along in the future, Duluth is to have a real, sure enough hockey organization, and there is no mistake regarding that prophecy.

There is not a real hockey center in the country that is not a hockey center solely from the fact that it has developed its own players and thus created local interest in the game.

Practically all the players in the Copper country are boys that have learned the game on home rinks and who have habitated around the home hearth lo these many years. When, in the past, Duluth wanted to acquire possession of a "big league" hockey team, it had to jaunt forth and snatch players from distant points.

If the local league maintains its spirit and grows progressive with the fugiting of tempus, the day will not be far distant when home players will be developed of a sterling worth measuring up to that possessed by the best stars of foreign birth.

The Hammy Bakers and other stars did not come in a single season. We have kids growing up here who will be real stars in the near future. This season should see some earnest blossoming forth upon the part of players that are just finding their stride. Home hockey is just in its infancy here; the future holds some real development for it.

The Commenting Clemens.

BIG BOB CLEMENS, the Boer grappler, assisted in the training of Ed "Strangler" Lewis for his bout with Joe Stecker. That contest went two hours before Stecker finally won. According to the opinion of Clemens, Stecker is the better of the two and the most deceiving wrestler in the world.

"When I first came to the United States and knew practically nothing of catch-as-catch-can wrestling, it took Frank Gotch thirteen minutes to beat me," said Clemens. "Now here is this Stecker, a mere kid, beating me in seven minutes. I've wrestled with Yussiff Mahmout and honestly, now, I don't know which is better, the Bulgarian or this young Nebraska boy. Stecker is different from all of the rest of them, and he can do more things to you in a different way than any of the rest of them."

Mike Collins, Once More.

BEFORE departing the chilly climes of Chicago for the more or less sultry atmosphere of New Orleans, with the Creole trimmings and languorous feelings, Michael E. Collins uttered prophetic sayings as to what Fulton would do not only to Porky Flynn, but others as well.

Mike chanted forth the threat that Fulton will clean Flynn and then jaunt East and make a quick and spectacular finish of a bevy of the pugilistic paraders who are foxtrotting in the public eye at the present time. After messing a swarm of glove wielders around, Mike figures that the public will rise to its hind feet and shrilly call for a meeting between Jess and Fred.

We hope Michael is correct in his premises and that all works out to his way of calculating.

Oh the Fickle Fans.

FRED CLARKE served a long and honorable term of service as both player and manager in the Pirate camp. Now he has severed his connection with the Corsairs, and that fact is glossed over, quickly forgotten and scarcely leaves a soft ripple of aftermath.

Verily, the large deeds of man are speedily forgotten in the quickly shifting world of baseball.

Coming Easy for Postmaster.

O. F. HETMANEK was postmaster of Dodge, Neb., and presumably doing fairly well at the job, when up bobs young Joe Stecker and takes his first crack at fame. Hetmanek and Joe had been friends since boyhood. Hetmanek looked after some of the early matches of Stecker, and then when it was suddenly discovered that the farmer kid was a wonder, why nothing seemed more natural but that Hetmanek should hook on and manage the growing affairs of the plowboy.

Managers the length and breadth of the country eagerly reached out covetous hands in the effort to land Joe. It is said that Frank Gotch tried to get Stecker under his management, while Emil Klank was positive that he was to look after the affairs of Joe.

Unless we are mistaken, there will be a lot of conniving persons trying to get Stecker away from Hetmanek. That's the way of the unfeeling world. Wealth generally dog trots to the pace making of fame, and as Stecker is acquiring fame very rapidly these days, it stands to reason that he is going to accumulate some of the filthy stuff that some unemotional folks set fire to buildings to obtain.

FIGHT CARD IS DECIDED

All Preliminaries Arranged for the Gibbons-Young Ahearn Contest.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 7.—With the signing Wednesday of the boxers who are to appear in the four-round curtain-raiser for the Capital City Athletic club's big fistic show to be held at the St. Paul auditorium, Tuesday night, Jan. 18, the bill was definitely settled.

Mike Gibbons and Young Ahearn, premier middleweights in their respective countries, are the offering in the windup and Leo Kossick, the tough Moorhead, Minn., boy, and Buff Seidel of St. Paul, another rough and ready battler, in the semi-windup.

Jack Burke, a cousin of Mike Gibbons, and Mike's sparring partner for more than two years, has signed to meet Charley Lawson, another good fighter who lives in Minneapolis. These boys will weigh in at 138 pounds at 3 o'clock.

For the curtain-raiser, "Kid" Morris, a game little Englishman, who has not been seen in this locality, will meet Eddie Burke, another son of John Bull, who has made a hit in every fight he has entered. At Duluth, not long ago, he went ten tough rounds with Jimmy Azine and only recently, at the last show in St. Paul, easily won over Frankie Snyder of Elizabeth, N. J.

GERMANS, DISGUISED AS CHINESE, CAUGHT

Four Men Are Arrested on Trans-Siberian Train.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Harbin, Nov. 18.—Three Germans disguised as Chinese were arrested on the night of Nov. 15 on a Trans-Siberian train at Tsitsikar, 200 miles west of Harbin.

The conductor saw one of the men looking out of a window in the corridor of one of the coaches, while the train was crossing a large bridge over Nonna river. When questioned, the man in Chinese garb refused to talk. The conductor pulled off the passenger's cap and queue and discovered that the man had brown hair and had stained his skin the color of a Chinese.

A search through the train resulted in the discovery of three other passengers similarly disguised. All of the men were detained at Tsitsikar.

A heavy guard has been placed over all the bridges on the Trans-Siberian line. So many attempts have been made upon bridges since the beginning of the war that special squads now board all trains and examine the passengers before a train is permitted to cross a bridge.

"I'M RIGHT," SAYS BROWN

Range Boxer Declares That He Is in Old-Time Form.

Pal Brown and Joe Thomas got in from Chicago early today, the boxer and his manager coming back from Windsor, Ont., by way of Chicago.

"Pal made a great fight," said Thomas. "I said that all he needed was a fight or two under his belt, and it looks as if I was right. Pal hit hard and showed his old form against Sammy Taylor. He is back now where he was before the trouble with his eyes."

Thomas was asked concerning the report that Dr. Schneider declared Brown's eyes were in a very serious condition. "That was a fabrication, pure and simple," said he. "It was sent out by a Milwaukee string fiend. Dr. Schneider said, as a matter of fact, that Pal's eyes were right and gave him some medicine to use. The nerves were strained, but there is nothing fundamentally wrong with his vision."

Joe declares that Windsor wants Pal right back again and that he has already received numerous offers for the services of the range fighter.

"It looks as if I've got going again," said Pal. "I felt fine and seemed to have regained my old-time form. I guess it was the long layoff as much as anything else that made me look bad in that first fight. I think I'm going to be O. K. now."

BIG TOURNEY IS ASSURED

Many Pin Men to Attend Northern Bowling Association Meet.

No definite action was taken last evening during the meeting of the local officers and members of the Northern League Bowling association. The meeting was called for the purpose of electing officers for the tournament that will be staged in Duluth the week of March 11. It was decided to defer the election until Sunday afternoon.

It is believed that the tournament of this season will surpass any previous efforts of the Northern Bowling association. Outside bowlers declare that but comparatively few teams will be sent to the A. B. A. tournament this year, and because of that fact it is expected that the Northern will get many individual bowlers and teams that have in past years passed up the local tourney in favor of the A. B. A. pin meet.

More than the usual number of teams are expected from the Twin Cities, while teams are also expected from Wisconsin, Northern Minnesota and Dakota.

Mike McDermott, champion at the 100 and 200-yard breast stroke, lowered his record for the 100-yard from 1 minute, 13 2-5 seconds, to 1 minute 11 4-5 seconds.

WEBB HERALDS BIG YEAR IN HOCKEY

President of American Amateur Hockey Association Not Discouraged By What War Has Done to Sport; Expects Much of St. Paul Team.

Calumet, Mich., Jan. 7.—"Keep your eyes on that St. Paul-Minneapolis hockey team," advised President C. E. Webb of the American Amateur Hockey association this week. President Webb visited Calumet for the opening game of the schedule between Houghton's Portage Lake team and Calumet and was tickled with the brand of sport put up in the initial clash of these teams. He said that he looks for a very bright hockey season, the biggest season that the sport has ever known in the Northwest or in all of the United States.

President Webb understands, of course, that the war has taken many of Canada's premier players to the trenches in France and to concentration camps and that the game is suffering in the dominion this year even more than it did a year ago. But it is a big season in this country and will go down in hockey history as a pioneer year in the sport.

President Webb expects that Detroit, possibly the Cleveland Athletic club and two or three other big Central States will organize a branch of the association by next winter. An Eastern branch will also organize. The very fastest hockey in the country, the fastest amateur hockey in the world, will be played in the Western branch of the association, he holds, however. This branch is made up of Sault Ste. Marie, Calumet, Portage Lake and St. Paul. And President Webb advises the other teams to look out "for that St. Paul team."

The league head realizes that Ray St. Johns, the St. Paul manager, has a mighty fast team already on the ice and that he will strengthen it, if possible, before meeting the Sault team, world's amateur champions, or the Copper country teams. St. Paul comes to Calumet Jan. 24 and 25 for two games, the first away from home. Portage Lake plays at St. Paul Monday and Tuesday of next week, and will present a much stronger lineup than in the first game at Calumet as three or four new men have been signed.

President Webb believes Duluth and Minneapolis will have teams in the association next year.

NEW YORK SPORT GOSSIP

Big Revival of Interest in Track Meets—From Willard to Flynn—Football and Tennis.

New York, Jan. 7.—Reports received at the national headquarters of the Amateur Athletic union in this city indicate a remarkable season of activity on both indoor and outdoor tracks during the coming year. Applications for sanctions are being received from all parts of the country and it is predicted that 1916 will witness more track meets, both open and closed, than any previous year in the history of the union.

Scores of sanctions for the holding of games in almost every section of the nation have been granted by either the national or divisional associations of the A. A. U. and there appears to be no let-up in the demand. These meets taken in conjunction with the various games planned by the colleges, universities and intercollegiate bodies, form a schedule which provides board or indoor track competition in some portion of the country for almost every day of the next six months.

Among the more important meets with the date and place for the holding of the contests are the following: Illinois A. C. indoor, Chicago, Jan. 20; Millrose A. A., indoor, New York, Jan. 26; Junior A. A. U., championships indoor, New York, Jan. 29; Boston A. A., indoor, Boston, Feb. 5; Johns Hopkins university, indoor, Baltimore, Feb. 12; Georgetown university, indoor, Washington, Feb. 19; Intercollegiate A. A. A. A., indoor, New York, March 4; open air meet, New Orleans, March 5 and 12; Middle Western conference, indoor, Evanston, Ill., March 11-18; Senior A. A. U., championships indoor, New York, March 18; Missouri A. A., indoor, St. Louis, March 18.

Following these meets and a host of minor games will come the dual outdoor track contests between the college teams of all parts of the states. April, May and the early portion of June will witness hundreds of these dual and triangular competitions, all leading up to the final championship games of the various sections of the country. Not satisfied with the prospects of winning honors in their own territory several of the stronger college track and field teams are already planning to invade territory far removed from their own campus and these intersectional tests of speed and strength promise to be among the most interesting features of the coming season.

From being matched with Jess Willard to meeting Porky Flynn is quite some drop for Fred Fulton but if the latter is really in earnest in his efforts to obtain a chance at the heavyweight title he will consider the bout as a stepping stone to higher ring circles.

In the mind of the average follower of sport there is a wide gulf between football and tennis, yet a number of husky collegians spend their spring and summer in wielding a racquet and find themselves fit in the fall for the strenuous season of varsity gridiron work. This is no new angle to the court game, for twenty years ago the college athlete was mixing football and tennis but not to the extent that prevails today. Robert D. Wrenn, the retiring president of the National Lawn Tennis association, and George T. Adee, who is slated to succeed him, were rival quarterbacks in the famous Yale-Harvard game at Springfield in 1894. Wrenn gave the signals for Harvard while Adee acted as field general for Yale and made the All-American eleven of that year.

Veteran football enthusiasts will never forget that game. Yale won 12 to 4 but only after a battle which was more like modern warfare than football. Players were carried off the gridiron in relays and the sidelines resembled a field hospital. As a result of the conflict the two universities decided that they had enough football to last for several years and Harvard and Yale did not meet on the gridiron again until 1897.

DULUTH AMATEUR HOCKEY TEAMS IN TWO CONTESTS

Universals Will Meet the Northerns and Bagleys and Big Duluths Will Clash at Big Curling Club Rink—Two Fast Games Are Looked For.

Tonight at the curling club the Northerns will meet the Universals in what is expected to prove a bangup hockey contest, and the Bagleys will oppose the strong Big Duluth team.

The two contests of this evening will be the second of the season, the Bagleys defeating the Universals and the Northerns trimming the clothiers in the premier of the league season.

All four of the teams have had the opportunity of a week's practice since the opening game, and it is expected that the brand of playing presented this evening will open the eyes of the veteran followers of the sport.

The opening games gave the various managers a line on their material and gave them some hints that have been acted upon. Hard practice sessions have been gone through with this week and the teams will start in the very best of condition.

Manager Ed Harris of the Universals is confident that his team will defeat the Northerns, while Dave Larson is equally confident that his hardware dealers will take a fall out of the flour makers.

Manager Ed Norsted believes the defeat of his team at the hands of the Northerns last week was a mistake and that his boys wil come up to advance expectations by defeating the Bagleys.

The playing of the Bagleys was the real sensation of last Thursday's opening event. The jewelry team sprang a genuine surprise, and Manager Al Swanstrom says there will be other surprises in store for the fans.

With the very pick of the amateurs of Duluth in the lineup of the four teams and with every man working hard to get right and make the showing of his life, some great hockey is expected from the teams.

The race gives early promise of being a corker. So far there seems little choice between the teams. All appear evenly matched and it looks like a fight with honors hanging on a slim balance.

DARBY SIGNS TWO RECRUITS

Lane, a Pitcher, and Pass, an Outfielder, Are Coralled.

Ed Lane, a pitcher, and D. J. Pass, an outfielder, have been signed by Darby O'Brien for the Duluth baseball team for next season. Both of these boys played at Sioux Falls, S. D., last year, and according to the Duke, both of them are crackerjacks.

"I have been on the trail of these lads for several years," said Darby today. "I have landed them at last. Lane is a real comer and Pass is a sweet hitter and one of the fastest outfielders in the sticks."

O'Brien declared that he has received numerous offers for Harry Wolfe, but that he believed the shortstop would be back in the Sox lineup the coming year. The Irish Orator is also trying to hang on to Kirkham.

SUPERIOR TEAM WINS FROM COMPANY E NINE

The Superior indoor baseball team last evening defeated the Duluth Company E team by the score of 16 to 5. The boys from across the bay walloped the ball in good shape and played a rattling good game. The lineup:

FRENCH WAR PICTURES AROUSE SPECTATORS TO ENTHUSIASM

DRESSED FOR FIRST LINE TRENCH FIGHTING.

The French government's official war pictures, "Fighting in France," will be shown at the Lyceum for four days beginning Sunday, Jan. 9.

There are many scenes which stir the spectators to a pitch of highest enthusiasm. The scene showing the famous Goumiers from the Sahara desert charging in headlong gallop is one of these. At the same time it is, according to experts, one of the most beautiful scenes ever enacted before a camera. The beauty of the groups of horses as they come galloping down the sand hills with their riders swinging their swords high in the air cannot be described. There are no fewer than 10,000 Goumiers shown in the charge. At first they dash along the very edge of the ocean, through the surf itself, sending it up in showers of spray that dances in the sunlight.

Then on they go over the sand hills dotted with goose bushes and down straight for the audience. Many a spectator cannot resist rising on his feet and cheering as the gallant horsemen sweep by. Many of the scenes shown on the screen are the grim glimpses of modern warfare, but the Goumiers give a touch of the old-time glory of war. These men are galloping to death as the knights of old went to theirs. These pictures were taken by members of the camera corps of the French army under the direction of the French general staff and were loaned to the New York World to exhibit in America, through their war correspondent, E. Alexander Powell, who spent eight weeks' time trying to secure the government's consent to showing them.

An interesting scene is that which shows the damage that has been done to Reims cathedral.

STORIES OF THE OPERAS

"Aida," Friday evening: A grand opera in four acts by Verdi. The scene is laid in Memphis and Thebes in Pharaoh's time. The opera was written by request of the viceroy of Egypt, who wished to celebrate the opening of his new opera house at Cairo by the production of a work upon an Egyption theme from the pen of the most popular composer of his time. The story originated with Marietta Bey, the famous Egyptologist, and seems to have inspired Verdi to unusual efforts.

Act. I.

Aida, daughter of Ethiopia's king, is held in servitude by the Egyptians. She loves Radames, who loves her. Amneris, daughter of the king of Egypt, is, although it is unrevealed, also in love with Radames. The latter is chosen leader of troops to resist the invading Ethiopians. He is victorious.

Act II.

Amneris learens that Radames loves Aida, which fact she has suspected. She becomes furious. Among the prisoners of Radames is Amonasro, Aida's father, though his rank is not known to his captors. The king liberates all prisoners save Aida and Amonasro. He furthermore gives to the unwilling Radames the hand of his daughter in marriage.

Act. III.

Radames, whose marriage with Amneris is about to take place, resolves to flee with Aida and Amonasro, but is apprehended by the high priest, Ramfis, and Amneris.

Act IV.

He is tried for treason and condemned to death, notwithstanding the entreaties of Amneris in his behalf. The last scene shows the reunion in death of Aida and the hero.

SATURDAY MATINEE.

First Opera, "Cavalleria Rusticana."

A grand opera in one act. The scene is laid in a Sicilian village. Time: the present.

The Story.

Turiddu, a young peasant, the son of Lucia, and Lola's accepted lover, is drafted as a soldier and has to join the Sicilian army. Ere departing to join his regiment he vows eternal love and affection. While he is absent, Lola accepts the addresses of the village teamster, Alfio, and weds him.

Having served his term, Turiddu is discharged from the military service and returns home, much improved in bearing and manners by his military experience. Upon learning that Lola has married Alfio, he courts Santuzza, and ultimately betrays her.

Meeting Lola, the old love revives, and secret meetings take place during Alfio's absence from home in the pursuit of his business to villages in the neighborhood.

On an Easter morning, during the festivities of the peasants, Alfio learns of his wife's unfaithfulness. Santuzza, in a fit of jealousy, informs him of the secret meetings of Turiddu and Lola.

Alfio challenges Turiddu to mortal combat. Turiddu repents, but accepts the challenge and is killed.

Second Opera, "Pagliacci."

A dramatic opera in two acts. The scene is laid in Calabria, near Montalto, on the Feast of the Assumption. Period: between 1865 and 1870.

Prologue.

The story is introduced by the clown, Tonio, who sings, before the curtain rises, of the tragic sorrows and passions that sway buffoons as well as the great and noble.

Act I.

Canio is the chief of a little band of strolling mountebanks. His wife, Nedda, a vain, pretty baggage, he does not trust. Tonio, a humpback, the malicious clown, makes ardent love to her in the village where they are to play the day of their arrival. She strikes him with a whip in repelling his advances. In revenge he brings Canio upon Nedda and her lover, Silvio, a farmer in the neighborhood. Silvio runs away and Canio does not see his face. There are bitter words between man and wife, and Canio, in agony, prepares for his clowning.

Act. II.

The people gather to see the show, and Silvio is in the crowd. The play is the old story of Pantaloon's jealousy and the love of Columbine and Harlequin. The crazed Canio acts with such realism that the peasants are enraptured. Suddenly he is heard to ask the name of the lover. Nedda defies him. He stabs her and then kills Silvio, who starts from his place in the crowd. Laughing madly, Canio cries out: "The comedy is finished."

GRAND OPERA AT LYCEUM

San Carlo Company Opens Duluth's Brief "Season" in "Lucia."

Zero Weather Affects the Attendance; An Excellent Organization.

"This grand opera is great," said the Lyceum usher. "It makes the theater smell so good." Of course he "cribbed" that line, but it's a good one.

Duluth didn't don its stiff shirts and its evening gowns as freely as was expected for the opening of the San Carlo Grand Opera company's engagement last evening, but the below-zero temperatures may have had something to do with it.

If the success of the performance last evening, however, is any indication, every seat should be filled tonight, and there should be a stiff collar under every male chin. The Lyceum may not be provided with a "diamond horseshoe" but with "the coppers looking up" again, Duluth should be able to do its share in providing the proper kind of an audience for grand opera tonight and tomorrow.

Few Opportunities.

Duluth's opportunities to hear the song birds have been few and far between. Of course there was the time when "Rena" didn't come with "Madame Butterfly." That company was probably the high water mark for opera in Duluth, up to the present, even though Thomas Whitney Surette later condemned Puccini to outer darkness as being pretty poor stuff. It hasn't quite held up its head in Duluth since, being classed about with Tosti's "Good-by" as music.

Then there was the company that appeared here four or five years ago, got in late on a below-zero night, and sang "Lucia" in fur coats. Also there was that famous old Italian company that stranded here, and that wonderful fat Italian baritone who tore into the Toreador song with sparks flying from every wheel. He had the spirit of a real bull fighter, with the adipose tissue of two Carusos. That was a real triumph of the spirit over the flesh.

Aside from these interludes, Duluth's experience with grand opera has consisted of saddened exiles from Sunny Italy who have sung "extracts" in the two-a-day.

Therefore when a real company, like the San Carlo organization arrives with two or three sets of soloists working in shifts, an orchestra of its own and an advance manager who wears a black fur overcoat and a stick it is up to Duluth to sit up and pay close attention.

Only Stars Known.

The average citizen can name about seven grand opera stars, and there he stops. Mary Garden, Caruso, Scotti, Farrar and one or two others rank along with Ty Cobb, Al Jolson and Jess Willard as national figures, but the names of the second flight of singers, who lack perhaps only the accumulated prestige of earnest, consistent and persistent press agenting, are a closed book. Therefore the average citizen is not quite sure whether Giuseppe Agostini is a new Italian general or a singer. But if the truth were known, there is probably very little to choose vocally and dramatically between the so-called first flight of singers and the second flight, certainly not the difference that their salaries and prestige represent. The members of the San Carlo company may be in the second flight, in the sense of notoriety, but the audience at the Lyceum last evening wasn't worrying about that while Mme. Edvige Vaccari was singing her famous "mad scene" with the flute accompaniment, nor while the sextet was sending thrills up and down the spinal column.

Lucia's gowns may have been more sumptuous in the Metropolitan settings, but there expensive gowns don't have to be shipped around the country and trailed over dusty stages. In the Metropolitan the singers would not have been compelled to rest on modern mission furniture in an ancient Scotch setting, but the San Carlo singers deliver the real substance of opera without the frills in a wholly satisfying manner. It is an excellent, well-balanced, hard-working organization, that has been able to live without an endowment fund because it has economized on unessentials.

"Lucia" Has Melody.

To occasional opera goers, "Lucia" is most satisfying, because it has melody. The real opera fans, the caviar contingent, make a fetich of discord, and rather scorn anything with a melody. "Lucia" may have its shortcomings as music-drama. For example, its story can hardly be called a pleasant idyll, yet the music as a whole ripples along like a purling brook, giving forth sweet melody. The occasional opera-goer, however, welcomes such lack of concordance between music and story, if it brings something he enjoys, and even if the famous sextet—or perhaps just because the famous sextet—has been ground out from every graphophone in America, it makes the blood circulate with a new impulse when six members of a company like the San Carlo organization swing into it.

Vaccari—opera singers may be spoken of thus familiarly—was a revelation both vocally and dramatically. Duluth may not have heard her before, but those who attended last evening won't soon forget her magnificent work in the mad scene. She was forced to repeat a part of it. Duluth hasn't heard Tetrazzini except in the form of preserved music, but at least Mme. Vaccari proved the Metropolitan hasn't a monopoly on great coloratura singers.

Agostini as Edgar was equally fine as Edgar—virile and dramatic.

Angelo Antola contributed much to the artistic ensemble both by his acting and vibrant baritone. Cervi, Homer and Rossini are also entitled to distinct praise for their excellent work.

The sextet was encored and it would have been a shame if it had not been, since it was a splendid exposition of the famous excerpt.

Tonight's opera will be "Aida" with an entirely new cast of singers. The story of the opera is published in another column of The Herald this evening, along with that of the double bill for tomorrow afternoon.—J. E. R.

YOUNG SCOTCH ACTRESS.

Miss Laura Cowie, With Forbes Robertson, Has Had Rapid Rise.

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, who will make his farewell appearance in this city at the Lyceum next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, will on this occasion introduce to playgoers a young English actress whose short but interesting career has won her a conspicuous place among the younger English actresses—Miss Laura Cowie.

Scotch by birth, Miss Cowie's stage experiences have been almost entirely confined to the London stage, with an occasional tour as a "featured" player in the English provinces. Miss Cowie intended to devote her career to dancing, but while she was studying in London with this idea in view, Sir Herbert Tree saw her and offered her a two-line part in his production of "Faust."

For eighteen months Miss Cowie appeared in minor roles in Tree's company and understudied Miss Marie Lohr, who was at that time Tree's leading woman. Then Miss Cowie was given the important role of Anne Boleyn in Tree's revival of "Henry VIII." Such was her success in this production, which ran for 284 nights, that Tree engaged her for leading roles in other of his Shakespearean revivals. Following her engagement at Tree's theater, Miss Cowie appeared with other London actor-managers and also made a tour of the provinces in the title role of "Maisie." When George Fawcett produced "The Great John Ganton" in London, Miss Cowie was his leading woman. She also played the role of Mici in the London production of "Seven Sisters" at the Savoy theater.

Granville Barker engaged this young actress for the role of Hermia in his "new style" revival of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the Savoy. Though her rise to success has been short, Miss Cowie has worked hard. She is never idle. Her only hobby is dancing and she is especially fond of American dances.

Theater Gossip.

VALESKA SURATT AT THE LYRIC.

One of the most widely discussed women of the stage or screen today is Valeska Suratt, or as she is called by many, "The Red Rose of the great White Way." She is known to theatergoers as the fashion-plate of the dramatic profession. Miss Suratt is the star in "The Immigrant," at the Lyric today and tomorrow.

In the first of the story Miss Suratt plays the part of a poor Russian girl in the steerage, but even in the peasant costume, grace was there. Attracted by her striking beauty two Americans become infatuated while on board the ship that brings her to the United States. One of the men, a political vagabond, compels her to become his mistress. The other is deeply in love with her. But the good triumphs and from the poor Russian girl, the star becomes a figure in society, and this enables Miss Suratt to wear some of the wonderful gowns for which she is famous.

NEW VAMPIRE FEATURE AT THE REX.

Katherine Kaelred, who made her first appearance in pictures under the direction of Thomas H. Ince at the Rex beautiful yesterday, has found unusual scope for her talents if an opinion were to be passed on her acting of the star part in "The Winged Idol," which has its last showing tomorrow. Miss Kaelred won fame in the east in her portrayal of the "woman" in "A Fool There Was" with Robert Hilliard. In that story she dragged down a worthy character by appeal to his baser passions. In this the "vampire" woman finds her "soul mate" in a character already steeped in degradation. Holding him to her by the vampire appeal, she fights with him and finally lashes him with a knout in an effort to arouse him.

NO NAVAL GUNNERS ON BOARD THE VERDI

Washington, Jan. 7.—Collector Malone's report on the Italian liner Giuseppe Verdi, which arrived at New York yesterday with two guns mounted, was received today by the treasury department and forwarded to the state department without being made public.

It is understood Collector Malone's neutrality investigators reported there were no Italian navy gunners aboard and that all the members of the crew were regularly so. The collector's opinion is understood to be that the presence of the guns has not altered the Verdi's character of a merchantman. His opinion, however, is not binding upon the state department, which is understood to look with disfavor upon any merchant ship entering American ports with armament.

It has been indicated that the department will ask the Italian government to have the guns removed before the Verdi sails.

CITY HALL SITE WILL COST $208,463

The new city hall site will cost $151,235 and 4 per cent interest since 1906, according to the latest figures prepared by J. O. Walker, deputy county auditor.

It was at first believed that the site would cost $108,000, but the discovery was made that this price is for 220 feet fronting only on First street and it is the aim of the council to buy the lots all the way through to Second street. As a result, the price has boosted past the $150,000 mark.

According to Mr. Walker, the city will have to pay a total of $208,463, including interest, for the site.

CITY GROWTH REFLECTED

New Districts Show Expansion at Woodland and Kenwood Park.

Officials Authorized to Hire Clerks in Making Out Reports.

Duluth is growing, and its steady growth is reflected in the action planned by the city council in establishing two new election districts at Woodland and Kenwood Park.

At a special meeting of the city council this morning, Mayor Prince introduced an ordinance amending the election district ordinance passed Jan. 5, 1914, providing for the establishment of two new districts in the eastern end of the city. The Sixth and Eleventh districts are divided to make room for the new Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth districts at Woodland and Kenwood respectively.

"Those sections of the city have grown very rapidly in the last two years, and are now so well populated that the residents are entitled to separate districts," Mayor Prince explained. The ordinance will be given two more readings before it comes up for passage.

The council this morning authorized the city auditor and treasurer to employ special clerks in preparing their annual reports for 1915. The clerks will work from one to two months.

City Clerk Borgen was instructed to advertise for bids on printing an index for the council proceedings during 1915.

The contract for erecting a new stack at the city incinerator plant was awarded to the Gogebic Steam Boiler works on their bid of $635.

The payrolls for the second half of December were passed and all city employes will be paid tomorrow.

Commissioner Farrell introduced ordinances appropriating $700 for the purchase of 400 square yards of sandstone block and $200 for purchasing 6,000 paving brick, all to be used in repair and maintenance work next summer.

The council passed the ordinance appropriating $20,000 for making fills and removing all the old wooden bridges in the city during this year.

ORDER SECOND PAVING JOB

Action on East Superior Street Work Taken By Council.

East Superior street was ordered paved at a special meeting of the city council this morning.

This makes the second improvement on the 1916 paving program already ordered by the council, the plan for the year outlined by Commissioner Farrell, works head, involving a total expenditure of approximately $1,000,000, the largest in the history of the city. West First street was ordered paved last Monday.

Superior street will be paved from Sixteenth to Twenty-third avenues east, either with bitulithic or asphalt, the final selection of the material to be left with the property owners. According to estimates prepared by the city engineer, bitulithic will cost $46,922 and asphalt $45,632.

About a year ago the council ordered East Superior street paved, but property owners protested and the improvement was abandoned. Last fall, however, a majority of the owners signed a new petition for the pavement and Commissioner Farrell included it in his 1916 paving program. It will be the second improvement started after April 1, next, he said today.

A meeting of the East Superior street property owners will be called this week, so that the material can be selected and bids advertised for. It is Commissioner Farrell's plan to award the contract this winter, so that everything will be ready for active construction work the first thing in the spring.

Grand avenue, from Twenty-eighth to Fifty-fourth avenue west, the second largest pavement on the 1916 improvement program, will be ordered next, Commissioner Farrell announced today. It will be paved with brick or concrete.

East Superior street was paved by Patrick McDonnell eleven years ago, but its condition now makes travel almost impossible and the old pavement will be torn up altogether, excepting the rock sub-base, a new concrete base put in and either bitulithic or asphalt used for the surface.

J. C. NETHAWAY IS APPOINTED JUDGE

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Giddings of Anoka county was secured today by Governor Burnquist to open court at Stillwater Monday. The governor yesterday appointed J. C. Nethaway of the attorney general's office to fill the vacancy in the Nineteenth district made so by the death of Judge Stalberg, but Mr. Nethaway is unable to assume the duties at once.

Attorney General Smith said today that he had not yet decided on a successor to Judge Nethaway, who is one of his assistants. Judge Nethaway will remain with him until a man can be found.

MEDICAL EXPERT TAKES THE STAND

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—When Dr. H. E. Robertson, professor of pathology, University of Minnesota, today drew from a handbag a portion of Mary Fridley Price's skull and began explaining to the jury the injured area of the woman's head, Frederick T. Price on trial in district court for the murder of his wife, looked as if he was about to collapse. His face reddened and for a moment he completely lost his composure and the poise which he heretofore has maintained throughout the trial.

The entire morning session was taken up with the examination of Dr. Robertson, called by the state as its chief medical expert witness, and with arguments by attorneys on the admissibility of certain testimony which the state is seeking to elicit from him.

Hypothetical Question.

Before the recess adjournment, George W. Armstrong, assistant county attorney, asked Dr. Robertson a hypothetical question which called for an opinion from the witness as to whether or not the injury he found on Mrs. Price's head could have been caused by a fall from a precipice such as had previously been described by witnesses.

Objection was made to the question by counsel for the defense on the ground of incompetency and that it is not subject to expert testimony and invades the province of the jury.

Arguments on the question had not been concluded when the recess hour arrived.

M'HUGH PROMOTED BY CITY ATTORNEY

J. Leonard McHugh, law clerk in the city attorney's office since last April, has been appointed first assistant city attorney.

Mr. McHugh assumed his new duties yesterday and this morning City Attorney Samuelson notified the council of his appointment. Michael O'Donnell, graduate of the Minnesota law college last June, has been appointed clerk to succeed Mr. McHugh, assuming his new duties this morning.

J. LEONARD McHUGH,
First Assistant City Attorney.

Shortly after the death of the late Henry F. Greene, city attorney, the city council appointed his first assistant, John E. Samuelson, to succeed him, and for the last two weeks the latter has been considering local attorneys for the vacant office. The selection of Mr. McHugh was practically decided on at a conference City Attorney Samuelson held with several of the commissioners on Wednesday morning, but it was agreed not to make an official announcement until the first meeting of the council.

Mr. McHugh and Mr. O'Donnell are both Duluth young men, being graduates of Central high school. Walter Gonska will continue as city prosecutor.

"CHARGE IT" THEIR ORDER

But Purchasers Neglected to Get Consent of Chargee.

Arrested for Buying Christmas Finery on Credit of Contractor.

"Do your Christmas shopping early—and do it well" was the motto of Clarence Anderson, 19, and Clyde L. Rose, 23, alias Clyde Partillo, who bought goods at the Glass Block store and charged them to the account of D. H. Clough, head of the contracting firm of D. H. Clough & Co.

The plan worked all right for a month, but when Mr. Clough's account was mailed to him, he remonstrated. Then S. L. Smith, a clerk, remembered that on Dec. 24 two different men had bought goods and each one had said he was D. H. Clough.

Detectives are making the rounds of department and men's furnishings establishments today in an attempt to learn whether the two practiced their scheme in any place but the Glass Block store. In all, $52 worth of ties, mufflers, socks, smoking jackets, etc., were charged to Mr. Clough's account.

The store clerk helped Detectives Roberg and Barber to locate the suspects, for both of them lived at one of the larger downtown hotels, and their rooms were near those of Smith. The pair were arrested shortly before midnight last night.

Anderson, as he calls himself, has been pointed out as the one who did most of the buying, and he faces a grand larceny charge. Rose, or Partillo, is held as a suspect. Under the latter name he has served time in the Minneapolis workhouse for obtaining money under false pretenses.

The "purchases" were spread over a period of a week, beginning Dec. 18 and ending the day before Christmas. Anderson says he came to Duluth on Dec. 24 from Indianapolis, Ind. He came here to sell small printing presses, he said.

Rose, or Partillo, recently started a calling card printing establishment at a downtown shoe shining parlor, and it is believed Anderson sold him one of the presses.

Anderson tried to throw away a pair of gloves purchased at the Glass Block while en route to police headquarters in the emergency patrol. Jailer L. A. Root caught him in the act. He was wearing a shirt which Smith, the clerk, identified as one of the "purchased" ones.

MAY ADOPT PLAY PLAN

Recreation Director's Schedule Will Be Considered By School Board.

Recreational Director J. R. Batchelor's plan for recess and after-school play probably will be adopted by directors of the board of education at their first meeting of the new year at Central high school tonight.

At the December meeting of the board Mr. Batchelor was appointed director of school playgrounds, to supervise the out-of-school activities of the children. His schedule was referred to the committee on schools, and Mrs. T. J. Davis, chairman of the committee, will recommend the adoption of the outlined plan tonight.

Architect's plans for the new Morgan Park school at the Minnesota Steel company's model city will be presented for the final approval of the directors. Preliminary plans were presented at the last meeting and several changes, suggested at that time, have been made.

Directors have expressed themselves as in favor of having the work rushed, and it is probable that authority will be given the committee on buildings and grounds to go ahead with the work of preparing specifications, so that the contract can be let at the February meeting. The school will cost about $115,000, and will be the first one in Duluth to adopt the so-called Gary plan.

Aside from these two items, business will be of a routine nature.

"RAISE" FOR THOUSANDS

Steel Corporation's Move Affects Many Workers in Duluth District.

The announcement issued from the New York office of Judge E. H. Gary, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel corporation, and published in The Herald yesterday, to the effect that the corporation will, on Feb. 1, put into effect an increased wage scale, is good news to the employes in and around Duluth.

It is claimed here that these employes in Duluth and on the ranges and range railroads number about 22,000. The corporation employs about 2,000 men at the steel plant, about 12,000 to 13,000 in the mines on the two ranges and about 5,000 more on the two railroads.

The announced increase is to be 10 per cent for common laborers and a proportionate amount—the rate not being stated—for other employes.

The heads of the various subsidiary companies, having headquarters here, declare that they have not been notified of the raise, but have no reason to doubt that the statement attributed to Chairman Gary is authentic. The subsidiary companies here are: The Oliver Iron Mining company, the Minnesota Steel company, the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company and the Duluth & Iron Range Railway company.

President W. J. Olcott of the Oliver Iron Mining company said today:

"I have received no word concerning the raise to take place, but I expect that the announcement is correct."

Judge Gary's Statement.

The statement issued by Judge Gary follows:

"In view of the prosperous conditions now existing, it was unanimously voted at a meeting of presidents of our iron and steel companies, held today, to recommend that there should be made adjustments of the wage rates to take effect Feb. 1, and at a subsequent meeting of the finance committee it was unanimously decided to accept the recommendation of the presidents. It is proposed to increase the rates of common labor about 10 per cent. As to other departments, increases will be equitably proportioned.

"Adjustments in wage rates in our mining companies are under consideration."

It is estimated by the corporation's officials in New York that the increase will swell the annual payroll of the company by $15,000,000. It will affect the greater number of the corporation's force, which is estimated at 240,000 men.

It is fully expected that the increase by the United States Steel corporation will cause a similar raise by other similar concerns.

In 1914 the steel corporation had an average of 142,000 employes on its rolls, as against 229,000 in 1913. The average daily pay in 1914 was $2.88, an advance of 3 cents over the average of 1913. Employes of the general administrative and selling departments averaged $2.97 per day, compared with $2.92 in 1913.

A table indicating how the employes of the steel corporation have fared since the company's organization in 1902 shows that the average low level of $677 per annum was reached in 1904, after which it steadily mounted to $907, which was the average of 1913 and 1914.

VIOLATES PAROLE; TO REFORMATORY

Judge Dancer, in district court yesterday afternoon, revoked the parole of Paul Trudeau, otherwise known as Napoleon Trudeau, and directed the sheriff to take him to the state reformatory to serve an indeterminate sentence for burglary.

Col. F. E. Resche, probation officer, reported that Trudeau had been caught stealing recently and the court immediately revoked the parole.

Trudeau, on June 28, last, broke into a room at the Metropole hotel and stole several personal effects from J. Jacksie. He pleaded guilty on July 6 and was sentenced to the state reformatory. The execution of the sentence was stayed in order to give the young man an opportunity to make good. This he failed to do.

PURE MILK

What Is Pasteurization?

Health authorities now very generally agree that the most effective protection against the carrying of disease by milk is through Pasteurization. Despite the greatest care in the production of milk, there is a possibility that milk may be infected in the handling by persons having diseases in their early and unrecognized or mild stages. Through Pasteurization, which consists in exposing milk to heat, any germs of disease which may be present, by accident, are destroyed.

All of the milk handled by us is heated to 145 degrees Fahrenheit and held at that temperature for a period of 30 minutes and then quickly cooled. Under these conditions of time and temperature, scientists declare that all disease germs are killed and that no change in the digestibility of milk is effected.

In the use of our milk the consumer is receiving the highest degree of protection.

AT A DRINKING FOUNTAIN.

Youth's Companion: The department of health of New York city calls attention to various methods of drinking from bubbling fountains that make the new contrivance a greater menace to health than the common drinking cup. An inspector of the United States public health service recently watched to see how people used a bubbling fountain in a railway station. Forty-seven different persons, of whom eleven were men, twenty-two were women and fourteen were children, used the fountain. In almost every case they placed their lips almost completely round the metal ball from which the water spurted. Of the forty-seven people, three looked as if they might have tuberculosis, and three had eruptions upon their faces. Every person who uses a bubbling drinking fountain should bear in mind that the object of this sanitary instrument is to prevent unwholesome secretions from passing from mouth to mouth. When mucus or other matter becomes attached to metal, it can often be removed only by the exercise of considerable force—a force that a slow moving current of water does not possess. In drinking from a bubbling fountain, you should "bite the bubble." Your lips should never touch any part of the fountain.

The first farm paper was printed in England in 1681 and dignified itself with the title, Collection of Letters for the Improvement of Husbandry and Trade.

"LOOSE" TALKING LEADS TO ARREST

Overheard talking about a "robbery" by a prominent West end woman whose identity police refuse to reveal, Ray Puffer, 23, and James Hogan, 21, alias Moran, were jailed last night.

"Now you get that $200 that is planted across the bay," Hogan is alleged to have said to his companion, "and we'll beat it."

Other mysterious remarks about a "roll" and a watch excited the curiosity of the unintentional eavesdropper, police say, and she told her story to Sergeant A. V. Youngberg and Detective Barber.

Puffer says he is a chauffeur and Hogan gave his occupation as waiter. Police are believed to be trying to connect them with the gang who held up employes of the Camden State bank of Minneapolis several weeks ago and robbed them of $1,400.

Hugo Eden, a painter living in Superior, was arrested in a West end hotel, as an accomplice in the robbery, and now is on trial in Minneapolis.

Chief of Police R. D. McKercher and Detective Herman Toewe returned this morning from the Twin Cities. They were subpoenaed as witnesses for the state in Eden's trial.

Mothers Make This Home Made Cough Syrup

The good, tender, thoughtful mother can make a full pint of the quickest acting, permanent result giving cough syrup which can be used by the whole family for coughs and colds, thus preventing pneumonia, sore throat, diphtheria and other fatal maladies. Just obtain a concentrated fluid known as essence Mentho-Laxene—a 2½ oz. bottle, and empty it into a pint jar or bottle. Then take a pint of granulated sugar and pour over it a half pint of boiling water; stir, cool and fill up the bottle with the syrup. WILL DECIDE THE ELECTOR PROBLEM

Whether or not the executive committee of the Democratic state central committee will recommend the electors for the presidential primaries next March will be decided on at a meeting to be held during the first week in February, according to Commissioner Farrell, who attended a meeting of the committee in St. Paul last Tuesday.

Commissioner Farrell has been ill since his return from St. Paul and was at his desk the first time this morning. He caught a cold while attending the funeral of the late Governor Hammond last Monday.

The members of the committee are divided on the plan of recommending electors to the voters of the state and after a lengthy discussion at the meeting the other day, they decided to take action at a meeting in February. A meeting of the state central committee will also be held about that time, Commissioner Farrell said.

A clubhouse which probably will cost about $20,000 will be erected by Duluth aerie, No. 79, Fraternal Order of Eagles, in the near future, according to a decision reached at the annual meeting of the order last night.

Soon after the annual report of the board of trustees, showing that the assets of the lodge were about $20,000, was given, members took up consideration of plans for a new clubhouse, to be erected as soon as the lease on the present quarters expires.

SONGBIRDS ARE NOW WEATHER WISE SAYS MANAGER— DAY OF HIGH PRICED STAR IS PASSING

Five years ago, when the members of the San Carlo Grand Opera company hit the musical trail for Duluth, the thermometer hovered tremulously around the 40 below zero mark. One young woman member of the company, hailing from South America, froze her foot, while a temperamental tenor froze his nose. This year, according to Manager Fortune Gallo, the excessive cold causing temperamental thrills, some colds and flights of artistic fancy, made the job of managing a grand opera troupe anything but a sinecure.

"Do the songbirds, pardon, the members of your company, suffer from the very cold weather?" Mr. Gallo was asked.

"They're getting what you call wise," he answered.

"Now when some of our singers first came from Italy or South America, they didn't realize what cold was. Five years ago, when our company was in Duluth that very, very cold time, one of our male singers was walking down the street with a doctor here. Suddenly the doctor picked up some snow and rubbed it on the singer's nose.

"You insult me," said the singer, and he prepared to fight. The singer could not understand English very well, but the doctor made signs that his nose was frozen and finally it came through the head of the singer that no insult was meant.

Different, Years Ago.

"Most of the members that have been with us for several years are used to the cold weather; but some years ago, oh my! it was such a difference, and so much of a trial!

"Now that young woman who froze her leg—no, her foot—she walked out on your streets here with the thermometer 40 deg. below zero, with little slippers on. She did not know—until her foot was frozen.

"But now, sometimes, coming from trains and in theaters where there are drafts, these singers they feel the cold and it makes them what you call temperamental. But most of them bundle up well and don't lose their voice."

Manager Gallo believes the day of the excessively high priced grand opera star is passing, and that the day of grand opera at popular prices has arrived.

"The majority of cities and towns over the country cannot afford to hear the so-called great stars," he said. "Many of the lesser known singers in reality possess just as good voices. The popular priced grand opera is giving the smaller cities over the country an opportunity of hearing good music. The big stars seldom get outside the big cities; the masses must depend upon the modern popular grand opera for the opportunity to hear great music."

Sub-zero weather grudgingly left Duluth today, but will return this evening, without being invited. According to Weather Forecaster Richardson, the mercury peeped over the "o" mark shortly before 10 o'clock this morning, and at 1 o'clock this noon was 10 degs. above.

Tonight the thermometer will register from zero to 8 below, but tomorrow will be much better

The temperature never got above the zero mark yesterday, and between midnight last night and 4 o'clock this morning it reached 12 deg. below, which is considerably more moderate than on the previous morning, when it got to 25 deg. below. There was also less wind, and, generally speaking, conditions were much more comfortable.

At 7 o'clock this morning 6 deg. below was registered and at 10 o'clock it was 3 degs. above.

Mr. Richardson said today that while this afternoon the thermometer may show slightly above zero, moderation will not really gets in its work before tomorrow.

BRAKEMAN WILL GET NEW TRIAL

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state supreme court today ordered a new trial for Charles N. Coleman, who brought a suit in the Ramsey county district court against the Illinois Central Railway company for $50,000 damages. Coleman, who was a brakeman, was injured by a defective ladder on one of the company's freight cars.

In the Ramsey county district court, Judge Dickson directed that the case be dismissed on the ground that the Federal safety appliances act under which the suit was brought was not in operation at the time of the accident.

The interstate commerce commission, it was held, had ordered a suspension of the act until a later date in order that the railroads might have time to comply with its provision. The supreme court, in answer, says the act was in force at the time of the accident and while there was a suspension of certain provisions, it did not affect the law as a whole.

SHARP BREAK AT THE CLOSE

Wheat Slumps at Finish With Heavy Selling By Some Longs.

Crushers' Urgent Inquiry Again Bulls Flaxseed—Foreign Markets Strong.

Duluth Board of Trade, Jan. 7.—The market was weak at the close on a wave of selling at Chicago.

May wheat closed 1¾c off and July 1¾c off. May durum closed 1¾c off.

Oats closed ⅛c off at 43⅛c for on the track; rye unchanged at 93c, and barley unchanged at from 64c to 72c for on the track.

At Winnipeg, May oats closed ⅛c off at 45⅞c bid.

At St. Louis, May wheat closed at $1.21¼ bid and July at $1.14⅝.

At Kansas City, May wheat closed at $1.16¾ and July at $1.10⅝.

Puts on Minneapolis May wheat closed at $1.20⅛ and calls at $1.24⅛.

The wheat market was a variable trading proposition today, but as net result holders had slightly the better of the argument during the first three hours' business.

Prices were higher at the start and then they receded nearly 1½c on reported reselling by foreigners. Denial of these rumors led to a reaction and a rush to cover short contracts and a recovery of 1c ensued.

The general news of the day was favorable to holders. Liverpool was higher and receipts in the Northwest showed a substantial falling off. At Duluth wheat inspections came to 125 cars against 21 last year. Minneapolis reported 496 cars against 292 a year ago, and the movement at Winnipeg was down 225 cars as compared with 84 a year ago. The falling off at Winnipeg is attributed largely to discouragement by the railroads of shipments from the country for the time being owing to congestion at the lake terminals and at the seaboard. An effort is to be made by Winnipeg operators to move out some of the wheat from elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur and it is hoped that will be possible within a couple of weeks as a result of more ships being made available by the British government.

An item of interest to Duluth operators today was the reported purchase by exporters of 300,000 bu of wheat at Buffalo. It is now hoped that all-rail shipments from here will be inaugurated in some volume in the near future. Contracts have been entered with railroad freight agents during the last few days and they are now awaiting advices from the East to the effect that the embargoes have been at least partially lifted.

May wheat opened ½c up at $1.25, eased off 1⅞c and stood at $1.24⅜ at the noon hour. July opened unchanged at $1.24 and firmed up fractionally.

Durum was relatively weaker than spring wheat. May opened ¼c up at $1.22 and eased off 1c. July was traded in at $1.21¾.

Flaxseed took on a fresh splurge with active buying by crushers and digh offerings. Strong foreign news was a factor. Buenos Aires closed 2⅜c up at $1.33¼, and London 3⅜d up at $2.80.

May flax opened unchanged at $2.26¼ and closed 3½c up at $2.30 asked. July was traded in for the first time and it closed at $2.30½ normal.

At Winnipeg, May flax closed 2⅛c up at $2.09½ asked.

Modern Miller says: "Warm and unseasonable weather in Texas revived the activities of green bug and reports indicate they exist in great numbers in many localities. Green bug has been discovered in Illinois and is under official surveillance. It has never been known before to do material damage in this state. Warm weather removed most of the snow covering of the winter wheat belt. Much lower temperatures are said to exist, but no damage is indicated."

Broomhall cabled regarding linseed: "Argentine shipments this week were 634,000 bu, including 141,000 bu to America and 59,000 bu to the United Kingdom. On passage to America are 663,000 bu. Argentine weather is reported fine and harvesting returns are excellent. London opened very strong. There is much apprehension felt owing to the light Indian and Argentine shipments, and crushers are becoming nervous."

C. E. Lewis & Co. had the following from Luverne, Minn.: "For the first time in many years feed corn is being shipped to Rock county. This is owing to the almost total failure of the flax and corn crop and the large number of cattle and hogs owned by farmers of this section. Record-breaking sales of cattle and hogs have been made because of lack of feed. Corn shipped in is selling for 75c a bu."

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Following the immediate opening, the market was firm with fair buying by millers on firmness of Manitoba and winter offers, and dearness and scarcity of native offers. Spot market was firm unchanged to ½d higher, with good demand for Manitobas and reports of a light actual movement in Argentina. Cargo market was firm, winters and Manitobas unchanged, later advancing to 1½ to 3d over yesterday. Plates were unchanged. Australians 2 to 6d lower. Continental demand is better and bids are higher. Corn was firm with dearer Plate offers, decreasing Argentine stocks at ports and strong and advancing freights. Spot market was 1½d higher and parcel market 3d higher."

Grain stocks are piling up in Fort William and Port Arthur elevators, and on the present basis of receipts, it is predicted that their capacity will be filled up by the end of this month. Winnipeg grain men are therefore counting upon seeking an outlet at Duluth in the near future.

Wheat stocks in elevators at the Canadian lake terminals at the end of last week were 16,578,971 bu, as compared with 4,533,340 bu, as at the same date last year. Oats stocks came to 6,120,000 bu; barley to 1,000,000 bu, and flax to 781,000 bu. There was also afloat in the harbor 1,125,000 bu of all grains. As showing the tight storage situation in the Canadian west wheat stocks in interior elevators are reported at 44,520,960 bu; oats at 8,615,000 bu; barley at 1,476,000 bu, and flax at 246,000 bu. A year ago there was only 19,853,000 bu of wheat in store in the interior elevators.

Minneapolis cash market was firm, with good demand. No. 1 northern blue stem sold at ½c to 2c over May, and velvet chaff at May price to ½c under. Flour sales were moderate. Wheat stocks in Minneapolis elevators increased 1,650,000 bu in the week.

Russell's News, New York, said: "Cargo of wheat was reported sold for export this morning. Private English cables are that the market is very steady, although there was some foreign selling of wheat futures at Winnipeg this morning. Private advices are that a prominent Kansas City mill has better export bids on flour than the domestic bids but heavy withdrawals of steamers from the gulf are against business."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Prices Develop Weakness on Disappointing Cables.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Wheat developed weakness today, influenced by the fact that cable advices were disappointing to the bulls. According to one exporter, British dealers were offering to resell at a substantial reduction as compared with last night's offers from this side of the Atlantic. On the other hand vessel rates from Argentine continued to advance, and it was admitted that shipments from Australia during January and February would be only moderate. Prices here after opening ⅜@½c off to ⅛@¼c up, with May at $1.26½ to $1.27½ and July at $1.19 to $1.19½, underwent a decided sag all around before beginning to react.

Subsequently a temporary upturn took place owing to supposed signs of a revival of export demand, increasing stocks and the congestion at the seaboard acted, however, as a weight on the market. Prices closed heavy 1¾@1⅝c to 1⅜c net lower with May at 1.25¼@1.25⅜ and July at $1.17⅝.

Corn showed strength at first but eased off when wheat turned downgrade. The initial firmness of corn was due to lightness of receipts and to jumps in foreign quotations. Opening prices here, which ranged from ⅛@¼c to ⅜@⅝c higher, were followed by a moderate general setback.

The market afterward scored slight gains, helped by reports that farmers were holding for higher prices, but wheat weakness became again a handicap. The close was steady at ⅜c to ½c net decline.

Oats reflected the changes in corn. Commission houses though seemed to favor the buying side.

Selling from packers tended to weaken provisions. The market was fairly well sustained, however, by speculative demand.

RAILROADS TO APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—It was announced today that the Northwestern and Omaha roads would appeal to the state supreme court from the decision of Judge Olson of Marshall declaring the two roads to be one for rate-making purposes. If the Olson decision is upheld by the supreme court it will likely be carried to the Federal court.

The railroad companies will base their contention that they should be considered two distinct systems for rate-making purposes upon the fact that they are operated, not as one road, but as two. Their attorneys will maintain that the ownership of 51 per cent of the Omaha by the Northwestern does not alter the status of either corporation. The operating staffs of the two companies are entirely distinct.

STOCKS GAIN AT THE CLOSE

Much of Recent Depression Overcome By German Note on Lusitania.

New York, Jan. 7.—Although opening prices today were mainly higher, the market's undertone reflected a continuance of its recent feverish condition. United States Steel was again the feature, with initial sales of 1,000 to over 2,000 shares at 86¼ to 86⅜, a slight gain over yesterday's close. Some of the specialties recently under pressure, including fertilizer issues, showed the effect of further liquidation, Agricultural Chemical common and preferred yielding over 4 points. Oil shares moved erratically, Mexican Petroleum rising, while California Petroleum declined. Rails were firm and coppers slightly higher. General Motors declined 15 to 425.

Some of the weaker industrial specialties, including oils and fertilizers, rallied shortly after the opening, but recoveries were brief, recurrent selling of an enforced character causing another leveling of values. Tennessee Copper broke 3¼ from its high to 55½ on news of trouble at the company's local plant. Steel on further heavy sales duplicated yesterday's low of 86, and American Smelting and Mexican Petroleum manifested weakness, while war issues were materially lower. Recoveries of 1@2½ points occurred on another rally in the second hour. Bonds were steady.

Pronounced improvement came over the market during the early afternoon. Steel leading with an advance to 87. Standard stocks as well as specialties also rose substantially. Anglo-French fives were quoted at 95⅜.

Much of the recent depression of prices was overcome today, the improvement following the announcement of an early settlement of the Lusitania case.

Further gains were made in the final hour, Steel rising to 87⅝, while active specialties showed gains of 3 to 5 points. The closing was strong.

Non-Excelled homestead No. 4276, R. A. Y., will hold its installation on Jan. 26. Arrangements are being made to have James H. Murphy of St. Paul, state manager of the society, come here to install. Members of the society had expected to have a joint installation with Duluth homestead No. 3131, but these are said to have fallen through.

LOSE FIRST TO SUPERIOR

West Duluth Curlers Vanquished on Trip Across the Bay.

Hope to Return the Compliment on Their Own Rink.

"We'll get the bacon," was the slogan of West Duluth curlers as they left the city last night for Superior.

"Aw, leave it, we'll take it tomorrow night," they said at 11 o'clock as they got ready to take the cars for home.

Sixteen warriors of the broomstick, to say nothing of the crowd of rooters, went across the bay for the first game in the Manley-McLennan event with the Superior curlers.

The reception was fine. The visitors early in the evening were presented with cigars and hearty greetings, most likely to ease the sting, for immediately after passing them around the Superior curlers began to "lay" with regularity. The final score was 46 to 34 with the West Duluth visitors getting the small end.

Alex Donald, with his rink of Minnesota state champions, held up his end in good shape. He defeated the famous Joel Gates, 14 to 4. Frank H. Wade nosed out in the twelfth end by laying a five head on Irvin Russell, the score ending 11 to 9. Richard Wade, with his "kid" aggregation, for a while held down the veteran, A. K. Smith, but in the end lost, 13 to 8.

Clough Gates Shows Mercy.

The "big drubbing" was the one given Emil J. Zauft. Clough Gates nearly succeeded in making the game a complete shutout. For eight heads Gates laid on every end. Then some one said "take pity" and Zauft got one lone tally. That was the only one he got. The game ended 20 to 1.

Tonight the second round will be played at West Duluth. Local members say they will return the compliment. The same skips will play, but it is probable that the opponents will be different. The games will begin at 8 o'clock.

CONTEST ON FOR CLUB PRESIDENCY

Commercial Club Election May Result in Close Race.

The annual election of officers for the West Duluth Commercial club will be held this evening at the clubrooms. The meeting is expected to attract a large percentage of the members and it is intimated that the offices of president and secretary will be contested.

Several members have been mentioned as candidates for the executive office. Among these are Emil J. Zauft, P. G. Phillips, Andrew Myles and L. A. Barnes. Mr. Barnes has been president of the organization for two or three terms and stated this morning that he was not in the race.

The present officers are: W. A. Pond, president, who is not seeking renomination; Mason M. Forbes, vice president; R. J. Fisher, secretary, and Charles G. Futter, treasurer.

A review of the work of the last year and plans for the year 1916 will be among the features of the meeting.

WEST DULUTH W. C. T. U. MEETS

"The Progress of County Option" Subject of Paper.

The first meeting of the West Duluth W. C. T. U. for the year was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. T. Culbertson, 1725 Jefferson street. "The Progress of County Option" was the subject of a paper read by Mrs. T. F. Olsen.

County option has made great progress in the state since the law was adopted, according to the statement of Mrs. Olsen. During the year forty-three counties in Minnesota out of a total of fifty-six which had voted on the question had voted the saloons out. Predictions that several others would go "dry" before the end of this year were also made. The paper also commented on prohibition throughout the United States, containing reference to seven states having entered the "dry" column on Jan. 1.

Extension work will be a feature of the activities of the West Duluth organization during the year. It was voted to divide the membership into groups to carry on this work. Mrs. C. R. Keyes was appointed chairman of a committee to arrange the groups.

Mrs. I. P. Swangle gave a report of the work of charitable organizations during the holidays. Volunteers were asked to assist in serving the penny lunches at the Irving school and twelve members agreed to assist.

Clinton Haglund Dies.

Clinton, the 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haglund, 4607 West Third street, died yesterday afternoon following a short illness. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence with interment in Oneota cemetery. Rev. J. J. Krantz will have charge of the service.

HELD AS BURGLAR; PUTS UP "BLUFF"

Carl Holmgren Feigns Drunkenness When Found in Meat Market.

Caught while trying to burglarize the meat market of C. D. Anderson, 24 North Twentieth avenue west, last night about 10 o'clock, Carl Holmgren, 25, feigned drunkenness.

Axel Victor, 18, a clerk in the store, went to the place about 10 o'clock to tend to the fires, and found the door open. He walked in and a minute later found Holmgren on the floor near the stove, pretending to be asleep. Near him was a pile of rye bread, sausage and choice ham, that he evidently had bundled together to take along. Thirty pennies in the cash drawer were missing, and the safe had been tampered with by the "drunken" man, as Mr. Anderson discovered later.

Victor, frightened, ran outside, slamming the door shut behind him and locking it with a padlock. Then he called Patrolman David Olson, who took Holmgren to headquarters as a suspect.

The pennies from the cash drawer were found in the prisoner's pocket. Later the proprietor identified him as a man who had tried to beg some sausage during the day, on the plea that he was hungry.

Holmgren will be arraigned in municipal court this afternoon for a preliminary hearing on a charge of burglary.
